And to the reſt of the Worthy GENTLEMEN, that bear Office in this Great CITY.

THIS Work concerning the City of LONDON, claimes this Court for its Patron: By the Wiſe and Steady Government of whoſe Members, from Time to Time, it hath remained for many Ages, the moſt flouriſhing City in this Realm of England, and (May I not ſay?) in all Europe. And it claims it again by Cuſtom and Preſcription. For ever ſince this SURVEY ſhewed it ſelf in the World, (now for the Space of an Hundred and Twenty Years paſt, and more) through the ſeveral Editions of it, it hath been countenanced by Dedications of it to the Lord Maior ſometimes, and ſometimes to the whole Court. And I have an Additional Obligation to commend this New Edition to You, (Right Honourable and Right Worſhipful) ſince divers Years ago I obtained a ſpecial Favour by an Order from Your Court, to peruſe ſome of the chief Books and Records belonging to Your Chamber; and to tranſcribe thence ſuch Things of Moment, as I thought convenient and proper for the further Improvement of this SURVEY; and as might tend to the Knowledge of the State, Grandeur, Laws, Cuſtoms, and Privileges of it in Ancient Times: Books, that contain ſuch a Treaſure, as, notwithſtanding what Mr. STOW, as well as others ſince, have extracted thence, and publiſhed; many other Things, in great Variety, worthy our Notice, remain there ſtill unexhauſted. Whereof further conſiderable and large Collections now in this Edition are come to Light: And, I ſuppoſe, of as great Uſe and Importance; and tending alſo to the Honour of the City and Citizens.

In this our Book will be revived the Memory of many of Your Worthy Predeceſſors, Maiors and Aldermen, as well as other Citizens: And of their notable Acts; of Wiſdom, good Government, Zeal for the flouriſhing and proſperous State of the City; of their firm Loyalty, and their Supplies, and Services to their Princes, Kings and Queens of the Realm: Likewiſe, of their Care of Religion, Sobriety and good Order: And laſtly, of their manifold, extenſive Gifts of Charity, in founding Schools, Alms-houſes, Hoſpitals, Lectures, Fellowſhips, Scholarſhips, and Exhibitions in the Univerſities; and their moſt Generous and Chriſtian Benefactions, in one Reſpect or other, throughout moſt Parts of this Kingdom.

It will here be diſcovered further, for the Honour of the City, how that many Noble and Wealthy Families have been raiſed hence: Which at this Day muſt owe their Original to LONDON: and do acknowledge it. And likewiſe, that not a few of our Citizens have ſprung from Ancient Families elſewhere, and proved Ornaments to this City, as well as other Places in the Nation.

Thus, with all due Reſpect, recommending my ſelf and my Pains unto the favourable Acceptance of You all, I ſubſcribe my ſelf,

Your moſt Humble

AND

Obedient Servant,

JOHN STRYPE.

THE PREFACE.

THIS Survey of LONDON, having been ſo carefully and judiciouſly done by the Citizen STOW, (who for many Years had converſed with the City Records, as well as many other MSS. of Engliſh Hiſtory) hath always been of great Reputation; and of no leſs Uſe to conſult with upon divers Occaſions, in Matters relating to the ſaid City, the Wards, the Streets, the Bounds, or the Inhabitants thereof. And therefore having been long wanted, and the old Impreſſions gone off, it was very much called for. And at length, after a great many Years, a new Edition was determined. But the Difficulty of doing ſuch a Work, as it ſhould be, that is, with ſuitable Improvements, was ſoon apprehended: the former Book alſo requiring to be nicely reviewed and corrected, after Two or Three Editions, ſince the Authors Death: there having crept in a great number of Errors, as it happens in After-Editions:

And further, it was requiſite, that Abundance of Additions ſhould be made to the former Book, as it was capable of, to render it the more compleat and uſeful. As, beſide the furniſhing it with many more Antiquities, and Obſervations of Places, Men and Things, belonging to it in former Times; it was very neceſſary, that there ſhould be a Continuation of the Hiſtory of the City, in Stow's Method, down to the preſent Times: As of the Maiors, Sheriffs, and other chief Officers; of the great Enlargements of the Compaſs of the two Cities; of the Fire of London, and of the new Buildings thereof, with the new Streets, Courts, Monuments, Churches, and Alterations: likewiſe, a further and fuller Recital of the Laws, Orders and Cuſtoms of the City; which were commendably begun in the laſt Edition: Notice alſo was to be taken of the more modern Monuments of the Dead, erected in the ſeveral Pariſh Churches, Churchyards and othe Places of Burial. It was convenint that the ſeveral Wards of the City, with the new Pariſhes, and eminent Places lately builded in the Suburbs, ſhould have Maps, Plans, and Repreſentations, and ſuch like Illuſtrations and Embelliſhments.

This Province, by the Deſire of thoſe concerned, hath fallen to my Lot; which I undertook; tho' (I was ſenſible) not ſo ſufficient as ſuch a Work requires; notwithſtanding the Aſſiſtance of Men and Books.

Now then, to ſhew what hath been actually performed (after my many Years Pains) in order to the preparing this Book for a new Edition, and ſuch as might render it the more uſeful and acceptable: Firſt, there hath been a careful Survey made of London and Weſtminſter, divers Years ago by Mr. Lyborn and Mr. Bloome. And divers Maps of the ſeveral Wards and other Places were engraven. And of late Years a new Survey taken: according to which, divers Things in the former Maps have been corrected; and Additions made of ſome new Streets, Courts, and Places of Habitation, and ſome new Maps of whole Pariſhes, according to a further Extenſion of the Suburbs, both on the Eaſt and Weſt Parts. There are beſides, a conſiderable Number of Prints made of Places of Remark, as Churches, Buildings, Houſes founded for Charity, Monuments, Statues, Viſtoes for Ornament and Explanation, ſet in divers proper Places in the Book. So that beſides the ſeveral Wards, which are digeſted into 17 ſeveral Maps, (one Map ſometimes containing two ſmaller Wards) there be fair Plates, 20 in Number, of Pariſhes, being Places of greater Extent, ſituate either in Weſtminſter, or the Borough of Southwark, and on that ſide the Thames. And many more Deſcriptions and delightful Proſpects of eminent Places in and about London and Weſtminſter; as the Palaces of Whitehall, St. James's, Somerſet-Houſe, the Churches of St. Paul, and St. Peter's Weſtminſter, the Tower, the Guild-Hall, the Exchange, the Temple, the Hoſpitals, with other publick Structures and Monuments, to the Number of 25.

By another able Hand, a Member of the Heralds Office, are continued the Coats of Arms of all the Maiors from Sir Ralph Freeman the laſt Maior ſet down in the old Edition, Anno 1633. to this Time, and likewiſe the Bearings of the ſeveral Corporations, (as well as of the former in the other Edition) granted to each ſince that Time: Shields alſo both of Maiors and Companies, which are either wanting, or falſe and erroneous, in the old Book, are ſupplied, mended and rectified: Which were many, and ſome groſly miſtaken.

Much Improvement alſo this Work hath received in Matters relating to the Pariſh Churches: partly for Antiquities, in reſpect of the ſeveral Guilds or Fraternities, founded in them of old Time: and Diſcovery of the divers Saints, choſen for their Patrons, and Patroneſſes; and the Proceſſions made by them to the Churches, and the Ceremonious and Superſtitious Honours paid them there. Likewiſe the Devotion of Obits for Perſons interred, appointed by their laſt Wills and Teſtaments, for Chantries to be built, and Salaries allotted for the Chauntry Prieſt, or Prieſts, to ſing Maſſes on ſundry Times, and at particular Altars, for their Souls. But chiefly, for the Monuments and Grave Stones, and the Inſcriptions thereon. Stow contented himſelf briefly to ſhew the Names of ſuch Perſons of Eminence as were buried in the ſeveral Churches, from ancient Times, and the Dates of their Deaths. But the Editor of his Book after him, took the Pains to collect, and ſet down at length the many Epitaphs, whether in Proſe or Verſe, engraven upon Stones or Plates of Braſs, of thoſe Memorials of the Dead; and added many more of Perſons that deceaſed, and were interred afterwards. To which I have now added (beſides many ancient ones not before inſerted) a great Number more in their due Places, from thence, and ſo down to this Time. For which Purpoſe, I did my ſelf (and ſometimes in company with another worthy Perſon Mr. I. W. uſing his Aſſiſtance) go from Church to Church, in London and the Suburbs, to view all the Sepulchral Monuments: and took Notice with my Pen or Pencil of all that were more modern, as well as of thoſe that were more ancient. Whereby I was enabled to correct ſome Errors in the Inſcriptions appearing in the former Book, and to publiſh the many new ones. And theſe will be found conſiderably multiplied in moſt of the Churches; but eſpecially in that of St Paul's, and St. Peter's Weſtminſter: And many Memorials of antique Matters in divers Churches are added there.

Another thing relating to the Pariſh Churches (wherein I have uſed my beſt Diligence, following the Method of the former Book) reſpecteth the Gifts and Benefactions of well diſpoſed Perſons, for the Relief of the Poor, in Money Bread, Fewel, Harbour, Education of Youth, &c. in the ſeveral Pariſhes. And no Pains was ſpared herein; partly, that they might, recorded in this Book, remain to Poſterity, and not be loſt in Oblivion; and alſo, that ſuch Lands, Houſes, Rents or Money given and bequeathed for ſuch and ſuch good Uſes, might not be embezzelled or miſapplied, or ſwallowed up by any unjuſt Means, and the Poor defrauded for ever. I was in part helped herein by Tables of Donors and Gifts hung up in ſome of the Churches. And where they failed me, I applied to the reſpective Incumbents and Miniſters to favour me with Accounts thereof out of their Pariſh Books, or otherwiſe. But this did not ſucceed ſo well as I had hoped. Another Method did better, which was by having recourſe unto a Parochial Viſitation Book Anno 1693. in the Biſhop of London's Regiſtry; a Sight whereof by the Biſhop's leave was communicated to me, very friendly and readily, by Mr. Edward Alexander, the Regiſter: Wherein all ſuch charitable Gifts, given in by the reſpective Church Wardens, were entred.

But the Benefactions after the ſaid Year were ſtill wanting. For the ſupply of this, as well as for the Knowledge of other Things worthy of Note in the Churches of London, I applied my ſelf unto the moſt worthy and highly deſerving Biſhop Compton, then Biſhop of this Dioceſe, acquainting him with my Deſign, and praying his Favour to recommend this uſeful and commendable Buſineſs to the ſeveral Miniſters, as their Dioceſan. Which he readily granted. The Sum whereof was drawn up together with his Lordſhip's own Recommendation under his own Hand; and accordingly a Copy thereof being printed, was ſent to every one of them: Which, ob perpetuam rei memoriam, I will here inſert.

To the Reverend the CLERGY of the City of London, and the Suburbs.

Gentlemen,

'A new Edition of Stow's SURVEY of LONDON being now preparing, and in a good forwardneſs for the Preſs, may receive a conſiderable Improvement from your helping Hands.

'It was that Author's Method, when he came to deſcribe the Pariſhes in each Ward, to ſet down

'The Anitiquities,
'The Charitable Donations, and
'The Sepulchral Monuments in the Churches } belonging to each Pariſh.

'Now becauſe this Edition is deſigned to bring down the Survey and Hiſtory from the Times where the former ended, (which was at the Year 1633;) and in the Interval from that Time to the preſent, many Gifts to the Poor, and other good Benefactions have happened to moſt Pariſhes; and ſome Monuments have been erected for the Dead, both in the new built Churches, and in thoſe that eſcaped the great Fire;

'It is humbly deſired, that the reſpective Incumbents would favour this Work ſo much, as to ſend in Accounts of the ſaid Charities, or other ample Liberalities towards the building or adorning of their Churches, for Lectures, &c. And likewiſe Copies of the Monumental Inſcriptions, with what convenient ſpeed they can, to certain Bookſellers there mentioned, Proprietors of the Copy; who would ſee them delivered to Mr. Strype, the Superviſor of the Work.

'And if they have diſcovered any Miſtakes in any of the Parochial Antiquities; or can furniſh the Work with other Antiquities, or more modern Notices, worthy of Remark; the communicating thereof would be very ‘well taken, and ſhall be publickly acknowledged.

‘And it is hoped this Motion will be the better received, ſince the doing this will contribute to a common Good, by rendring a Book of ſuch a publick Nature more correct and compleat. And eſpecially, as to the Article relating to CHARITIES, a juſt Liſt thereof, among other good Ends, would do a Right to the Proteſtant Religion profeſſed in this Church of England, while the World ſees ſo many Examples in one Proteſtant City, demonſtrating how converſant thoſe of that Communion have been in good Works.

Brethren, I do approve of Mr. Strype's Undertaking in ſeting forth a new Edition of STOW's Survey. And the Matters propounded to you in this Paper, being ſo conducive to the Improvement of it, I cannot but recommend it unto you, the Clergy of London, and of the Suburbs.

H. LONDON.

What Effect this good Motion had, I will not here declare. But ſome few of the Clergy obliged me with the beſt Accounts they could make: As namely, Dr. Bradford, now the Right Reverend Father in God Biſhop of Carliſle; Dr. Barton deceaſed, Mr. Stringfellow Rector of St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt, &c. And I muſt needs mention Dr. Bray, Miniſter of St. Butolph Algate; who underſtanding lately of my Purpoſe, hath ſent me in a very exact and particular Information in Writing, drawn out of the Pariſh Books, of all the Benefactions to that great and populous Pariſh: Some whereof are very large, and chriſtianly generous. And what Care hath been taken to ſupply this Part of the Work, the Book in the ſeveral Places will ſhew.

Again, another Thing, that Labour and Diligence hath been beſtowed in, relates to the Laws, Cuſtoms and Uſages of the City. Wherein the Liberties and Privileges, as well as the Duties of the Citizens, are contained. And therefore ought to be known by them, and in that regard neceſſary to be ſet down, as accurately and largely as might be; being Things ſo material for them to be adviſed of. This was laudably begun by A. M. in the laſt Edition: but very much improved and enlarged in this. And to enable me the better in the doing the ſame, it was not only neceſſary to gather up, and preſent the many and moſt important Acts of Parliament and Common Council, relating to the City and its Affairs; but alſo to have recourſe to the authentick Books and Records belonging to the Chamber of London: Where many ancient and curious Matters of this nature might be found. But this ſeemed to be ſomewhat difficult to be obtained. Yet by the Help of ſome Friends of Quality and good Account, and making the Court of Aldermen acquainted with my Deſign, and requeſting their Leave and Licence, I obtained an Order from them to Mr. Aſhhurſt, then Town Clerk, to give me Acceſs to ſome of their Books, that might be moſt to my Purpoſe, and their Allowance to tranſcribe what I thought convenient out of them: but withal I was enjoined by the Court to leave in Mr. Town Clerks Hands all my Notes that I ſhould ſo collect thence, to be reviewed and examined; leſt ſome things publiſhed from them might ſeem prejudicial ſome way or other to the City, or be judged not ſo convenient to be known; or leſt any Miſtakes might be made by me in tranſcribing. Which (as was fit) I readily complied with. Many Remarks I took out thence, reſpecting both the ancient State of the City, and alſo of the Courts, the Cuſtoms, the Magiſtrates, the Officers, &c. The chief Books I converſed with, were thoſe two famous ancient Volumes, the one called Liber Horne, from the Writer, the other called Liber Albus, i. e. the White Book. Both ſo often made uſe of and cited by Mr. Stow. This laſt mentioned Book was compoſed in Latin, An. 1419. 7. H. 5. menſe Novembris. And what it contains is known by what is writ in one of the Firſt Pages, viz. Continens tam laudabiles Obſervantias, non ſcriptas, in dict. Civitate fieri ſolitas, quàm notabilia memoranda, &c. ſparſim & inordinatè ſcripta. That is, ‘Containing as well laudable Cuſtoms, not written, wont to be obſerved in the ſaid City, as other notable things worthy remembring, here and there ſcatteringly, not in any Order written. The Compiler of this White Book was one Carpenter: whoſe Name fairly and largely writ fronts the firſt Page. Who I ſuppoſe may be that J. Carpenter, ſometime Town Clark, in the Reign of Henry V. mentioned by Stow in his Survey among the worthy Benefactors of the City: and whoſe Gifts are there ſet down. In this Volume are inſerted Memorials of the Maiors, Sheriffs, Recorders, Chamberlains, and the other chief Officers of the City: likewiſe all the Charters granted by the ſeveral Kings of England from William the Conqueror: and the Confirmations thereof. There is alſo a Tract of the Manner and Order, ‘How Barones & Univerſitas Civitat. London, &c. That is, The Barons, [i. e. the Freemen] and Commonality of the City of London, ought to behave and carry themſelves towards the King and his Juſtitiaries Itinerants in the Time it pleaſeth the King to hold Pleas of the Crown at the Tower of London: Together with many other Matters and Subjects, contained in this Choice MS.

Chap. 30.

Which being Things ſo weighty and neceſſary to be known, it was thought highly uſeful to draw up an exact Tranſcription of them. Which accordingly was done about Three Hundred Years ago, in a fair Parchment Book in Folio: and it remains in the Town Clerks Office. Which I had the Favour to ſee and make Uſe of for a conſiderable Time; the Beginning whereof, giving a further Account of this Memorable Book, I will take Leave here to tranſcribe Verbatim.

My Extracts from theſe Books in the Chamber, were very large, as being of divers and various Matters ; ſuch as I thought proper for my Uſe, in order to a further Improvement of this SURVEY. My next Buſineſs was to digeſt theſe my Collections into their ſuitable Places throughout the whole Book. And in order to that, to obtain leave that my Papers, which remained in the Town Clerks Hand, might be reſtored to me. Which at length by an Order of the Court of Aldermen, Sir Sam. 'This Day the Committee appointed the Twentieth of June laſt, to conſider the Notes which Mr. Strype hath collected out of the Cities Books, brought in a Report in Writing touching the ſame. The Tenor whereof is as followeth, viz.

To the Right Honourable, the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen.

'Purſuant to an Order of this Court, dated the Twentieth of June, 1704. We have conſidered the Notes and Papers, which Mr. Strype, Clerk, (who by Order of this Court had Liberty to peruſe ſome of the Cities Books) hath collected from them: And are humbly of Opinion, that whatſoever Mr. Strype hath ſo collected, can by no means alter or prejudice the Cuſtom of this Honourable City. And in caſe any of his Quotations are falſe, the ſame will tend to his own Prejudice, by diminiſhing the Reputation of his intended Book; and be no Ways prejudicial to this City: And therefore We humbly conceive, he may have his ſaid Collections, and do therewith as he ſhall think fit. Which nevertheleſs, We humbly ſubmit to the grave Wiſdom of this Honourable Court. This Thirty Firſt Day of Auguſt, 1704.

Tho. Abney.
Rob. Bedingfeld.
Will. Withers.

'Which being now read, the ſame was well liked and approved of; and ordered to be entred into the Repertory: And that Mr. Town Clerk do deliver to the ſaid Mr. Strype his ſaid Notes or Collections, to do therewith as he ſhall think convenient, any prior Order of this Court to the contrary notwithſtanding.

Aſhhurſt.

And thus having them in my Poſſeſſion, I carefully and diligently entred thoſe new Collections into many and ſundry Places of this Book, according to the Subject Matter. All which additional Notes were very conſiderable (as I judged) for the further illuſtrating the State of the City, and more eſpecially contributing to the larger Knowledge of it, and of the Honour and Reputation it had with its Kings; and the Figure it made in antient Times, and the Manner of Electing its Magiſtrates, Maintenance of its Liberties, Powers and Favours granted by Charters, &c.

Nor were theſe Books only all the Store that I have had for my Purpoſe. For to theſe I muſt add divers curious antient MSS. as one intitled, Abbreviations of Records, lying in the Tally Court, or Court of Receipt, belonging to that Office; a Sight and Peruſal of many Collections thence was imparted to me by Peter Le Neve Eſq. Norroy, King at Arms. Whoſe Ability in theſe Antiquities is ſingular. And his Readineſs to encourage and aſſiſt me, I muſt freely and thankfully own. In this Book, among other Things, is a Tract, intitled Inquiſitiones fact. in Civitat. Lond. An. Reg. Ed. 1. 310. Wherein are Inquiſitions taken of all the Wards. The ſame Gentleman, as he met with any Antiquities of Remark in his Readings, relating to London, communicated ſuch to me, from time to time, by Word or Writing.

Many Records likewiſe out of that choice Repoſitory of them in the Tower, are inſerted alſo. To which I have had free Acceſs granted, and Liberty to tranſcribe; firſt from Will. Petyt, Eſq. ſometime the worthy Keeper of thoſe Records; and after, from Mr. George Holmes, the preſent very deſerving Deputy Keeper. Who likewiſe ſupplyed me with many more of thoſe Records, uſeful to my Purpoſe, concerning the City or Citizens. Which Gratitude obligeth me here to acknowledge.

There are alſo entred many conſiderable Extracts out of the Regiſtry of the Biſhop of London: And chiefly taken from laſt Wills and Teſtaments of the Citizens. For which I am beholden to Mr. Edw. Alexander, the preſent Regiſter; from which many valuable Things may be, and are excerpted, ſerviceable to us; as concerning Churches, Places, Perſons, Legacies, Benefactions, Cuſtom of Funerals, Guyles, Proceſſions, &c.

Beſides, this Work is amplified with great Numbers of MSS. from Libraries and Archives, diſperſed throughout the Book in proper Places; either concerning the Companies, or the Government, or the Laws, or the Liberties, or various other Matters occurring, as relating to the City.

Many choice Collections alſo, for the Improvement of the Work, have been taken by me out of the Library of the Heralds at their Office, by their ready and kind Permiſſion and Aſſiſtance. To whom for their continual Friendſhip, and my free Acceſs thither, I own my ſelf much obliged.

I have alſo uſed Diligence in going my ſelf to the Churches in London and Weſtminſter, Southwark and the Suburbs; for the retrieving Notices of as many of the Monuments of the dead, both ancient, and even to theſe Times, as I could: Taking out the Accounts of them, engraven on their Braſs, or Stones; eſpecially of ſuch, whether Men, or Women, or Children of more Note, either for Place, Quality, Learning, &c. And withal, caſting an Eye upon, and reading the Monuments, the Inſcriptions whereof were entred in the former Edition, which were by this Time in many Places defaced, and not legible, ſo that they are preſerved in the Book, tho' loſt in the Monuments.

Tho' here I muſt inform the Reader, that in ſome of thoſe Inſcriptions, which are Latin, as they were in that Edition, were divers Blunders, either by falſe Latin confounding the Senſe, or falſe Quantities in the Verſes. Whereof ſome that were obvious, I have rectified; but others, not ſo eaſy to be ſet right, I have let ſtand as I found them; rather than ſetting down mine own Conjectures and Fancy, to impoſe upon the Reader. But I muſt add in favour of the Prints, that the Monks, who were commonly the Framers of theſe Epitaphs, were but ordinarily ſkilled in elegant Latin, and diſpenſed with themſelves, for the ſake of the Rhime, in leſs exact and true Poetry.

I have been able likewiſe to make conſiderable Additions to this Branch of the Book, that concerns the Dead, and their Monuments, by the MSS. of Matthew Hutton D. D. deceaſed; now remaining in the Heralds Office, and by other Books there: Where are noted very many ancient Interrements, with the reſpective Epitaphs.

Another thing done in this Edition is, that whereas a conſiderable Quantity of Additions, (called Remains*) to each of the Pariſh Churches in the ſeveral Wards, ſhewing the more modern Reparations of them, with the Coſts, and ſome Inſcriptions upon Monuments of Perſons more lately deceaſed; and ſome other good Tracts, which came to the former Editors Hands too late, and ſo thrown at the End of the Book: All theſe are now duly entred into their proper Places in the Body of the Book, where they ought to ſtand. They are called* Remains or Remnants of divers worthy Things: Which ſhould have had their due Place in the Work, if promiſing Friends had kept their Words. Among theſe Remains there be Accounts given of Charitable Gifts, bequeathed by the laſt Wills of ſome eminent Perſons interred; ſhewn in the Inſcriptions upon their Monuments.

I have alſo conſiderably improved that Part of the Book toward the End, called A Perambulation, or Circuit Walk Four Miles about London, viz. lying in the Four bordering Counties of Middleſex, Surrey, Kent and Eſſex: ſhewing ſome of the Monuments in the ſeveral Pariſh Churches there: For which Purpoſe I allowed my ſelf ſome Time in reſorting to all thoſe Churches and ſome others ſomewhat further; in order to tranſcribe, for the Uſe of this Book, all ſuch Epitaphs as were engraven upon Monuments and Graveſtones of later Times (or elder Times omitted before) for Perſons of ſome Note and Eminency; Citizens for the moſt Part, who had their Seats and Country Retirements there: Such chiefly as were interred ſince the laſt Edition; which are many. And as I have met with Matters of Remark or Antiquity, relating to any of thoſe Pariſhes or Churches, I have entred them with ſome Obſervations.

I add to all the reſt, that I have carefully reviewed the latter Editions of the Book, and compared them with the former of Stow's own ſetting forth: a Thing needful to be done; many Slips and erroneous Readings being diſcovered and ſet right. And where ſome Alterations were made from the Authors own Words, as ſeeming to want Correction, the pretended Emendations of them wanted Correction themſelves; and nothing was to be done, but reſtoring the Words as they were before. Thus where in the firſt Edition, Wappin is called, Wappin in the Woſe, in the (Book IV. c. 2.) next Edition it was made Wappin in the Weſt, by the Corrector. Afterwards the Editor, conſidering, that Wappin lay not Weſt of the City, but rather Eaſt, took the Liberty to change it again, and make it Wappin in the Eaſt. Whereas all this while Stow was right and his Correctors wrong; that Part of Wappin being truly called In the Woſe, or Ooſe, ſignifying a Wet or Marſhy Place: And therefore called at this Time Wappin Marſh. And ſo again, where mention was made of an Alms Houſe to be built by one Mr. Fuller in the Pariſh of Stepney or Stebenheth, miſprinted Stekenheth, by putting of the Letter (Book I. c. 30.) k for b, the Correctors in the next Edition thought fit to make it Stokenheath: ſcarce any ſuch Pariſh in England.

There is one Thing more that I muſt not, in point of Gratitude omit : And that is, in Acknowledging of divers worthy Perſons, Lovers and Studious of the Antiquities of this Honorable City ; who have been Aſſiſtant to me in this laborious Work, by communicating to me many curious and uſeful Things, found in old Records, Church Regiſters, Archives, &c. of Weſtminſter, of the Tower, of the Heralds Office, the Chamber of London, of the Regiſtry of Wills and Teſtaments, as well as other more private MSS. Whoſe Names, where any Notices occur, taken from them, I have ſet down in the Margin, and begging their Pardon, I will take leave to mention here, viz. Sir Henry S. George, Kt. late Garter King at Arms, deceaſed. John Anſtis Eſq; Garter King at Arms. William Petyt Eſq; late Keeper of the Records of the Tower, deceaſed. Mr. George Holmes, Deputy Keeper of thoſe Records. Peter Le Neve, Eſq; Norroy King at Arms. Peers Mauduit, Windſor Herald; John Hare, Somerſet. John Williams D. D. late Lord Biſhop of Chicheſter, deceaſed. Dr. Sam. Bradford, now Lord Biſhop of Carlile. Dr. White Kennet, now Lord Biſhop of Peterborough. The Reverend Mr. Joſ. Woodward, late Miniſter of Poplar, deceaſed. The Reverend Matthew Hutton D. D. deceaſed. The Reverend Sam. Barton, D. D. Miniſter ſometime of St. Mary Overie, deceaſed. The Reverend Dr. Tanner Chancellor of Norwich. The Reverend Mr Stringfellow, Rector of St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt. The Reverend Dr. Tho. Bennet, Incumbent of St. Giles Cripplegate. The Reverend Dr. Bray, Miniſter of St. Botolph Algate, and J. Carpenter Reader there. To theſe I muſt add, John Conyers of the Middle Temple Eſq; Samuel Brewſter Eſq; deceaſed. Rich. Smith, ſometime Secondary of the Compter, deceaſed. John Woodward M. D. Phyſick Reader of Greſham College. Dr Tyſon M. D. deceaſed. Dr. Harwood of Doctors Commons. Edward Alexander, Eſq; Regiſter to the Biſhop of London. Mr. Edwards, ſometime Keeper of the REGALIA of the Tower. Captain Blake of the Tower. Mr. Sergeant Gentleman Porter there. Sir George Ludlam Kt. Chamberlain of the City. Mr. Aſhhurſt, and Mr. Gibſon late Town Clerks, deceaſed. Mr. Stracy late Comptroller, now Town Clerk. Mr. Bellamy, late City Remembrancer. Mr. J. Smart one of the Clerks. Mr. John Worthington. Mr. Richard Bromley Common Councilman in Biſhopſgate Ward. Mr. Thomas, Operator of the Royal Society. Mr. John Bagford, deceaſed; and others whoſe Names do not preſently occur : Beſeeching their Excuſe, if in haſte I have not ſet them down in that Order and Precedency that their reſpective Qualities require.

Nor muſt I omit the Mention of one more, who very lately hath ſent me an authentick Liſt of the Names of all the Repreſentatives of Parliament for London and Weſtminſter and the Borough of Southwark, as far backward as could be retrieved out of Records even to the Reign of Henry III. viz. Brown Willis of Whaddon Hall in Bucks Eſq; and all accompanied moſt obligingly with the hearty Wiſh of good Succeſs in my moſt Laborious (as he is pleaſed to ſtile it) Undertaking. This Gentleman, ſtudious in the Antiquities, (eſpecially the Church Antiquities) of England, hath made himſelf known, as well by his Hiſtorical Deſcriptions of ſome of the Welch Cathedral Churches, (moſt obſcure of all) as by two Volumes publiſhed of Parliaments. He hath alſo given an Account of 11 or 12 Counties, beginning Alphabetically ; ſhewing, who had been Lords of each Burgh from the Conqueſt, Number of Electors, Dedication of Churches and Chapels, Deſcription of Buildings, &c. in each reſpective Burgh : and came as far as the Letter G. and there ſtopt, the Book not ſelling, which was pity. And ſo, as he wrote me, was very glad to communicate all he had of Members, namely, as he had done to Mr. Harris in his Antiquities of Kent, wherein he printed what the ſaid Mr. Willis imparted.

I have left the SURVEY entirely as Stow the firſt Author publiſhed it, corrected and augmented in the Second Edition by himſelf : As this was a Thing with good Reaſon required by divers intelligent Perſons ; that ſo it might be known and diſtinguiſhed, what Alterations have been made in Places and Things, ſince Stow's Time : As the Compter in Southwark is ſaid to be part of the Marſhal Sea : So it was, when he wrote ſo ; Whereas now it is the Priſon for the Borough under the City of London ; and was lately kept at St. Margarets Hill, next to the Seſſions Houſe ; and is lately removed by Order of the City to a Place in St. Olaves Pariſh near Battle-Bridge ; as a worthy, knowing Citizen hath obſerved to me. The SURVEY is left entire alſo for this Reaſon, that it may appear what Enlargements were made by the next Editor of it after Stow ; having added there the two firſt Letters of his Name, viz. A. M. In which Edition Humphrey Dyſon's Name is often ſet in the Margin, who was very aſſiſtant to the ſaid A. M. And the like I have done in this preſent Edition ; That whereſoever any Thing was done, or Pains taken, by Mr. Leyborne and Mr. Rich. Blome, might be known, their Names, or the two firſt Letters thereof, are placed in the Margin. After whom, the Copy coming into my Hands, to what elſe is inſerted every where by me throughout the Six Parts of the Book, is ſet J. S. at the Margin. And where and when I have been favoured by the ſupply of others, it will be known by their Names at length, or abbreviated by two Capital Letters, ſtanding againſt thoſe Paragraphs, that I have entred from their Papers, or Informations.

Such as are minded to know the Architecture (whether of the Tuſcan, Doric, Ionic, or Corinthian Order) the Dimenſions and Ornaments of the new built Churches, with that of the Altars, Pulpits, Steeples and Veſtreys ; and likewiſe of the Officers thereof ; or the preſent Bounds of the Pariſhes, the Coats of Arms of many Perſons deceaſed, &c. I refer the Reader

And now after all this Account which I have given of my Pains and beſt Induſtry in this great Work, I am ſenſible in a ſuch ſpacious Field as this is to walk in, ſome Things may be omitted; and Room will be left for knowing and curious Citizens to make their Inſertions. So that I muſt uſe ſome ſuch Apology for my ſelf, as a very induſtrious and learned Antiquarian (and Contemporary with our Author) did, for a laborious Work which he ſet forth in the Beginning of the laſt Age; and may aſſume his very Words, 'Thus I have by the Favour of God, brought this Treatiſe to an End. Wherein if any Things have eſcaped me unſeen, I do not greatly marvel, when I look back and behold the Variety and Multitude of the Matter that I have paſt through. And it ſhall not be hard for him that meeteth with ſuch Eſtrays, to take and lodge them in their right Titles herein. Again, if it ſhall be thought I have heaped up too many Conceits, borrowed out of others Writings, I make Anſwer, that I have omitted many; and have made the beſt Choice that I could.

*And thus, thanking God that hath continued my Life to finiſh this great Task; and committing all good Citizens, and Natives of this famous City to God's Grace; and wiſhing and praying, that they may be Ornaments and Bleſſings to it; and that it may flouriſh ſtill more and more in Honour, Wealth, Peace, Concord, the Favour of its Princes, and eſpecially in true Religion and Virtue, I end. ## Mr. STOW's own Epiſtle Dedicatory to the Firſt Edition of his SURVEY of London, omitted in the After-Editions, reſtored.

To the Right Honorable, the Lord Maior of the City of LONDON, to the Communalty, and Citizens of the ſame, JOHN STOW Citizen wiſheth long Health and Felicity.

SINCE the firſt publiſhing of the Perambulation of KENT by that learned Gentleman Mr. Will. Lambard, Eſq; I have heard of ſundry other able Perſons to have (according to the deſire of that Author) aſſayed to do ſomewhat for the particular Shires and Counties, where they were born, or dwelt; Of which none that I know (ſaving Mr. Morden for the Counties of Middleſex and Hertford) have vouchſafed their Labours to the common good in that Behalf. And therefore concurring with the firſt, in the ſame Deſire to have drawn together ſuch ſpecial Deſcriptions of each Place, as might not only make up an whole Body of the Engliſh Chronographie * amongſt our ſelves; but alſo might give Occaſion and Courage to Mr. Camden to increaſe and beautify his ſingular Work of the whole, to the View of the Learned that be abroad;

*Perhaps miſprinted for Chorographie.

I have attempted the Diſcovery of London, my native Soil and Country, at the Deſire and Perſuaſion of ſome, my good Friends; as well becauſe I have ſeen ſundry Antiquities my ſelf touching that Place, as alſo for that through Search of Records to other Purpoſes, divers written Helps are come to my Hands, which few others have fortuned to meet withal. It is a Service that moſt agreeth with my profeſſed Travails. It is a Duty that I willingly owe to my native Mother and Country: and an Office that of right I hold my ſelf bound in Love to beſtow upon the Politick Body and Members of the ſame.

What LONDON hath been of antient Time, Men may here ſee; as what it is now every Man doth behold. I know that the Argument, being of the chief and principal City of the Land, required the Pen of ſome excellent Artizan: but fearing that none would attempt, and finiſh it, as few have aſſayed any, I choſe rather (among other my Labours) to handle it after my plain manner, than to leave it unperformed.

Touching the Dedication, I am not doubtful where to ſeek my Patron, ſince you be a Politick Eſtate of the City; as the Walls and Buildings be the Material Parts of the ſame. To you therefore do I addreſs this my whole Labour, as well that by your Authority I may be protected, as warranted by your own Skill and Underſtanding of that which I have written. I confeſs that I lacked my deſire to the Accompliſhment of ſome ſpecial Parts: but I truſt hereafter that ſhall be ſupplyed; and I profeſs (if more touching this Work come unto me) to afford it in all Duty. In the mean time I recommend this to your View, my Labours to your Conſideration, and my ſelf to your Service (as I have profeſſed during Life) in this or any other.

STOW's Epiſtle to his Second-Edition is the ſame; excepting only the Dedication, being to ROBERT LEE Maior, and the Commonalty, &c. And a ſhort Addition in the laſt Paragraph, which ran thus: "I confeſs I lacked my Deſire to the Accompliſhment of ſome ſpecial Parts, which ſome others of better Ability promiſed to perform. But as I then promiſed, have ſince out of mine old Storehouſe added to this Work many rare Notes of Antiquity, as may appear to the Reader. Which I do afford in all Duty, and recommend to your View, &c.

The Epiſtle Dedicatory to the Third Edition of this Book, ſet forth by A. M. Anno 1618.

To the Right Honourable GEORGE BOLLES Lord Maior of the City of LONDON, Sir ANTHONY BENN Kt. Recorder of LONDON: And to all the Knights and Aldermen, Brethren Senators in the State of ſo famous a City; All of them being my Honourable and Worthy Maſters.

A. M. wiſheth the Fruition of all Temporal Felicities in this Life, and the never failing Fulneſs of Bleſſedneſs in the Life to come.

Right Honorable, Worſhipful, and my moſt Worthy Maſters,

IT is now Fifteen Years and more, ſince Mr. John Stow Citizen, (the firſt painful Searcher into the reverend Antiquities concerning this famous City of London) preſented the Book of London's Survey to this Honorable State, in the time of Sir Robert Lee, then being Lord Maior, with very gracious and favourable Acceptance. Since when, he having a further Purpoſe to increaſe the ſame Labour in much larger Manner, according as the Subject very neceſſarily required, grew weak and ſickly: ſo that his willing Endeavour was prevented by Death. Much of his good Mind he had formerly imparted to me, and ſome of his beſt Collections lovingly delivered me; prevailing with me ſo far, by his importunate Perſuaſions, to correct what I found amiſs, and to proceed in the perfecting of a Work ſo worthy. That being overcome by Affection to him, but much more by Reſpect and Care of this Royal City, being Birthplace and Breeder to us both, I undertook (ſo far as my Ability would extend) to further a Book of ſuch needful Uſe, and to ſupply it where I found any thing wanting.

Having drawn mine Intention into a very brief Diſcourſe, before I would raſhly adventure on the leaſt Danger of Diſpleaſure, I delivered the ſame to the Right Worſhipful Sir Henry Mountague, Kt. being then Recorder of London, and now the Honourable Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench: Who having diſcreetly conſidered thereon, and the Brief Chronicle of the Succeſs of Times, before delivered by me to you all, cauſed me to appear before you in the Council Chamber at the Guildhall: where I then received Encouragement, and Command from the whole Court, to proceed in the perfecting of this Worthy Work, with Furtherance of what Helps could be afforded me.

According to the former Project preſented before you, I have (to my great Coſt, Care, and no mean Labour both of Body and Mind, and for the ſpace of above Twelve Years) done my Diligent Endeavour, to effect the full Scope of that which I had ſet down to my ſelf, for compleating the Survey of London, in ſuch nature as might beſt become it; from the firſt Original and Foundation, to the growing thereof in any Greatneſs; and ſo to the Governors, Rulers and Magiſtrates, ſitting from Time to Time, in moſt Eminence and Authority; and as by Name and Office, either of Portgraves, Provoſts or Bailiffs, they were then diſtinguiſhed.

Among all which, or any other vainly imagined, and no way to be avouched, I find the Name of Alderman to be well worthy Obſervation, as being derived from moſt memorable Antiquity. For I find it recorded, That in the Days of King Edgar, there was a worthy Nobleman, and of the Blood Royal, named Ailwine, that held great Authority and Favour with the King: inſomuch, that he was therefore termed and called Healf Koning, as much as to ſay Half King; and by his Office he was ſtiled Alderman of all England. He founded that famous Monaſtery in the Iſle of Ely; and the Epitaph there engraven on his Tomb is in this manner, and theſe Words;

Camd. Britann.

Hic requieſcit D. Ailwinus, inclyti Regis EDGARI Cognatus, totius Angliæ Aldermanus, & hujus Sacri Cœnobij miraculoſus Fundator.

That is in Engliſh;

Here reſteth Lord Ailwine, Couſin to the noble King EDGAR, Alderman of all England, and of this holy Abby miraculous Founder.

Whereby plainly appeareth, that in thoſe Times of ancient and venerable Reſpect, the Word or Title of Alderman was only given for a further Addition of Repute and Honour.

Some Authors alſo have delivered, that Men bearing ſuch a Style or Name, were ſometimes called Doomſmen, otherwhiles Eldermen, Judges of the King's Courts, &c. as being diſtinguiſhed by thoſe Additions of Honour and Eſteem from other Men, to be in

Geffrey Mon.
Will. Malmes.
Polyd. Virg.

in more Maturity of Judgment, Gravity of Years, Experience and Perſon. And therefore the fitter for ſerious Employment in the States Affairs, by apt Correſpondency of their Truſt and Fidelity. Which Name of Dignity, declaring the moſt eminent Degree of Magiſtracy, as heretofore it hath, and ſtill doth extend it ſelf throughout all England, in Cities, Towns, and Corporations: and in ſome, the Alderman only is the Chief Commander. Even ſo is it much more Majeſtical here in the Supreme City of the whole Land, LONDON, the Metropolis of Great Britain, the Mother of Authentick Memory, the antient and modern Seat of our Kings; Yea, the very Chamber Royal for Majeſty it ſelf, and the open Haven for all Merchandize and Commerce, as being the rich Storehouſe of Peace and Plenty.

In divers incorporate Towns Northward.

It ſhall be needleſs here to trouble your Honour, and the reſt of my moſt worthy Maſters, with Repetition of thoſe Officers and Governors, that ruled this great City in thoſe elder Times; becauſe you ſhall find them ſufficiently ſet down in their apt and diſtinct Places: until this higher Degree of Honour came to full Perfection; I mean the MAIORALTY, which ſome hold to be in King JOHN's Time; but moſt maintain and avouch it to be in the firſt Year of King Richard I. whoſe Virtue and Courage won him the Name of Coæur de Lion. From which gracious Beginning, it hath neither been mine, nor my moſt induſtrious and helpful Friends good Fortune, to rank down in formal Order, the ſucceſſive Lines of the Sheriffs, Maiors and Aldermen, according to my former intended Purpoſe, concerning their Countries of Birth, the Parent or Father of whom they came, nor how many of them this moſt Honorable City it ſelf then yielded; as challenging them to be her own native Children; and She both Mother to breed them in her own Bowels, and careful Nurſe afterwards to bring them up.

Wherein I had the loving help of my dear Friend Mr. W. Williams.

For being a City Child my ſelf, I hold it an Attribute of Credit for me to record it, though much more Honour to you (being of the ſame worthy Rank) to read it, and eternal Comfort to Poſterity, to remember and acknowledge it: That this ancient, famous and renowned Mother City of London, never wanted, from Time to Time, honourable Sons of her own Bearing and Breeding, to undergo all Offices of Credit and Authority; yea, even to the Maioralty, from Father to Son in the Third Generation; and they to boaſt their Grandfathers, and great Grandfathers, born and bred in this worthy City; ſome to the Fourth, others to the Third, but many to the ſecond Generation, as in the Repertory following, of Temporal Governors, will more at large appear. I forbear to ſpeak of ſuch as have been Aldermen and Sheriffs; Firſt, the Fathers, then the Sons; yet neither of them living, to enjoy the Maioralties Dignity.

A perpetual Glory to London, to produce her own native Sons to be her Magiſtrates. Witneſs the Gerards, (one yet living) the Barnes, the Rowes, Branche, &c. The Barnhams, Father and Son.

As alſo, what fluent-Plenty of Magiſtrates in the ſame high Office, the ſeveral Sheriffs of England have yielded, wherewith the ſaid Diſcourſe will more familiarly acquaint you.

Therefore beſeech your Honour and Worſhips to allow this Survey of London your gracious Entertainment; and by your benign and bountiful Kindneſs thereto extended (conſidering what hath been ſaid) give Life and Encouragement to your willing Servant, hereafter to preſent you with the whole Work, in more compleat Perfection;

By him that remaineth always ready at your Service, A. M.

A. M. His Epiſtle to the Fourth Edition, Ann. 1633. (which was in Folio*) was much to the ſame tenor with this former; only the Dedication was to* Ralph Freeman then Lord Maior, and Sir Edward Barkham, Sir Martin Lumley, Sir John Gore, Sir Hugh Hamerſley, Sir Richard Dean, Sir James Cambel, Sir Robert Ducy, Sir George Whitmore, Sir Nicolas Rainton, Knights, and the reſt of the Aldermen; and Edward Littleton, Recorder.

He wrote an Epiſtle alſo to the Biſhop of London, in the Edition Anno 1618. Which was as follows.

To the Honorable and Right Reverend Father in God, JOHN KING, by God's moſt gracious Permiſſion Lord Biſhop of London.
A. M. Sendeth his humble and hearty Duty.

THIS Book, Honorable, Learned and moſt Judicious Father, reporting the Original, Antiquity, and continued Succeſſion of this famous City, both in the elder and more modern Condition; as alſo what Form of Government ſupported the ſame; not only by Authority of the Civil and Temporal Magiſtrate, but alſo in the firſt Receit of the Chriſtian Faith, and Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction held in the Church: Methought, both theſe Occaſions, being duly conſidered with my ſelf, challenged a double Duty at my Hand by way of Dedication. For being a freeborn Son of this Honorable City, even as Maſter STOWE, the firſt Collector of theſe painful Labours together, was; and guided by the ſame Line or Level of common Duty, as he very carefully before obſerved; the Body Politique, I mean, the Right Honorable Lord Maior, and the worthy Aſſiſtant Senators, his Brethren, deſerved to claim no mean Intereſt therein; in being by them thereto directed and commanded, and having been their Servant Six and Twenty Years, in ſundry Employments for the City's Service.

The Times of Pagan Tyranny and Perſecution, being duely conſidered.

In the ſecond Place, tho' rightly deſerving to be Firſt, (by reaſon that God's Cauſe ought to be preferred before the World's) diſcourſing as I have formerly ſaid, of the firſt embracing of Chriſtian Religion, both in this Land and City; and conſequently, how it failed or flouriſhed from Time to Time, under the antient Regiment of Archbiſhops of London, as appeareth in the following Record: and ſo proceeding to Melitus and Juſtus, who were the firſt Biſhops thereof, each after other, at ſuch Time, as the Church of St. Paul, from being the profane Temple of Apollo, (and ſo deſtroyed) was firſt founded to be a Cathedral Church in this City of London; and in the Time of Ethelbert, King of Kent; therein you may be hereafter better informed: All which Catalogue of thoſe Reverend Fathers and Biſhops, how long each Man ſat, or happened to be thence removed, either by Death, or to a higher Degree, is juſtly ſet down in the ſame Regiſter; and humbly given to your great and grave Conſideration: That if I have therein any Ways failed, by your Advice the ſame may be reformed. Or if any Thing alſo be miſtaken, it may be the more directly ordered; You being the only Judge in this Caſe, to whom I ſhould, in a Matter ſo important, appeal.

Laſtly, Concerning a certain Inſtruction, received from your Lordſhip by a Gentleman of much Learning and Reſpects, for the Times of new building, enlarging and repairing of many Churches in this City; as alſo the Houſes of dwelling of the learned Paſtors, to them belonging: wherein hath appeared no lack of Love and Bounty of the Pariſhoners in thoſe Pariſhes; and ſome of them particular Men, in very godly and liberal manner; I moſt humble intreat your Honour at this Time therein to pardon and excuſe me, till a larger Volume may Anſwer both yours, and all others Expectations in that kind, with many other Matters of great Conſequence, not willingly, but conſtrainedly omitted at this Time.

As for ſuch Errors, as have eſcaped in the Impreſſion, many of them, through the Fault of not being well acquainted with my crabbed Writing, more by miſtaking, but none (I dare preſume) by any Willingneſs in the Printer, to commit in the very leaſt kind, I know that you, Reverend Father, and the Learned, will lovingly correct; the uncapable eaſily ſlip over; and the moſt malicious, (even in their ſevereſt Spleen) think me not ſo ignorant, as to write, or the Printer ſo negligent, wilfully to let paſs, albeit we both muſt now ſtand ſubject to every Cenſure.

Your Lordſhips in all Duty

JOHN STOW,

THE # AUTHOR.

Where born.

THE Antiquarian, JOHN STOW, (the Author of the ANNALS of England, and the SURVEY of London) was born in that City: And as he thereby became a Citizen of no mean City, ſo he requited the Honour, by retrieving ſo many Noble and Notable Remarks of it, and recovering ſo much of its Ancient Hiſtory, as are treaſured up in his Books.

The Stows ancient Citizens.

The Name of STOW was ancient, and of long Continuance in the City; and probably of the Family whereof He came. There was one Henry Stow, Draper; to whom Sir John Abel, Knight, in the 13th of Edward II. demiſed all that Capital Meſſuage, called Cold Harbour, in Dowgate Ward, in the Pariſh of Alhallows ad Fœnum, (as it was then called) and all the Appurtenances within the Gate and the Key, [for bringing up Goods from the Water ſide] as Stow himſelf writeth in that Ward. Which makes it appear that he was ſome wealthy Merchant.

Bipart. Pat. 2. Ed. III.

There was alſo in the ſame King's Reign, one John de Stowe, a Churchman, who had a Preſentation from him to the Church of Rotherfeild.

His Parentage.

Father and Grandfather Citizens.

But whether our STOW were derived from theſe, it is uncertain: But certain it is, that as St. Paul made it his boaſt as to the Fleſh, that he was an Hebrew of the Hebrews, ſo John Stow was a Citizen born of Citizens of London. For both his Father and his Grandfather were Citizens, and Tradeſmen of good Subſtance and Credit, dwelling in Cornhill, the chief Place of Trade and Credit in the City: And both lying buried in St. Michael's Cornhill Church, under Monuments. Thomas Stow, his Grandfather, buried about the Year 1526; and Thomas Stow, his Father, in the Year 1559, as himſelf writes in Cornhill Ward.

And of what Company, Quality and Wealth his Grandfather was, and the Legacies that in his Superſtitious Devotion he left, may be ſeen in his laſt Will; which I have inſerted in the Survey, where the mention of his Burial is made, viz. in St. Michael's Cornhill.

In this Pariſh therefore we may conclude our Antiquarian was born. Of the Monuments in the Church there, of the Benefactors, and Accidents of the ſaid Pariſh, he is in his Survey more exact and particular than any where elſe. And one Thing among the reſt I may mention, being ſo very obſervable, which he heard his Father often tell concerning ſomewhat which fell out in the Steeple of that Church, famous in thoſe Times (as it is ſtill) for a good Ring of Bells: Viz. That on St. James's Day, a dreadful Tempeſt of Thunder and Lightning happened, while the Ringers were ringing. And ſuddenly there came in at the South Window an ugly-ſhapen Sight, and Light on the North Side. Preſently the Ringers, for Fear, let go their Bells, and all fell down, and lay as dead for the Time. And when they came to themſelves, they found certain Stones of the North Window to be razed and ſcrat, as if it had been ſo much Butter, printed with a Lion's Claw, as Stow's Expreſſion is. One of theſe Ringers, who was alive when Stow was a young Man, often verified the ſame to him as a Truth.

Theſe Stones were faſtened there again, and ſo remained long after: Which Stow ſaith he often ſaw, and put a Feather or ſmall Stick into the Holes where the Claws had entred, and found them two or three Inches deep.

His Mother, Margaret Stow. Her Will. Regiſt. Lond.

His Mother was Margaret Stow: Who made her laſt Will, June the 27th, 1568. Proved the Thirteenth of October following. Therein it appeareth, that ſhe had Sons, two Johns; one whereof was her Eldeſt Son, and both alive when ſhe made her Will, (to whom ſhe gave Legacies) and Thomas, whom ſhe made her Executor, and William Stow: Her Daughters, Johan, Margaret, Alice.

She bequeathed her Body to be buried by her Husband, in the Pariſh of St. Michael's Cornhill, in the Cloiſter: And Thirty Shillings, to bury her decently. Ten Shillings upon her Children and Friends, to drink withal after her Funeral. To the Poor, in Bread, Five Shillings. To the Company of Tallow-Chandlers, to follow her Corps to the Church, Six Shillings and Eight Pence: With theſe pious Words for her Soul, void of the Superſtition commonly uſed in thoſe Times: ‘I bequeath my Soul unto Almighty God, my Maker and Creator; and to his only Son, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, my only Saviour and Redeemer; with the Holy Ghoſt; and into the Fellowſhip of the Holy Hoſt of Heaven.

She had a Son, named Thomas Farmer.

To all her Children ſhe gave Legacies: But unto John, the Eldeſt, the leaſt; viz. Five Pounds.

Born when.

In this Pariſh then, we take for granted, Stow was born; and that about the Year 1525, in the 17th of Henry VIII. His Godfathers were, Edmund Trindel and Robert Smith; and Margaret, the Wife of William Dickſon, Godmother. For ſo he himſelf ſets it down in the Firſt Edition of his Survey, tho' left out afterwards: Whoſe ſaid Godfathers had Monuments in the ſaid Church of St. Michael; as his ſaid Godmother and her Husband had in the Cloiſter belonging to that Church, lying once under a fair Monument ſet up for them, but ſince defaced. Theſe, no doubt, were wealthy Tradeſmen, and his Father's good Neighbours in Cornhill. Who tho' he lived here for the Sake of his Calling, yet was of ſuch Rank and Eſtate, that he had a Garden to retire to for his Pleaſure and Diverſion, ſituate on the Backſide of Throgmortonſtreet, in Broadſtreet Ward; near to that Place which is now the Drapers Hall: Which then was the Houſe of Sir Thomas Cromwell, K. Henry the Eighth's Great Miniſter and Secretary of State. For which Garden he paid 6 s. 8 d. yearly Rent; and it conſiſted of about Four and forty Foot in Length.

His Father's Garden.

Here a remarkable Matter happened, which his Son John ſomewhere relateth, ſhewing the Power and arbitrary Proceedings of the Great Men in thoſe Times. The Buſineſs was this:

A Garden-Houſe, cloſe by his South Pale or Wall, ſtood ſomewhat in Cromwell's way, and obſtructed his Convenience: Therefore, without any more ado, or having the Leave of the Proprietor, his Workmen looſed it from the Foundation, and bare it upon Rollers, and ran it Two and twenty Foot into Mr. Stow's Garden, before he heard any thing of it. Who afterwards ſpeaking to the Surveyors of Cromwell's Works, had nothing but this Anſwer given him; That Sir Thomas commanded them to do it: And none durſt argue the Matter. Notwithſtanding his Father was fain to continue to pay his old Rent, without any Abatement for his Garden, tho' Half of it was in this manner taken away.

Stow, his Trade.

John Stow ſeemed to follow his Father's Trade and Calling, whatever it were. In a Letter of Grindal, Biſhop of London, to the Privy Council, concerning a Search that was made by his Chaplain in Stow's Houſe, for Papiſtical Books, he called him Stow the Taylor. Which perhaps might be more than barely relating to the Company of Merchant Taylors, whereof he was free: It might beſpeak him a Taylor by Trade: Since in former Times, in Cornhill, Men of that Occupation lived, and had their Shops; who were then of more Reputation and Wealth than of later Times thoſe of that Calling are.

One Peter Maſon, a Taylor, lived in this Street, and was a good Benefactor to St. Peter's Cornhill. And one Atwood, Draper, that lived over againſt St. Michael's Church, in Stow's Time, and (as it ſeems) a Man of Credit and Wealth, was of this Trade, and had his Stall, as well as his Houſe there. Whoſe Wife, a Chantry Prieſt (belonging to the ſaid Church) debauched; which the Husband, coming up to fetch a Preſſing-Iron, diſcovered. But he was even with him, by making him to leap out of a Window, as well as other ſevere Shame and Puniſhment taken on him.

Theſe Shopkeepers, as they ſold Cloth out of the Piece, ſo they ſeemed alſo ſometimes to make and fit it up for wearing. And in Birching-Lane, and along thence in Cornhill, Weſtward, lived Upholders, or Frippers; that is, ſuch as ſold Apparel and old Houſhold Stuff. Theſe were not of equal Credit with the Drapers and Taylors, but yet their Trades came near.

In danger by Perjury.

In the Year 1544, Stow was in ſome great Danger, by reaſon of a falſe Accuſation, given in againſt him by a Prieſt. But the Prieſt's Perjury, either againſt him or ſome other, at length was diſcovered, and met with a due Deſert; the Prieſt being adjudged in the Star-chamber to ſtand upon the Pillory, and have his Cheek marked with F A, for Falſe Accuſing.

Stow lives againſt the Pump within Aldgate.

How ſoon Stow removed from Cornhill is uncertain; but in the Third of Edw. VI. that is, Anno 1549, I find him dwelling by the Well within Aldgate, where now a Pump ſtandeth between Leadenhallſtreet and Fanchurchſtreet. While he lived here, a Rebellion and Inſurrection happened in many Places of England, and particularly in Norfolk and Suffolk; and ſpreading to ſome Parts of Eſſex, One of which County happened to be executed upon a Gibbet in the Pavement before Stow's Door, by Martial Law; and that by the wrongful Accuſation of one Sir Stephen, Curate of Creechurch, a zealous but fantaſtical Man. This poor Man, being the Bailiff of Rumford, had the misfortune to come to Town in the Heat of theſe Broils, and to light into the Company of the ſaid Sir Stephen; who asking, What News? He told him, That many were up in Eſſex; but that Thanks be to God, Things were in good quiet about them. But whatever Surmiſe Sir Stephen had againſt this Man, or whatever Miſtake he made of his Words, he preſently goes and informs againſt him, as tho' he were concerned in the Rebellion; a Man very well beloved and of good Report, where he lived. But he was brought the very next Morning before a Court Martial, and ſentenced immediately to be hanged in the Pariſh upon a Gibbet, ſet up in the Place before named. And ſo was brought early by the Sheriffs of London and the Knight Marſhal; where Stow, ſtanding at his own Door, ſaw the ſad Sight, and heard him ſpeak to this Effect, "That he was come thither to dye, but knew not for what Offence, except for Words by him ſpoken Yeſternight to Sir Stephen, the Curate and Preacher of that Pariſh; which were theſe; That asking him, What News in the Country? He anſwered, Heavy News: And when the other ſaid, What? He replied, there were many Men up in Eſſex, but that, Thanks be to God, all was in good quiet about them. And this was all, ſaid he, as God be my Judge." But Sir Stephen, ſaith Stow, to avoid the Reproach of the People, left the City, and was never heard of ſince to his Knowledge. Of this Prieſt, Stow living in that Pariſh, tells other odd Things, ſhewing his Zeal, but little Diſcretion.

One executed there at his own Door.

Lives in Limeſtreet-Ward.

Afterward Stow removed his Dwelling into Limeſtreet Ward, in the Pariſh of St. Andrews, where he continued till his Death, following his beloved Study of the Hiſtory and Antiquity of England more than his Trade: By occaſion whereof he reduced himſelf at laſt to ſome Streights.

Vindicates the Bounds of this Ward at the Wall.

Let me add here a Piece of Service he did for this Ward; which was, that he ſhewed the true Bounds of it, there eſpecially where Biſhopſgate Ward had encroached on this Ward of Limeſtreet, and taken in three Houſes and certain Land near London Wall, that were ſituate Weſt of the Chapel of St. Auguſtines Papey; which he vindicated to belong to this Ward, and neither to Aldgate Ward on one ſide, nor to Biſhopſgate Ward on the other; both which contended for them. And that he did by certain Old Leaſes and Grants, and eſpecially by the Book of the ſaid Papey. And perhaps it is that very Book, that is to this Day kept in the Cotton Library. He ſhewed thence to the Contenders about it, how there was a Grant from the Maior and Aldermen of London, 6 Edw. 4. to the Fraternity of the Papey, 'of certain Grounds both Eaſt and Weſt, of a Brick-Wall that the Maſter and Wardens of the ſame had made, to cloſe in the Chapel of St. Auguſtines, called The Papey Chapel, ſituate in the Pariſh of All Saints in the Wall, in the Ward of Limeſtreet; for which they were to yield to the City 4*d.* Sterling every Michaelmas. And ſo it was enrolled in the Guildhall, London, as he found in the ſaid Lib. Papie". Which was a ſufficient Proof, that ſome Plot of Ground (which is no Queſtion, now much improved by Building) to be of Limeſtreet Ward. And again, when once Aldgate Ward had claimed this Plot of Ground, the ſame Stow ſhewed them a fair Ledger Book, ſometime pertaining to the Priory of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, wherein were ſet down the juſt Bounds of Aldgate Ward before Sir Thomas Offley, Alderman of Aldgate Ward; Sir Rowland Heyward, Alderman of Limeſtreet Ward; the Common Council and Wardmote of the ſame Ward: Whereupon Sir Thomas Offley gave over his Challenge until the Year 1579, wherein Sir Richard Pype, Maior and Alderman of Biſhopſgate Ward, challenged the foreſaid Houſes to be of his Ward. Whereunto, ſaith Stow, without reaſon ſhewed, Sir Rowland Heyward yielded. And ſo he plainly leaveth upon Record, that the Side of the Street, almoſt to Biſhopſgate, is unjuſtly drawn, and withholden from the Ward of Limeſtreet.

He is a Collector for a great Muſter, in Limeſtreet Ward.

I find him here ſtill inhabiting in this Ward, Anno 1585. In which Year there was a great Muſter of Soldiers in London before Q. Elizabeth, conſiſting of Four Thouſand Men, which the City ſet forth and furniſhed with Arms. For bearing the Charge whereof, certain Sums of Money were levied upon the Citizens in their ſeveral Wards. In Limeſtreet Ward were two Collectors, whereof John Stow was one, as one George Spering was the other; who accordingly paid in their Collections into the Hands of one Willibram, appointed as it ſeems thereunto. The Credit and good Eſteem Mr. Stow had in the Place where he lived appeared by this Truſt repoſed in him.

But now to return a little back, and to take ſome particular View of our Antiquarian's Labours and Searches in the Engliſh Hiſtory.

Collects Hiſtory.

It was about the Year 1560 he addreſſed all his Cares and Cogitations to theſe Searches, for the Compoſing of a Chronicle. The greateſt Part of his Time from hence to his Death, he employed in collecting ſuch Matters of this Kingdom, as he thought worthy to be recommended to Poſterity; which was Forty Years and upwards.

Archbiſhop Parker, his Encourager.

Indeed, after ſome Time he began to be diſcouraged, and to lay aſide theſe Studies, and to fall more diligently upon his Calling. Perhaps, becauſe of the little Gains that came of theſe Contemplations, and the great Charge of purchaſing MSS. and the Neceſſity of looking after a Subſiſtance, and Proviſion for his Family. But Archbiſhop Parker (who as he was a great Friend of theſe Studies himſelf, ſo a Patron of others that addicted themſelves thereunto) excited him to go on, and was a good Benefactor to him, as he gratefully upon Occaſion acknowledged. And namely, in his Dedication of his Annals to Archbiſhop Whitgift, he ſaith, That he was hereunto induced, for that his Worthy Predeceſſor, and his Eſpecial Benefactor, Archbiſhop PARKER, animated him in the Courſe of thoſe Studies; which otherwiſe he had long ſince diſcontinued. But that excellent Prelate dyed, and left him to ſtruggle with his former Diſcouragements. He worſted indeed hereby his Paternal Eſtate, neglected his Buſineſs, and was expoſed alſo to the Cenſures and Backbitings of Critics, and other evil diſpoſed Men; which is ſuggeſted by Edmund Howes, that ſet out with Enlargements, Stow's Chronicle, after his Death; who in his Preface, mentioned ſome, that when he, the ſaid Howes, had moved them to go on in a Continuation of Stow's Books, one cryed he could not ſee, how in any Civil Action, a Man ſhould ſpend his Travel, Time, and Money worſe than in that; acquiring no Regard nor Reward, except Backbiting and Detraction. Another ſwore an Oath and ſaid, that he thanked God he was not yet Mad, to waſte his Time, ſpend 200*l.* a Year, trouble himſelf, and all his Friends, only to gain Aſſurance of endleſs Reproach, Loſs of Liberty, &c. hinting perhaps hereby what poor Mr. Stow at laſt was reduced to.

Stow's Study ſearched.

But to proceed to further Accidents of this Man's Life. He was looked upon as no great Friend to the Reformation of Religion; but being an Admirer of Antiquity in Religion, as well as in Hiſtory, he came into ſome Trouble in the Year 1568. Report was brought to the Queen's Council, as tho' he were a ſuſpicious Perſon, and had a great many dangerous Books of Superſtition in his Cuſtody. And therefore they ſent to Grindal, Biſhop of London, (of whoſe Dioceſe Stow was) to cauſe his Study to be ſearched. Watts, the ſaid Biſhop's Chaplain, and Bedel, Clerk to the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, and one Williams another Divine, were accordingly diſpatched to Stow's Houſe, where all his Books and MSS. they could find, were duly examined. The Report thereupon they made to the Biſhop was, That he had great Collections of his own for the Engliſh Chronicles; wherein, as Watts ſignified to the Biſhop, he ſeemed to have beſtowed much Travel. They found alſo a great Sort of old Books Printed; ſome fabulous, as of Sir Degory Triamour, &c. and a great Parcel of old MS. Chronicles, both in Parchment and Paper. And that beſides, he had Miſcellaneous Tracts, touching Phyſick, Surgery, and Herbs, and Medicinal Recipes; and alſo fantaſtical old Popiſh Books printed in old Time; alſo others written in old Engliſh in Parchment. But another ſort of Books he had more modern; of which the ſaid Searchers thought fit to take an Inventory, as likely moſt to touch him; and they were Books lately ſeth forth in the Realm, or beyond Sea, in Defence of Papiſtry. Which Books, as the Chaplain ſaid, declared him a great Fautor of that Religion. Some of theſe Books, the Liſt whereof ſo taken, and ſent to the Biſhop, were,

A Parlament of Chriſt; made by Thomas Heskyns.
The Hatchet of Hereſy; ſet out by Shacklock.
Expoſition of the Creed, Ten Commandments, Pater noſter, Ave Maria: By Biſhop Bonner.
Certain Sermons, ſet forth in Print by Edgeworth, D. D.
The Manerr of the Liſt of Saints: An old Printed Book.
Five Homilies; made by Leonard Pollard, Prebendary of Worceſter.
A Proof of certain Articles of Religion, denyed by Mr. Juell.
A Book made by Dorman.
With a great many more of that Kind.

Accuſed falſly before the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion.

How he came off now I cannot tell; but being lookt upon with a watchful and jealous Eye, knowing his Inclinations in Religion, I find he was not long after, about the Year 1570, dangerouſly accuſed before the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners; and that by one that had been his Servant, after he had defrauded him of his Goods; and now ſought to deprive him of his Life too, by falſe Accuſation, conſiſting of no leſs than Sevenſcore and odd Articles. A far leſs Number would have ſerved to have diſpatched a Man out of the World, if they could have been proved. The Witneſſes againſt him were ſuch, as ſome whereof had been detected of Perjury, others burnt in the Hand for Felony, and ſuch like. But nevertheleſs none of theſe could ſufficiently prove any one of thoſe numerous Articles againſt him before the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the other Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners, as appeared in their Regiſter. Stow would have proſecuted theſe his falſe Accuſers; but he was anſwered by ſome, that there was no Remedy againſt them, by means of the Statute made; which it ſeems favoured Informers for the Queen.

Theſe were dangerous Times to the Queen and State, by reaſon of Malecontents and diſaffected Perſons to Religion, and the Pope's Creatures; who were ſent over to make Diſturbance in the Government, and had raiſed a dangerous Rebellion in the North. And ſo many innocent Perſons, ſuſpected to be of the Roman Religion, were brought into queſtion. Which might be the Occaſion of Stow's Troubles.

His Brother becomes his falſe Accuſer.

This very Thing our Antiquary ſeems to take notice of in his Chronicle of Queen Mary's Reign, Anno 1556. relating the Puniſhment of a Man, that was brought from Weſtminſter, with his Face to the Horſes Tail, and with a Paper on his Head, unto the Standard in Cheap; and there ſet on the Pillory; and then burnt on the Cheek with the Letters F. A. for Falſe Accuſing of one of the Court of Common Pleas of Treaſon. ‘The like Juſtice, ſaid he, I once wiſhed to ‘the like Accuſer of his Maſter and eldeſt ‘Brother. [ Mark, This falſe Accuſer of Mr. Stow was, it ſeems, his younger Brother, and one that ſerved him in his Trade.] ‘But it was anſwered, that in ſuch Caſe could ‘be no Remedy, tho' the Accuſer himſelf ‘were in the ſame Fact found the principal ‘Offender. Where' through it followed, ‘that the Accuſer never ſhewed Sign of ‘Shame, (the Way to Repentance) but terribly curſed, and blaſphemouſly ſwore, he ‘never committed any ſuch Act, tho' the ‘ſame were regiſtred before the Honourable ‘the Queen's Majeſty's high Commiſſioners. ‘And what horrible Slanders by libelling, ‘and otherwiſe, with Threats of Murder, ‘he daily bruiteth againſt me, the Knower ‘of all Secrets (God, I mean) knoweth; ‘unto whom I refer my Cauſe; being comforted with the Sentence of the Prophet ‘David, Fret not thy ſelf with theſe curſed ‘harmful Men, neither envy angrily theſe ‘Workers of Wickedneſs. For like Graſs ‘anon ſhall they be cut down, and like the ‘green freſh Bent of the Flower ſhall they wither.' Such wicked Detractors did this innocent Man meet with; and with ſuch Meditations from the Scripture did he ſtay himſelf.

Surv. Firſt Edit. p. 199.

And again, in his Survey in Cordwainer ſtreet Ward, having mentioned one William Fitz Oſbert a Deceiver, a Murtherer, a filthy Fornicator, and among other Crimes, a falſe Accuſer of his elder Brother; who had in his Youth brought him up to Learning, and done many Things for him; And the ſad End he deſervedly came to at laſt, namely, drawing by the Heels to the Elms in Smithfield, and there hanged: The Author ſeemed hereupon to think of his own Caſe, by the Note he ſet in the Margin; viz. A falſe Accuſer of his elder Brother, in the End was hanged. God amend, or ſhortly ſend ſuch an End, to ſuch falſe Brethren.

He hath alſo in another Place of his Survey, another Fling at this falſe Brother of his; viz. where he was mentioning a Fuller that dwelt at Shorditch, that had appeached wrongfully of Treaſon many honeſt Eſquires and Gentlemen in King Henry VI. his Days; but was hanged, drawn and quartered for his Pains; and his Head ſet on Londonbridge: And then ſhewing how juſtly this Puniſhment was inflicted on him, quoted a Place of Scripture for it, Deut. 16. That if the Judges, making Inquiſition, ſhould find a Perſon giving falſe Witneſs againſt his Brother; then they ſhould do unto him, as he had thought to do unto his Brother. And here in the Margin Stow noteth, The Reward of a falſe Brother.

Farringdon Ward without in Smithf.

And once more having Occaſion to relate a Paſſage that happened in Smithfield, (where Challenges uſed to be fought) being of like Nature with the groſs Wrong done to him by one that was his Servant, as well as his Brother, he could not forbear to apply it; viz. That in King Henry the VIth's Time, Anno 1446. one John David had bore falſe Witneſs againſt his own Maſter, one Cater, an honeſt Man and well-beloved, as tho' he had been a Traitor. And according to the Cuſtom of thoſe Times, the Accuſed challenged to fight the Accuſer in Smithfield, to vindicate his own Innocency. But the Iſſue was that Cater was ſlain by his Servant. Of which Misfortune, that none might conclude thence, that he was guilty, Stow giveth the Reaſon: Which was, that his Neighbours, to ſhew their Affection and Love to him, gave him too much Wine, before he engaged the Combat; and ſo became the leſs able to manage his Weapon. But he addeth, that notwithſtanding this falſe Servant lived not long unpuniſhed, tho' he eſcaped at preſent; for he was after hanged at Tyburn for Felony. And then Stow maketh this Corollary, Let all ſuch falſe Accuſers note this for Example, and look for no better End, without ſpeedy Repentance. And in the Margin he takes Notice of a Proverb, taken from this treacherous David; If you ſerve me ſo, I will call you Davy.

A Forſwearer immediately falls down dead. Annal, 4*to.* p. 1152.

To which I will add one Paſſage more, which I meet with in his Annals, under the Year 1576. That one Anne Averies, Widow, forſwearing her ſelf for a little Money, that ſhe ſhould have paid for Six Pounds of Tow, at a Shop in Woodſtreet, London, immediately fell down ſpeechleſs, caſting up at her Mouth, in great Abundance, and with horrible Stink, the ſame Matter, which by Nature's Courſe ſhould have been voided downwards, till ſhe died. And then he adds, A terrible Example of God's juſt Judgment, upon ſuch as make no Conſcience of Swearing falſely againſt their Brother.

Lays in Materials for his Chronicle and Survey.

But Stow could not be taken off from his Studies, but earneſtly and indefatigably applied himſelf to the making Collections of Hiſtorical Remarks; to enable him to compile an Hiſtory of England, under the ſeveral Kings thereof, and a Survey of the City of London, his Native Place. And to furniſh him with the former, he got into his Poſſeſſion as many of the antient Engliſh Writers, both Prints and Manuſcripts, as ever he could by Money or Favour; and ſeemed at length to have gotten the Maſtery of them, and digeſted them for his Uſe: And had ſo thoroughly converſed with them, that he was able to give a critical Character of all his Authors. Which may appear in his Deſcriptions he ſet down of many of them before his Summary of Chronicles. He alſo became acquainted with ſuch who increaſed and furthered his Knowledge in Hiſtory; I mean, all the famous Studiers and Lovers of Antiquity in his Time; as Archbiſhop Parker, the Maſter of Antiquarians; Lambard, admirably skilled in the Saxon Learning; and the Author of the Perambulation of Kent, Archion, Irenarcha, and other curious Things; Bowyer, Keeper of the Records of the Tower, and the firſt Digeſter of them into ſome Method; the Learned Camden; and many others of leſſer Note, or leſs known to us.

His Skill in old Authors.

How he came to the Knowledge of London.

And for his Knowledge in the Antiquities of the City, he alſo procured to himſelf all the old Books, Parchments, Inſtruments, Muniments, Charters, Regiſters, Journals, relating to London, that he could poſſibly get. And withal got Acceſs into the Archives of the Chamber of London; where he peruſed the Volumes of moſt Fame there for the City's ancient Privileges, Charters, Laws and Cuſtoms; as the Books Horne, Dunthorne, Liber Albus, (which Book might have been called Carpenter, the Name of the Compiler thereof, as the Two former Books go under the Names of their Compilers) and no Queſtion, many other Records preſerved in that Chamber, which are frequently alledged by him.

The Summary of Chronicles.

The firſt Book he put forth of the Hiſtory of England was his Summary of the Chronicles of England, from the Coming in of Brute unto his own Time. The Occaſion of his firſt ſetting upon this Hiſtorical Work, was by the Motion of the Lord Robert Dudley; when in the Year 1562, Stow preſented him with an ingenious Book of Edmund Dudley his Grandfather's compiling, during his Impriſonment in the Tower, entitled, The Tree of the Commonwealth; which he dedicated to King Henry VIII. but it never came to his Hand. The Original of this Piece Stow, a Collector of curious Things, obtained. And the Copy fair written, he took the Opportunity to give to the ſaid Lord; but the Original he reſerved to himſelf. Then at that great Perſonage's Requeſt and earneſt Perſuaſion, he did firſt collect this Summary, and dedicated the ſame, with the Continuation and Increaſe thereof from Time to Time, to his great Charges, to his Honour, as he tells there. In Reward whereof, addeth he, I always received his hearty Thanks, with Commendations, and not otherwiſe: And that was all the Encouragement he had from him, tho' it had otherwiſe been maliciouſly reported by his Adverſary T. S. [His Brother, I ſuppoſe.]

Annals of England, 4to. p. 818.

Summary Reprinted.

Not long after, viz. 1573. it was enlarged by him, and reprinted in Fleetſtreet, by Thomas Marſh, and dedicated to the ſaid Robert Earl of Leiceſter: And for this Reaſon, as he ſignified, "Becauſe of his uſual generous Acceptation of many Works preſented unto him by others as well as himſelf; and becauſe of his Lordſhip's goodly Inclination to all Sorts of Knowledge, and eſpecially the great Love he bore to old Records of Deeds done by famous and noble Worthies." He fell upon the Study and Pains of examining and collecting of this Engliſh Hiſtory Five Years before he ſet forth this Summary. The Reaſon that he was induced to enter upon it was, (as he ſheweth the Reader in this Preface) becauſe he ſaw the Confuſedneſs of our late Engliſh Chronicles, and the ignorant handling of ancient Affairs; which made him leave his own peculiar Gain, and conſecrate himſelf to the Search of famous Engliſh Antiquities. And his ſingular Praiſe is, that he was an earneſt Enquirer into the Truth, and would not be impoſed upon himſelf, nor impoſe falſe Relations upon others. And how far he had laboured for the Truth, more than ſome others, he offered this laſt Edition of his Summary to declare, 'Wherein as he differed from the inordinate and unskilful Collections of other Men, it was, he ſaid, no marvel, ſeeing he did not fully agree with himſelf. Which he knew would be laid to his Charge, and many great Words made of it. But he propounded it to be conſidered, that there was nothing perfect at the firſt, and that it is incident to Mankind to err and ſlip: And that it was but the Point of fantaſtical Fools only, to perſevere and continue in their Error. And that by peruſing ancient Records, and the beſt approved Hiſtories of all Times, he was moved and driven to acknowledge both the one and the other Men's Errors, and in acknowledging, to correct them.

This Summary is a ſmall thick Octavo, printed in the Black Letter. It begins with a General Deſcription of the Britiſh Empire; and then treats of the ſeveral Kings and Queens that governed this Iſland; naming the Maiors and Sheriffs every Year; and under each Reign it relateth the ſeveral Remarkable Matters that happened, eſpecially concerning the City of London. The Authors and Original Writings and Charters, both Latin and Engliſh that he made uſe of in this Summary were many, whoſe Names, amounting unto an Hundred and more, are there ſet down; whereof many are Regiſters or Records, beſides Epiſtles and Epitaphs, and other Pamphlets of Antiquity.

He addreſſed to the Maior and Aldermen for Two Freedoms: And Before this larger Summary came forth, he had publiſhed ſeveral leſſer Summaries: And after Twenty Five Years, his Fortune growing low, he thought fit to make Means to the Maior and Court of Aldermen, to ſet forth his Deſerts towards the City, and to aſſiſt him in his further Deſigns, with the Grant of a Couple of Freedoms: Which he did in this Letter addreſſed to them; (promiſing therein another Book concerning the City and Citizens.)

'Pleaſeth it your Honour and Worſhips to underſtand, That where your Orator, JOHN STOW, Citizen of this City, hath heretofore, to wit for the Space of Twenty Five Years paſt, (beſides his Chronicle, Dedicated to the Right Honourable the Earl of Leiceſter,) ſet forth divers Summaries, Dedicated to the Lord Maior, his Brethren the Aldermen, and Commoners of this City: In all which he hath eſpecially noted the memorable Acts of famous Citizens, by them done, to the great Benefit of the Commonwealth, and Honour of the ſame City, as alſo, in ſhewing themſelves thankful unto God, have left a godly Example to the Poſterity, to be embraced and imitated. In Conſideration whereof, the ſaid JOHN STOW mindeth ſhortly, if God ſo permit, to ſet forth a far larger Summary, or Chronicle of this City and Citizens thereof, than heretofore hath been publiſhed. And foraſmuch as the Search of Records in the Arches, and elſewhere, cannot but be chargeable to the ſaid JOHN; as heretofore for many Years it hath been altogether of his own Charges; beſides his other Travails and Study; he now humbly craveth your Honours and Worſhips Aid, in Conſideration of the Premiſes, to beſtow on him the Benefit of Two Freemen, ſuch as your Honour and Worſhips ſhall like, to be admitted into the Freedom of this City. Whereby he may be helped ſomewhat towards his Charges, &c. And your Orator ſhall daily pray for your Honours and Worſhips Proſperity during Life. This I took from his own Original; which was a pretty, neat, ſmall Hand; and Spelt well, according to the manner in thoſe Days. And very probably Stow obtained this Favour from the Court.

For a Penſion.

Such another Petition he made to the ſaid Court, in Conſideration of his paſt Labours and Charges for the Service of the Publick; and eſpecially the City; deſiring a Penſion Yearly: Which I will join to the former, though made ſome Years after: Herein he writes, 'That he was of the Age of Threeſcore Years and Four; and that he had for the Space of almoſt Thirty Years laſt paſt, beſides his Chronicles Dedicated to the Earl of Leiceſter, ſet forth divers Summaries, Dedicated to them, &c. He therefore petitioneth them to beſtow on him ſome Yearly Penſion, or otherwiſe: Whereby he might reap ſomewhat towards his great Charges.

Sets forth his Annals.

After his Summary, he publiſhed, in the Year 1600, (now after near Forty Years Study of Hiſtory) his Flores Hiſtoriarum, that is, his ANNALS of this Land, from the Time of the Ancient Britains to his own; theſe were nothing elſe but his Summary greatly enlarged: Which he Dedicated to Archbiſhop Whitgift, moved thereunto, as he writ, by reaſon of that Prelate's great Love, and entire Affection to all good Letters in general, and to Antiquities in Particular: Which had been ſo Singular, that all that liked and loved good Studies, did juſtly eſteem him their principal Patron. This Epiſtle Dedicatory he dated from London, November the 24th, 1600. This Book was ſet forth again in the Year 1605, by Stow himſelf, with Enlargements, in the Black Letter, in a thick Quarto, Printed by George Biſhop. And even this was but a Contraction of a far larger Compoſition of the Hiſtory of England; which he had been Forty Years and more a collecting out of ſome Hundreds of Ancient Authors, Regiſters, Chronicles, Lives, &c. and Writings of particular Cities and Towns. Theſe Annals, I ſay, were but an Abſtract of a far larger Work, which he had gathered, and meant to have Publiſhed; but the Printer, for ſome private Reſpects, (fearing, I ſuppoſe, the Charges) choſe rather to be concerned, for the preſent, in publiſhing more briefly Annals only of that Hiſtory. In the next Page after his Epiſtle to the Reader, he ſets down the Names of the Authors and Regiſters, Chronicles, Records, Books of Monaſteries, Charters, &c. whence he collected theſe his Annals: And one cannot but obſerve his infinite Pains, by that vaſt Number of them, both Ancient and Modern, that he had peruſed, and made Uſe of for his Purpoſe.

A far larger Work of Hiſtory prepared by him.

Hollingſhed's Chronicle foreſtalled the Edition of his.

Some Time before, (viz. Anno. 1573,) came forth the Voluminous Chronicle of Britain, and the Kings and Queens thereof, Printed and Reprinted by Raphael Hollingſhed; being the Laborious Collections of Reiner Wolfe, Printer to the Queen, and a Grave and Learned Citizen, and of others: Which foreſtalled Stow's ſaid Hiſtory. But had the good Archbiſhop Parker lived, (who had ſet him on Work, both by his Requeſt and Command) it would have long before ſeen the Light, by that great Prelate's Furtherance, and (no doubt) Expence too. And it muſt be remembred here, that in the laſt and largeſt Edition of the ſaid Chronicle, (which endeth at the Year 1587, and the 29th of the Queen) Stow communicated many conſiderable Additions to it, as in ſome Places in his Annals, he lets us know, that he had a Hand in thoſe Chronicles ſet forth by Hollingſhed: Where ſpeaking of a Book called, A Declaration of the favourable Dealing of the Queen's Commiſſioners, &c. he ſaith, 'He had cauſed it to be ſet down in the Continuation of that Chronicle, firſt collected by Reyner Wolfe, and finiſhed by Ra. Hollingſhed. He alſo inſerted into the ſame Reyner Wolfe's Chronicle continued, A true and plain Declaration of the horrible Treaſons, practiſed by William Parry. Likewiſe, A True and Summary Report of the Declaration of ſome part of the Earl of Northumberland*'s Treaſons delivered*, &c. 'Which, ſaith Stow, are ſet down in my Continuation of R. Wolfe's Chronicle. And likewiſe, A Declaration of the Cauſes moving the Queen of England to give Aid to the Defence of the People, afflicted and oppreſſed in the

Stow's Additions in that Chronicle.

the Low-Countries. So that the whole Continuation, which was from the Year 1573, (when that Chronicle firſt came forth, to 1587,) ſeems mainly to be of Stow's Doing and Pains. Ralph Hollingſhed ended his Chronicle Anno 1576. With an Epilogue; wherein he acknowledged, that he had made Uſe of the Abridgment of Richard Grafton, and the Summaries of John Stow: In theſe Words, ‘ Thus far [viz. to the Year 1576, where Hollingſhed left off] have I continued this Collection of Engliſh Hiſtories; noting briefly, in theſe latter Years, ſuch Things as I find in the Abridgment of Richard Grafton, and in the Summaries of John Stow, increaſed ſomewhat, as may appear. And from 1576, the Chronicle was ſupplied, and continued to the Year 1586, Ten Years further, by the ſaid Stow, and ſome others: and digeſted by the Induſtry of A. F. [Abraham Fleming] who hath a ſhort Epiſtle before the remaining Chronicle, ſhewing the ſame.

Edmond Homes, Page 811. b.

But ſtill, even to the laſt Cloſe of his Life, our Author's Mind ran much on giving the World theſe his Pains before his Death; as he expreſſed it in the Concluſion of the laſt Edition of his Annals, by himſelf ſet forth, and dedicated to Archbiſhop Whitgift; praying the Reader to accept theſe, and other his Labours, in good Part; and that, if God gave him Life, [though he were now of a good old Age] he intended to Publiſh, or leave to Poſterity, a far larger Volume. But he died before he could accompliſh that. And where that laborious Work of his is, I know not: Only we are told, that he left the ſame in his Study, orderly written, ready for the Preſs. But that it came to nothing. We all know that another Edition of the Annals was ſet forth in Folio by Edmond Howes, ſome Years after the Author's Death. Perhaps thoſe Hiſtorical Collections are preſerved in the curious Repoſitory of Sir Simmonds Dewes, as ſome ſay the reſt of Stow's Books and Papers are. Many of which are now repoſited in the incomparable Library of Manuſcripts erected by the Earl of Oxford and Mortimer.

Stow's Hiſtories Three.

So that Stow's Hiſtories, which he collected and wrote, were Three: viz. his Chronicle, his Summary of Chronicles, and his Annals. The Two latter he Printed; but that Chronicle, which he called his largeſt Work, was never Printed. To this in his publiſhed Pieces he often referreth himſelf. So in the Buſineſs of Wat Tyler, in his Annals, he referreth to the Tenor of the Charter given him by King Richard the IId, for the Kentiſh Men, that were in the ſaid Tyler's Rebellion: Which Charter Stow had ſet down at Length in his larger Hiſtory.

His Tract of ſeveral Ancient Writers.

His Obſervations.

And while we are recounting his Labours in Hiſtory, we muſt not forget another Piece of his. Which though inſerted in his Summary, may be reckoned a diſtinct Work. And that is, a Biographical Tract of ſeveral Ancient Writers; their Qualities, and Characters, the Books they writ, the Times wherein they lived, and died, and divers Paſſages of Remark concerning them, as their Preferments, Learning, Deſerts, &c. As of Aſſerius Menevenſis, Alfred Beverlacenſis, Adam Merimouth, &c. And here we cannot but mention ſome of Stow's Critical Obſervations, curſorily falling in his Way. As concerning Arnold, a Citizen of London; ‘ How he noted the old Charters, Liberties, Laws, Conſtitutions and Cuſtoms of London, being inflamed with a fervent Love of good Learning, and principally obſerving Matters worthy to be remembred of Poſterity. And upon Occaſion of the Mention of the Chronicles of Dunſtable, Bury, and St. Albans; ſuppoſing them to be written by ſome well-diſpoſed in thoſe Monaſteries, to preſerve the memorable Matters and Events relating to thoſe Places, he takes Occaſion to wiſh, ‘ That ſince Doctrine is now more pure than in the Monkiſh Times, that Care were taken to have the Matters of every great Town, worthy preſerving, to be written; or at leaſt in every Shire; and that Order might be taken for a diligent noting of ſuch Things, as hereafter might be welcome to Poſterity, to read and know: As thoſe of our Predeceſſors are now with us. And this good Wiſh of his, we in our Days have in ſome Meaſure ſeen fulfilled, not only in Camden's Britannia, but in the Topographical Accounts publiſhed of divers diſtinct Counties, and Places of Remark.

Chartæ Regis, Mr. Wryſt.

He made a remarkable Note of the Chartæ Regiæ; that is, Charters of divers Abbies and Colleges, that were gathered together in a Book by Commandment, at the Suppreſſion of Abbies, by Sir John Ryſt, [Wryſte,] and that he left to his Heirs, them, and divers ſuch like excellent Monuments. Theſe Wryſthes, or Wryotheſleys, were Heralds, and Kings at Arms, and at length advanced to the Earldom of Southampton.

And divers ſuch Obſervations may be found in the foreſaid Tract; ſhewing both his Judgment and Abilities in Hiſtorical Matters.

Survey of London.

First Edit. Survey.

Mr. Camden.

But now we proceed to another of his excellent Books publiſhed from Antiquities, viz. his Topographical Piece, called, A Survey of London. The Reaſon that firſt put him upon doing this, was the Sight of a Book of the great Antiquarian, William Lambard, viz. his Perambulation of the County of Kent: Whom (upon Occaſion of the Mention of his Father's Monument in St. Michael Woodſtreet Church) he called his Loving Friend, well known by ſundry Learned Books which he publiſhed. As this Gentleman ſomewhere in that Book had deſired and called upon others, to write particular Deſcriptions of other Shires and Counties, where they were Born, or Dwelt, ſo our Author took his Warning; and attempted the Deſcription of this Place, where he both was born, and had his Habitation: Hoping alſo that he ſhould excite others, by his Example, to write Memorials of other Cities, and eminent Places of England, as he of this; and ſo to make up a whole Body of the Chorography of this Iſland among themſelves: And all this, he ſaid, was, that he might give Occaſion and Courage to Mr. Camden to increaſe and beautify his ſingular Work of the BRITANNIA.

Stow was alſo backed by ſome of his good Friends to ſet about this, as being a very fit Perſon to undertake it, having ſeen ſundry ancient Writings and Muniments touching London, by ſearching Records occaſionally for other Purpoſes; and alſo by many written Helps coming to his Hands, which few other had met with. It was likewiſe a Work very agreeable to his profeſſed Travels; and he accounted it as a Duty that he owed to his native Mother and Country, and an Office that of Right he held himſelf bound, in Love, to beſtow upon the Politick Body and Members of the ſame.

His Diligence in conſulting Records.

And how diligent Stow was, both by his Pains and Application, in gathering Matter for this his Book, appeared in that he uſually reſorted to the Records, and to thoſe that had the keeping of them; tho' he ſometime met with no very civil Reception from them; which I gather from a Paſſage of his in the Vintry Ward; where, ſetting down divers Antiquities of the Company of Vintners that he had gathered, and ſtill enquiring after more, that being one of the ancient and chief Corporations; he addreſſed himſelf one Day to the Hall, where was a Court of Aſſiſtants; and there read to them what he had collected concerning that Company for their Honour; thinking, that this would be ſo acceptable to them, the Brothers of that Society, that he ſhould have the Requeſt granted that he intended to make to them; namely, to have the Liberty to make further Search into their Archives, for the Uſe of his intended Survey. But what Anſwer ſome of them then gave him; and how he himſelf reſented, I refer to what he printed afterwards under that Ward, concerning them; which was in the Firſt Edition, but left out by himſelf in the Second and After-Editions. His Words were theſe. 'Having thus much, not without Travel, and ſome Charges, noted for the Antiquity of theſe Vintners, I repaired to the Common Hall of the ſame Company, and there ſhewed and read in a Court of Aſſiſtants; requiring them, as being one of the principal Companies in this City, (of whom I meant therefore to write the more at large) if they knew any more which might ſound to their Worſhip or Commendation; at their Leiſure to ſend it me, and I would join it to my former Collection. At which time I was anſwered by ſome that took upon them the Speech, That they were none of the Principal, but of the inferior Companies. And ſo willing me to leave them, I departed, and never ſince heard from them. Adding, (which was pity) 'that this had ſomewhat diſcouraged him any further to travel amongſt the Companies, to learn ought at their Hands.

Vintners.

Pag. 192. Firſt Edit.

To which I add, what A. M. (who, after Stow's Death, ſet forth another Edition of this Survey) writes in his Epiſtle Dedicatory to Biſhop King, That Stow was a Servant 26 Years to the Maior and Aldermen, in ſundry Employs for the City's Service; and that he was by them directed and commanded in the writing: unleſs he mean it of himſelf.

Directed to this Work by the Court of Aldermen.

It is noted by the Editor of the ſaid Survey, after Stow's Death, concerning Robert Fabian, under the Year 1493, (when he was one of the Sheriffs) that he wrote a Chronicle, a painful Labour, to the great Honour of the City, and the whole Realm. Let me join John Stow, another Citizen, with him in the ſame Praiſe; who, with the like Labour and diligent Search of ancient Writings, compoſed not only a Chronicle of England, but a Survey of the chief City thereof, and tending to his own Honour, as well as that of the City's.

Robert Fabian.

He lived to publiſh two Editions of his Survey, both in Quarto. The one, which was the firſt, came forth Anno 1598, printed by John Wolf, Printer to the City of London, and dedicated by him to the Lord Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens. This Edition ended with the Names of the Maiors and Sheriffs, as far as the Year 1598. He was ſenſible that there ought to have been added ſomething of the Politick Government of the City, with the Aſſiſtance of inferior Officers; their Charges for keeping of the Peace, Service of the Prince, and Honour of the City: whereof much might have been ſaid, and he had thought to have touched. But he forbore; being informed, that a learned Gentleman, and a Citizen born, minded ſuch a Labour, and promiſed to perform it: and ſo Stow left the ſame to his good Leiſure. This Gentleman was James Dalton, that died (which was great Pity) before he brought his Purpoſe to paſs.

The firſt Edition of the Survey, Anno 1598.

His Second Edition came forth Anno 1603, that is, within five Years; the Firſt went off ſo well. This was printed by John Windet, Printer to the ſaid City; and dedicated again to the Lord Maior (who then was Robert Lee) the Commonalty, and Citizens. This Edition hath conſiderable Additions put in by the Author, out of his old Store, of many rare Notes of Antiquity, as he ſtileth them. That which was added, was in part what he deſigned in his firſt Edition; but forbore, by the Expectation of Mr. Dalton's Pains. But he being dead, without having performed any thing that way, our Author made ſome brief Additions of thoſe Matters, intending much more; but that he was, by the good Pleaſure of God, viſited with much Sickneſs. So that his Feet (which had been wont to bear him, as he ſaid, many a Mile) refuſed once in four or five Months to convey him from his Bed to his Study: And therefore could not do as he would. But at laſt, remembring that he had long ſince gathered Notes to have digeſted into diſtinct Chapters, he was forced to deliver them imperfect; fect; deſiring the Readers to pardon him, who wanted not Will to pleaſure them, but Health, it ſeems, and Leiſure. Theſe Notes added therefore in the Second Edition, were concerning the Aldermen and Sheriffs of London: The Names of the Officers belonging to the Maior's Houſe, and of Officers belonging to the Sheriffs: Of the Liveries of the Maiors and Sheriffs ſomewhat: Of the Days of Attendance, that the Fellowſhips go to the Maior at his going to St. Paul's: How the Companies had Place 23. Henry VIII. at the Maior's Feaſt in Guildhall: Somewhat of the Liveries worn by Citizens in Times of Triumph, and otherwiſe. And yet he confeſſed, it lacked his Deſire for the Accompliſhments of ſome ſpecial Parts. However, this he did intend to do, and to make his Book much larger; but he grew weak and ſickly, and in ſhort, was prevented by Death.

The ſecond Edition, Anno 1603.

Additions therein.

A Third Edition, Anno 1618. by A. M.

At length came out a Third Edition in Quarto alſo, ſet forth by A. M. a Citizen alſo, in the Year 1618. And by him dedicated to George Bolls, Lord Maior, Sir Anthony Ben, Recorder, and all the Knights and Aldermen of the City; and to Dr. King, then Biſhop of London. This Man made ſeveral Additions, (as he pretended) which, or much of which, (as he hinted in his Epiſtle) he had formerly from Stow himſelf; who, while he was alive, delivered him ſome of his beſt Collections, and uſed importunate Perſuaſions with him to correct what he found amiſs, and to proceed in perfecting a Work ſo worthy: And being overcome by Affection to him, and much more by Reſpect to this Royal City, Birth-place to him as well as Stow, he undertook to further a Book (as far as his Abilities would extend) of ſuch needful Uſe. And this, he ſaith, he was employed about twelve Years, and had the Encouragement of the Court of Aldermen in the Council-Chamber, being brought before them by Sir Henry Montague, the Recorder, afterwards Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench.

Additions in this Edition.

But the Additions this Editor made, were chiefly ſome Inſcriptions and Epitaphs ſet on the Monuments in the Pariſh Churches; a Continuation of the Names of the Maiors and Sheriffs to the Year of this Edition; and little more, except ſome Tranſcripts out of Stow's Summary and Annals; and here and there venturing to correct ſome pretended Errors of Stow, the Errors indeed being rather his own. For Stow was too exact and learned to be corrected by ſuch an one, much inferior to him both in Learning, and in the Skill of Antiquity. Inſomuch that I wonder, having had ſuch conſiderable Materials for the Work from Stow himſelf, and having alſo the Countenance of the Court of Aldermen, ſo little Improvement of the Book was made by him. But in reſpect of his Diligence in converſing among Epitaphs, he is commended in the Epitaph upon his own Monument in Coleman Street Church:

He that hath many a Tombſtone read,
I'th' Labour ſeeming more among the Dead
To Live, than with the Living: that ſurvey'd
Abſtruſe Antiquities, and o're them laid
Such vive and beauteous Colours with his Pen,
That ſpight of Time thoſe old are new agen, &c.

Who this A. M. was.

This A. M. (if any be more inquiſitive to know who he was) was Anthony Monday, a Man of Remark; ſome time the Pope's Scholar in the Seminary at Rome. Afterwards came home, and renouncing the Pope, and Popery, wrote two Books concerning Matters of the Engliſh Prieſts and Papiſts abroad. One was call'd, The Diſcovery of Campion the Jeſuit, about the Year 1581, which he preſented to Bromley, Lord Chancellor; Lord Burleigh, Lord Treaſurer; and Robert Earl of Leiceſter. The other was, The Engliſh Roman Life, ſet forth Anno 1591. Diſcovering the Lives of the Engliſhmen at Rome; and the Orders of the Engliſh Seminaries, &c.

A Fourth Edition, Anno 1633.

There was yet a Fourth Edition of the Survey put forth in the Year 1633, by the ſame A. M. together with H. D. C. J. and ſome others. This came out in Folio, and was likewiſe dedicated (as all the former Editions) to the Lord Maior, Aldermen, Recorder, and Citizens, by A. M. In this Edition was a Continuation of the Names of the Maiors and Sheriffs to that Year, and an Addition of the Coats of Arms of all the Maiors, and of all the Companies of London, Merchants, and others; and ſome ſhort imperfect Account of the ſaid Companies Originals and Date of their Charters; ſome ſcattering Articles of the Statutes, Acts, and Cuſtoms of the City; an Act of Parliament, and an Act of Common-Council concerning the River of Thames; the Oath of ſome City Officers; the Free Cuſtoms of the Two Manors of Stepney and Hackney: More Cuſtoms and Orders for the City: Remains of other things to be put in their due Places in the Work; which are concerning Dulwich College: The Time of the Reparations of Decays in the Churches, and Inſcriptions upon ſome Monuments and Stones there, or within four Miles Compaſs; with ſome other looſe, diſjointed Matters, to be inſerted in proper Places of the Book; which, it ſeems, were ſent in to ſuch on whom the Care of the Work lay, but came too late. By this time, the Book abounded with verbal Errata and Deviations from the Author's Edition, and Senſe; too tedious to mention many of them: Let one ſuffice.

Errors in the After-Editions of the Survey.

In the Firſt Edition, in that Place of the Book where the Suburbs came to be handled, Wappin is divided into two diſtinct Places, viz. Wappin in the Woſe, and Wappin it ſelf. In the Second Edition, (Stow being then in a weak Condition, and not able to look to the Sheets as they came from the Preſs) Wappin in the Woſe, was changed into Wappin in the Weſt, occaſioned, doubtleſs, by the Ignorance of him that had the Care of the Preſs, who knew not what Woze or Ooze meant, namely, a mariſh wet Land; which is, perhaps, that Wappin now call'd Wappin Wall. But becauſe Wappin does not ſtand in the Weſt of London, but contrary, in the Eaſt, therefore in the Third Edition, it was printed Wappin in the Eaſt; and ſo remained in the Fourth. In both which A. M. was concerned; by which we may judge of his Abilities to correct Stow. And in all the Editions, except the Firſt, Wappin it ſelf, which was the other Part of Wappin, was quite left out. So that this was one Error in the After-Editions of the Survey, that Wappin in the Woſe, and Wapping it ſelf, was turned into Wapping in the Weſt; and that turned into the Eaſt.

A Fifth Edition, Anno 1720.

Now this Year 1720, this Book is arrived to a Fifth Edition, enlarged by ſome Scores of Sheets, ſet forth by J. S. alſo a Citizen born and bred, (as the former Editors were) and the Son of a Freeman of London, and dedicated to the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Citizens of London. Which Dedication they may claim by long and laudable Cuſtom; and alſo by their favourable Leave to conſult their Records. In this Edition, great Numbers of Errors are corrected, and Stow reſtored to himſelf; the Remains are inſerted every where in their proper Places; the Hiſtory of the City, brought down to the preſent Time; and the Cuſtoms, Laws, and Acts of Common-Council (wherein the former Book was moſt of all defective) make a conſiderable Part of the preſent Work. But theſe things are more largely told in the Preface.

Stow had Leland's Collections.

In both Books, viz. his Chronicle and Survey, Stow had the Advantage of making uſe of Leland's Six Volumes of Collections, where-ever he had them; which he tranſcribed, as it ſeems, for his own Uſe; and parted with them at length to the Learned Camden, who is ſaid alſo to make great Uſe of them in writing his Britannia. And for theſe Papers of Leland he had by Agreement an Annuity of 8 l. during the ſaid Stow's Life. This we take upon the Credit of Brooks, or Brookſmouth, York Herald, in ſome Writings of his againſt Camden, intending thereby to charge him to have been a Plagiary. But to relate this Matter more particularly.

This Ralph Brookſmouth, as he had wrote a very virulent Book againſt Camden, entitled, A Diſcovery of Errors, &c. endeavouring therein to charge his Britannia with many Errors, eſpecially in Matters of Genealogy and Heraldry; and that ſince Queen Elizabeth had made him Clarentieux: So Camden modeſtly, but learnedly, anſwered that angry Man, and vindicated what he had writ; and ſet his Anſwer at the End of an Edition of his Britannia, Anno 1600. This Herald wrote yet another Piece againſt Clarencieux, pretending to a Second Diſcovery of Errors in his Britannia, and in Juſtification of what he had publiſhed before; and that he had ſtolen from Leland: Therein he hath theſe Words, (the very MS. was very obligingly ſhewn me by John Anſtis, Eſq; Garter King at Arms.) viz.

MSS. J. Anſtis, Garter.

—— 'His new coated Britannia, made and digeſted of induſtrious Labours of John Leyland, that great Scholar, and painful Searcher of England's Antiquities, — as may appear both by the ſaid Leyland's Six Volumes, written with his own Hand, yet extant in Cuſtody of Mr. Oſborne of the Exchequer; as alſo by the ſaid Leyland's New-Year's Gift, dedicated to the ſame King, annexed to the End of my late Diſcovery: Which Six Books or Volumes were copied out by John Stow, and by him ſold to this Learned Man [Camden] for an Annuity of Eight Pounds per Annum; which he did pay unto the ſaid Stowe, during his Life; as the ſaid John Stowe himſelf, before his Death, confeſſed to divers Perſons of Credit; lamenting the Wrong done to Leyland, both by that Learned Man; and alſo by one Harriſon of Wyndeſore, who likewiſe had robbed Leyland of the Iſlands adjacent to this Realm of England; ſetting them in Hollingſhed, as his own Travels and Collection, &c.' Theſe Lines, reflecting unworthily upon Stow, as well as Camden, are eaſily anſwered; ſince both do freely acknowledge where they have made uſe of Leyland, by ſetting his Name in their Margins.

Stow had an Annuity of 8 l. of Camden.

His Opportunity of peruſing ancient Writings.

And our Author, as he had a Genius towards our Hiſtory, ſo he had an Advantage over many after him, in writing his Hiſtory and Survey; and that was, by living in thoſe Times when the Monaſteries were diſſolved. In which Places were repoſited moſt of the ancient MSS. as well relating to thoſe Religious Foundations, as containing alſo Hiſtorical Accounts of the Kingdom, and Kings thereof, written by the Monks, and learned Perſons, Members of thoſe Fraternities. By which means he might probably come to the Sight of thoſe Regiſters, Records, and Chronicles, which he ſo often cites.

Aſſiſts Dr. Powel in publiſhing the Hiſtory of Cambria, Anno 1584.

And as Mr. Stow thus publiſhed, for the Benefit and Pleaſure of his Countrymen, his own Pains in Hiſtory; ſo likewiſe, as a hearty Promoter of the Antiquities of this Land, he gave all the Encouragement and Aſſiſtance that he could to others that beſtowed Labour that way. Dr. David Powel, a learned Welſhman, had communicated to him by Sir Henry Sidney, ſome time Preſident of Wales, an ancient MS. of the Hiſtory and Antiquity of Wales; being a Collection of the Succeſſions and Acts of the Britiſh Princes after Cadwallador, unto the Year 1156. done by Caradoc of Lancarvan. Theſe Collections were kept in an Abby of Conwey in Wales, and another Abby; and were continued and augmented every three Years until the Year 1270. Theſe were copied out, ſo that there were an hundred Copies of them. This Book Humphrey Lloyd, Gentleman, tranſlated into Engliſh, and partly augmented out of Matthew Paris, and Nicolas Trivet. The Copy of the Tranſlation Sir Henry Sidney (whoſe Diſpoſition was to ſeek after Antiquities, and the Weal Publick of the Countries that he governed, rather than their Lands and Revenues) had lying by him a great while; and deſirous to have it printed, ſent for Dr. Powel, requiring him to peruſe and correct, that it might be committed to the Preſs. For the poliſhing and improving this Work, this learned Briton took a great deal of Pains, by comparing Copies, and adding many things. And among other Aſſiſtants, our Stow was none of the leaſt; ſupplying him with a conſiderable Number of Manuſcript Hiſtorians, as the ſaid Powel acknowledges in his Preface. And who thoſe Hiſtorians were, will be ſhewn hereafter.

Powel's Pref.

His Notes and Corrections upon Chaucer.

Survey, Edit. 1603. p. 465.

He made many Notes and Corrections of the Works of the ancient Poet Chaucer. Of which himſelf giveth this Account, (where he mentions his Tomb in the South Iſle of St. Peters Weſtminſter, ſet up to that Poet's Memory by Nicolas Brigham) That through his own painful Labour he had corrected thoſe Works, and twice increaſed them in Queen Elizabeth's Reign.

The City Chronicler.

It doth not appear either what Honour or Advantage Mr. Stow obtained, after all his extraordinary Pains and Study for the Publick Good; unleſs that he ſeemed to have been made by the City their Chronicler, (for ſo I find him called in a Cauſe between the City and the Lieutenant of the Tower, about the Bounds and Liberties) and had therefore ſome Honorary Fee allowed him. By which Place it is likely he had the Liberty of Acceſs to the City Records, which it ſeems plain he had, by his ſo often quoting them in his Books. But I cannot but take Notice, how by an additional Word his Credit, as a Writer of Chronicles, ſeems to be diminiſhed, being ſtyled, The City's Fee'd Chronicler; yet meaning not, I hope, that he took Fees of the City, not to write ſo much, what was true, as what might turn beſt to its Honour and Advantage; but rather, that he received a Salary from it, for his great Labours, Pains, and Reſearches in its Records and Archives, for the retrieving the Knowledge partly of its true Hiſtory, and partly of the Cuſtoms, Privileges and Rights belonging to it.

His Sickneſs.

He was afflicted near his End very much with Pain in his Feet; which, perhaps, was the Gout. In the Year 1602, or 1603, he was fain to keep his Bed four or five Months with it. Where he obſerved how his Affliction lay in that Part that formerly he had made ſo much uſe of in walking many a Mile to ſearch after Antiquities, and ancient Books and MSS. He was now within a Year or two of a good old Age, that is, Fourſcore Years.

His Poverty.

Together with his Age, and with his Infirmities, he was now, in his laſt Years, oppreſſed with Need: Having ſpent his Patrimony, and the beſt Part of his Eſtate in theſe Studies and Labours, uſeful to this City, and to the Engliſh Nation, though not to himſelf. And how he, poor Man, was reduced at laſt, and what Damage he had ſuſtained hereby, was plain enough hinted by one, who being moved to undertake and carry on a Continuance of Stow's Chronicle, after his Death, anſwered, 'I thank God, that I am not yet ſo mad, to waſte my Time, ſpend 200 l. a Year, trouble my ſelf, and all my Friends, only to gain Aſſurance of endleſs Reproach, Loſs of Liberty, and bring all my Days in queſtion.' Theſe various Afflictions, it ſeems, he met with in his Life: But as for Reproach, his Memory hath out-lived that, being now eſteemed one of the beſt and exacteſt of our Engliſh Hiſtorians.

Ep. Dedicat. to the Abridgment of the Engliſh Chronicle.

The Deſcription of his mean Circumſtances was true enough. So that he was forced to obtain a Licence, or Brief, as we now call it, from King James I. to collect the charitable Benevolence of well diſpoſed People, for his Subſiſtence, (A thing as lamentable, as ſurprizing to hear) which that King granted. And the Grounds and Reaſons which moved him to do it, (as they were expreſſed in the Licence) are remarkable; namely, That the ſaid Stow had deſired ſuch a Licence under his Great Seal, in Recompence of his Labour and Travel of Forty five Years in ſetting forth the Chronicles of England, and Eight Years taken up in ſetting forth the Survey, and towards his Relief now in his old Age; having left his former Means of living, and only employing himſelf for the Service and Good of his Country. This Licenſe bore Date in October 1604. It may not be amiſs in this Place to exemplify a Brief for a Perſon, and upon an Occaſion ſo remarkable, according to the Copy communicated to me from the Reverend Dr. Tanner, Chancellor of Norwich, by the Hands of the Reverend Dr. Edmund Gibſon, now the Right Reverend the Biſhop of Lincoln, viz.

Gets a Licenſe to collect Alms for himſelf.

Brief granted him by King James.

“ JAMES, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all and ſingular Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Archdeacons, Deans, and their Officials; Parſons, Vicars, Curates: And to all Spiritual Perſons. And alſo to all Juſtices of Peace, Maiors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Conſtables, Churchwardens, and Headboroughs. And to all Officers of Cities, Boroughs, and Towns Corporate. And to all other our Officers, Miniſters, and Subjects whatſoever, as well within Liberties as without, to whom theſe preſents ſhall come, Greeting.

“ Whereas our true and loyal Subject, John Stow, Citizen of London, having, for the Good of the Commonwealth, and Poſterity to come, employed all his Induſtry and Labour to commit to the Hiſtory of Chronicle, all ſuch things worthy of Remembrance, as from time to time happened within this whole Realm, for the Space of Five and forty Years, until Chriſtmaſs laſt paſt, (as by divers large and brief Chronicles of his writing may appear) beſides his great Pains and Charge in making his Book, called his Survey of London, wherein he ſpent Eight Years in ſearching out of ancient Records concerning Antiquities both for London and Southwark; Hath been an humble Suiter unto Us, that we would be pleaſed to grant him a Licence under our Great Seal, to gather the Benevolence of well-diſpoſed People within this our Realm of England, in Recompence of his ſaid Labour and Travel, and towards his Relief now in his old Age; having left his former Means whereby he lived, only employing himſelf for the Service and Good of his Country: We, tendering the poor Eſtate of ſo loyal and painful a Subject, who hath ſo well deſerved of Us, and all our whole Realm and Subjects; and being deſirous that his ſaid Induſtry and Labour ſhould be recompenced in ſome bountiful and good ſort, of our eſpecial Grace and Princely Compaſſion have been pleaſed, that Collection ſhould be made for the Recompence and Relief of our ſaid Subject John Stow, in this our Realm of England.

“Know ye therefore, that we have given and granted, and by theſe our Letters Patents, do give and grant unto our ſaid Subject John Stow, and to his Deputy, the Bearer hereof, full Power, Licence, and Authority, to aſk, gather, receive, and take the Alms and charitable Benevolence of all our loving Subjects whatſoever, inhabiting within our Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and the Suburbs thereof, and in our Counties of Middleſex, Surrey, Kent, Suſſex, Eſſex, Hertford, Cambridge, with the Univerſity there; Norfolk, with the City of Norwich; Suffolk, Huntington, Bedford, Buckingham, Berk, Oxon, with the Univerſity there; Northampton, Warwick, Leiceſter, Derby, Nottingham, Rutland, York, with the Biſhoprick of Durham; Lincoln, Southampton, Wilts, Somerſet, Dorſet, Devon, Glouceſter, Worceſter, Salop, Stafford, Cheſter, Lancaſter, Hereford, and Monmouth. And in all Cities, Towns Corporate, and Privileged Places, Pariſhes, Villages, and in all other Places whatſoever, within any of our ſaid Cities and Counties, and not elſewhere, for and towards the Relief of our ſaid Subject, John Stow, now in his old Age.

“Wherefore We will and command you, and every of you, that at ſuch time and times as the ſaid John Stow, or his Deputy, the Bearer hereof, ſhall come and repair to any your Churches, or other Places, to aſk and receive the Gratuities and charitable Benevolence of our ſaid Subjects, quietly to permit and ſuffer them ſo to do, without any manner your Lett or Contradiction. And you the ſaid Parſons, Vicars, and Curates, for the better ſtirring up of a charitable Devotion, deliberately to publiſh and declare the Tenor of theſe our Letters Patents unto our ſaid Subjects; exhorting and perſuading them to extend their liberal Contributions in ſo good and charitable a Deed; any Statute, Law, Ordinance, or Proviſion heretofore made to the contrary, in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

“In witneſs whereof, we have cauſed theſe our Letters to be made Patents for the Space of one whole Year next after the Date hereof to endure. Witneſs our ſelf at Weſtminſter, the Six and twentieth Day of October, in the Second Year of our Reign of England, France, and Ireland; and of Scotland, the Eight and thirtieth.

STYWARD.

God ſave the King.

Printed by Thomas Burfoot.

There was another Brief granted to Stow in the Firſt Year of the King, as this above was granted the Second; that firſt expiring within a Twelvemonth, and ſo probably before the Collection was every where finiſhed. This firſt Brief was ſeconded by a Letter from the King, recommending the ſaid Stow's Condition: Which was to this Tenor.

The King's Letter accompanying his Brief.

‘JAMES, by the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all our well-beloved Subjects, Greeting: Whereas our Loving Subject, JOHN STOW, a very aged and worthy Member of our City of London, this Five and forty Years hath, to his great Charge, and with Neglect of his ordinary Means of Maintenance, for the general Good, as well of Poſterity, as of the preſent Age, compiled and publiſhed divers neceſſary Books and Chronicles: And therefore WE, in Recompence of theſe his painful Labours, and for Encouragement to the like, have, in our Royal Inclination, been pleaſed to grant our Letters Patents under our Great Seal of England, dated the 8th of May, 1603, Thereby authorizing him, the ſaid John Stow, and his Deputy, to collect, among Our loving Subjects, their voluntary Contribution and kind Gratuity, as by the ſaid Letters Patents more at large may appear. NOW, ſeeing that Our ſaid Patents, being but One of themſelves, cannot be ſhewed forth in divers Places or Pariſhes at once, as the Occaſions of the ſpeedy putting them in Execution may require, WE have therefore thought expedient, in this unuſual Manner, to recommend his Cauſe unto you, having already in Our own Perſon, and of our ſpecial Grace, begun the largeſt, for the Example of others. Given at Our Palace of Weſtminſter.’ It is without Date, this ſeeming to be the firſt Minutes of a Letter intended to be Printed, and ſhewn by the Collectors for the more Speed; where the original Letters Patents could not ſo ſoon be produced.

On the backſide of this Letter, I find ſet down what was collected of the Pariſhioners of St. Mary Woolnoth, which was 7 s. and 6 d. with the Churchwarden's Name ſubſcribed.

His Death, and Monument,

He died April the 5th following, that is, within leſs than Six Months after, of the Stone Cholick: So that it is to be feared, the poor Man made but little Progreſs in this Collection. 'Tis ſtrange to me, that the City of London, to which he had done ſuch Service and Honour, in writing ſuch an elaborate and accurate Survey thereof; nor the wealthy Company of Merchant-Taylors, of which he was a worthy and creditable Member; nor laſtly, the State, in grateful Remembrance of his diligent and faithful Pains, in compoſing an excellent Hiſtory of the Kingdom, neither of them had allotted him ſome Honorary Penſion during his Life. He being arrived at the Age of 80 Years, deceaſed, and was buried towards the upper End of the North Iſle of St. Andrew Underſhaft Church, in which Pariſh he had lived many a Year; and hath a decent Monument there on the North Wall, ſet up by his Wife, with a good Effigies of himſelf ſitting in a Chair as it were in his Study, with a Book before him, reading; and Books in Shelves about him: And this Latin Inſcription:

And Inſcription.

MEMORIÆ SACRUM.

Reſurrectionem in Chriſto hic expectat JOANNES STOWE, Civis LONDINENSIS. Qui in antiquis Monumentis eruendis accuratiſſima diligentia uſus, ANGLIÆ Annales, & Civitatis LONDINI Synopſin, bene de ſua, bene de poſtera ætate meritus, luculenter ſcripſit; Vitæq; ſtadio pie & probe decurſo, obijt ætatis Anno LXXX. die 5. Aprilis, MDCV.

ELIZABETHA Conjux, ut perpetuum ſui amoris teſtimonium, dolens [H. M. P.]

This Figure of STOW, which ſeems to be Stone, I have been told by an ingenious Perſon in Antiquities, to be nothing elſe but Clay burnt, and painted; a fine Art, known and practiſed in former Times. Of this ſort, there were ſeveral Effigies in Churches before the great Fire. One of theſe was the Head of Dr. Colet, ſet up both in St. Paul's Church, whereof he was Dean, and in his School hard by, founded by him; which I well remember ſince I was a Scholar there, divers Years before the Fire: But now there be ſcarce any Remainders of that Kind, except this of STOW, ſtanding in a Church that eſcaped the ſpreading Conflagration, Anno 1666. wherein ſo many Churches were demoliſhed.

Mr. Bagford.

Had a Wife and four Daughters.

By the above Inſcription, it appeareth he was married; but what Sons he had, beſide four Daughters, as this Monument mentioneth none, ſo neither can I learn.

Edm. Howes's Chron.

To conclude; as for his Perſon and Temper, he was (as he is deſcribed by one that well knew him) tall of Stature, lean of Body and Face; his Eyes ſmall and Chriſtalline; of a pleaſant and chearful Countenance; his Sight and Memory very good, and retained the true Uſe of all his Senſes unto the Day of his Death. He had an excellent Memory; was very ſober, mild, and courteous, to any that required his Inſtructions. He always proteſted never to have written any thing, either for Envy, Fear, or Favour, nor to ſeek his own particular Gain or Vain-glory; and, that his only Pains and Care was, to write Truth.

His Character.

BUT before we can fully finiſh Mr. Stow's Character, we muſt know more particularly what he was, as well as what he did; and ſee him within, as well as without; I mean, the Diſpoſition, Inclination, and Endowments of his Mind, as well as his viſible Works and Actions.

And that which in this Conſideration of him, firſt offereth it ſelf to us to relate, is, that he was an earneſt Student and Lover of the Antiquity of his own Country; which was ſo great, that it made him at length lay aſide his own ſecular Trade and Buſineſs, that he might wholly addict himſelf to it. He was an unwearied Reader of all Authors of Engliſh Hiſtory, whether printed, or in MS. and a Searcher into Records, Regiſters, Journals, Original Charters, Inſtruments, &c. as may be ſeen by the large Catalogues of them ſet down both in his Annals and Survey, as conſulted by him, and from whence the Materials and Authority of thoſe his Books were taken; as Teſtimonies of his Truth and Diligence.

Studious of Antiquity.

And it contented him not to have the reading of Books and Writings of this kind, but he was greedy of making himſelf Poſſeſſor of them, as of a great Treaſure. By the Year 1568, he had furniſhed himſelf a conſiderable Library of ſuch; as appears from the Report of Mr. Watts, Archdeacon of London, the Biſhop of London's Chaplain, who was ſent to ſearch his Library, viz. 'That he had a great Collection of old Books and MSS. of all ſorts, but eſpecially relating to Chronicle and Hiſtory both in Parchment and Paper; and that there was abundance of Matter collected for Hiſtory, Fundationes Eccleſiarum, Monaſteriorum, &c. Flores Hiſtoriarum, and ſuch like.' And the Rarity of his Study was, that it was not only ſtored with ancient Authors, but Original Charters, Regiſters, and Chronicles of particular Places; ſuch as, the Regiſter of Bermondſey, the Regiſter of St. Edmunds Bury, of the new Abby near the Tower, of St. Bartholomew Smithfield, of the Friars Minors of London, &c. theſe in Latin; other Regiſters in Engliſh; as, a Regiſter of the Knights of the Garter, a Regiſter of the Maiors of London. He alſo had old Records of London, Records of St. Aſaph, Chronicles of St. Albans, Arnold's Chronicles, Annals of the Monaſtery of Hyde, &c. Moſt of which, I ſuppoſe, he had purchaſed, or ſome way or other procured, with conſiderable Charge and Coſt (no queſtion) out of his own Purſe. And he had the greater Opportunity to furniſh himſelf with theſe things, living in the Times when they were diſperſed and ſcattered abroad, and conveyed away into divers Hands, out of the Monaſteries and Religious Houſes, where they had been, for the moſt part, diligently kept and preſerved; and moſtly written by the Monks that dwelt, and enjoyed their ſtudious Retirements there.

Stow, a great Tranſcriber.

He was alſo a diligent Tranſcriber of ſuch ancient and uſeful Books, and which he could not obtain or Purchaſe, being of Eſteem with him, or ſerving to his Purpoſe. Thus he tranſcribed Leland's Six Books of Collections, which turned very ſeaſonably to his Profit, as was told before. Another Tranſcript of his was a Speech of Queen Elizabeth to her Parliament, 27. Eliz. Anno 1584. Which, with Stow's other Papers, coming afterwards into the Hands of Sir Simmons D' Ews, Bart. he preſented to the World, in his Journal of Parliaments: Where he tells us, that it was written with Stow's own Hand; the Speech not being found in the Original Journal Book of the Upper Houſe; and therefore he ſupplied it out of a Copy which he had by him, written by John Stow, the Chronicler, with his own Hand, being verbatim, as followed, &c.

Journal of Parliaments, p. 328. b.

A good Critick in ancient Hiſtory.

And as he had a good Library repleniſhed with ſuch Books, ſo he was a very good Judge of them; and was able to diſcourſe critically concerning them. His Abilities this way may appear in Deſcriptions of ancient Writers, and Writings; being a little Tract (taken Notice of before) prefixed to his Summary of Chronicles, printed Anno 1573, which begins with Aſſerus Menevenſis; of whom he giveth this Deſcription: ‘A Man of great Holineſs and Learning; ‘who was ſent for from Menevia, or St. Davids in Wales, by King Alfrede, and by ‘him made Biſhop of Sherbourne [the See] ‘now called Salisbury. It is ſaid, that King ‘Alfrede erected the School or Univerſity ‘of Oxeford: But this Aſſerus, writing ‘purpoſely, diligently and honourably of ‘all King Alfrede's Noble Acts, maketh no ‘Mention of. Divers there be, and thoſe ‘ancient Writers, which attribute all to the ‘Engliſh Church at Rome; which the late, ‘without Conſideration, do ſpeak of Oxford. Aſſerus flouriſhed in the Year after ‘Chriſt's Birth, 890. Again,

‘Alfredus Beverlacenſis, Treaſurer of the ‘College of Beverly, a deep Philoſopher, a ‘diligent Hiſtoriographer, and notable Di‘vine, brought up in the moſt ancient and ‘famous Univerſity of Cambridg: He writ ‘the Accidents of Time from the Beginning ‘of the Britons, to the Year of Chriſt 1136, ‘in the which he lived. Again,

‘Adam Merimouth, a Prebendary of St. ‘Paul's in London. He ſeeing the Want of ‘Chronicles, and feeling the Neceſſity of ‘them, laboured earneſtly to commit things ‘to Memory; and writ from the Year after ‘Chriſt's Birth, 1320, unto the Year 1380, ‘in the which he flouriſhed. Further,

‘Additiones Polychronicon were added by ‘Thomas Walſingham, born in Norfolk; and ‘after, a Monk at St. Albans. The Book ‘called Polychronicon, was writ by Ranulphus ‘Higden, a Monk of Cheſter. Thomas Walſingham's chief Delight was in the Col‘lection of Engliſh Hiſtories; wherein he ‘hath left, to the perpetual regiſtring of ‘his Name, divers other Monuments of re‘verend Antiquity. He lived 1443. Again, ‘Galfridus Monumetenſis. His Chronicle ‘of the Britons, is of ſome ſcornfully re‘jected; wherein they ſhew their great Un‘thankfulneſs, not to embrace him, who ‘painfully, for their Behoof, playeth only ‘the Part of an Interpreter: Little Wiſdom, ‘to condemn that which they cannot amend; ‘or, if they can, not to conſider the Time ‘wherein he lived. The true Hiſtory may, ‘of a ſkilful Reader, be well diſcerned from ‘the falſe: And many things in him that ‘ſeem ſtrange, are confirmed by the beſt ‘Writers of all Ages. He lived 1158.

Again, he thus deſcribeth Gulielmus Novoburgenſis, ‘otherwiſe Guliel Petit, or Parvus; who, for his true dealing in Hiſtories, ‘is much commended of Polydore Virgil: But ‘it was an Italian Flouriſh, to put Galfridus ‘Monumetenſis out of Conceit; becauſe he ‘reporteth (which the Italian cannot abide) ‘friendly and liberally of the Britons. His ‘Chronicle is lately printed at Antwerp, ‘both unhoneſtly and unperfectly, by the ‘King's Printer, Will. Silvius: For, leaving ‘out Doctor Turner's Preface, late Dean of ‘Wells, he inſerted his own; and left out alſo ‘ſeveral Chapters which were in the Copy ‘that Dr. Turner ſent unto him. But it is ‘well ſeen, that Novoburgenſis was a good ‘Divine, and diligent Hiſtoriographer, his ‘untimely Preface being excepted. He lived ‘1200.

This is a Specimen large enough of Stow's Acquaintance with our ancient Authors; and of his critical Skill and Judgment of them.

A Conſort with Antiquarians.

He delighted in thoſe that were inquiſitive with him in antient Hiſtory, and were truly learned therein. Their Converſation he uſed, and with them he loved to conſort, or if he were not perſonally acquainted with them, he reverenced them, and was well acquainted with their Labours. But as for ſuch as pretended to this ſort of Learning, and preſumed to ſet forth Hiſtories in their own Names, when they were none of their own, but unſkilfully borrowed from others, and withal betraying much Ignorance therein, he was a great Enemy to them.

R. G. an unſkilful Pretender to Hiſtory.

This made him not ſpare R. G. [that is, Richard Grafton,] but laſh him, whenſoever he came in his Way: being offended with him both for ſtealing from him and from others; and by abuſing other Writers and falſifying them. He gave his Book the ſpecious Title of A Chronicle at large of the Affairs of England, and the Kings of the ſame deduced from the Creation of the World, &c. Where firſt Stow noteth him for a great Miſ-aſſerter of Authors, both in Latin, as Flores Hiſtoriarum, Polydore Virgil, and

Matthew Paris: and in the vulgar Tongue, as Polychronicon, William Caxton, Fabian, Hall, Cooper. Which if one looked into the Places he quoted, he ſhould find no ſuch Matter at all. And as for other Authors which he pretended to quote, as Robert de Averbury, Tho. Walſingham, Henry of Leyceſter, and the Regiſter of Bury, and many others, he never ſo much as ſaw them, but only took what he alledged, not out of the Authors themſelves, but out of his [i. e. Stow's] Summary. And in ſhort, he wiſhed the Readers to take care, how they were deceived with Lyes ſmoothly told.

Which Summary he abridged and ſo ſet forth as his own, which ſome learned, and honourable Perſons (as Stow himſelf relateth it) forbad to be reprinted, as diſcovering it to be not his, but Stow's; but notwithſtanding, there was a Second Impreſſion. To which R. G. had the Confidence to put a Preface in Vindication of himſelf againſt Stow, to which Stow trying to ſhame him gives the broad Term of a lying Preface.

Edward Hall.

Deſcription of Writers of Hiſtory.

Edward Hall had writ an Hiſtory of the Union of the two Houſes of York and Lancaſter, which Stow ſaith, hitherto was had in great Price, and would doubtleſs hereafter be in greater. This Book was ſet forth by Grafton, as tho' it were his own, which Stow openly tells the World as a publick Correction for him, in theſe Words, 'Somebody without any ingenuous and plain Declaration thereof, hath publiſhed, but not without mangling, Mr. Hall's Book for his own. And once more, John Harding, that lived An. 1450. whom John Stow calleth, A ſtout and well learned Man, ſhewing how he had exhibited a Chronicle of England, with a Map or Deſcription of Scotland to K. Henry VI. added, that this Chronicle did almoſt altogether differ from that which under his Name was imprinted by Ri. Grafton. Thus would not our Stow ſpare this Plagiary. We ſhall hear more of him before we have done.

John Harding.

Diſcovers fabulous Reports Hiſtorical.

Our Authors good Judgment and Skill in Antiquity, joyned with an inquiſitive Temper, rendred him uſeful in divers Reſpects. He was not to be put off with Frauds and Superſtitious Fables, commonly impoſed upon Men of leſs Accuracy: but was able to detect and diſcover them. And as he was a great Lover of Truth, ſo he was the more inquiſitive to find it out: and his Reading and Learning the better enabled him to do it. He confuted the Story of Edward Hall in his Chronicle, following a Table (ſaith Stow) then on foot, concerning one Bolton, ſometime Prior of St. Bartholomew; 'That there being Prognoſtications, that in the Year 1524. there ſhould be ſuch Eclipſes in Watry Signs, and ſuch Conjunctions, that by Waters and Floods many People ſhould periſh. Whereupon many removed to high Grounds for fear of drowning: And particularly Prior Bolton builded him an Houſe upon Harrow on the Hill, and that thither he went, and made proviſion of all things neceſſary within his Houſe, for the Space of two Months, &c. This Stow would not let paſs without diligent Enquiry, and by credible Information found it not ſo: and that the Ground of the Story was only this, that this Prior being Parſon of Harrow, beſtowed ſome Reparation on the Parſonage-Houſe; and builded nothing elſe but a Dove-Houſe, to ſerve him when he had forgone his Priory. Thus Stow ſifted out Matters, and was not to be carried away by Reports.

Concerning Walworth's Daggar.

He confuted alſo the commonly related and believed Report of William Walworth killing Jack Straw with his Dagger in the King's Preſence: And that from that Act of the Maior the Dagger was added to the Arms of the City, which was before a Red Croſs only: Whereas that Dagger was miſtaken for St. Paul's Sword; born before in the old Arms, as it ſeems. And that it was indeed Wat Tyler that was ſtruck by Walworth, in arreſting him with a ſound Blow on the Head; and afterwards wounded him with his Baſiliard: whereas Jack Straw was taken and executed in Smithfield. As Stow gives a large Account of it, when he comes to Crooked-Lane Church, in Candlewick-Street Ward.

Aldermanbury.

And ſo again, he threw away the many fanciful Conjectures, whence the Name of Aldermanbury, a Place in London, was pretended to be taken; diſdaining not once to mention them, as being all fabulous: but giveth a more judicious Reaſon of that Name of Aldermanbury, appropriated to that Place, being anciently the Court were the Aldermen met; partly from his own Experience, and partly from his Skill in old Engliſh Words: His own Experience, he himſelf having ſeen there the Ruins of the old Court Hall of the Aldermen, which they uſed before Guildhall was builded; which Place was then become a Carpenter's Yard. And Bery or Bury, he underſtood to ſignify a Court or Hall, and meant no more than we mean by Guildhall: ſhewing that there in Aldermanbury, lying there on the Weſt of the preſent Guildhall, the Courts of the Maior and Alderman were continually holden, before Guildhall was built.

A pretended Giants Bone juſtly doubted of by Stow.

The Shankbone of a Man, or of a ſuppoſed Gyant, which hung up by a Chain in the Cloiſter of Aldermanbury Church, of 28 Inches and an half long (and which I my ſelf have many times ſeen there when I was a Boy, with the Picture of a Giant of ſuitable Proportion by it) was commonly reported to be digged up at St. Pauls, when the Bones were carried from the Charnel Houſe, or the Cloiſter there, into Moorfields, in the Time of King Edward VI. But Stow made a doubt of it; becauſe Reine Wolf the Stationer, a grave Antiquarian, and the Man that paid for the Carriage of thoſe Bones, never ſpake a Word of any ſuch Bone found in either Place, tho' he had diſcourſed with him concerning thoſe Bones which he carried away: Adding, that if ſuch a monſtrous Bone had fallen into his Hands, it would not have eaſily been gotten from him; being one of the greateſt Preſervers of Antiquities in theſe Parts for his Time.

Fables of Giants Teeth &c. confuted.

Further, when the foreſaid R. G. would have obtruded upon Peoples Belief fabulous Reports concerning Relicks found of Giants; our Antiquary by his Skill and accurate Search, evidently confuted them. The ſaid R. G. in a Book entitled, A Brief Collection of Hiſtory, wrote a Chapter of Giants or Monſtrous Men. And therein he ſaid, that in the Year 1564. and in ſuch a Day of the Month, he had in his Hand the Tooth of a Man that weighed ten Ounces Troy Weight, and the Skull of the ſame Man was extant to be ſeen, that held Five Pecks of Wheat, and the Shin Bone Six Foot in length: By which Proportion, the Man muſt be 28 Foot long. And underneath in a kind of Glory he thus ſubſcribed, This ſaw R. G. And thence Grafton went on to mention one Gerard a Giant, and his ſuppoſed Staff; which was then kept at an Inn in Baſinglane London, called Gerards-Hall; which fabulous Tradition ſaid, was the Giant's Houſe; and there indeed to Stow's Time, (and I believe long after) was preſerved a Pole of Forty Foot long, and Fifteen Inches about. But Stow was not ſo credulous, nor would impoſe ſuch incredible Stories upon his Readers without better Enquiry. And in ſhort, he found that wondrous Tooth (tho' ſometime he thought it might have belonged to ſome monſtrous Fiſh) to be nothing elſe but a Stone: and ſo he proved it: Nor was there any ſhape of a Tooth. And there was no Skull at all to be found.

Gerards-Hall.

Stow's Judgment of two large Shank-bones. Cheapward.

This prodigious Tooth, with a Shankbone that was 25 Inches of Aſſize, Stow ſpeaks of in Cheapward, hanging up in St. Laurence Jury Church: and that he himſelf had ſeen them above Seventy Years before; that is, before his own Second Edition of the Survey. Theſe hung in Chains of Iron upon a Pillar of Stone: that imaginary Tooth, being about the bigneſs of a Mans Fiſt, long ſince conveyed thence. The Shankbone remained: Which he conjectured might belong to ſome Elephant. And of this Bone he obſerved, not ſo much the Length, (which moſt did) as the Thickneſs, Hardneſs and Strength thereof. For it had fretted and worn the Stone Pillar by which it hung, by often moving; but was not it ſelf fretted or worn. And he obſerved further, a Difference between this Bone, and that hanging up in Aldermanbury; that as that was longer by three Inches and an half, ſo it was more light, pory and ſpungy; This in St. Laurence Church more hard and ſteely. That Bone therefore at Aldermanbury, Stow was apt to think was of a Man: and ſo he ſaid, the Form ſhewed: concluding it to be more than after the Proportion of Five Shankbones of any Man now living among us.

Criplegate Ward.

And as for the Giant Gerard and his Houſe and Staff there, he found it to be only a great Houſe once belonging to a great Man, whoſe Name was GISORS, and his Houſe called Giſors-Hall, corrupted into Gerards-Hall.

Vid. Bread-ſtreat Ward.

And that high Pole which ſtood up in the high roofed Hall, that was ſaid to be his Staff, was nothing elſe, (as he ſhewed from an old Cuſtom in London) than a May-pole of Fir Wood, that uſed to be ſet up at ſome time of the Year in Summer, before the chiefeſt Hall or Houſe in the Pariſh: and at other Times to remain and ſtand in the Hall before the Skreen. And that this could be no Giants Houſe he collected from the arched Doors that he had obſerved here, as not convenient at all for Men of ſuch monſtrous Proportion,

There was alſo ſtanding by this Pole a Ladder of the ſame length: which together with the ſaid Pole, the Vulgar, apt to invent and belive Superſtitious Stories, gave out, as the one to be the Giant's Staff that he uſed to tilt withal, ſo the other, that whereby Men climbed up to the Top of it. Whereas the Pole was nothing elſe but a May-Pole, as was ſaid before: which was uſed to be decked with Holm and Ivy at Chriſtmas: and the Ladder ſerved for Men to go up for the decking of it. This Giſors-Hall was a large and ſpacious Houſe, having been the Habitation of the Family of the Giſors, flouriſhing much in Wealth and Honour in the City for a great while, in the Reign of King Henry III. and ſucceſſive Kings. One whereof, John Giſors, was Conſtable of the Tower, and Lord Maior, An. 1245. Another of that Name, a Knight, lived there, An. 1311. and Maior that Year and other Years. And ſince ſeveral others of the ſame Name and Family were Owners of that Houſe.

There is no hindring the ignorant Populacy from receiving and crediting Fancies: but Stow was juſtly offended with ſuch as would be called Hiſtorians and Chroniclers, and thought learned, ſo eaſily to take up ſuch Lies and recommend them in their Writings to Poſterity: as beſides Grafton, Reyner Wolf and others did this.

A Feaſt in Goldſmiths-Hall ſhewed to be fabulous.

Once again, whereas R. Grafton in his Chronicle had related concerning one Bartholomew Read Goldſmith, Maior An. 1502. that in the Goldſmiths-Hall he entertained as his Gueſts, more than an Hundred Perſons of great Eſtate; Meſſes and Diſhes of Meat ſerved in a vaſt number: Nay, and that there was a Park paled in the ſame Hall, furniſhed with fruitful Trees and Beaſts of Venery, and other like Circumſtances: Stow comparing the Dimenſions of that Hall with the Room that all thoſe Gueſts with their Attendants, and the other Magnificence did require; whereunto Weſtminſter-Hall (he ſaid) would ſcarcely have ſufficed, concluded it with good ground a Fable, and far incredible, and altogether impoſſible.

In Alderſg. Ward.

Shews antient Bounds and Limits in the City.

His Learning in Antiquities made him further uſeful, as in detecting falſhood, ſo in bringing Truth to Light: which ſometimes times tended to decide Differences, and bring Controverſies to an end. As in ſettling and adjuſting Bounds and Limits, he more than once was ſerviceable to the City. How evident he made certain controverted Bounds of Limeſtreet Ward, towards the Wall both againſt Biſhopsgate Ward and Algate Ward, we have ſhewn already; by his producing of old Records and Charters of St. Auguſtines Papey, a Church and Houſe of Prieſts that ſtood there: tho' this Ward, whether by the Negligence of the Alderman of it, or ſome other Cauſe, had not then Right done it according to the ſaid Evidence.

Tower Liberty.

In the Latter End of Q. Elizabeth's Reign was a Controverſy in Law between the City of London and the Lieutenant of the Tower, about the Buttings and Boundings of the City and Tower Liberties: which had been long in Conteſt, the City claiming the Tower-hill, and little Towerhill; and ſo taking in Eaſt-Smithfield. Then they made Uſe of Stow, as, by his long Experience and Converſe in the City Records, likelieſt to ſtate this Matter. But the Counſil of the Lieutenant unjuſtly beſtowed this Term upon him, their fee'd Chronicler Mr. Stow: wherein ſurely that diligent impartial Hiſtorian was wronged, if the Word were taken in the worſt Senſe.

Vol. I. p. 67. b.

Creechurch Liberty.

He alſo ſet out the Boundaries of the Liberty of Creechurch within Algate, when it was to be ſold to the City by the Lord Thomas Howard.

But let us go on to take ſome further Notice of John Stow, as an Antiquarian. His Affectation of Antiquities made him very inquiſitive after things of that kind, and a curious Obſerver, and a greedy Collector of them. Of which I will give a few Inſtances.

His Obſervation of King James the Fourth of Scotland.

It was a notable Remark he made of King James IV. the unfortunate King of Scotland, and the ſtrange neglect and unſeemly Diſregard of his Dead Body; which tho' once a King, could not obtain a Monument, no, nor a Place of Burial. He was ſlain in a great Battel againſt the Engliſh in Flodden-field: and his Dead Corps was brought away into England, and interred in the Monaſtery of Shene. Since the Diſſolution whereof, the Duke of Suffolk was lodged and kept Houſe there. But among the Ruins and Violences offered to this Religious Houſe, the Bodies of the Dead could not reſt in quiet. For here in an old waſt Room, among old Timber, Lead and other Rubbiſh, did Mr. Stow's Curioſity lead him to ſee the Body of that King thrown, lapt in Lead cloſe to the Head and Body. And what became of the Body afterwards, who can tell? But for the Head, Stow traced it further; telling us, that ſome Workmen for their Pleaſure ſtruck it off. Afterwards one Young, a Glazier to Q. Elizabeth, feeling a ſweet Savour come from thence (by reaſon of the Embalming, I ſuppoſe) and ſeeing the ſame dryed from all Moiſture, and yet the Form remaining with the Hair of the Head and Beard red; brought it to London to his Houſe in Woodſtreet; and kept it for ſome time: and in the end cauſed the Sexton to bury it with other common Bones taken out of their Charnel.

Of the Prior of the Holy Trinity.

Another Matter which he took Obſervation of, and that when he was a Boy, and thought it worth mentioning when he was a Man, was, that the Prior of Chriſtchurch or the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, a ſpiritual Man, was always one of the Aldermen of London: and that he remembred, how he rode in the City as an Alderman of Portſoken Ward, in his Habit, yet with ſome Diſtinction, as a Churchman: and withal obſerved, what great Houſekeeping he kept for Rich and Poor, as well within the Houſe as at the Gates, to all Comers according to their Eſtates.

Of King Richard III. Buck's Hiſt. of King Richard III.

One Obſervation more made by Stow may here be mentioned, which I have from George Buck, Eſq; who ſaith of him, that he was a Man indifferently inquiſitive after the verbal Relations of the Perſons of Princes, and curious in the Deſcriptions of their Features and Lineaments. And that in all his Enquiries, he could find no ſuch Note of Deformity in King Richard III. as Hiſtorians commonly relate: and that he acknowledged viva voce, that he had ſpoken with ſome antient Men, who from their own Sight and Knowledge affirmed, that he was of bodily Shape comely enough; only of low Stature.

Curious in MSS.

He was alſo a curious Obſerver of Manuſcripts, and a diligent Procurer of them to himſelf, whereſoever he could. He was mightily delighted with the Sight of a fair Bible in large Vellum (the faireſt that ever he ſaw) written by one John Coke a Brother of St Bartholomew Hoſpital, at the Age of Threeſcore and Eight Years. Which Book had belonged to the Library of the ſaid Hoſpital, given to it among other Books by Sir John Wakering Prieſt, Maſter of the Houſe An. 1463. And ſince the Spoil of that Library, came into the Cuſtody of Mr Walter Cope, Stow's worſhipful Friend, where he had ſeen it.

Dudley's Tree of Common Wealth.

He had in his Poſſeſſion a very valuable MS. (both for the Writer and Subject of it) wrote by a remarkable Man, Edmund Dudley Eſq; a great Counſillor to King Henry VII. but beheaded in the beginning of King Henry VIII. his Reign, An. 1509. It was called The Tree of Common Wealth, and treated of Politicks, intended for the Uſe and Service of his Royal Maſter King Henry VIII. but being a Priſoner at the Writing, never came to his Hand. A Copy of this Book Stow preſented to Robert the great Earl of Leiceſter, ſprung from the ſaid Dudley: to whom it could not but be a very acceptable Gift. And he had his Thanks, but nothing elſe: as I have obſerved before.

Summary fo. 309.

Gower's Works

He giveth us ſomewhere an exact Account of the Works and MSS. of John Gower, one of our antient Poets; and what were Printed, ted, and what were not: ſome whereof he had in his Poſſeſſion. And of the three Books lying under his Head in his Monument in St. Saviours Church, viz. Speculum Meditantis (which he tells us, was writ in French) Vox Clamantis, (writ he ſaith, in Latin) and Confeſſio Amantis (in Engliſh) that this laſt only was Printed. He ſpoke alſo of Gower's Chronica Tripartita. Which, he ſaith, were never printed with other Books both Latin and French, which he had and poſſeſt, and among them the ſaid Chronicles and the Vox Clamantis. As for the Speculum Meditantis he never ſaw it, but heard that it was ſomewhere in Kent.

Wever's Mon. p. 207.

This Tripartite Chronicle is (or ſometime was) extant in the Cotton Library. It is writ in Latin Monks Verſe; or at leaſt ſome Part of it: as in one Place, where the Author compareth King Richard the Second, and his Succeſſor King Henry IV. together, in which Reigns Gower lived: preferring the Latter to the former: Beginning,

O! quàm penſando, mores varioſque notando,
Si bene ſcrutetur R ab H diſtare videtur? &c.

Leland's Commentaries.

I find alſo that he was poſſeſt of Leland's Commentaries, being a Deſcription of Britain (as was obſerved before) the Value of which, and the Author are ſufficiently known; and of many more Engliſh and Britiſh Hiſtorians, which he lent to David Powel D. D. in the compoſing of the Hiſtory of Cambria, viz. In written Hand, ſaith that Author to the Reader, I had Gildas Sapiens, alias, Nennius, Henry Huntington, William Malmesbury, Marianus Scotus, Ralph Cogſhall, John Everſden, Nicolas Trivet, Florentius Vigornienſis, Simon of Durham, Roger Hoveden, and others. Which he ſaid, remained in the Cuſtody of John Stow Citizen of London; Adding how he deſerved Commendation for getting together the antient Writers of the Hiſtories of this Land.

Enlargements of Chaucer from him.

We are alſo beholden in a great meaſure to him for ſome of the Editions and Enlargements of another antient Engliſh Poet, viz. Jeffrey Chaucer: whoſe Poems were firſt collected and printed by William Caxton, Mercer: he that firſt brought the Art of printing into England in the Reign of Henry VI. They were increaſed again and publiſhed by William Thinne Eſq; in the Reign of Henry VIII. Since corrected and twice increaſed (as he writes) through mine own painful Labours, in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, to wit in the Tear 1561. And again, beautified with Notes, by me collected out of divers Records and Monuments: which I delivered to my loving Friend, Thomas Speight. And he, having drawn the ſame into a good Form and Method, as alſo explained the old and obſcure Words, publiſhed them Anno 1597.

Chaucer's Tomb in Weſtminſter.

He affected likewiſe old printed Books, and was a great Collector of them, whether Hiſtory, Divinity, Phyſick, &c. The Names of divers whereof are mentioned before, An. 1568. when by Order of Council his Study was ſearched for Superſtitious Books.

Skilled in Heraldry.

Let me now at laſt add a few Words more, to ſhew that he was skilful in ſome ſorts of Learning neceſſary to qualify him for an able Antiquary, beſides what I have already ſaid of his natural Love of Truth, his diligent Inquiſitiveneſs into common Reports and Relations, his laborious Searches after old MSS. to which I may ſubjoyn his Journeys which he ſometimes took to be an Eye-witneſs for his better Satisfaction: He had Knowledge in Heraldry and Genealogies, which he had made good Uſe of ſometimes for the enlightning and aſſerting ſome Matters of Hiſtory.

Lord Rich his Pedigree.

Richard Lord Rich, ſometime Lord Chancellor of England, made a great Figure in Stow's Time, being in high Place and Favour with King Henry VIII. and ſome of the ſucceding Princes. This Man was raiſed from the City, ſome of his Anceſtors having been of the Mercers Company. Stow thought fit for the Honour of the City to take notice of it, and ſhewed us the Pedigree of this Lord in divers Deſcents as far back as his great great Grandfather. He being the Son of Thomas Rich, and Thomas the Son of John: John the Son of Richard, Sheriff of London An. 1442. and buried in the Church of St. Laurence Jury: and he the Son of Richard Rich of London Eſq.

The Genealogy of Peter of Savoy.

He was particularly acquainted with William Smith alias Rouge Dragon; who communicated ſeveral things to him, relating to Pedigrees and Deſcents; and Stow again communicated ſome Remarks of Armory to him. He got a Sight of a fine Book of Genealogies from Smith. It was of all the whole Family of Savoy, compiled by one Philebert Pingonio an Italian, Baron of Guzani. And becauſe ſome denyed that Peter of Savoy that builded Savoy Houſe in the Strand, was Earl of Savoy (as he had aſſerted) he proved it by this Book, that ſet down Thomas Earl of Savoy his Pedigree; and thence he ſaith, he gathered this, That the ſaid Thomas had Iſſue by Beatrice Daughter of Aimon Earl of Geneva, Nine Sons and Three Daughters: That Amadis his firſt Son ſucceeded Earl of Savoy in the Year 1253. Peter his Second Son (the Perſon he was ſpeaking of) Earl of Savoy and Richmond in the Year 1268. Philip his Third Son, Earl of Savoy and Burgundy, 1284. Thomas the Fourth, Earl of Flanders and Prince of Piemont, &c. Boniface the Eighth, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Beatrice his Daughter, married to Reymund Berengarius of Aragon, Earl of Provence and Narbone, who had Iſſue and was Mother to Five Queens. The firſt, Margaret Wife to Lewis King of France. The ſecond, Eleanor, Wife to Henry III. King of England, &c. So fortunate an Iſſue from a ſmall Prince, that

Acquainted with Segar, the Herald, Annal. p. 1198.

Annal. p. 1290.

He was alſo acquainted with another learned Herald, William Segar, alias Portcloſe, an Officer of Arms with the Earl of Leiceſter, Governor of the Low Countries; who gave Stow a Relation of the Manner of keeping the Feaſt of St. George at Utrecht: having got from the ſaid Portcloſe a true and faithful Deſcription of it. This Herald gave him alſo an Account of the French King's inveſting with the Order of the Garter. The ſame Portcloſe told Stow, that Martin Skinke, a valiant Dutch Captain (who was Knighted by Leiceſter at the foreſaid Feaſt) had promiſed to ſhew him Seventy Enſigns that he had won in the Field.

St. Paul's Sword, not Walworth's Dagger, born in the City Arms.

His firm Judgment was, that the Arms of the City of London was ever born with a Sword in the firſt Quarter, which was the Sword of St. Paul: and that it was at firſt only the Red Croſs, till the Dagger was added, upon Walworth's valiant killing Jack Straw, in honourable Memory thereof to the City, was all Fable, as ſhewed before.

And he was of the ſame Opinion afterwards, when Mr. Smith, the aboveſaid Purſevant, had told him, that in our Lady Church of Antwerp he had ſeen in the Windows, the Picture of King Edward III. and of his Son, and alſo the Arms of divers Cities of England; and among the reſt a Coat with a red Croſs, and the Letter L in the firſt Quarter; which he therefore thought might be the Bearing of the City London in thoſe Times; Mr. Stow would not be ſo perſuaded, but affirmed it to be always as it was. This Coat ſtood then in the uppermoſt North Window of that Church.

The Builders of Algate Church diſcovered by the Arms.

The laſt Time the Pariſh Church of St. Botolph Aldgate was rebuilt, was between 2 and 300 Years ago. In this Church our Antiquarian obſerved a Coat of Arms engraven on the Stone Work; which he knew to be the Arms of the Trinity Priory. And hence concluded thoſe of the Priory to be the Builders: as indeed the Prior was the Patron thereof.

Diligent and converſant in old Charters.

Stow was a true Antiquarian, in that he was not ſatisfied with Reports, or with the Credit of what he found in Print; but had recourſe to Originals. He knew how much falſhood is commonly thruſt upon Readers, either by the Careleſsneſs of Authors, or by taking up things too credulouſly, and upon ſlight Grounds, or upon Hearſays and the Credit of others. But Stow made uſe of his own Legs (for he could never ride) travelling on Foot to many Cathedral Churches, and other Places, where ancient Records and Charters were: and with his own Eyes to read them. Wherein he ſeemed to be very expert, as appears by that Multitude of Quotations and Tranſcriptions out of Chartularies, Regiſters, Records, Inſtruments, Muniments belonging to Monaſteries, that ſhew themſelves in his Hiſtory, eſpecially in his Survey. Therein he ſpeaks ſomewhere (where he is treating of the Charter-Houſe) of his reading Charters in King Edward the Third's Days. He often converſed in the Records of the Tower, and ſpeaking once of the Fiſhmongers-Hall, ſaid that by Records of the Tower he could prove they ſometime had no leſs than Six Halls. He mentioned many ancient Wills that he read, where he found charitable Gifts bequeathed by generous ſpirited Citizens. He ſeemed to have peruſed all the Monuments and their Inſcriptions throughout all the Pariſhes of London. He read Records Four Hundred Years before his own time, which he occaſionally once mentioned where he writeth of Shoreditch; Which Place in his own Editions he always called Soersditch: and ſo he could prove it writ in Records for 400 Years, as he noted in his Margin. Where, by the Way, A. M. the Editor of his Survey after his Death, hath utterly falſified his Author. For where the true reading of Stow's Margin was, SOERSDITCH, ſo called more than 400 Years ſince, as I can prove by Record; the after Editions read, SHORESDITCH, ſo called more than 400 Years ſince, &c. And ſo ſpoiling Stow's Senſe and Meaning. And beſides, every where thoſe Editions read Shoresditch where the former Editions ſet forth by Stow himſelf read Soersditch. Many ſuch Errors crept into the laſt Editions of Stow's Survey, to the great Wronging of the accurate Author.

A Note of Stow taken of a Cuſtom of the Priory of Dunmow.

There is a Volume of theſe his Notes and Collections, which firſt came into the Poſſeſſion of Sir Simmonds Dews Kt. and afterwards procured by Mr. Harley, now Earl of Oxford and Mortimer; and placed in his own exquiſite Library. Whence I tranſcribed what follows, concerning the old Tradition of a Flitch of Bacon due from the Prior of Dunmow in Eſſex, to him that had lived Seven Years with his Wife without any Diſagreement between them; if he ſhould come and demand it at the Priory there upon his Oath, viz. ‘ Three Perſons at ſeveral Times came thither and required a ‘ Flitch of Bacon; and being ſworn had ‘ them. Which John Stow told to one
‘ who thus ſubſcribed. Has notas habui a
‘ Johanne Stow, Anno 1604. Theſe Notes
‘ were as follow.

‘ Memorandum quod Stephanus Stannel
‘ de Ayſton parva in Com. Eſſex, Husband-
‘ man, venit, &c. to the Priory of Dunmow,
‘ die nativitatis Be' Marie, the 7th
‘ Year of Edw. 4. and asked pmam. Baconis.
‘ And being ſworn before Roger Bulcot,
‘ then Prior, and the Convent of that Place,
‘ and a Multitude of other Neighbours, there
‘ was delivered to the ſaid Stephen one
‘ pma. of Bacon.

‘ Anno Dom. 1510, Thomas Leyfuller of ‘ Coggeſhull in the County of Eſſex, came
‘ and asked one pmam of Bacon of Dunmow,
‘ viz. the 8th Day of September 2. H. 8.

‘And was ſworn, according to the Form of Donation; and before John Tyler, then Prior of the Place, and the Convent, and many other Neighbours. And a Flitch of Bacon was delivered to him.

‘One Richard Wright of Badbrough, next Norwich, in the County of Norfolk, Yeoman, came and asked for the Bacon of Dunmow, the 17th of Apr. 24. Hen. VI. and was ſworn according to the Form of Donation, before John Canon, then Prior of the Place, and the Convent, and many others of the Neighbours. And a Flitch of Bacon was delivered to the ſaid Richard.

Underſtood Latin.

And tho' he were a Citizen, and bred up to a Shop and Calling there, I make no Doubt he underſtood Latin well, as many other Citizens have done, and at this Day do; otherwiſe he could not have made uſe of thoſe many ancient Hiſtorians of Britiſh and Engliſh Affairs, which he often quoted, and made very judicious Uſe of in his Hiſtory. And he tells us expreſly of his reading a Latin Inſcription on a Stone Croſs in the Church-yard, charitably founded by Sir Walter Manny, for Burial in a great Plague; which was this: Anno Dom. 1349. regnante magna Peſtilentia, conſecratum fuit hoc Cœmiterium, in qua & infra ſepta præſentis Monaſterij, ſepulta fuerunt Mortuorum Corpora pluſquam quinquaginta millia, præter alia multa ab hinc uſq; ad præſens; quorum animabus propitietur Deus. Amen.

Excites to the Study of Antiquity.

In fine, his great Diligence is to be commended in collecting, retrieving, and publiſhing ſo much of the Engliſh Hiſtory, to the Honour of his Country, and the Place where he was born. And beſides his own Endeavours, he wiſhed and excited others of Ability in his Days, to do their Part in ſo Noble a Study; and at leaſt, not to be behind hand with the Monks, and the Monkiſh Times; which he could not but praiſe for their Induſtry in writing their own Hiſtories, or of the Times before them.

John Shirley,

And further, it is to be marked in Stow, to ſhew his Zeal for Hiſtorical Collections, the Remembrance he had, and the Record he made not only of Monks in former Times, but of ſuch as in latter Days beſtowed their Labour and Pains this way. I will recite what he ſaith of Three ſuch. The Firſt is John Shirley, who deceaſed in 1456, and lies buried in the Church of St. Bartholomew the Leſs, and hath a Monumental Inſcription, where Stow cannot forbear to give this Account of him; That among other his Labours, he collected the Works of Geffrey Chaucer and John Lydgate, and other Learned Writers. Which Works were wrote in ſundry Volumes to remain to Poſterity; and added, that he had ſeen them, and partly did profeſs them. Perhaps it ſhould be read, partly did poſſeſs them, unleſs this his Profeſſing them, may mean his owning himſelf a Student in them, and ſuch like ancient Writings.

Richard Arnold

The ſecond is, Richard Arnold, that lived Anno 1719, a Citizen of London; and, inflamed with a Fervency toward good Learning, travelled principally in obſerving Matters worthy to be remembred, &c..

Sir John Wryſt.

The Third is, Sir John Wryſt, [the ſame Name, I ſuppoſe, as Wryſe, or Wriſley.] ‘Who gathered, by Commandment, at the Suppreſſion of Abbies, Charters of the Foundations of divers Abbies, Colleges, &c. This Sir John, ſtudious of Britain's Antiquities, left his Heirs, in Writing, divers excellent Monuments, who did keep them (ſaith Stow) too long from the Sight of the Learned.’ So that he ſeems to have been in the like Commiſſion with John Leland. But theſe two laſt I have mentioned before.

His Praiſe of Hiſtory.

And finally, he ſomewhere giveth this Commendation of Chronicles, and the Hiſtories of Things paſt, that they were, Witneſſes of the Times, Lights of the Truth, Encouragers of Virtue and Honeſty, and Correctors of Vice and Wickedneſs. So that it ſeems to have been ſome Publick Spirit for the Common Good, that acted him to follow ſo induſtriouſly theſe Studies.

Detractors of Stow.

And yet notwithſtanding all his Skill, Study, Exactneſs, and laborious Collections, he had the Miſfortune to have his Pains and Faithfulneſs undervalued by ſome; and that partly becauſe of his Trade and Calling. Among theſe Detractors, I muſt name Dr. Sutcliff, a Perſon of conſiderable Eminency in the Church: Who ſeems too haſtily and paſſionately to write thus of him, in his Anſwer to Parſons's Three Converſions. When Parſons had alledged Stow's Chronicle, concerning Will. Thomas's Attempt to murther Queen Mary, for which he was executed, as a Traitor, Sutcliff, in Anſwer, makes Stow to be very partial in Queen Mary's Matters; and takes occaſion to ſpeak contemptibly of him, ‘As in nothing of any Authority, being a ſilly and unlearned Botcher, and abuſed by crafty Suggeſters.’ And in another Place, ironically, ‘A worthy Chronicler to ſet forth the noble Acts of Taylors and Botchers; of which Trade he was.’ But it is a Sign that Reverend Man knew little more of Stow, than that he was a Taylor.

His Religion.

NOW, as to Mr. Stow's Religion and moral Qualities; let us add ſomething for a Concluſion. He was, no doubt, at firſt, a Favourer of the Popiſh Religion, and adhered rather to that than to the Reformed; as may appear from the Jealouſy the State had of him; which occaſioned the Order to Grindall, Biſhop of London, Anno 1568. mentioned before, to have his Library ſearched for ſuperſtitious Books; and from the Books that were found there: As, A little Book of Homilies, by Biſhop Bonner; Sermons by Dr. Watſon, Biſhop of Lincoln; a great printed Book, containing a Liſt of the Saints [which ſeems to be the Golden Legend;] A Buckler of the Catholick Faith, by Richard Smith, ſometime Publick Profeſſor of Divinity in Oxford, a zealous Papiſt; A Defence of the Sacrifice of the Maſs; The Aſſertion and Defence of the Sacrament of the Altar;

Altar; A Confutation of a Book called, A Defence of the true and Catholick Doctrine, &c. againſt the late Archbiſhop of Canterbury. All by the ſame Author. The Diſplaying of Proteſtants, by Miles Huggerd: A Brief Shew of falſe Wares, by Raſtal: The Copy of a Challenge, taken out of the Confutation of Mr. Juell's Sermon: The Tryal of the Supremacy: Wherein is ſet forth the Unity of Chriſt's Church; and that there ought to be one Head, Biſhop, &c. Theſe Popiſh Books, with divers more, which have been taken Notice of, beſides a Maſs-Book, were found in his Houſe; a Catalogue whereof was taken, and ſent to the Biſhop; and he, according to Order, ſent it to the Council: Whence we may conclude which Way Stow ſtood inclined.

And, perhaps, being a Lover of Antiquity, and the old Religious Buildings and Monuments, he was the more prejudiced againſt the Reformed Religion, becauſe of that Havock and Deſtruction thoſe that pretended to it, made of them in his Days.

His Religion the Ground of his Troubles.

And I ſuſpect his Religion to be the Ground of the Troubles he underwent, either in the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion Court, or Star-chamber, when his own Servant and Brother were his main Accuſers, and laid many dangerous Things to his Charge; but falſly, as we have told before.

A Preacher at St. *Paul*s inveighs againſt the Shaft in St. Andrews Pariſh.

And, indeed, it might render him the leſs affected to the Religion in his Time reformed, while he took notice, how ignorantly, nay, ridiculouſly, ſome that profeſſed it, and preached it, ſhewed their Zeal for it. One of theſe was the Curate of Cree-Church (in which Pariſh Stow then lived) commonly called Sir Stephen) who in a Sermon before no leſs an Auditory than at St. Paul's, inveighed fervently againſt a long Maypole, called a Shaft, in the next Pariſh to his, named thence St. Andrew Underſhaft; and calling it an Idol: Which ſo ſtirred up the Devotion of many of the Hearers (ſince all Idols were to be taken away by Order from above) that many of them in the Afternoon went and with Violence pulled it down from the Place where it hung upon Hooks; and then ſawed it into divers Pieces, each Houſholder taking his Piece, as much as hung over his Door or Stall; and afterwards burnt it: This Sermon Stow heard, (as he tells us himſelf) and ſaw the Effect of it.

A Curate of Creechurch's ignorant Zeal.

The ſame Preacher taking occaſion from that Church's Name, viz. Underſhaft, as ſuperſtitiouſly given to it, Stow obſerved another Inſtance of his Zeal, in giving his Judgment, that the Names of Churches might be altered; nay, and that the Names of the Days in the Week might be changed; and that Fridays and Saturdays ſhould be no more Fiſh Days; but the Fiſh Days to be on other Days of the Week. And further, that as for Lent, it ſhould be kept any other time, than between Shrovetide and Eaſter. Another Practice of this Sir Stephen was, that he would oftentimes go out of the Pulpit into the Church-yard, and get up into a high Elm that grew there, and preach to the People from thence; and then go into the Church, and ſay or ſing the Engliſh Service, not at the Altar, as was uſual, but upon a Tomb towards the North.

And further, Stow was an Eye Witneſs of the Miſchief of the hot miſguided Zeal of this Preacher, who was the Cauſe of the wrongful putting to Death of one by Martial Law, in all Probability innocent; executed before his Door within Aldgate, as a Traitor, and concerned in a Rebellion; who proteſted his Innocency upon the Gallows, in Stow's own Hearing. Such Principles and Practices as theſe, in ſuch a Man of the Reformed Religion, might create ſome Prejudice in Stow againſt it.

Stow calls the preſent Doctrine Pure.

But he ſeemed at length to have a good Opinion of the Doctrine of the Church of England: For in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, he hath ſomewhere this Expreſſion, That Doctrine is more pure now, than it was in the Monkiſh World: But whether he ſpake it Ironically, or in earneſt, I do not diſpute.

Hated Immorality in Prieſts.

But whatever Reſpect he might ſecretly have for the old Religion, he could not endure Prieſts that were vitious and unchaſt; and was for ſevere Puniſhment to be laid upon them; and that by the Secular Hand, without ſtaying for Juſtice from the Ordinary, or their Spiritual Superior, on Pretence of their Privilege of Exemption from the Temporal Magiſtrate: And he blamed them for their Covetouſneſs and Partiality in pecuniary Commutations. Thus in a certain Place of his Survey, he praiſed the City for their exemplary Puniſhment of Fornication, tho' they took the Office ſometimes out of the Hand of the Biſhops, who claimed the Cognizance thereof to belong to them: Shewing, how they put both lewd Women, and Prieſts too, into the Priſon, called the Tun in Cornhill, who were guilty in that reſpect. And he praiſed a certain Way, anciently uſed in the City for Puniſhment of light Females, by cauſing their Heads to be ſhaven, after the manner of Thieves, and to be led about the City with Trumpets and Pipes ſounding before them, that their Perſons might be the more known. ‘Nor did they (addeth he) ſpare an unclean Prieſt a whit the more becauſe of his Office, but uſed ſuch as hardly; ſaying, that they abhorred the Negligence of their Prelates, and deteſted their Avarice; that for Money, omitted the Puniſhment limited by Law; and permitted thoſe they found guilty, to live favourably by their Fines: Wherefore they would themſelves, they ſaid, purge the City from ſuch Filthineſs, leſt through God's Vengeance, either Peſtilence or Sword might happen to them; or that the Earth ſhould ſwallow them up.

A looſe Prieſts exemplary Puniſhment.

And elſewhere he ſpeaketh of the Puniſhment of a Chauntry Prieſt, as his juſt Deſerts, in St. Michael's Cornhill, that had Twenty Nobles a Year, as the Salary of his Chauntry; who was too familiar with a Shopkeeper's Wife there; a Woman too that ſeemed the holieſt among a Congregagregation: But the Huſband once coming up, made him leap out of the Window, and afterwards cauſed him to be Puniſhed three Market Days; being conveyed through the High Streets and Markets of the City, with a Paper on his Head; wherein his Treſpaſs was writ; and each Day rung with Baſins, and Proclamation of his Fact at the turning of every Street; and alſo before Atwood's Stall, (that was the Huſband's Name) and the Church Door where he uſed to perform his Divine Service. And laſtly, was deprived of the Benefit of his Chauntry, and baniſhed the City for ever. Thus Stow ſpared not to expoſe unclean Prieſts, and to applaud the Puniſhments of Shame executed on them.

An Expoſer of ſcandalous Men.

And, indeed, on all Occaſions, he ſhewed great Diſlike of all Immorality, Injuſtice, Wrongs, Frauds, Unfaithfulneſs, Falſhood, and Treachery; which ſhewed, that Stow had an honeſt and good Mind. And he ſpared not to expoſe the more ſcandalous Sorts of Men that fell in his Way, as unclean Prieſts (one whereof we have heard him telling of before, without Diſguiſe) unfaithful Executors, Abuſers of charitable Donations, falſe Jurymen, Cheats, and Impoſtors, Extortioners and cruel Oppreſſors, Violators of Monuments of the Dead, and Exalters of themſelves above their Neighbours.

Stow ſlandered, and abuſed by a foul Tongue.

And this might be the Reaſon, why this good Man had the Miſhap ſometimes to fall under ſcurrilous and calumniating Tongues: One among the reſt (whereof he was forced to make publick Complaint to the Magiſtrate) had (upon what private Diſguſt, I know not) intolerably railed upon him, even at his Shop Door, reflecting upon his Chronicles; nay, upon his Trade, as a Taylor; and chiefly upon his Integrity and Truth in his Hiſtories and Writings, as tho' they were but Lies: Nay, and beſides abuſive Language, there was Aſſault and Battery added, together with all the Signs of Rage and Madneſs. All which, after much Patience and Forbearance, able no longer to endure it, he made his Complaint to the Magiſtrate: Which he drew up in this Manner.

Makes his Complaint to the Magiſtrate.

'Pleaſeth it your Worſhip to underſtand, 'how your poor Orator, JOHN STOW, 'hath of late been more than too too much 'abuſed by one William Ditcher, alias Tetford, and his Wife, &c.' The Proceſs whereof is too long to write; but briefly to touch ſome Parts thereof. He ſpake much of this Man's railing at him, and of his Apprentice's Fighting with Stow's Apprentice; and that he call'd him Pricklouſe Knave, and beggarly Knave, and Raſcal Knave; and that he made a Chronicle of Lies. That he ſaid to the Parſon of the Pariſh, and to the Deputy of the Ward, that there came nothing but Rogues and Raſcals, and the vileſt of the Land to Stow's Houſe. Which Raſcals had him from Alehouſe to Alehouſe every Night and Morning. That William's Wife, before the Stall of the ſaid John, railed againſt him more than a long Hour; but that he, John Stow, kept himſelf above Stairs, without any Anſwer making. That one Day the ſaid William leapt in his Face; and that he feared he would have digged out his Eyes; foully ſcratched him by the Face, drew Blood of him, and was pulled off by the Neighbours. That the ſaid William threw Tileſheards and Stones at Stow's Apprentice, till he had driven him off the Stall from his Work. And then the ſaid William came to John's Stall, and ſaid, if he could catch the ſaid Apprentice, he would cart him; and vowed, he would accuſe him to have killed the Man on the Miles End in Whitſon Week; [that it ſeems was found dead there.] He alſo ſaid, that Stow's Wife had two Children by one Man, before ſhe was married, to the great Slander of the ſaid John Stow, and Hindrance of their Children, being Four Daughters marriageable, and in Service with Right Worſhipful Perſonages. Further, that he cauſed one John Snelyng, being drunken, to come to the Stall of the ſaid Stow, and there to call him by ſuch a Name, as himſelf better deſerved. And at another Time called him, the falſeſt Man in England, and threatned to cart him, if he could get him out of his Door; called him alſo Common Proctor, Common Barator, Common Drunkard, Raſcal, Villain, &c.

It is no marvel, if this honeſt Man, for his Hatred of vicious and baſe Actions, and expoſing them, might thus be ſerved. To give then ſome Inſtances hereof, as I have obſerved them here and there in his Writings.

Rebuked unfaithful Executors.

He often took occaſion to rebuke ſuch as were falſe to their Truſts, and neglected the Performance of the Wills and charitable Donations repoſed in them; which, by his Experience, were moſt wretchedly abuſed ſometimes by Executors putting the Money, Lands, or Houſes into their own Pockets; or converting them ſome other ways. Among the Gifts given for the finiſhing Guildhall, London, he mentioned Nicholas Alwyn, Grocer, ſometime Maior; who, by his laſt Will, about 1505, gave 73 l. 6 s. 8 d. for a Hanging of Tapiſtry, to ſerve for principal Days in Guildhall: But how that Gift was performed, he had not heard; a modeſt Expreſſion, importing, that they the Executors had not perform'd it; and then more roundly he ſpeaks it out in generals, For the Executors of our Time, having no Conſcience, (I ſpeak of my own Knowledge) prove more Teſtaments than they perform.

Alwyn's Charity not performed;

Nor the Gifts of Eyre.

And before him, Simon Eyre, [or L'eyre, as he is written] a Draper, ſometime Maior, who built the Granary and Chapel in Leadenhall; and deceaſed 1459, gave by his laſt Teſtament (which Stow ſaid he had read) many moſt noble Charities; and amongſt the reſt, he gave the Drapers 3000 Marks, on Condition to eſtabliſh in his Chapel a Maſter or Warden, five Secular Prieſts, ſix Clerks, and two Queriſters, to ſing daily Divine Service. Alſo one Maſter with an Uſher for Grammar, one Maſter for Writing, and the third for Song;

Lime Street Ward.

Song; with Houſing there, newly builded for them for ever, with certain Salaries to each. And in caſe the Drapers performed this not, then the 3000 Marks to go to the Prior and Covent of Chriſt Church, with Condition as aforeſaid: Otherwiſe to be diſpoſed by the Executors in Works of Charity. And then Stow's Concluſion bluntly and plainly follows: Thus much for his Teſtament, not performed, by eſtabliſhing of Divine Service in his Chapel, or the Free Schools for Scholars. Neither how the Stock of 3000 Mark, or rather 5000 Marks, was employed by his Executors, could I ever learn.

Nor Mr. Randolph's Legacy; Vol. I. p. 266.

The like Obſervation he makes of Bernard Randolph, ſometime Common Serjeant of the City, who gave 1000*l.* in Lands or Annuities, for the Relief of the Poor in the Wards of Queenhith and Caſtle Baynard (where probably his Habitation had been) and in Tiſehurſt in Suſſex, where he was born: Adding in his firſt Edition, (left out afterwards;) but that Money being left in Holdfaſt Hands, I have not heard how it was beſtowed. Having, very probably, made Enquiry after ſo large and notable a Legacy of that eminent Officer of the City.

Nor Sir Henry Billingſley's Gift.

Aldgate Ward.

And of later Time, Alderman Billingſly, living in the Pariſh of St. Katharine Colman, gave by his Will 200*l.* to this Pariſh, for the Relief of the Poor; which good Intent of his is obſerved not to be performed, and the Poor wronged: Though this, indeed, is none of Stow's Obſervation, but of A. M. that ſet forth the Survey after Stow's Death.

His Advice concerning Legacies.

Honour of Citizens.

And therefore, as he writes in a certain Place in his Survey, having known theſe Legacies of Charity left in Truſt with Exetors, hardly, or never performed; he wiſhed Men to make their own Hands their Executors, and their Eyes their Overſeers; not forgetting the old Proverb:

Women be forgetful, Children be unkind;
Executors be covetous, and take what they [find.
If any body asks where the Dead's Goods [became:
They Anſwer,
So God me help, and holy Dome, He died [a poor Man.

Sir John Milbourn's Gifts.

Aldgate Ward.

Nor did he ſhrink to charge Corporations themſelves, as well as private Perſons, for the Abuſe of the Charities of the Deceaſed. In Aldgate Ward, he giveth a Liſt of many charitable Gifts of Sir John Milbourn, (who was ſometime Maior) the Founder of the Almſhouſes in Crutched Friars. And therein ſpecifieth a particular Number of Penny Loaves and Quantity of Coals to be diſtributed to the Pariſhes of St. Edmund's Lombard Street, and St Michael's Cornhill, for ever: And that he made the Company of Drapers of London, Truſtees for theſe Charities; and ſettled upon them, for Performance, Three and twenty Meſſuages and Tenements, and Eighteen Garden Plots in the Pariſh of St. Olave Hart Street. Whereon Stow makes this ſevere Note in the Margin of his firſt and ſecond Edition (but left out in the After-Editions) That theſe Points were not performed; and that the Drapers unlawfully ſold theſe Tenements and Garden Plots, and the Poor were wronged. What Ground Stow had for this, which he ſets down ſo particularly, I know not; but I know that the ſaid Company at this Time (to do them Right) utterly diſown this Charge; and a Copy of the Will of the ſaid Milbourn (which I have ſeen and peruſed at the Draper's Hall, by the Favour of an eminent Member thereof, ſince deceaſed) mentioneth only the Almſhouſes; which that Company doth, according to the ſaid Will, duly and faithfully maintain. And this is the Reaſon that A. M. thought fit in the After-Editions to leave this out, charging our Author to have erred in this Matter; ſaying, that he had a View of the Will by which the Almſhouſes were given, and other Writings touching the ſame; and that there neither were ſuch Bread and Coals given, nor ſuch Houſes or Gardens aſſured to the Company. This then muſt be attributed to ſome Miſinformation given to Stow; tho' otherwiſe wont to be very careful and exact in what he writ. Yet hence may appear what a Diſlike he had of thoſe, who by ſuch Practices, wronged both the Dead that gave the Charities, and the Living who ſhould have enjoyed them.

N. Tench, Eſq;

Alderman Tolus's Gift.

Cornhill Ward.

Again, another Abuſe he diſcovered in the Pariſh of St. Michael's Cornhil, where he was born; and openly blamed both the Executors and the Officers of the Pariſh; the former for detaining, the others for being ſo ſlack in recovering. One John Tolus, Alderman, in the Year 1548, gave to the ſaid Pariſh and Churchwardens his Tenement, with the Appurtenances in that Pariſh, towards the Reparation of the Church, and Relief of the Poor: But the Pariſh (as he writes) never had the Gift, nor heard of it by the Space of forty Years after. Such, ſaith he, was the Conſcience of G. Barne, and other Executors, to conceal it to themſelves; and ſuch the Negligence of the Pariſhioners, that being informed thereof, made no Claim thereunto.

Their Care in St. Michael's Cornhill for Harbour for their Poor, noted.

And as he reproved this Pariſh on this Occaſion of their Neglect in a Matter of Charity, ſo he commended them on another, when once they conſulted Chriſtianly for the Comfort of their Poor. He had been ſpeaking of certain Lodgings of the Men that belonged to the Choir of St. Michael's Cornhill Church. And the Choir being diſſolved, he took Notice how their Lodgings were appointed by the grave Fathers of that Time for ancient decayed Pariſhioners, Widows, and ſuch as were not able to pay great Rents. Which bleſſed Work, he piouſly added, of harbouring the harbourleſs, is promiſed to be rewarded in the Kingdom of Heaven.

A Table of Benefactors to London Bridge.

That good Diſpoſition that was in him towards Charity, made him preſerve in his Survey, as in a ſtanding Regiſter, all the charitable Gifts in the reſpective Pariſhes in London, as far as poſſibly he could obtain them. Which he was ſometimes baulked in; being refuſed by ſome to let him ſee their Books or Tables. Thus for one Inſtance, he tells us, where he is ſpeaking of London Bridge, how there was a Table hung up in the Chapel on that Bridge, containing the Names of ſuch as had been Benefactors of Lands, or Tenements, or Money, to the Maintenance of it. But the Chapel being turned afterwards into a Dwelling Houſe, the Table was removed to the Bridge Houſe; and ſo, as it ſeems, under the Cuſtody of the Bridge Maſters: This Table he would willingly have publiſhed in his Book, if he could have obtained the Sight thereof; which he could not.

His concern for the poor Priſoners.

This Act alſo of his that follows, viz. in taking the poor Priſoners Part, will ſhew his Abhorrence of Oppreſſion, as well as Debauchery. In the Year 1552, he was of a Jury of Inqueſt, to make an Enquiry againſt a Seſſion of Goal Delivery. In this Inqueſt, he and his Jury Men found the Priſoners in Breadſtreet Compter (for then the Compter was there) to be very hardly dealt withal, in their Proviſions, and otherwiſe: and that notwithſtanding many Warnings given the Keeper (whoſe Name was Husbands) by the Court of Aldermen upon Complaint before. And moreover they found that Thieves and Strumpets were lodged there, Four ſometimes in a Night: whereby they might be ſafe from Searches that were made abroad a Nights. Husbands was for theſe Crimes indicted at the Seſſions; and made a Shift ſtill to rub it out, til the Year 1555. his Houſe being his own, they removed the Priſoners away from him unto Woodſtreet, where the Compter is ſtill kept.

Vid. Breadſtreet Ward.

False Jury-men.

There was another ſort of Men that his honeſt Heart roſe againſt, that affected and ſtrove to be Jury-Men: who oftentimes for Reward were Perverters of Juſtice and Judgment. He called them the Ringleaders of Inqueſts; making a gainful Occupation of it. Such as laboured to appear upon Niſi Prius's before they were warned, or procured to be warned to come on by a Tallis: and ſuch as procured themſelves to be Foremen, when they could: and then took upon them to over-rule the reſt to their Opinion. Such an one ſhould be laboured by Plaintiff and Defendant, not without Promiſe of Reward; And therefore, ſaid he, to be ſuſpected of a bad Conſcience. And he added, how he knew one ſuch that was carted, and rung with Baſins, and baniſhed out of Billingſgate Ward: And yet afterward in Algate Ward made Conſtable, a Grand Juryman, and Foreman of their Wardmote Inqueſt: And that he knew the like or worſe of others.

Counterfeit Phyſicians.

Cheats and Impoſtors there were in his Time; who pretended to Skill which they had not, or ſome Ways or other amuſed the People, to draw Money out of their Pockets: of theſe many counterfeited themſelves Phyſicians; who at the ſame Time got poor Peoples Money and endangered their Lives too. Stow was glad when Juſtice took hold of them, and brought them to Shame. Two of theſe he takes Occaſion to ſpeak of, with their Puniſhment. One in the Reign of King Edward VI. about the Year 1550. a Poulter of Surrey, named Grig: who by giving out that he would take no Money for his Cures, and by pretending to heal by Words and Prayers, was taken by the People for a Prophet, as well as a Phyſician. He was ſet on a Scaffold in Croydon with a Paper on his Breaſt, on which was written his deceitful and Hypocritical Dealings: and afterwards ſet on the Pillory in Southwark on Ladyday Fair; when the Maior and Aldermen riding through the Fair, he asked them and all the Citizens Forgiveneſs. The other Cheat of a Doctor was long before, viz. An. 1382. Who, as Stow relateth, was ſet upon an Horſe with his Face to the Horſetayl, and the Tayl held in his Hand as a Bridle: a Collar of Jordans about his Neck, and a Whetſtone on his Breaſt [to denote him a great Lyar.] And in that Faſhion led through the City: and then baniſhed. And hereupon he telleth, that many ſuch Deceivers ſtill were, who being never trained up in Reading, or Practice of Phyſic or Chirurgery, boaſted notwithſtanding to do great Cures; eſpecially upon Women, as in making them ſtrait, that before were crooked, corbed, or crumped in any Part of their Bodies. The contrary whereunto, ſaith he, is true: and then makes this Concluſion, That ſome had received Gold, when they had better deſerved the Whetſtone. And laſtly, as a Diſproof of theſe Pretenders, he addeth an Apophthegm witty enough, Not ſo eaſy to turn a crooked Body ſtrait, as to turn a Muſtard-Quern: Nor one Leap out of a Docket maketh a Doctor.

Hated ſuch as defaced Monuments.

But above all, he hated that Inhumanity, Ingratitude, nay Sacrilege, that many in his Time ſhewed to the Dead, in breaking down their Monuments, tearing away, defacing and purloining the Braſs and Inſcriptions or other Ornaments thereon, alienating their Vaults and Burying Places, and not ſuffering their Bones to reſt in quiet: tho' many of them were the Builders of the Churches where their Sepulchres were, or good Benefactors to them. Againſt theſe baſe Practices, too common in thoſe Times, he often took occaſion to declaim: and ſpared not them that were guilty herein. When in his Relation of Cordwainer Ward he came to Aldermary Church, he mentioned the Foundation of that fair Church to be laid by Keble ſometime Maior of London, who deceaſed 1518. and by his laſt Will gave 1000 l. towards the building of the ſame; and was buried in a Vault there by him prepared, with a Monument raiſed over him on the North ſide the Choir. But that which Stow added, that this Monument was deſtroyed and gone, and that he was not permitted a Reſting Place for his Bones there in his own Vault, being thrown out to make room for another, was a ſevere but juſt Reflection upon thoſe that were guilty of that Ingratitude and Inhumanity. Thomas Lodge, ſometime Maior was, buried in his Vault; and Monuments for him ſet up in the Place of Keble's Monument.

And Drope's and his Lady.

Again, he noted it as a Mark of great Ingratitude upon the Pariſh of St. Michael Cornhil, that the Tombs there on the North ſide of the Choir, of Robert Drope, ſometime Maior, and the Lady Liſle, ſometime Wife of the ſaid Drope, were pulled down, and no Monument remaining of them: and one Peter Houghton laid in their Vault: Both which had been very conſiderable Benefactors to that Pariſh, and Church. She gave her great Meſſuage with the Appurtenences: Which her Executors aſſured to the Parſon and Churchwardens and their Succeſſors, to keep Yearly her Obit or Anniverſary: Part to be ſpent on the Poor, and the reſt of the Profits to be employed in the Reparation of the Church. And this Eſtate called the Lady Liſle's Lands, the Pariſh enjoyed for many Years, having let a Leaſe of it for 60 Years at the Rent of 8 l. 13 s. 4 d. Notwithſtanding, afterwards they gave it up as Chauntry Land, and wronged themſelves. This was the Pariſh's Diſregard and moſt ingrateful ſlight of this good Lady (which Stow leaves upon Record) to reject the Remembrance of Her, by letting her Monument periſh, and of her Gift to be ſo eaſily parted withal.

And Sir John Allen's Tomb removed. Cheapward.

Such a Hint of Ingratitude he gave thoſe that were concerned in it, concerning Sir John Allen in King Henry the Eighth's time, who was the Founder of Mercers Chapel, then a very fair and beautiful Building; and was himſelf buried there with a Tomb over him. Which was afterwards removed into the Church belonging to the Hoſpital of St. Thomas of Acars: And his Body-Room divided into Shops, let out for Rent. And his Tomb is long ſince utterly gone into Oblivion: And his Memory muſt have been loſt as well as his Monument, had it not been preſerved by good Mr. Stow in his Survey.

The Monuments in Staining Church. Langb. Ward.

Further, for this Sacrilege towards Monuments, he leaveth a Sarcaſtical Reproach upon the Pariſh and Churchwardens of Alhallows Staining; where he ſpeaks ‘of their pulling down their Monuments, and ſweeping them out of their Church: and that the Churchwardens were forced to make a large Account for Brooms, viz. twelve Shillings; beſides the carying away of the Stones and Braſs thereof at their own Charge.

Braſs torn away from Graves in Shorditch.

He left alſo a Mark of Ignominy, on one who was Vicar of Shorditch (his Name was Dr. Hanmer) on the ſame ſacrilegious Account. ‘Of late, ſaith he, a Vicar there, for Covetouſneſs of the Braſs, which he converted into coined Silver, plucked up many Plates fixed on the Graves; and left no Memory of ſuch as had been buried under them. A great Injury, added he, both to the Living, and to the Dead: Forbidden by publick Proclamation in the Reign of our Sovereign Lady Q. Elizabeth. But not forborn of many, that either of a prepoſterous Zeal, or of a greedy Mind ſpare not to ſatiſfy themſelves by ſo wicked a Means.

Grieved at the demoliſhing of antient Churches and Religious Structures.

And as it grieved him to ſee the Monuments in Churches ſo violated, ſo he was much more grieved at the Overthrow of Churches themſelves, and ſo many noble venerable Structures of Religion: And he could not forbear ſometimes to expreſs his Admiration of theſe fine antient Works, the Effects of former Piety and Devotion: and with as much Modeſty as he could, to reprove ſuch as pulled them down for their own Gain and Covetouſneſs. With ſuch a Touch he wiped the old Marquis of Wincheſter, who obtained the Auguſtin Friars in London: or ſome other. To which belonged a moſt curious ſpired Steeple, ſmall, high, and ſtrait, which Stow was mightily delighted with, and ſaid, he had not ſeen the like. The ſmall Spire of this Church had been overthrown by a Tempeſt of Wind An. 1362. but raiſed anew to that Beauty in which he had ſeen it. And ſo, ſaid he, it might have ſtood, had not private Benefit (the only Devourer of Antiquity) pulled it down. And then relating, how the goodly Steeple, and all the Eaſt part of the Church was taken down, and Houſes for one Man's Commodity raiſed in the Place; London, he ſaid, had loſt a goodly Monument; and Time hereafter might more talk of it.

Diſliked building high Turrets upon Houſes.

There is one thing more I muſt take notice of in Mr. Stow's Temper; which perhaps may be lookt upon as a fond Thing in him, and not worthy troubling his Head about. It was, that he could not endure the high Turrets, and Buildings run up to a great Heighth, which ſome Citizens in his Time (eſpecially in Q. Elizabeth's Reign) laid out their Money upon, to overtop and overlook their Neighbours, Such ſort of advanced Works, both Towers and Chimneys, they built both in their Summer-Houſes in Moorfields and in other Places in the Suburbs, and in their Dwelling Houſes in the City it ſelf. He compared them to Bankrupts bearing great Shew but little Worth: and ‘that they were like Midſummer Pageants with Towers, Turrets and Chimney Tops, not ſo much for Uſe and Profit as for Shew and Pleaſure; Bewraying, ſaid he, the Vanities of Mens Minds. And that it was unlike to the Diſpoſition of the antient Citizens, who delighted in the building of Hoſpitals, and Almſhouſes for the Poor: and therein both employed their Wits, and ſpent their Wealth, in preferment of the common Commodity of this our City. By which Words meaning to upbraid the Degeneracy of the preſent Citizens from their Forefathers: who if they had any Treaſure to ſpare, and to lay out in Structures, they preferred the Expence of it upon Buildings for the publick Good; ſuch as Hoſpitals to harbour the Poor, before the adorning of their own Houſes with gaudy Turrets, meerly to go up now and then, and look a great Way about them. And he made once a particular Obſervation of one Richard Whethill a Merchant Taylor, that was the Builder of an Houſe in Leadenhall-ſtreet near Lime-ſtreet End, with a high Tower, the Second Tower built in the City, and the firſt of Timber, that ever he learnt to have been built to overlook Neighbours in the City. Of this Man he obſerved, that being a Young Man he became in a ſhort Time ſo tormented with the Gout both in his Hands and Legs, that he could neither feed himſelf, nor go further than he was led; much leſs able to climb, and take the Pleaſure of the Height of his Tower.

Limeſtreet Ward.

He liked antient Hoſpitality.

And this leads me to another good Quality in him; which was, his Pity and Compaſſion for the Poor. And on their Account, he commended the antient Hoſpitality, when the Needy Sort were relieved with Food; and likewiſe Harbour afforded them. Which Charities he obſerved to be much abated upon the Suppreſſion of Religious Houſes: Many of thoſe Helps and Succours of the Poor being ſunk and loſt, the Revenues falling into private Hands, and become the Poſſeſſions of ſuch as were of a quite contrary Diſpoſition to the former Owners. And where Houſes were free for the charitable Entertainment of poor People, even there (the Poor being turned out) Houſes were ſometimes erected for the Oppreſſions of the Poor, by hard Bargains made with the Workmen, and by racking the poor Tenants by advanced Rents. Upon this Occaſion he would not forbear now and then to expreſs his Mind. And particularly in Shoreditch Pariſh. Where was a Place, called Rotten-Row, conſiſting of ſmall Houſes with Gardens; which belonged to the Priory of Haliwel: Who placed there a great many Poor that dwelt there freely, only paying a Peny as an Acknowledgment to him at Chriſtmas; who then feaſted them all at the Priory with good Cheer. Afterwards, when that Priory was diſſolved, theſe Houſes, with the reſt of the Revenues, were ſwallowed up; and came at length into the Hands of one Ruſſel: who bought them a good Penyworth; and new builded them. And now was the Caſe quite altered; and there, where Charity and Relief was exerciſed, now became a Place of Rigor and Covetouſneſs. For this Man made his Bargains ſo hardly with his Carpenters, Bricklayers and other Workmen, that they were undone by it: and then ſo rented theſe Buildings, and took ſuch large Fines of the Tenants, that it came to near as much as the Houſes coſt him. And yet the Place was now from Rotten-Row, called Ruſſel-Row, in Honour of his Name; as Stow ſmartly reproacheth him.

His Concern for the Cities Reputation.

As he had a mighty Concern for the Reputation of the City, which it had obtained of antient Times, ſo he was uneaſy at ſome Things in his Time that abated it, and made the Citizens degenerate. He obſerved how it bred warlike People, that delighted in manly and healthful Exerciſes and Sports; whereby they were fitted for War, and Defence of their City and Countrey; namely Wreſtling, Running at the Quinten, ſhooting in the Long Bow, going the Watches Armed. Which began now to be diſuſed. Whereof that of ſhooting was much laid by; becauſe the Common Grounds about the City began to be much encloſed: and ſo Room was wanted for that Exerciſe. Which Encloſures, for that Reaſon, as well as others, Stow diſliked. And ſo inſtead of that, and the other becoming Recreations, the Sports that then took Place, were creeping, he ſaid, into Bowling Allies, and Dicing Houſes near Home; where, ſaid he, they have room enough to hazard their Money at unlawful Games: And where I leave them to take their Pleaſures. And noting likewiſe the Paſtimes in former Days the younger Sort uſed to betake themſelves to on Holidays after Evening Prayer; the Young Men playing at Bucklers; and the Maids, in the Sight of their Maſters and Miſtreſſes, dancing for the Garland, hanging thwart the Streets, (but were now ſuppreſſed) worſe Practices, added he ſhortly, within Doors were to be feared.

And thus we leave theſe Memorials of this honeſt good Citizen to his laſting Praiſe, and for an Example to all the Natives of this moſt Noble City.

BOOK I.

Containing a General Deſcription of the CITY of LONDON.

---

CHAP. I.

The Situation, Populouſneſs, Extent, Commodiouſneſs, Original, Antiquity, and Name of LONDON. King LUD. The City of the Trinobantes. Submits to JULIUS CÆSAR. LONDON, What before CÆSAR; And whether it was a Colony under the Romans. Proclamations about new Buildings there ; And Fore-fronts.

LONDON, the Metropolis and Glory of the Kingdom, was anciently the Seat of the Britiſh Empire ; and ſince, ſtiled commonly, the Royal Chamber of our Kings. The Kings Chamber, the Heart of the Commonwealth, and a Short Draught of the whole Kingdom : As it was once deſcribed by Sir Edward Coke, ſometime Recorder of this City. It may boaſt it ſelf to be the largeſt in Extent, and the faireſt built, the moſt Populous, and beſt inhabited (and that by a Civil, Rich and Sober People) of any in the World. And for a general Trade throughout the Univerſe, all other muſt give her the Precedence.

Camera Regis, Reip. Cor, totius Regni Epitome.

J. S.

London the beſt City in the World.

How conſiderable a Figure ſhe makes in the Government of the Kingdom, appears by the Influence her Inclinations and Actions have had upon the Affairs of the whole Nation in paſt Ages, as well as they have in the preſent. It is eaſy to perceive, that this City muſt have gradually ariſen from its firſt Beginning to its preſent Grandeur, through a long Tract of ſucceſſive Times and Ages, by the Benefit of Traffick, with the Concurrence of the Favour of Princes, and likewiſe the Convenience and Advantage of its Situation ; as will abundantly appear in the Progreſs of this SURVEY.]

It is placed by Nature on a little Hill ; having an eaſy Aſcent all along from the South, and ſtands no leſs pleaſant than commodious by the River of Thames ; which waſheth its South Parts, forming an Half-Moon, or Bow bent. And in its haſty Courſe toward the Sea, payeth its Duty to the City ; dividing it into two (but unequal) Parts : The one, (and which is the greater) taking the Name of LONDON and WESTMINSTER, and the other, the Name of SOUTHWARK. Which Parts are joined together by a ſtately Stone Bridge, bearing the Name of LONDON-BRIDGE : Which is ſupported by Nineteen great Arches ; and ſo furniſh-furniſhed above with Houſes and Shops of able Tradeſmen, that Paſſengers might rather take it for a fair Street than a Bridge.

The Out-parts of the City.

The other Out-Parts and Suburbs are encompaſſed with rich and pleaſant Fields, fertile for feeding Horſes and Cows, as well as for Hay, Tillage and Gardening.]

P'eaſant, profitable and healthful.

J. S.

The pleaſant, profitable, and healthful Situation of this City, in reſpect of the River, the riſing Ground, and the Soil, (all ſo advantageous) is finely deſcribed by one of our Poets; where his Muſe is brought in, thus ſpeaking, upon the Sight of LONDON:

Drayton's Polyalbion.

At thy great Builder's Wit,
Who is, but wonder may?
Nay, of his Wiſdom thus
Enſuing Times ſhall ſay,
O more than mortal Man,
That did this Town begin,
Whoſe Knowledge found the Place,
So fit to ſet it in.
What God, or Heavenly Power,
Was harbour'd in thy Breaſt? &c.
Built on a riſing Bank,
Within a Vale to ſtand;
And for thy healthful Soil,
Choſe Gravel mixt with Sand.
And where fair THAMES his Courſe
Into a Creſcent caſts,
(That forced by his Tides,
As ſtill by her he haſts,
He might his ſurging Waves
Into her Boſom ſend)
Becauſe too far in Length
His Town ſhould not extend.
And to the North and South
Upon an equal Reach,
Two Hills their even Banks
Do ſomewhat ſeem to ſtretch:
The two extremer Winds,
From hurting it to let;
And only level lies,
Upon the Riſe and Set.
Of all this goodly Iſle,
Where breathes moſt chearful Air,
And every way thereto
The Ways moſt ſmooth and fair;
As in the fitteſt Place,
By Man that could be thought,
To which by Land or Sea
Proviſion might be brought.
And ſuch a Road for Ships
Scarce all the World commands,
As is the goodly THAMES,
Near where BRUTE's City ſtands.

The Uſe of Sea-Coals forbid by King Edw. I. as unwholſome to the City.

And as LONDON is healthfully ſituated by Nature, ſo Mortalities and Sickneſſes here have ariſen from accidental Cauſes. It was formerly thought to contribute much to the Preſervation of the good Air of the City, that nothing was burnt here but Wood or Charcoal; and that even in Trades where much Fire was uſed. Ex Buſca (as it runs in a Patent of K. Edward I.) vel carbone boſci fieri conſueverant Artificum rogi: i. e. The Artificers Fires had been commonly made of Spray or Bruſh-Wood, or Wood coaled. But when Workmen living in the Out-Skirts of London, began to bring in the burning of Sea-Coal, (which was about the Time of Edward the Firſt) it was much complained of, as tending greatly to the making of the Place unhealthful. About the latter End of that King it was, that Brewers, Dyers, and other Artificers, uſing great Fires, began to uſe Sea-Coals inſtead of dry Wood and Charcoal, in or near the City. Which occaſioned the Prelates, Nobles, Commons, and other People of the Realm, reſorting thither to Parliament, and upon other Occaſions, with the Inhabitants of the City, and the Village of Southwark, Wapping, and Eaſt Smithfield, to complain thereof twice, (one time after another) to the King, as a publick Nuſance; corrupting the Air with its Stink and Smoak; to the great Prejudice and Detriment of their Health.

His Proclamation and Commiſſion about Sea-Coal.

The King therefore, firſt prohibited the burning of Sea-coal by his Proclamation. Which being diſobeyed by many for their private Lucre; upon a ſecond Complaint, he iſſued out a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, to enquire of all ſuch, who burned Sea-Coal againſt his Proclamation, within the ſaid City, or Parts adjoining, and to puniſh them for the firſt Offence, with great Fines and Ranſoms. And upon the Second Offence, to demoliſh their Furnaces, Kilns, &c. wherein they burnt Sea-coals; and to ſee the Proclamation ſtrictly obſerved for Time to come; as a Record 35 Edw. I. informeth. Tho' ſince, as Mr. Prinne obſerves upon the Mention of this Record, Sea-coal is now the Fewel perpetually uſed by our Artificers, and all ſorts of Perſons beſides, in or near the City, and elſewhere; and no where in theſe Days reputed a public Nuſance.

Orders (for preſerving the Wholeſomeneſs of the Air) againſt killing Beaſts in the City.

Thus in former Times, as well as later, great Care hath been taken for preſerving the Wholeſomeneſs of the Air of the City. For this End, Proviſion was made againſt Stinks and annoying Smells, ariſing from the killing of Beaſts in the ſaid City; which was thought once to have occaſioned a grievous Plague there, in the Reign of King Edward III. For the preventing therefore of the like Infection, and for keeping the City ſweet and clean, the ſaid King Edward, about the Year 1361. ſent his Commands to the Mayor, Sheriffs, &c. that no Butcher ſhould kill his Cattle nearer the City than Stratford, or Knightsbridge.]

The Extent of the City.

R. B.

The City at this Time is of a very large Extent, in compariſon of what it was in former Ages, or even when Mr. Stow made his Remarks, being by Computation thrice as big in Compaſs. Beſides, that the many Fields and Places that lay waſte in thoſe Days, are now built into fair Streets, Lanes, Allies, and Courts.

The Buildings.

And for its Buildings, they are far more ſtately and uniform, eſpecially ſince the new building of the City with Brick, (which before was of Timber) occaſioned by the dreadful Conflagration of it, which happened in the beginning of the Month of September, Anno 1666. A large Account whereof ſhall be given elſewhere in this Book.

Its Populouſneſs.

And as to the Populouſneſs of the City, it is modeſtly computed to contain much above an Hundred Thouſand Souls.]

New Churchyards made.

J. S.

Soon after the Beginning of King James I. his Reign, the vaſt Increaſe of the Inhabitants of the City was taken Notice of. And as ſeveral new Storehouſes for the Reception of vaſt Quantities of Grain and Coals, were built, to provide in Caſe of any Dearth, for the Supply of the People; ſo alſo many Places within the Liberties and Suburbs, were now incloſed, and ſet apart for Burying-Places, the former Churchyards not ſufficing to contain the great Numbers of Bodies deceaſed, that they might lye undiſturbed in their Graves. Some whereof were conſecrated by Dr. Abbot, then Biſhop of London; and others by Dr. King, his Succeſſor in that See.

Length and Breadth of London. Preſent State of the Univerſ. p. 64.

According to a late Author's Calculation, (as we are told) LONDON, meaſured from Limehouſe to the End of Tuthill-Street in Weſtminſter, (that is, from Eaſt to Weſt) is about Seven Miles and an half. And from the furthermoſt End of Blackman-Street in Southwark, to the End of St. Leonard Shoreditch (that is, South and North) are 25000 Geometrical Paces, or Two Miles and an half; yet upon a Medium, he ſaith, LONDON is Seven Miles long, and One Mile and a quarter broad; which make an Area of near Nine ſquare Miles.

Bigneſs. William …tty's Eſſay, …it. 1686. …34.

For the Bigneſs of it, it was computed divers Years ago, to be Seven times bigger than it was in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign. The preſent City ſtands upon ſomewhat leſs than 2500 Acres of Ground; which is about equivalent to a Circle of Four Miles and a half Diameter; and leſs than Fifteen Miles in Circumference.

…e Tax of …City Anno …702.

The Populouſneſs, and withal the Wealth of it, may be reckoned from the Tax Anno 1702. 1. Regin. Annæ. Which Tax amounted to 1979931 l. And the Quota of the ſaid Tax ſet upon London and Weſtminſter, was 198843 l. And beſides, upon Middleſex, where thoſe Cities ſtand, 108912 l. In all 307755 l. Which was near the Fourth Part of the whole Tax upon the whole Kingdom; which ſhews the vaſt Importance of the City to the whole Nation.

…o Warranto. …6.

In the Caſe of the late Quo Warranto, the Number of the Citizens and Freemen of London, is ſaid to be 50000 Perſons, and more. But the Number of the Inhabitants of the whole City and Suburbs muſt be much more.

…onjectures of …me concern- …the Num- …of People …London.

How populous the City was formerly, I ſhall mention here the Conjectures of ſome. James Howel, Eſq; (who writ an Hiſtory of London above Threeſcore and Ten Years ago) ſaith, that in the Year 1636. King Charles I. ſent to the Lord Mayor to make a Scrutiny, what Number of Papiſts and Strangers were in the City, Sir Edward Bromfield, then Mayor, took occaſion hence to make a Cenſe or Computation of the People; who were, of Men, Women and Children, found to be 700000, that lived within the Bars of the Juriſdiction alone. And it was judged, he ſaid, by all probable Supputation, that LONDON had more by a Third Part, when he ſet forth his Book, which was little above Twenty Years after. The City of Weſtminſter, and all the Suburbs without the Mayor's Juriſdiction, and the contiguous Buildings contained by all likely Conjectures, at leaſt as many more. So that taking all together, the Number of human Souls, he reckoned, might amount to above One Million and an Half.

…ndinopol. …int. Anno …657.

…Laune's Pre- …State of …City. …nt. 1681.

This Computation, ſaith another later Writer concerning the State of the City, was deliver'd Four and Twenty Years ago; and it is certain the Number is vaſtly encreaſed ſince; as might appear by the great Addition of Buildings. And it was then above 24 Years ſince this laſt Writer: [He means Howel] How then, as he concludes, the Number of Souls in London at this preſent, [viz. 1681.] are increaſed, may be further conſidered.

…Quantity …Souls in …don calcu- …d.

…W. Petty's …y.

…m the Bills …Mortality.

Furthermore, as to the Quantity of People contained in London, and the continual Increaſe and Growth thereof, Sir William Petty, Kt. a Member of the Royal Society, above Thirty or Forty Years ago, made ſeveral ingenious Calculations from the Bills of Mortality, viz.

That there were Anno 1682. 84000 Tenanted Houſes; which, at Eight Perſons in each, make 672000 Perſons. But he fixed it to a round Number, that there were about 670000 Souls in London.

By London, he meant the Houſing within the Walls, with the Liberties thereof; Weſtminſter, and the Borough of Southwark; and ſo much of the built Ground in Middleſex and Surrey, whoſe Houſes were contiguous unto, or within Call of thoſe before-mentioned.

That this City doubleth the Number of its Inhabitants in Forty Years.

That according to this Doubling, the People of London will be Anno 1840, 10718880 in Number.

And,

That the Inhabitants of all England will be but inconſiderably more, viz. 10917389 in Number. Whereſore,

That it is certain, that the Growth of the City muſt ſtop before the ſaid Year 1840; and will be at its utmoſt Height in the next preceding Period, Anno 1800. And

That then, viz. 1800. the Number of the People of the City, will be Eight times its preſent Number, that is, to ſay, 5 Millions, 359 Thouſand.

That London is Seven times bigger than in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, viz. Anno 1560.

So that by this Calculation, the Inhabitants of London, Anno 1702, being half doubled, ſince the Year, 1682, muſt have been One Million, Fifty Thouſand in Number. He offered this Table to judge of the Increaſe of the Number of Souls in London from time to time, at a Medium of two Years indifferently taken.

1050000 Inhabitants in London, and upwards.

| In this Year | | Dyed | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1604, and 1605. | | 5135 | A |
| 1621, and 1622. | | 8527 | B |
| 1641, and 1642. | | 11883 | C |
| 1661, and 1662. | | 15148 | D |
| 1671, and 1672. | | 22331 | E |

Wherein obſerve, that the Number C is double to A, and 806 over. That D is double to B within 1906. And C and D is double to A B, within 293. That E is double to C within 3341, and C, and D, and E, are double to A, and B, and C, within 1736; and that E is above Quadruple to A; all which Differences, every way conſidered, do allow the Doubling of the People of London in Forty Years.

London and Vienna compar'd by Burials. Poſtman, N. 1867.

By the Computations of the Burials and Chriſtenings in this City, one may be enabled to compare the Bigneſs and Populouſneſs of it with other great Cities in the World. As for Example, in the Year, 1707, the Chriſtenings in the Imperial City Vienna amounted to 3963, and the Burials to 4354; whereas the Burials in London, the ſame Year were 21600, and the Chriſtenings 16066.

London and Paris compared.

Vid. Preſent State of the Univerſe.

Yet further, to ſet forth the ſurpaſſing Eminency of this City, on account of the vaſt Numbers of People it conſiſts of; the fore-cited ingenious Author, makes a compariſon under divers Heads between it and Paris, now one of the moſt flouriſhing Cities in Europe. And to exceed it in all theſe Particulars following: I. In the Wealth and great Eſtates of the Inhabitants, the Number of their Servants, and Greatneſs of their Equipage. II. In the Wholeſomeneſs of the Air. III. In the cleanly, and more convenient way of Living. IV. In the Preference of the River Thames to that of Seine, both in Pleaſantneſs and Navigableneſs; and in the Wholeſomeneſs of its Waters, and the great Bridge of London, built over it. V. In the Shipping and Foreign Trade; London therein incomparably exceeding both Paris and Roan. VI. In the Cheapneſs of all the moſt neceſſary Sorts of Food, and the great Variety and Plenty of all Sorts of Drink. VII. In the Cheapneſs likewiſe and goodneſs of Fewel, and Conveniency of Stowage. VIII. In the Magnificence of the Churches; none at Paris being ſo great as St. Pauls hath been, and now is. None ſo beautiful as K. Henry the Seventh's Chapel. IX. In the Courts of Inns, and Chancery, and the Lawyers Chambers. And laſtly, in the Hoſpitals, ſo many, and ſo richly endowed: And for the Relief of Multitudes of miſerable and diſtreſſed People of all Sorts.

The Diſtance of London from the Sea.

R. B.

The City is about Sixty Miles from the Sea, which is not ſo nigh as to be in danger of a Surprizal by the Fleets of a Foreign Enemy, nor to be annoyed by the boiſterous Winds, and unwholſome Vapours ariſing from thence. Neither is it ſo far, but that by the Help of one Tide every Twelve Hours, Ships of great Burthen are brought into her Boſom; ſo that it doth participate of thoſe milder and warmer Vapours, which do ariſe from the Eaſtern, Weſtern, and Southern Seas.

Commodiouſly ſeated.

It is ſo commodiouſly ſeated in a manner in the Centre of the Kingdom, that it may the better communicate its Trade unto all the Inhabitants, having high Roads to moſt great Towns, for the conveniency of Carriage and Cattle; beſides what is brought to London in Veſſels by Sea; ſo that all Sorts of Proviſions are had at as eaſy Rates, if not eaſier, than at any Town within 30 or 40 Miles diſtant from it.]

J. S.

Now for the Antiquity and Hiſtory of this City, fetched from the antienteſt Records of Time.]

London's Original and Antiquity.

Trinovantum hath the written Copy.

Livy.

As the Roman Writers, to glorify the City of Rome, drew the Original thereof from Gods, and Demi-gods, ſo Geffrey of Monmouth, the Welſh Hiſtorian, deduceth the Foundation of this famous City of LONDON, for the greater Glory thereof, and Emulation of Rome, from the very ſame Original. For he reporteth, that Brute Lineally deſcended from the Demi-god Eneas, the Son of Venus, Daughter of Jupiter, about the Year of the World 2855, and 1108, before the Nativity of Chriſt, builded this City near unto the River now called Thames, and named it TROYNOVANT, or TRENOVANT. But herein, as Livy, the moſt famous Hiſtoriographer of the Romans writeth; Antiquity is pardonable, and hath an eſpecial Privilege, by interlacing Divine Matters with Human, to make the firſt Foundation of Cities more honourable, more Sacred, and as it were of greater Majeſty.

An old Tract aſſerting Brute the Founder.

J. S.

Recordatorium.

This Tradition concerning the ancient Foundation of the City by Brute, was of ſuch Credit, that it is aſſerted in an ancient Tract, preſerved in the Archives of the Chamber of London; which is tranſcribed into the Liber Albus, and long before that by Horn, in his old Book of Laws and Cuſtoms, called Liber Horn. And a Copy of this Tract was drawn out of the City Books by the Mayor and Aldermen's ſpecial Order, and ſent to K. Henry the VIth, in the Seventh Year of his Reign; which Copy yet remains among the Records of the Tower. The Tract is as followeth:

Inter Nobiles Urbes Orbis, &c. 1. "Among the noble Cities of the World which Fame cries up, the City of London, the only Seat of the Realm of England, is the principal, which widely ſpreads abroad the Rumour of its Name. It is happy for the Wholeſomeneſs of the Air, for the Chriſtian Religion, for its moſt worthy Liberty, and moſt antient Foundation. For according to the Credit of Chronicles, it is conſiderably older than Rome; and that it was by the ſame Trojan Author built by Brute, after the Likeneſs of great Troy, before that built by Romulus and Remus. Whence to this Day it uſeth and enjoyeth the ancient City Troy's Liberties, Rights and Cuſtoms. For it hath a Senatorial Dignity, and leſſer Magiſtrates. And it hath Annual Sheriffs inſtead of Conſuls. For whoſoever repair thither, of whatſoever Condition they be, whether Free or Servants, they obtain there the Refuge of Defence and Freedom. Almoſt all the Biſhops, Abbots, and Nobles of England, are as it were Citizens and Freemen of this City, having their Noble Inns here.

Lib. Alb.

Theſe, and many more Matters of Remark, worthy to be remembred, concerning this moſt noble City, remain in a very old Book, called Recordatorium Civitatis: and in the Book called Speculum.]

Caire Lud, the City of Lud: But Lud's Town is a Saxon word.

King LUD (as the ſame Geffrey of Monmouth noteth) afterward [about 1060 Years after] not only repaired this City, but alſo increaſed the ſame with fair Buildings, Towers, and Walls; which after his own Name called it Caire-Lud, or Luds-Town. And the ſtrong Gate which he builded in the Weſt Part of the City, he likewiſe, for his own Honour, named Ludgate.

R. B.

And in Proceſs of Time, by mollifying the Word, it took the Name of LONDON; but ſome others will have it called Llongdin; a Britiſh Word, anſwering to the Saxon Word Shipton Shipton, that is, a Town of Ships. And indeed, none hath more Right to take unto it ſelf that Name of Shipton, or Road of Ships, than this City, in regard of its commodious Situation for Shipping on ſo curious a Navigable River as the Thames, which ſwelling at certain Hours with the Ocean Tides, by a deep and ſafe Channel, is ſufficient to bring up Ships of the greateſt Burthen to her Sides, and thereby furniſheth her Inhabitants with the Riches of the known World; ſo that as her juſt Right ſhe claimeth the Pre-eminency of all other Cities. And the Shipping lying at Anchor by her Walls, reſembleth a Wood of Trees, diſbranched of their Boughs.

LONDON the Sepulture of the Britiſh Kings.

This City was in no ſmall Repute, being built by the firſt Founder of the Britiſh Empire, and honoured with the Sepulchre of divers of their Kings, as Brute, Locrine, Cunodagius, and Gurbodus, Fathers of Ferrex and Porrex, being the laſt of the Line of Brute.

In the Weſt Part whereof he built a ſtrong Gate, called Ludſgate, as was ſhewed before, where are now ſtanding in Nitches, over the ſaid Gate, the Statues of this good King, and his two Sons, on each Side of him, as a laſting Monument of his Memory, being, after an Honourable Reign, near thereunto Buried, in a Temple of his own Building.]

Caſſibelan reigns. Julius Cæſar arrives in Britain.

This LUD had two Sons, Androgeus, and Theomantius, [or Temanticus] who being not of Age to govern at the Death of their Father, their Unkle Caſſibelan took upon him the Crown; about the Eighth Year of whoſe Reign, Julius Cæſar arrived in this Land, with a great Power of Romans to conquer it. The Antiquity of which Conqueſt, I will ſummarily ſet down out of his own Commentaries; which are of far better Credit than the Relations of Geffrey Monmouth.

The Conqueſt of Britain by Cæſar.

Cæſar's Commentaries, Lib. 5.

A. M.

“ The chief Government of the Britons, and Adminiſtration of War, was then by common Advice committed to Caſſibelin, whoſe Borders were divided from the Cities on the Sea-Coaſt by a River called Thames, about Fourſcore Miles from the Sea. This Caſſibilin before had made continual Wars with the other Cities; but the Britons moved with the coming of the Romans, had made him their Sovereign and General of their Wars, (which continued hot between the Romans and them.) [Cæſar having knowledge of their Intent, marched with his Army to the Thames into Caſſivelaune's Borders. This River can be paſſed but only in one Place on Foot, and that with much difficulty. When he was come hither, he obſerved a great Power of his Enemies in Battel Array on the other ſide of the River. The Bank was fortified with ſharp Stakes fixed before them; and ſuch kind of Stakes were alſo driven down under Water, and covered with the River. Cæſar having underſtanding thereof by the Priſoners and Deſerters, ſent his Horſe before, and commanded his Foot to follow immediately after. But the Roman Solders went on with ſuch Speed and Force, their Heads being only above Water, that the Enemy not being able to withſtand the Legions, and the Horſe, forſook the Bank, and betook themſelves to Flight. Caſſibelaune deſpairing of Succeſs by fighting in plain Battel, ſent away his greater Forces, and keeping with him about Four Thouſand Charioteers watched which Way the Romans went, and went a little out of the Way, concealing himſelf in cumberſome and Woody Places. And in thoſe Parts where he knew the Romans would paſs, he drove both Cattle and People out of the open Fields into the Woods. And when the Roman Horſe ranged too freely abroad in the Fields for Forage and Spoil, he ſent out his Charioteers out of the Woods by all the Ways and Paſſages well known to them, and encountered with their Horſe to their great Prejudice. By the Fear whereof he kept them from ranging too far; ſo that it came to this paſs, that Cæſar would not ſuffer his Horſe to ſtray any Diſtance from his main Battel of Foot, and no further to annoy the Enemy, in waſting their Fields, and burning their Houſes and Goods, than their Foot could effect by their Labour or March.]

The River of Thames, to be paſſed a-foot in one Place in Cæſar's time.

The Policy of Caſſibelaun on his ill Succeſs.

His Advantage againſt the Roman Horemen.

Trinobantes, Citizens of London.

“ But in the mean while, the Trinobants, in effect the ſtrongeſt City of thoſe Countries, and one of which Mandubrace, a young Gentleman, that had ſtuck to Cæſar's Party, was come to him, being then in the Main Land, [viz. Gaul] and thereby eſcaped Death, which he ſhould have ſuffered at Caſſivelan's Hands (as his Father Imanuence, who reigned in that City had done). The Trinobants, I ſay, ſent their Ambaſſadors, promiſing to yield themſelves unto him, and to do what he ſhould command them, inſtantly deſiring him to protect Mandubrace from the furious Tyranny of Caſſivelaun, and to ſend ſome into the City, with Authority to take the Government thereof. Cæſar accepted the Offer, and appointed them to give him Forty Hoſtages, and to find him Grain for his Army, and ſo ſent he Mandubrace to them. They ſpeedily did according to his Command, ſent the Number of Hoſtages, and the Bread-Corn.

Mandubrace, and the Trinobants, yield to Cæſar. He defends them.

“ When others ſaw, that Cæſar had not only defended the Trinobants againſt Caſſivelaune, but had alſoſaved them harmleſs from the Pillage of his own Soldiers, the Cenimagues, the Segontiacs, the Ancalites, the Bibrokes, and the Caſſians, by their Embaſſies, yield themſelves to Cæſar. By theſe he came to know that Caſſivelaun's Town was not far from that Place, fortified with Woods and mariſh Grounds; into the which a conſiderable Number of Men and Cattel were gotten together. For the Britains call that a Town, ſaith Cæſar, when they have fortified cumberſome Woods, with a Ditch and a Rampire; and thither they are wont to reſort, to abide the Invaſion of their Enemies. Thither marched Cæſar with his Legions. He finds the Place notably fortified both by Nature and human Pains; nevertheleſs, he ſtrives to aſſault it on two Sides. The Enemies, after a little Stay, being not able longer to bear the Onſet of the Roman Soldiers, ruſhed out at another Part, and left the Town unto him. Here was a great Number of Cattel found, and many of the Britains were taken in the Chace, and many ſlain.

Caſſibelaun's Town, Weſt from London. For Cæſar ſaith, 80 Miles from the Sea.

Cities of the Britains were cumberſome Woods fortified.

“ While theſe Things were doing in theſe Quarters, Caſſivelaune ſent Meſſengers to that Part of Kent, which, as we ſhewed before, lyeth upon the Sea, over which Countries Four Kings, Cingetorix, Carnil, Taximagul, and Segovax, reigned, whom he commanded to raiſe all their Forces, and ſuddenly to ſet upon and aſſault their Enemies in their Naval Trenches. To which, when they were come, the Romans ſallied out upon them, ſlew a great many of them, and took Cingetorix, an eminent Leader among them, Priſoner, and made a ſafe Retreat. Caſſivelaune, hearing of this Battel, and having ſuſtained ſo many Loſſes, and found his Territories waſted; and eſpecially being diſturbed at the Revolt of the Cities, ſent Ambaſſadors along with Comius, of Arras, to treat with Cæſar concerning his Submiſſion. Which Cæſar, when he was reſolved to Winter in the Continent, becauſe of the ſudden Inſurrection of the Gauls, and that not much of the Summer remained, and that it might eaſily be ſpent, accepted and commands him Hoſtages, and appoints what Tribute Britain ſhould Yearly pay to the People of Rome, giving ſtrait Charge to Caſſivelaune, that he ſhould do no Injury to Mandubrace, nor the Trinobants. And ſo receiving the Hoſtages, withdrew his Army to the Sea again.

Britain ceſſed to pay a yearly Tribute to the Romans.

Thus far out of Cæſar's Commentaries concerning this Hiſtory, which happened in the Year before Chriſt's Nativity LIV. In all which Proceſs, there is for this Purpoſe to be noted, that Cæſar nameth the City of the Trinobantes; which hath a Reſemblance with Troy nova, or Trenovant: having no greater Difference in the Orthography, than the changing of [b] into [v]. And yet maketh an Error, which I will not argue. Only this I will note, that divers learned Men do not think Civitas Trinobantum to be well and truly tranſlated The City of the Trinobantes; but that it ſhould rather be The State, Communalty, or Seignory of the Trinobants. For that Cæſar, in his Commentaries, uſeth the Word Civitas only for a People living under one and the ſelf-ſame Prince and Law. But certain it is, that the Cities of the Britains were in thoſe Days neither artificially builded with Houſes, nor ſtrongly walled with Stone, but were only thick and cumberſome Woods, plaſhed within, and trenched about. And the like in effect do other the Roman and Greek Authors directly affirm; as Strabo, Pomponius Mela, and Dion, a Senator at Rome, (Writers that flouriſhed in the ſeveral Reigns of the Roman Emperors, Tiberius, Claudius, Domitian and Severus); to wit, that before the Arrival of the Romans, the Britains had no Towns, but called that a Town which had a thick intangled Wood, defended, as I ſaid, with a Ditch and Bank; the like whereof, the Iriſhmen, our next Neighbours, do at this Day call Faſtneſs. * But after that theſe Hither Parts of Britain were reduced into the Form of a Province by the Romans, who ſowed the Seeds of Civility over all Europe, this our City, whatſoever it was before, began to be renowned, and of Fame.

Trinobant, New-London.

Cities of the Britains not Artificially builded with Houſes, nor walled with Stone.

* In Stow's firſt Edition, they are called Paces.

Teſtimonies of Roman Authors concerning London, and Britain.

For Tacitus, who firſt of all Authors nameth it LONDINIUM, ſaith, that (in the 62d Year after Chriſt) it was, albeit, no Colony of the Romans; yet moſt famous for the great Multitude of Merchants, Proviſion and Intercourſe. At which Time, in that notable Revolt of the Britains from Nero, in which Seventy thouſand Romans and their * Confederates were ſlain; this City, with Verulam near St. Albans and Maldon, then all famous, were ranſacked and ſpoiled.

* Leager Fellows in the firſt Edition.

For Suetonius Paulinus, then Lieutenant for the Romans in this Iſle, abandoned it, as not then fortified, and left it to the Spoil.

The Britains had no Houſes but Cottages; no Temples, no Courts of Juſtice.

Shortly after, Julius Agricola, the Roman Lieutenant in the Time of Domitian, was the firſt that by exhorting the Britains publickly, and helping them privately, won them to build Houſes for themſelves, Temples for the Gods, and Courts for Juſtice, to bring up the Noblemens Children in good Letters and Humanity, and to apparel themſelves Roman-like. Whereas before (for the moſt part) they went naked, painting their Bodies, &c. as all the Roman Writers have obſerved.

The Britains went naked. The Towns firſt walled under the Romans.

True it is, I confeſs, that afterward, many Cities and Towns in Britain under the Government of the Romans, were walled with Stone and baked Bricks or Tiles; as Richborough, or Rickborough-Ryptaceſter in the Iſle of Thanet, till the Channel altered his Courſe, beſides Sandwich in Kent, Verulamium beſides St. Albans in Hertfordſhire, Cilceſter in Hampſhire, Wroxceſter in Shropſhire, Kenceſter in Herefordſhire, Three Miles from Hereford Town; Ribcheſter, Seven Miles above Preſton, on the Water of Rible; Aldeburg, a Mile from Boroughbridge, on Watheling-ſtreet, on Ure River, and others. And no doubt but this our City of London was alſo walled with Stone in the Time of the Roman Government here; but yet very latewardly: For it ſeemeth not to have been walled in the Year of our Lord CCXCVI. Becauſe in that Year, when Alectus the Tyrant was ſlain in the Field, the Franks eaſily entred London, and had ſacked the ſame, had not God of his great Favour at that very Inſtant brought along the River of Thames certain Bands of Roman Soldiers, who ſlew thoſe Franks in every Street of the City.

London walled with Stone.

London not a Municipium under the Romans. Camden.

Nothing was wanting to this City's Glory now, but the Name of a Free City, and Colony: But indeed that was not with the Intereſt of the Romans; and therefore they made her a Prefecture. And ſuch were thoſe Cities where Marts were kept, and Juſtice adminiſtred. And for their Magiſtrates, they were annually ſent them from the Senate at Rome; for the Execution of their Laws, the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, the Collecting of their Tributes and Taxes, &c.]

London a mixt Roman Colony. Still. Antiq. of London, p. 533.

J. S.

It is a Queſtion among Learned Men, in what State and Reputation London was in the Times of the Romans? Camden writes, that it was of the Nature of a Prefecture, and not of a Colony. But Stillingfleet, the late moſt Learned Biſhop of Worceſter, was not of his Judgment; but that it was a Colony, conſiſting both of Romans and Natives. He ſheweth in his Tract of the Antiquity of London, that there were ſeveral Sorts of Colonies. Firſt, Civil Colonies; that is, ſuch as conſiſted only of Roman Citizens. Secondly, Military Colonies; when the Veteran Soldiers were ſettled together by way of a Colony. Such a Colony of Veterans was at Camalodunum, and at York, at Cheſter, at Caerleon, &c. Thirdly, There were mixt Colonies, where Roman Citizens and Natives joined together. And altho' they had not the Name, yet the Privileges of a Colony. Of this Sort he concluded LONDON to have been; which was Nobile Emporium in Tacitus his Time; a Place of mighty Advantage for its Situation for Trade: And therefore apt to draw both Romans and Natives together. Where it had all the Encouragement which the Roman Governor's Reſidence could give it; which would ſoon make the City in ſo ſmall a Time grow ſo great, that altho' it was firſt built in Claudius his Time, yet in Nero's it might be too large for Suetonius Paulinus to hazard his Army to defend it. For whereſoever there was a new Province made, there was great Occaſion for ſuch an Emporium, or Place of Trading to be ſet up. For the Citizens of Rome made mighty Improvements of their Eſtates, by ſending their Monies into New Provinces.

London, a great City before Cæſar came into Britain. Vindiciæ Britannic.

Mr. Owen, a learned Welſhman, hath lately proved (in a Writing of his which I have ſeen) againſt the abovesaid learned Biſhop Stillingfleet, that LONDON was a great City before the Romans came hither; and vindicates therein our Britiſh Hiſtory, which ſpeaks of Caſſivelane's beſieging London, when the Trinobantes invited Cæſar over; and that his Landing had obliged him to raiſe the Siege. He takes Notice for this Purpoſe of the Account that Tacitus giveth of this Place, Cognomento quidem Coloniæ non inſigne, i. e. "That "it was not dignified indeed with the Name of a "COLONY, but moſt famous for abundance "of Merchants and Proviſions." Whence that Author obſerves. 1. That London was at this Time, about the Fifth of Nero, renowned for all manner of Proviſions and Neceſſaries for the ſupplying of an Army; and that it ſeemed, by Tacitus's Words, to have been the great Treaſury of the Riches of the Kingdom, as it is now. 2. That conſidering it abounded with Merchants, it ſeems to have been then what it is now, the chief Trading City of the Iſland. That Cæſar ſpake of Britiſh Merchants in Gaul: Whether they were Gauls trading to Britain, or Britains trading into Gaul, it comes to one. For Trades cannot be managed without Correſpondencies and Factories. That the Britains traded for Tin and Lead with the Phenicians and Greeks. They refined and tranſported it by the Iſle of Wight into Gaul, and thence by Land on Horſeback in Thirty Days, or thereabouts, to Marſeilles. This Trade flouriſhed here long before the Romans knew this Iſland. Therefore if Cities have riſen by Merchandize, London muſt be much more ancient than Cæſar's Time; and its Situation being advantageous for Trade, being the Centre of Britiſh Merchandize, we may conclude it was the ancient Emporium of the Britiſh Trade with the Gauls, Phenicians, and Greeks.

Annal. Lib. 14.

Diodor. Sicul. V. 8.

That learned Biſhop writes, that it grew into a City by the Romans trading into this Country: And why not as well by the Trade of the Greeks and Phenicians hither, who had a vaſt Traffick in this Iſland.

London in the Britiſh Times a Place of Strength.

Again, London muſt be a Place of Strength, when Paulinus Suetonius, in his Return from Mona, i. e. Angleſey, marched with ſo much Reſolution through the midſt of the Enemies Country, to poſſeſs himſelf of it, with an Intention to make it the Seat of the War, as Tacitus ſaith. But that not finding there ſo conſiderable a Number of Roman Forces as he expected, he altered his Purpoſe, and choſe to preſerve the reſt with the Loſs of one Town. This affords an Argument of the Bigneſs of London at that Time. For he had now in all about Ten thouſand Men well armed: But this Number was inſufficient to defend it. Tacitus ſpeaks of it as a very pleaſant Place, ſaying, The Sweetneſs of the Place tempted ſome to ſtay behind, who were all cut off by Boadicia. Nor is there any Reaſon to think the Romans built the City of London, where there was neither a Colony, nor a Municipium, as the ſaid Biſhop ſeems to confeſs. Nor doth it appear that they had built any Cities in Britain at this Time: No, not Camalodunum, which was a Roman Colony; nor Verulamium, a Municipal or Free City, enjoying their own Municipal Laws, by the Favour and Allowance of the Romans. Nor is it probable that in ſo ſhort a Time, as from Julius Cæſar to Nero, in whoſe Reign Tacitus gives the former Account of London, could become ſo famous for her Merchants and Proviſions. Nor yet do the Roman Hiſtories give any Account why TRINOBANTUM ſhould in ſo few Years change its Name into LONDON. But the Britiſh Hiſtory accounts for this Name; namely, that Lud, Brother to Caſſivelan, renewed the Walls of it, and called it LUD-DIN, that is, the City of LUD, or Llwyd; which to this Day is a known Britiſh Name, ſignifying GREY in Engliſh. And it came by an eaſy Variation to be called Lundin; and one of its Gates, near which LUD was interred, called Porth Lud, or Ludgate, as it is called to this Day. This Lud was Son to Belinus Magnus; whoſe Name is ſtill continued on Belinſgate. The Biſhop of Worceſter does not pretend to derive London from any Latin Word; a Preſumption that it is not of a Roman Original. Ammianus Marcellinus, who flouriſhed A. D. 380. called it Vetuſtum Oppidum, i. e. an ancient Town, and makes it to be the City of the Trinobantes. He calls it Lundinum. Tacitus and Ptolomy, Londinium; Stephanus, Λινδόνιον.

Tacit. Annal. 14. Loci Dulcedo.

London why ſo called from Britiſh Writers.

A Roman Coin ſhewing the Antiquity of London.

Laſtly, The ſame Learned Welſhman obſerveth the Antiquity of London by a Coin of the Emperor Claudius relating to Britain; which Camden ſpeaks of: It had Britannicus on one ſide, and on the Reverſe, METROPOLIS ETIMINII BA. LO. Where Camden conceives Etiminii to be the ſame with Adminii. Which Adminius was the Son of Cunobelin, King of Camalodunum; and being expelled by his Father, fled to Caligula when he was making War upon the Ocean, as Suetonius writes: And that it is not unlikely he might ingratiate himſelf with Britannicus, the Son of Claudius, or with Claudius himſelf, who was alſo ſtiled Britannicus; and ſo have been conſtituted King of London, as BA. LO. i. e. BASILEOS LONDINI, may import: Since that Cities were ſometimes beſtowed by the Romans upon the Britains, as Camalodunum was upon Cunobelin; and ſome Cities upon Cogidunus.

Sueton. Caligul.

London no Britiſh City.

John Woodward, M.D.

And yet after all, let me ſubjoin what another learned Antiquarian affirms: That Geffrey of Monmouth cannot be credited, who wrote that London was a City in the Britiſh Times, a City compaſſed with Walls, and fortified with innumerable Towers; ſince the Britains in thoſe Days were Barbarous and Savage; and their Towns no other than Groves and Thickets, invironed only with an Hedge and a Ditch. Nor was there a Brick among them; nor at all, (as far as the Romans at their Deſcent here could obſerve) had they ever gone about to raiſe one Stone upon another.

Now a Word or two concerning the Buildings of the City.

Proclamations againſt New Buildings. E. How's Chron.

For Forefronts.

In Q. Elizabeth's Time were ſtrict Proclamations againſt Inmates, and Increaſe of New Buildings in the City; yet to ſmall Effect. In the 2. Reg. Jacob. I. An. 1605, Mar. 1. A Proclamation was iſſued forth, forbidding all Increaſe of New Building within the City, and one Mile thereof; and likewiſe commanding all Perſons henceforwards to build their Forefronts and Windows, either of Brick or Stone; as well for Decency, as by reaſon all great and well-grown Woods were much ſpent and waſted; ſo as Timber for Shipping waxed ſcarce. But this alſo had little Effect. When upon Octob. 10, 1607, Proclamation was made again to the ſame Purpoſe. And Octob. 16. ſome were cenſured in the Star-Chamber, for building contrary to the Tenor of the Proclamation. Again, by a Proclamation, An. 1614, all Commiſſioners were required to proceed with all ſtrictneſs againſt all Offenders in this ſort. From this time began the new Reformation of Building. The firſt Houſe of Note thus Built was an Houſe in the Strand belonging to Colonel Cecil: After that, an Houſe near Drapers-Hall: Next to that, a Goldſmith's Houſe in Cheapſide, over-againſt Sadlers-Hall: And a Leather-ſeller's Houſe in St. Paul's Church-Yard, near the North-gate; who was compelled thereunto, after he had ſet up his Houſe, being all of Timber.]

The Wall, by whom firſt built. Simeon of Durham.

IN few Years after, as Simeon of Durham (an ancient Writer) reporteth, Helen, the Mother of Conſtantine the Great, was the firſt that inwalled this City about the Year of Chriſt CCCVI. But however, thoſe Walls of Stone might be builded by the ſaid Helen, yet the Britains, I know, had no Skill of Building with Stone; as may appear by that which followeth about the Year of Chriſt CCCXCIX, when Arcadius and Honorius, the Sons of Theodoſius Magnus, governed the Empire, the one in the Eaſt, the other in the Weſt. For Honorius having received Britain, the City of Rome was invaded and deſtroyed by the Goths. After which Time the Romans left to rule in Britain, as being employed in Defence of their Territories nearer home. Whereupon the Britains, not able to defend themſelves againſt the Invaſions of their Enemies, were many Years together under the Oppreſſion of two moſt cruel Nations, the Scots and and Picts. And at the length were forced to ſend their Ambaſſadors with Letters and lamentable Supplications to Rome; requiring Aid and Succour from thence, upon Promiſe of their continual Fealty; ſo that the Romans would reſcue them out of the Hands of their Enemies. Hereupon the Romans ſent unto them a Legion, which coming into this Iſland, and encountering with the Enemies, overthrew a great Number of them, and drove the reſt out of the Frontiers of the Country; and ſo ſetting the Britains at Liberty, conſelled them to make a Wall, extending all along between the Two Seas; which might be of Force to keep out their evil Neighbours; and then returned home with great Triumph. But the Britains wanting Maſons, builded that Wall not of Stone, as they were adviſed, but made it of Turf; and that ſo ſlender, that it ſerved little or nothing at all for their Defence. And the Enemy perceiving that the Roman Legion was returned home, forthwith arrived out of their Boats, invaded the Borders, overcame the Country, (and as it were) bare down all that was before them.

The Britains make a Turf Wall againſt them; unſkilful of building with Stone.

The Britains ſend Ambaſſadors to Rome for Aid.

Whereupon Ambaſſadors were ſpeedily diſpatched to Rome, lamentably beſeeching that they would not ſuffer their miſerable Country to be utterly deſtroyed. Then again another Legion was ſent; which coming upon a ſudden, made a great Slaughter of the Enemy, and chaced him home even to his own Country. Theſe Romans, at their Departure, told the Britains plainly, that it was not for their Eaſe or Leiſure, to take upon them any more ſuch long and laborious Journeys for their Defence: And therefore bade them practice the Uſe of Armour and Weapons, and learn to withſtand their Enemies; whom nothing elſe did make ſo ſtrong, as their faint Hearts and Cowardice. And forſomuch as they thought that it would be no ſmall Help and Encouragement unto their Tributary Friends, whom they were now forced to forſake, they builded for them a Wall of hard Stone from the Weſt Sea to the Eaſt Sea, directly along by thoſe Cities, which were made here and there to keep out the Enemies, in the ſelfſame Place where Severus the Emperor had before caſt his Trench; the Britains alſo putting to their helping Hands, as Labourers. This Wall they built Eight Foot thick in Breadth, and Twelve Foot in Height, right as it were by a Line, from Eaſt to Weſt; as the Ruins thereof remaining in many Places till this Day do make appear.

The Romans leave Britain in the Year 434.

Which Work thus perfected, they [the Romans] give the People ſtrait Charge to look well to themſelves: They teach them to handle their Weapons, and they inſtruct them in Warlike Feats. And leſt by the Seaſide, Southwards, where their Ships lay at Harbour, the Enemy ſhould come on Land, they made up ſundry Bulwarks, each ſomewhat diſtant from the other; and ſo bade them farewel, as minding no more to return. This happened in the Days of the Emperor Theodoſius the younger, almoſt Five hundred Years after the firſt Arrival of the Romans here, about the Year after Chriſt's Incarnation CCCCXXXIV.

Their wick Lives.

The Britains after this, continuing a lingring and doubtful War with the Scots and Picts, made choice of Vortiger to be their King and Leader: which Man, as ſaith Malmsbury, was neither valorous of Courage, nor wiſe of Counſel, but wholly given over to the unlawful Luſts of his Fleſh. The People likewiſe, in ſhort time, being grown to ſome Quietneſs, gave themſelves to Gluttony and Drunkenneſs, Pride and Contention, Envy, and ſuch other Vices, caſting from them the Yoke of Chriſt. In the mean Seaſon a bitter Plague fell among them, conſuming in ſhort time ſuch a Multitude, that the Quick were not ſufficient to bury the Dead. And yet the Remnant remained ſo hardened in Sin, that neither the Death of their Friends, nor Fear of their own Danger, could cure the Mortality of their Souls. Whereupon a greater Stroke of Vengeance enſued upon the whole ſinful Nation. For being now again infeſted with their old Neighbours, the Scots and Picts, they conſult with their King Vortiger, and ſend for the Saxons.

Who ſhortly after arrived here in Britain. Where, ſaith Bede, they were received as Friends. But, as it proved, they minded to deſtroy the Country as Enemies. For after that they had driven out the Scots and Picts, they alſo drave the Britains, ſome over the Seas, ſome into the Weſt Mountains of Wales and Cornwal; and divided the Country into divers Kingdoms amongſt themſelves. Theſe Saxons were likewiſe (as the Britons were) ignorant of the Architecture, or Building with Stone, until the Year of Chriſt DCLXXX. For then it is affirmed, that Benet, Abbot of Wirral, Maſter to the Reverend Bede, firſt brought Maſons and Workmen in Stone into this Iſland among the Saxons. He, I ſay, brought hither Artificers of Stone-houſes, Painters and Glaziers: Arts before that Time unto the Saxons unknown: who before that Time uſed but Wooden Buildings.

Thus much muſt be ſaid for Walling, not only in reſpect of this City, but generally alſo of the firſt Practice of building Walls within the Realm. A Wall anciently along the Thames ſide, on the South.

Danes. In the Year MXVI. Edmund Ironſide reigning over the Weſt Saxons, Canute the Dane bringing his Navy into the Weſt Part of the Bridge by a Trench which he had cauſed to be cut, caſt a Trench about the City; and then attempted to have won it by Aſſault. But the Citizens repulſed him, and drove him from their Walls. Alſo in the Year MLII. Earl Godwin with his Navy ſailed up by the South End of the Bridge, along the Southern ſide of the River; and ſo aſſailed the Walls. And William Fitz-Stephen, writing in the Reign of King Henry II. of the Walls of this City, hath theſe Words, The Wall is high and great, well tower'd on the North ſide, with due Diſtances between the Towers. On the South ſide alſo the City was Walled and Towered, but the Fiſh-abounding River of Thames, with his Ebbing and Flowing, hath long ſince ſubverted them.

The Wall on the North.

By the North ſide, he meaneth from the River of Thames in the Eaſt, to the River of Thames in the Weſt. For ſo ſtretched the Wall in his [Fitz-Stephens] Time. And the City being far more in Length from Eaſt to Weſt, than in Breadth, from South to North, and alſo narrower at both Ends, than in the middle, is therefore compaſſed with the Wall on the Land-ſide in Form of a Bow, except denting in between Cripplegate and Alderſgate. But the Wall on the South ſide, along by the River of Thames, was ſtrait as the String of a Bow; and all furniſhed with Towers or Bulwarks (as we now term them) in due Diſtance every one from other, as witneſſeth our Author, [Fitz-Stephen,] and our ſelves may behold for the Lands ſide.

This may ſuffice for Proof of a Wall, and the Form thereof, and the ſame to have been of great Antiquity, as any other within this Realm.

The Walls, how maintained and repaired.

And now touching the Maintenance and Repairing of the ſaid Walls, I find, that in the Year MCCXV. the 6. of King John, the Barons entring the City by Ealdgate, firſt took Aſſurance of the Citizens, and then they brake into the Houſes of the Jews, and ſearched their Coffers, to fill their own Purſes. And after, with great Diligence, repaired the Walls and the Gates of the City with Stones taken from the Jews broken Houſes. In the Year MCCLVII. Henry III. cauſed the Walls of London, which were ſore decayed, and deſtitute of Towers [and Towrets] to be repaired in more ſeemly wiſe than before, at the common Charge of the City. Alſo in the Year MCCLXXXII. King Edward I. having granted ſome Years before to Robert Kilwarby, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Licence, for the enlarging of the Black Friars Church, to break and take down a Part of the Wall of the City from Ludgate to the River of Thames: He granted alſo to Henry Walleis, Maior, and the Citizens of London, the Favour to take, toward the making of the Wall, and Incloſure of the City, certain Cuſtoms, or Toll, as appeareth by his Grant. This Wall was then to be made from Ludgate, Weſt to Fleet Bridge, along behind the Houſes, and along by the Water of the Fleet, unto the River of Thames.

Moreover, in the Year MCCCX. Edward II. commanded the Citizens to make up the Wall already begun, and the Tower at the End of the ſame Wall, within the Water of Thames, near unto the Black Friars, &c. [And there is a Record 10. Edward II. Anno Dom. 1316. London. de certis Conſuetudinib. &c. de rebus venalibus ibid. capiend. in auxilium cujuſdam nove Turris muro Civitat. juxta manſum fratrum Predicatorum perficiend. i. e. Concerning certain Cuſtoms and Tolls to be taken in London of Things ſold there, for the Aid of finiſhing a certain New Tower on the City Wall, hard by the Manſion of the Friars Preachers.] It was alſo granted by King Richard II. in the Tenth of his Reign, that a Toll ſhould be taken of Wares ſold by Land or by Water, for Ten Years, towards the repairing of the Walls, and cleaning of the Ditch about London.

Several other Letters Patents of Kings were made for the repairing of theſe Walls and Ditches from time to time, as need required. What I have met with in Records, I will mention; and that Tax of Ten Years made by King Richard II. I ſhall ſet down at large. Theſe were in Decay in the Reigns of Edward the Firſt, Second, and Third, and Richard II. And for raiſing Contribution to do this Work (wherein ſo much of the Honour and Safety of the City, nay, of King and Kingdom, conſiſted) the Maior and Aldermen ſucceſſively received Mandates from the Kings, to pay particular Cuſtoms or Tolls, upon the Proviſions and Commodities that were brought in, to be ſold and bought. And this was called Murage, which none were exempted from, except the City of Wincheſter, (and perhaps ſome few other Cities and Towns) which by a Compoſition with the City of London, paid no Pontage, Murage and Pannage.

Such a Charter Edward I. granted about the Fourth of his Reign, Anno 1276. which I have read in the Records of the Chamber.

‘ Edwardus, &c. Edward, &c. To his welbeloved the Maior and Sheriffs, and the reſt of his Citizens of London, Greeting. Know ye, that for Aid of Repair of the Walls, and Clauſure of our City aforeſaid, from the aforeſaid Day to the End of Three Years next following, yee take, in the aforeſaid City, of vendible Things coming to the City, the underwritten Cuſtoms, viz. Of every Poize [or Weight] of Cheeſe, Butter, &c. to be ſold, 1 d. Of each Weight of Lead, 1 q. Of every Hundred of Wax to be ſold, 2 d. Of every Hundred of Almonds and Riges, 1 d. Of every Hundred of Grane, 12 d. Of every Hundred of Pepper and Ginger, Cetewal. Kanel. Frankinſence, Braſil, Quickſilver, Vermilion, Verdegreace, 2 d. Of every Hundred of Cummin, Allum, Zubar, Liquoriſh, Anniſeed, Cyromontani - - - - - - - - - 1 d. For every Hundred of Brimſtone, Arg. Roſin, Coperas, and Calamus, 1 d. Of every groſs Frail of Figs and Raiſins, 1 ob. And of every leſs Frail, 1 d. And ſo of a great Number of Commodities more, each their Cuſtoms. Moreover, of every Hogſhead of Beer going out of London to the Parts beyond Sea, 1 d. Of every Mill to grind Things to be ſold, 2 d. Of every Horſe to be ſold at the Price of 40 s. 1 d. Of every Bull and Cow, ob. &c.

And then the ſame King, in another Letter to the Maior, Sheriffs and Citizens, enjoyned them to proceed to the ſaid Repairs: Which ran to this Tenor.

The King's Letter to repair the Walls ubi ſupra.

Cum conceſſerimus, &c. ‘ Whereas we have granted you for Aid of the Work of the Walls of our City, and the Cloſure of the ſame, divers Cuſtoms of vendible Things, coming to the ſaid City, to be taken for a certain Time, We command you, that you cauſe to be finiſhed the Wall of the ſaid City, now begun near the Friars Preachers, and a certain good and comely Tower at the Head of the ſaid Wall within the Water of the Thames, &c.

Divers ſuch Letters were iſſued out in the Reign of the next King Edward II. as in his Firſt Year, Second, Sixth, Eighth, till the 12th; when by long taking of theſe Cuſtoms, there followed at length a great Inconvenience; which was, that Proviſions were more ſparingly brought to the City, for the Supply of Neceſſaries. So that in that Year Letters came forth from the King, for not taking Cuſtom of Things ſaleable any more, becauſe by that Occaſion, Victualia non adducuntur, in detrimentum Civitatis; as the Patent ran. But before this Year, theſe Kings, as well as others after them, granted Aids and Impoſitions upon ſeveral Commodities and Merchandizes brought into the City both by Land or Water, towards the Reparation of the City Walls, Forts, Ditches, and ſuch like.

Letters of K. Richard II. to the Maior, &c.

As for thoſe Letters of King Richard II. in the 10th of his Reign, which laid the like Cuſtom upon Goods, Merchandizes and Packs brought into London; and that to endure for Ten Years, for Reparation of the ſaid Walls and Ditches; it ran to this Tenor.

De Muragio pro Civit. London Pat. 10. R. 2. ps. 1. M. 31. in the Tower.

‘ Rex dilectis Majori & Aldermannis, &c. i. e. The King to his beloved the Maior and Aldermen, and the reſt of the Citizens of London, ſendeth Health. Know yee, That whereas as well the Walls, and other [Afforciamenta] Forts of the ſaid City, be old and weak, and for want of Repair, are fallen down in ſome Places: As alſo, the Ditches of the ſame City are exceedingly filled with Dirt, Dunghills, and other Filth, and with Graſs growing in the ſame, not only to the evident Danger of the ſaid City and Inhabitants thereof, (and chiefly at this preſent Time of War) but alſo to the manifeſt Diſgrace and Scandal of Us and the whole City, &c.” And then the King grants the ſaid Maior and Aldermen a Power, to endure for Ten Years, to take of all kind of Victuals and ſaleable Merchandizes brought to the City by Land or Water, coming within the Liberty, the Cuſtoms underwritten, viz. For every Hundred of Wax 4*d.* &c. and upon abundance of other Wares certain Duties were ſet and fixed.

Yet this Murage was not ſo preciſely to be applied for the Reparation of the Walls, but that upon occaſion the King would command ſome part of it to other Uſes: As once King Edward II. in his Sixth Year, appointed the Reparation of Newgate to be made good from thence. Thus in a Record in the Tower, 6. Edward II. Rafe S----, Keeper of Newgate, was appointed by the King to repair the Chamber and Encloſure [Clauſuram] of Newgate de Exitibus Muragii & Pannarii, i. e. out of the Iſſues of Murage and Pannage; and a Mandate was given to the Maior and Sheriffs for that Purpoſe. And in the ſame Record mention is made de ſiſtendo de Cathenis ex tranſverſo vicorum ibid extendend. i. e. Of ſtopping People that brought in Commodities, by Chains to be laid croſs the Streets there, till the ſaid Cuſtoms appointed were paid.]

In the Seventeenth of Edward IV. Ralph Joſcelire, Maior, cauſed part of the Wall about the City to be repaired, to wit, between Aldgate and Alderſgate. He cauſed alſo the Moorefield to be ſearched for Clay, and Brick thereof to be made, and burnt. He likewiſe cauſed Chalk to be brought out of Kent, and to be burnt into Lime in the ſame Moorefield, for the more Furtherance of the Work.

Brick and Lime made in Moorefields for Reparation of the Wall.

The Companies repair the decayed Wall.

Then the Skinners, to begin in the Eaſt, made that Part of the Wall betwixt Aldgate and Buries Marks, towards Biſhopſgate; as may appear by their Arms in Three Places fixed there. The Maior, with his Company of the Drapers, made all that Part betwixt Biſhopſgate and Alhallows Church in the ſame Wall; and from Alhallows toward the Poſtern, call'd Mooregate. A great Part of the ſame Wall was repaired by the Executors of Sir John Croſby, late Alderman; as may appear by his Arms ſtanding in Two Places there fixed. Other Companies repaired the reſt of the Wall to the Poſtern of Cripplegate. The Goldſmiths repaired from Cripplegate towards Alderſgate; and there the Work ceaſed.

A. M.

In a Record which I have ſeen, and affirmed alſo by John Rouſe, and after him, by Raphael Hollinſhed, I find thus written.

“ Anno MCCCCLXXVII. by the Diligence of Ralph Joſceline, Maior of London, the Wall about London was new made betwixt Aldgate and Creplegate. He cauſed the Moorefields to be ſearched for Clay, and Brick to be made and burnt there. He cauſed Chalk alſo to be brought out of Kent and in the ſame Moorefields to be burnt into Lime, only for the Furtherance of that Work. The Maior, with his Company of Drapers, made all that Part betwixt Biſhopſgate and Alhallows Church in the ſame Wall. Biſhopſgate its ſelf was new built by the Merchants Almains of the Stillyard. And from Alhallows Church in the Wall toward toward Mooregate, a great Part of the ſame was builded of the Goods, and by the Executors of Sir John Croſby, ſometime an Alderman, and Maior of London, as may appear by his Arms thereon fixed in Two Places.

Biſhopſgate new built, 1477.

“ The Company of Skinners made that Part of the Wall between Aldgate and Buries Marks, towards Biſhopſgate; as may appear by their Arms in Three Places fixed. The other Companies of the City made the other Deal of the Wall; which was a great Work to be done in One Year.

The Fabrick of the Wall about Biſhopſgate.

J. S.

Dr. John Woodward.

An ingenious Account of theſe ancient Walls of London, and the Manner and Matter of their Building, the Learned Dr. Woodward of Greſham College, Profeſſor of Phyſick there, hath given in Writing, occaſioned by ſome Digging near the Wall at Biſhopſgate for Foundations of certain new Houſes to be erected there in the Year 1707. On which Occaſion the Wall was broke up, and Part of the Materials applied to the raiſing of the new Building, which gave him Opportunity of obſerving the Fabrick and Compoſition of it. The Foundation of the Wall here lay Eight Foot beneath the preſent Surface; and from that up to almoſt Ten Foot in Height, it was compiled of Rag-Stones, with ſingle Layers of broad Tiles interpoſed, each Layer at Two Foot Diſtance. To this Height the Workmanſhip was after the Roman manner. And theſe were the Remains of the ancient Wall, ſuppoſed to be that built by Conſtantine the Great. In this it was very obſervable, that the Mortar was (as uſual in the Roman Works) ſo very firm and hard, that the Stone it ſelf as eaſily brake and gave way, as that.

Confer. Camd. Britann. in Middleſ. p. 312. and Burt. Comment. on Antonin. Itiner. p. 165.

Thickneſs of the Wall.

It was thus far from the Foundation upwards, Nine Foot in Thickneſs; and yet ſo vaſt a Strength and Bulk had not been able to ſecure it from being beat down, and near levelled with the Ground.

Roman Tiles in the Wall.

Thoſe broad Tiles mentioned above, were all of Roman Make. The Romans uſed commonly two ſorts of Tiles, viz. Tegulæ bipedales & ſeſquipedales, i. e. Two Foot Tiles, and Tiles a Foot and an half. Thoſe of this Wall were of the latter Sort. Each of them is in Engliſh Meaſure one Inch and $\frac{1}{10}$ in Thickneſs, Eleven Inches $\frac{6}{10}$ in Breadth, and Seventeen Inches $\frac{4}{10}$ in Length.

Repaired and raiſed higher.

The old Wall having been demoliſhed, as above, was afterwards repaired again, and carried up of the Thickneſs of the former underneath, to Eight or Nine Foot in Height; or if higher, there was no more of that Work now ſtanding. All this was apparently additional, and of a Make later than the other Part underneath. It is compiled chiefly of Rag-ſtone; only in the Sides were interpoſed a few Bricks uncertainly, and without any ſtated Method. On the outſide, the Stone was ſquared, and wrought into Layers of Five Inches in Thickneſs. Between theſe were alternately interpoſed two Courſe of Bricks, of the ſame Form with thoſe on the inſide. Theſe were very large, being of the Shape of the Modern; but Eleven Inches in Length, and Five in Breadth, and Two and a half in Thickneſs. There was not one of the abovementioned Tiles in all this Part; nor was the Mortar here near ſo hard as in that lower.

The preſent City Wall.

As the Fund and Ground within the City hath by Rubbiſh, and the Ruin of Houſes, been ſucceſſively raiſed and heightned every Age, it was requiſite the Wall without ſhould riſe likewiſe in Proportion; and by reaſon thereof, in Tract of Time, upon the before-mentioned additional Work, it was found needful to build the preſent City Wall. This is made of Brick, of the Statutable Size, and the Model now in uſe, and Topped Battelment-ways with Copings of Stone. It is Two Foot in Thickneſs, and Six in Height; and is without doubt the ſame that was built in the Year 1477. in the Reign of Edward IV. Biſhopſgate it ſelf was built two Years after, in the Form it ſtill retaineth. The Workmen lately employed there, ſunk conſiderably lower than the Foundations of this Gate; and by that means learned, they lay not ſo deep as thoſe of the old City Wall by four or five Foot. Thus far Dr. Woodward.

Circuit of the Wall from Eaſt to Weſt.

The Circuit of the Wall of London, on the Lands ſide, to wit, from the Tower of London in the Eaſt, unto Aldgate, is 82 Perches. From Aldgate to Biſhopſgate 86 Perches. From Biſhopſgate in the North to the Poſtern of Crepplegate, 162 Perches. From Creplegate to Ealderſgate, 75 Perches. From Eldrichgate [ or Ealderſgate ] to Newgate, 66 Perches. From Newgate in the Weſt to Ludgate, 42 Perches. In all 513 Perches of Aſſize. From Ludgate again to the Fleet Dike, Weſt about, 60 Perches. From Fleet-bridge, South to the River of Thames, about 70 Perches. And ſo the Total of theſe Perches amounteth to 643. every Perch conſiſting of Five Yards and an half. Which to yield 3536 Yards and an half, containing 10608 Foot, which make up two Engliſh Miles, and more by 608 Foot.

The Length of the Line from the Tower to FLEET Canal, taken along by the Thames ſide.

By the Line of the Wall on the North ſide, and Eaſt and Weſt Ends, and the Line of the Shore of the River of Thames, taken between the Tower Wall in the Eaſt, to Fleet Canal in the Weſt, is that Part of the Bounds of the City within the Walls. Now this Thames Line is in Length from Eaſt to Weſt 5940 Feet which is 360 Poles or Perches, which is a Mile, and 40 Poles. This added to the Circuit of the Wall which as aforeſaid, is two Miles wanting 10 Poles, makes in the whole 3 Miles and 30 Pole.

Extent of the City.

Of the quantity of Ground contained within the Walls of the City, betwixt it and the River of Thames.

The whole Circumference, as before noted, is 16095 Feet, or 3 Miles and 30 Poles. Now if this City did lye in an Orbicular or Circular Form, (which of all Figures is the moſt capacious) it would contain 525 Acres of Ground. But it is not of that Form, but more Oval, being narroweſt at the Ends; and at the broadeſt Place not of half the Length. So that no ſuch Quantity of Ground can be expected. For by the moſt Accurate Survey as hath been taken, the Superficial Content of the Ground within the Wall, doth amount unto not above 380 Acres. Such is the Difference between Regular and Irregular Figures of the ſame Circumference, as is well known to any Perſon but meanly converſant in the Menſuration of Geometrical Figures.]

CHAP. III.

Of the Old Town-Ditch without the Wall of the City. The Modern Improvement of Fleet-Ditch. Made convenient for Barges. Dreins, and Sewers. Late Encroachments upon the Walls and Ditch. A Survey taken thereof by Order of the City. The Freedom without the Walls. The Length of the Line of Separation.

The Town-Ditch. J. S.

FOR the rendring theſe Walls the ſtronger, and the more capable of Defence, round the Compaſs of them without, Earth was taken away to a great Depth and Breadth, and a Ditch made to contain much Water. Of which, Method requires us in the next Place to treat.]

The Ditch, which partly now remaineth, and compaſſed the Wall of the City, was begun to be made by the Londoners, in the Year 1211, and finiſhed 1213, the 15th of K. John. This Ditch being then made of 200 foot broad, cauſed no ſmall hindrance to the Canons of the Holy Trinity, whoſe Church ſtood near Ealdgate, for that the ſaid Ditch paſſed through their Ground from the Tower unto Biſhopſgate.

Lib. Dunſtable. Ditch about London 200 Foot broad. Lib. Trin.

The firſt Occaſion of the Ditch. J. S.

The firſt Occaſion of making a Ditch about the City ſeems to have been this: William Biſhop of Ely, Chancellor of England, in the Reign of King

Richard I. made a great Ditch round about the Tower, for the better Defence of it againſt John the King's Brother, the King being then out of the Realm. Then did the City alſo begin a Ditch to encompaſs and ſtrengthen their Walls [which happened between the Years 1190 and 1193.] So the Book Dunthorn. Yet the Regiſter of Bermondſey writes, that the Ditch was begun, Oct. 15. 1213, which was in the Reign of King John that ſucceeded to Richard. It ſeems the Citizens deſiſted from the Work of the Ditch for ſome time, till now, when they began again, and carried it on to its Perfection.]

Now turned into Gardens or Houſes.

This Ditch being originally made for the Defence of the City, was alſo a long time together carefully cleanſed and maintained, as need required; but now of late neglected, and forced either to a very narrow, and the ſame a filthy Channel; or altogether ſtopped up for Gardens planted, and Houſes builded thereon, even to the very Wall, and in many Places upon both Ditch and Wall Houſes are builded; to what danger of the City I leave to wiſer Conſideration; and can but wiſh that Reformation might be had.

Ditch of the City overflowed the Bank into the Tower-Ditch.

In the Year of Chriſt, 1354, 28. Ed. 3. the Ditch of this City flowing over the Bank into the Tower-ditch, the King commanded the ſaid Ditch of the City to be cleanſed, and ſo ordered, that the overflowing thereof ſhould not force any Filth into the Tower-ditch.

Cleanſed.

Anno 1379, John Philpot, Maior of London, cauſed this Ditch to be cleanſed, and every Houſhold to pay 5*d.* which was for a Days Work toward the Charges thereof. Richard 2. in the 10th of his Reign, granted a Toll to be taken of Wares ſold by Water or by Land for 10 Years, towards repairing of the Wall, and cleanſing the Ditch.

Thomas Fawconer, Maior, 1414, cauſed the Ditch to be cleanſed.

Ralph Joſeline, Maior, 1477, cauſed the whole Ditch to be caſt and cleanſed. And ſo from time to time it was cleanſed and otherwiſe reformed.Namely, in 1519, the 10th of Henry 8. for cleanſing and ſcowring the common Ditch,between Aeldgate, and the Poſtern next the Tower-ditch; the chief Ditcher had by the Day 7 d, the Second Ditcher 6 d, the other Ditchers 5 d. And every Vagabond (for ſo were they then termed) 1 d. the Day, Meat and Drink, at the Charges of the City.

Sum 95*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

In my remembrance alſo the ſame was cleanſed namely the Moore-ditch, when Sir William Hollies was Maior, in the Year 1540. And not long before from the Tower of London to Ealgate.

Plenty of good Fiſh in Town-Ditch.

It was again cleanſed in the Year 1549, Henry Amcotes being Maior, at the Charges of the Companies. And again 1569, the 11th of Queen Elizabeth, for cleanſing the ſame Ditch between Ealdgate and the Poſtern, and making a new Sewer and Wharf of Timber, from the Head of the Poſtern into the Town-ditch, 814 l. 15 s. 8 d. Before the which time the ſaid Ditch lay open, without either Wall or Pall, having therein great Store of very good Fiſh, of divers Sorts, as many Men yet living, who have taken and taſted them, can well witneſs. But now no ſuch Matter, the Charge of Cleanſing is ſpared, and great Profit made by letting out the Banks, with the Spoil of the whole Ditch.

I am not ignorant of two Fifteens granted by a Common Council in the Year 1595, for the Reformation of this Ditch, and that a ſmall Portion thereof, to wit, between Biſhopſgate and the Poſtern called Mooregate, was cleanſed, and made ſomewhat broader than it was before; but filling again very faſt, by reaſon of over-raiſing the Ground near adjoining, therefore never the better: And I will ſo leave it; for I cannot help it.

Ditches and Common-Sewers to be kept clean.

J. S.

As for other Ditches aud common Sewers of the City, Sir Leonard Halliday, Maior, An. 1606. laboured much for a River to be brought on the North of the City into it, for the cleanſing the Sewers and Ditches; for the better keeping London Wholſome, Sweet, and Clean. Sir John Watts, the next Maior, ſeconded this good Endeavour of Halliday. And one Nicholas Leate, a Worthy and Grave Citizen, was very painful, and induſtrious in the Furtherance of this Work, and the like thereunto.

And the City had in this Year 1606, well cleauſed their Ditches and common Sewers. And Floodgates were made in Holborn-ditch and Fleet-ditch.]

Fleet-ditch made convenient for Barges.

R. B.

Nothing of this Town-ditch remaineth at this Day, but that Part of it called Fleet-ditch, which of late Years, ſince the Conflagration of this City in MDCLXVI, by the Order of the Maior and Court of Aldermen, was cleaned, enlarged, and made deep enough for Barges to come up as far as Holborn-bridge by the Benefit of the Tides. The Sides were built of Free-Stone, with Ware-houſes on each Side, which run under the Street, deſigned to be made uſe of for laying in of Coals and ſuch like Commodities, which would have proved an Advantage to the City, by the Revenue ariſing thereby, but that Project did not take. This Ditch was Built and Made by Sir Thomas Fitch, Bricklayer, who contracted with the City for doing the ſame for a very conſiderable Sum of Money, and enriched himſelf thereby.]

Sir Thomas Fitch the Undertaker.

Meal-Market by Fleet-Ditch.

J. S.

Here on the Fleet-channel is appointed a Market for Meal for the uſe of the City. To this Meal-Market belongs alſo certain Tolls, Duties, and Profits, which is the Cities Benefit. And the Committee for letting the Cities Lands ſat in the Council-Chamber in Guildhall ſome part of October and November, Anno, 1705, for letting to Farm the ſaid Tolls and Duties, together with the Houſe fronting the ſaid Market.]

Sewers or Dreins made to carry the Filth.

R. B.

Encroachments.

At this Day there be no Ditches or Boggs in the City except the ſaid Fleet-ditch, but inſtead thereof large common Dreins and Sewers, made to carry away the Water from the Poſtern-Gate, between the two Tower-hills to Fleet-bridge, without Ludgate. And the Ditch being thus filled up, many of the City-Tenants, whoſe Ground buts upon the Wall on either Side, have made bold to treſpaſs upon the ſame Wall and Ditch by Building there; or incloſing for Yards; notwithſtanding 16 Foot on either Side the Wall is (or ſhould be) reſerved for the City, for their Workmen, or others, to enter, view, and repair the ſaid Wall. But theſe Encroachments are ſo many, that it is no eaſy Matter to find any Part of that Wall round the City, that is not thus encroached upon. This being of late taken into Conſideration by the Committee appointed for the letting of the City and Bridge-houſe Lands, and to inſpect the ſame, did order a Survey of all the City-Walls on both Sides, and of all Encroachments of what Kind ſoever, and by whom made. Which Survey was accordingly taken by Mr. Leybourn, and fairly Engroſſed in a Vellum-Book, and delivered in to the Magiſtrates in the Guildhall, where it remaineth; in which Book are the Names both of the City-Tenants occupying the ſame, aud the Number of Feet by them encroached upon the ſaid Wall or Ditch, or within 16 Foot on either Side, ſave that whoſoever takes a Leaſe of any of the City-Lands, that abut upon the Walls on either Side, ſhall pay a Rent anſwerable to the Improvement that the ſaid Encroachment ſhall be thought worth. Notwithſtanding theſe Encroachments, made by private Perſons for their particular Conveniencies, there

Mr. Leybourn, Surveyor.

A Survey of the Encroachments upon the Wall, made and delivered into the Guild hall.

there are many Places on both Sides which are of publick Uſe and Concern. As, Publick Buildings being Encroachments on the City-Ground.

1. At a Place between the Tower-Liberty and Aldgate, (antiently called Vine-Yard) are lately built a Row of Houſes with Stables and Haylofts adjoyning to them, for the Reception of the Carmen belonging to the City.

Vineyard.

2. There is a Church-Yard belonging to the Church of St. Buttolph without Biſhopſgate.

3. The Pariſh-Church, Church-Yard, and Parſonage-Houſe of St. Alhallows on the Wall.

4. There is lately Erected a moſt ſtately and magnificent Structure 540 Foot in Length, for an Hoſpital for Lunaticks, called New Bethlehem, inſtead of the Old Houſe for that Uſe, ſituated in a Street called Bethlem; of which more anon.

5. The Cities Store-Yard for the laying up of Timber, Stone, Gibbets, Pillories, Sledges, and ſuch like Things, for the Execution of Malefactors; and to receive ſuch Carts, Coaches, Horſes, &c. as have committed any Offence, or Abuſe within the City or Liberties.

6. The Lorimers-Company have built a Hall upon the ſaid Wall.

7. The Church-Yard belonging to the Pariſh of S. Alphage.

8. The Church-Yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Giles Cripplegate.

9. The Church-Yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Olave Silver-ſtreet.

10. The Church-Yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Botolphs-Alderſgate.

11. The Church-Yard belonging to Chriſt's-Hoſpital, and the Yard, where the Children recreate themſelves by Play; which to this Day is called the Town-Ditch..

12. The Preſs-Yard belonging to Newgate-Priſon.

13. The Garden and Library which belongs to the College of Phyſicians.

14. Juſtice-Hall, commonly called the Seſſions-Houſe, with the Garden behind it. And this is the preſent State of the Wall, and ancient Town-Ditch.

J. S.

Having thus compaſſed and viewed well the Walls, we ſhould proceed to give ſome Account of the Gates that are made through them, (which we ſhall do in due Place.) But firſt, as we have ſeen the Ditch without the Wall, ſo it may be proper to make our Obſervation of the Territories bordering thereupon; I mean that called the FREEDOM; and upon what Parts of the Suburbs in the County of Middleſex it abutts; and what Quantity of Ground is contained between the Wall and that Line about the Freedom, which ſeparates the City from the County.]

Of the Courſe of the Line of Separation.

R. B.

The City being thus encompaſſed with a Wall on the Eaſt, North, and Weſt Parts, and the River of Thames on the South-ſide, there is another Skirt of Ground without the Wall, and within the Liberty or Freedom of the ſaid City. And this Skirt of Ground is encompaſſed with an irregular Line, which ſeparates the Freedom from the County of Middleſex.

The ſeparate Line, which divides the Freedom from the County of Middleſex.

This Line begins at Temple-Bar, where it abuts Weſtwards upon the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, which is without the ſaid Temple-Bar or Gate. From Temple-Bar it extends it ſelf by many Turnings and Windings, through part of Shear-Lane, Bell-Yard, Chancery-Lane, by the Rolls-Liberty, &c. unto Holborn, almoſt againſt Grays-Inn-Lane, where there is a Bar, that is, two Poſts, with Rails, and a Chain, to caſt over the Paſſage, as Occaſion ſerveth, upon any Emergency, as keeping out an Enemy, or the like.

From Holborn-Bars, it paſſeth with many Turnings by Brook-ſtreet, Furnivall's-Inn, Leather-Lane, Hatton-Garden, Ely-Houſe, Field-Lane, Chick-Lane, to the Common-Sewer, where it returns Weſtwards to Cow-croſs, and ſo to Smithfield-Bars.

From Smithfield-Bars it alſo runs by ſeveral Windings between Long-Lane, and Charter-houſe-Lane, to Goſwell-ſtreet, and ſo up that Street Northwards to the Barrs.

From the Bars in Goſwell-ſtreet, where the Manor of Finsbury begins, it extendeth it ſelf by Windings croſs Golden-Lane, at the Poſts and Chain there ſet up, to the Poſts and Chain in White-croſs-ſtreet: and from thence to the Poſts and Chain in Grub-ſtreet and from thence on through Ropemaker's-Alley to the Poſts and Chain in the Highway from Moregate; and from thence by the North-ſide of the four Quarters of Moor-fields, all abutting upon Finsbury Manor, where it returns Northwards up to Norton-Folgate; and there meets with the Barrs in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet; and from thence Eaſtward into Spittle-fields, all abutting upon Norton-Folgate.

From Norton-Folgate it returns Southwards by the Spittle-fields, and then South-eaſt by Wentworth-ſtreet to the Bars in White-Chappel.

From White-Chappel-Bars it winds more Southerly by the Little-Minories and Goodmans-Fields. From whence it returns Weſtward to the Poſts and Chain in the Minories; and thence more Weſternly until it comes to London-Wall: where it abutts upon the Tower-Liberty, and there it ends. But all theſe Turnings and Windings of the Separation of the Freedom from the County are better expreſs'd in the ſeveral Maps by the Girt-Line thereof, to which I refer the Reader.

Of the Length of the Line of Separation, and of the Quantity of Ground encompaſſed by it, and the City-Wall.

The Length of the Line.

Although this Line in its ſeveral Turnings is of great Length, yet the Ground Encloſed between it and the Wall is but narrow, ſo that the Content in Acres will not be anſwerable to the Circumambulation of it.

The Length of the Line is 21370 Feet, which is about 4 Miles; and yet the Ground comprehended betwixt the Line of the City-Wall, and this Line of Separation, is but 300 Acres.

Now that what hath been ſaid concerning the City-Wall, and Line of the Thames, begirting the City, and of the Skirt-Line bounding the Freedom or Liberty, and ſeparating it from Middleſex, may be the better underſtood, I have drawn a ſmall Map, repreſenting to the Eye all that is delivered in this former Diſcourſe, which will give greater Satisfaction to the Reader, as a clearer Demonſtration than Words can expreſs.

For the Circumference and Quantity of Ground, contained in that Part of the City which lyeth on the South-ſide of the Thames, as Bridgward in the Borough of Southwark, and ſo much of the County, as is in the Juriſdiction of the Lord-Mayor of London, are here omitted reſerving it until we come to treat thereof by it ſelf.

An Explanation of the following ſmall Map of the City of London, within the Walls, and of the Liberty or Freedom thereof without the Walls, in ſuch Condition as it was, till the Year 1666, Sept. 2d.

Explanation of the Map.

In the Map, the Wall of the City is repreſented by a double Line, and marked at the Weſt End of it next the Thames with the Letter K, and round about the City at the ſeveral Gates therein with the Letters A B C D E F G, and to the Poſtern between the two Tower-hills with the Letter H.

The Line which ſeparates the Freedom of the City from the Suburbs in Middleſex, is marked round about with theſe Marks, * reſembling Stars.

The white Part, which hath only Streets, Lanes, Churches, and ſome remarkable Places, and Things deſcribed in it, is that Part which was conſumed by the dreadful Fire, Sept. 2d, 3d, 4th, Anno 1666, both within and without the Walls.

That Part both within, and without the Walls, which is but faintly ſhadowed, is that Part which eſcaped the Fire.

But foraſmuch as the Map is but ſmall, yet ſignificant enough for what it is intended, and becauſe the Names of ſuch Things as are contained in it, could not be expreſs'd in Words, therefore I have marked all Churches with Numerical Figures, as 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and the like. Other eminent Things, or Places, I have noted by Capital Letters, as A B C D E, and the like. And other Things or Places of leſſer moment, with ſmall Italick Letters, as a b c d e, &c, denoting what they ſignify by this following Table.]

Gates of the City, Four, Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South.

GATES in the Wall of this City of old Time were Four; to wit, Aldgate for the Eaſt; Alderſgate for the North; Ludgate for the Weſt; and the Bridge-gate, over the River of Thames for the South: But of later Times for the Eaſe of Citizens and Paſſengers, divers other Gates and Poſterns have been made, as ſhall be ſhewed.

Seven double Gates in the Wall of the City.

So in the Firſt Edition, omitted in the Later.

In the Reign of Henry the Second (ſaith Fitz-Stephen) there were ſeven double Gates in the Wall of this City: But he nameth them not. It may therefore be ſuppoſed, he meant for the Firſt the Gate next the Tower of London; [which then ſerved as a Poſtern, (and now ſo commonly called for Paſſengers out of the Eaſt. From thence through Towerſtreet, Eaſtcheap, and Candlewick-ſtreet, to Londonſtone, the middle Point of that Highway. Then through Budge-row, Watling-ſtreet; and leaving St. Paul's Church on the Right Hand to Ludgate, in the Weſt;] the next to be Aldgate; Biſhopſgate, Creplegate, Alderſgate, Ludgate; and [the Seventh] the Bridgegate over the Thames.

Other Gates Builded beſides.

Since the which Time hath been Builded Newgate, the Poſtern called Moregate, a Poſtern from Chriſt's Hoſpital towards St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital in Smithfield, &c. Now of every of theſe Gates, and Poſterns in the Wall, and alſo of certain Water-Gates on the River of Thames, ſeverally ſomewhat may, and ſhall be noted, as I find Authority, or reaſonable Conjecture to warrant me.

The Firſt Gate Eaſtward.

Poſtern by the Tower. So in the Firſt Edition: omitted in the Later.

The Firſt was the Poſtern-gate next unto the Tower of London, [which at the length fell down in the Year 1440, the 18th of Henry VIth, and was never Re-edified again of Stone, but an homely Cottage, with a narrow Paſſage, made of Timber, Lath and Loam, hath been in Place thereof ſet up, and ſo remaineth.] It ſheweth by that Part, which yet remaineth, to have been a fair and ſtrong Arched Gate, partly builded of hard Stone of Kent, and partly of Stone brought from Caen in Normandy, ſince the Conqueſt, and Foundation of the High Tower, and ſerved for Paſſengers on Foot out of the Eaſt, from thence through the City to Ludgate in the Weſt.

The Ruin of this Gate.

The Ruin and Overthrow of this Gate began, in the Year MCXC, the Second of Richard I. when William Longſhampe [or Long-champ,] Biſhop of Ely, and Chancellor of England, cauſed a Part of the City Wall; to wit, from the ſaid Gate toward the River of Thames to the White-Tower, to be broken down, for the enlarging of the ſaid Tower; which he then compaſſed far wide about with a Wall Embattelled; and is now the Outer-Wall of the Tower. He alſo cauſed a broad and deep Ditch to be made without the ſame Wall, intending to have derived the River of Thames, with her Tides, to have flowed about it, which would not be. But the Southſide of this Gate being then, by undermining at the Foundation looſed and greatly weakened; at length, to wit, after 200 Years and odd, the ſame fell down in the Year 1440 (as was mentioned before.)

Wallembattled about the Tower of London. Ditch made about the Tower. The Poſtern falls down:

Occaſioned by Walling and Ditching about the Tower.

J. S.

This was reckoned among the Faults or Follies of that Biſhop and Lord Chancellor, and procured him the Hatred of the Citizens. Of which Matter thus did our Hiſtorian of the Biſhops write: which he gathered from Records. Among ‘other his Follies, it is remembred, that he built the outer Wall about the Tower of London, and ſpent an infinite deal of Money in making a deep Ditch about the ſame, thinking he could have cauſed the River of Thames to go round about it. Thoſe and many other his Miſbehaviours, incited the People and Nobility wonderfully againſt him. Inſomuch as he feared greatly leſt ſome Sedition being raiſed, Force would be offered unto him.]

Never Rebuilded.

Cuſtos of th Poſtern.

This Poſtern-Gate was never ſince by the Citizens Re-edified, ſuch was their Negligence then, and hath bred ſome Trouble to their Succeſſors, ſince they ſuffered a weak and wooden Building to be there made, inhabited by Perſons of Lewd Lives; oftentimes by Inqueſt of Portſoken Ward preſented; but not reformed. Whereas in former Times the ſaid Poſtern was accounted of as other Gates of the City, and was appointed to Men of good Credit. Among other I have read, that in the 49 of Edward III. John Cobbe was admitted Cuſtos of the ſaid Poſtern, and all the Habitation thereof for Term of his Life, by William Walworth then Maior of London. [Anno 1374, being the firſt time of his Maioralty, for he was Lord-Maior again Anno 1380.] More, that John Credy, Eſq; in the 21ſt of Richard II. was admitted Cuſtos of the ſaid Poſtern and Appurtenances, by Richard Whittington, Maior, the Aldermen, and Commonalty, &c.

The Poſter Gate now ken down.

J. S.

Near the End of London-Wall, South, overagainſt the Tower, this Poſtern-Gate is now all taken down, and in the room thereof a few Poſts are ſet to keep off Carts and Coaches; there being only a narrow Paſſage left for Foot-paſſengers there.

The Poſtern pring.

Here juſt South, going down divers Stone Steps, is the excellent Poſtern Spring, with an Iron Bowl and Chain faſtened to catch the Water that runs from a ſmall Spout. Not only the ſaid Gate, but the Wall thereabouts is quite taken away for ſome Space, and ſome Houſes built in the Place. The Stones and Rubbiſh lye there which make a very great Heap. The Wall here was about 6 or 7 Foot in Breadth, and cemented together with irregular Pieces of Stone like a Rock.

An Arch made the Wall ereabouts for paſſing.

There is a Yard hard-by called George-Ally, built on each ſide with Dwelling Houſes, and is a a Paſſage to Tower-hill through the Wall, that was beat down ſince the Fire of London, remaining in the Faſhion of an Arch, through which Carts might paſs: But now alſo the Arch is demoliſhed, and all the Wall quite taken away. Here one may take a View of the Inſide, and of the Breadth of London-Wall: It appears like a natural Rock with the Stones ſo cemented into the Work, that nothing but the greateſt Violence can ſeparate them. On the Weſt-ſide, about 14 or 15 Foot high are ſeen ſeveral old Roman Bricks put into the Work, between the Stones.]

ALDGATE.

Aldgate.

The next Gate in the Eaſt is called Aeldgate, of the Antiquity or Age thereof. This is one and the firſt of the Four principal Gates, and alſo one of the Seven double Gates, mentioned by Fitz-ſtephen. It hath had two pair of Gates, though now but one, the Hooks of them both remain.

Alſo there hath been two Portcloſes. The one of them remained till the new building of the Gate. The other wanteth, and the Place of letting down was manifeſt. For Antiquity of the Gate, it appeareth by a Charter of King Edgar to the Knights of Knighton Guild, that in his Days the ſaid Port was called Ealdgate, as you may read in the Ward of Portſoken. Alſo Matilda the Queen, Wife to Henry the Firſt, [in the Eighth Year of his Reign] having founded the Priory of the Holy Trinity, within Aelgate, gave unto the ſame Church, to Norman the firſt Prior, and the Canons that devoutly ſerved God there-in, the Port of Aeldgate, and the Soke or Franchiſe thereunto belonging, with all Cuſtoms, as free as ſhe held the ſame, &c. In the which Charter ſhe nameth the Houſe Chriſt-Church, and reporteth Aelgate to be of her Demain.

at. Paris.

More, I read in the Year 1215, that in the Civil Wars between King John and his Barons, the Londoners aſſiſting the Barons Faction, who then beſieged Northampton, and after came to Bedford Caſtle, where they were well received by Williaw Beauchampe, and Captain of the ſame: Having then alſo ſecret Intelligence, that they might enter the City of London, if they would, they removed their Camp to Ware, from whence in the Night coming to London they entred Aeldgate, and placing Guardians or Keepers of the Gates, they diſpoſed of all Things in the City at their Pleaſure.

They ſpoiled the Fryars Houſes, and ſearched their Coffers; which being done, Robert Fitzwater, Jeffrey Magnavile, Earl of Eſſex, and the Earl of Gloceſter, chief Leaders of the Army, applyed all diligence to repair the Gates and Walls of this City, with the Stones taken from the Jews broken Houſes; namely, Aeldgate, being then moſt ruinous, (which had given them an eaſy Entry) they repaired, or rather newly builded, after the manner of the Normans, ſtrongly Arched, with Bulwarks of Stone brought from Cane in Normandy, and ſmall Brick, called Flanders Tile, was brought from thence, ſuch as hath been here uſed ſince the Conqueſt, and not before.

Lieutenant of the Tower aſſiſted the Citizens againſt the Rebels.

In the Year 1471, the 11th of Edward the IVth, Thomas the Baſtard Fawconbridge, having aſſembled a riotous Company of Shipmen and others in Eſſex and Kent, came to London with a great Navy of Ships near to the Tower; whereupon the Maior and Aldermen, by conſent of a Common-Council, fortified all along the Thames ſide, from Baynard's-Caſtle to the Tower, with Armed Men, Guns, and other Inſtruments of War, to reſiſt the Invaſion of the Mariners. Whereby the Thames, ſide was ſafely preſerved and kept by the Aldermen and other Citizens, that aſſembled thither in great Numbers. Whereupon the Rebels being denyed Paſſage thorough the City that way, ſet upon Aeldgate, Biſhopſgate, Creplegate, Alderſgate, London-Bridge, and along the River of Thames; ſhooting Arrows and Guns into the City, fired the Suburbs, and burned more than threeſcore Houſes. And further, on Sunday the Eleventh of May, Five Thouſand of them aſſaulting Aelgate, won the Bulwarks and entred the City; but the Portcloſe being let down, ſuch as had entred were ſlain; and Robert Baſſet, Alderman of Aeldgate Ward, with the Recorder, commanded in the Name of God to draw up the Portcloſe; which being done they iſſued out, and with ſharp Shot and fierce Fight, put their Enemies back ſo far as St. Buttolph's Church. By which time the Earl Rivers, and the Lieutenant of the Tower, was come with a freſh Company; which joyning together diſcomfited the Rebels, and put them to flight; whom the aforeſaid Robert Baſſet, with other Citizens, chaſed unto the Miles-end, and from thence, ſome to Popular, ſome to Stratford; ſlew many, and took many of them Priſoners. In the mean while, the Baſtard having aſſayed other Places upon the Water-ſide, and little prevailing, fled towards his Ships.

Baga Quo Warr. Lond. Pet. Le Nev. Nor.

Add concerning Aldgate, that near it antiently on the Wall was a Turret; whereon was placed an Hermitage; which in the Reign of Edward I. was preſented to the King's Judges at an Inquiſition in the Tower: Hermitagium ſitum eſt in Turretto muri Civitat. Lond. prope Algate: & edificatur 4 ped. extra Turretum muri predict. in via regia, being built Four Foot without the Turret in the King's Way.

The Lane from this Gate by the Wall ſtopt. Ibid.

From this Gate towards Biſhopſgate was a Paſſage or Lane, between the Wall and the Priory of the Holy Trinity, about 13 Foot Broad, which the Prior and Convent ſtopp'd up with a Wall of Earth, in the troubleſome Times of Henry III, who was angry with the City, and took away their Privileges. In the beginning of the Reign of his Son K. Edward it was preſented to the Judges Itinerants by the Citizens. And it was informed that ſo it had been ſtopt up for Seven Years, ad ex heredationem Reg. & leſionem Civitat. London, i. e. to the hurt of the City, and the diſinheriting of the King: for ſo they called it, when the King's High-way was encroached upon.]

Aldgate taken down.

R. B.

Thus much for Algate as it was and continued in thoſe Elder Days; but the new Building thereof remaineth, till I come to ſpeak of the Ward wherein the ſame Gate is ſituated.

Antient Roman Coins found there.

This Gate being very old and ruinous, began to be taken down, Anno 1606, and in the taking down of which; and ſearching the Foundation for the Erecting a new one, divers antient Pieces of Roman Coin were found amongſt the Rubbiſh, two of which Mr. Martin Bond (a worthy Citizen, and one of the Surveyor's of this Work) cauſed to be carved in Stone (according to their true Form and Figure) and fixed on either ſide of the Gates Arch without Eaſtward. The reſt of theſe Roman Coins were ſent for by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen to the Guildhall where they ſtill remain.

Began to be New Built.

Upon the 10th of April, 1607, the aforeſaid Mr. Bond laid the firſt Foundation Stone of this Gate Northwards. The Bottom of the Foundation of this Gate being 16 Foot Deep, and 8 Foot Broad. The Foundation thus laid, the Gate was ſubſtantially and famouſly finiſhed Anno 1609, in the Maioralty of Sir Humphrey Weld, Kt.

Ornaments about this Gate.

Ornaments on the Gate.

Upon the Top of the Gate Eaſtward ſtands a fair Golden-Sphere with a goodly Vane on it.

On the upper Battlements (as vigilant Centinels, and as it were kept waking by Fame's Golden Trumpet) are placed the Figures of two antient Soldiers, each holding a Stone Ball in his Hand, as denying the Entrance of any bold Enemies, ſuch as are not Friends to the City.

Beneath in a large Square ſtands the imaginary Figures of King James the Firſt in gilt Armor. At whoſe Feet on either ſide lyeth a Golden-Lyon, and a Chained Unicorn, both Couchant; the Firſt the Supporter for England, and the Second that for Scotland. Their Couching is an Emblem of the Union of the two Kingdoms. As alſo, it denotes their Awe and Humility in the Preſence of ſo great a Perſon.

The Figure of Fortune;

Then on the Weſt-ſide of the Gate ſtands higheſt of all, the Figure of Fortune curiouſly Carved and Gilt with Gold, ſtanding upon a Maund or Globe, with a proſperous Sail ſpreading over her Head, and looking gracefully upon the City.

Beneath this Figure in a large Square are placed the King's-Arms richly Carved, with the Motto

DIEU ET MON DROIT.

And a little below

VIVAT REX.

And of Peace and Charity.

Somewhat lower, and to grace each Side of the Gate, are placed two Female Perſons, the one the Emblem of Peace with a Dove upon one of her Hands, and a Gilded Wreath or Garland in the other. And on the other, or North-ſide ſtandeth the Figure of Charity, with a Child at her Breaſt, and another in her Hand: Implying (as may be conceited) that where Peace and Love and Charity do proſper, and are truly embraced, that City ſhall be for ever bleſſed.

Over the Arch of the Gate is this Inſcription fairly Engraven:

Senatus Populuſque Londinenſis.
Fecit, 1609.

And underneath,

HUMFREY WELD, Maior.

Thus much for the Deſcription of the Outſide of the Gate.

This Gate is for the Lord-Maior's Carver.

On the North-ſide of the Arch is a Poſtern for Foot Paſſengers: And the Rooms over this Gate are the Dwelling Houſe of one of the Lord-Maior's Carvers; who is alſo one of the Sergeants of the Chamber for the time being.

BISHOPSGATE.

Biſhopſgate.

The third and next Gate toward the North is called Biſhopſgate: for that (as it may be ſuppoſed) the ſame was firſt builded by ſome Biſhop of London; though now the Certainty thereof is unknown, when and by whom. And in Uncertainties one may have leave to Conjecture.

Took its Name perhaps from Biſhop Erkenwald, or Biſhop William: both Biſhops of London.

J. S.

Perhaps Erkenwald, Son of King Offa, and Biſhop of London, was the firſt Builder of it, who built much upon charitable Accounts. Our Hiſtories mention two Religious Houſes by him Founded, one at Chertſey in Surry, and another at Berking in Eſſex, where he Deceaſed about 685. And by reaſon of his Munificence and good Deſerts to the Londoners, he was very dear to them; and being Canonized, his Shrine at Pauls was much honoured. And there being the Effigies of two Biſhops upon this Gate, as Erkenwald might be the Founder of it, ſo I would give the next Honour, (that is, for the Reparation of it) to Biſhop William the Norman, that was Biſhop of London in William the Conqueror's Time. Which Biſhop was a great Benefactor to the City, partly by procuring from that King all their Privileges as amply as they were enjoyed before-time, and partly by other good Deeds. Inſomuch that the Citizens of later Times, in Gratitude to his Memory, cauſed a Latin Epitaph, together with a Copy of Verſes, to be ſet upon the Place in St. Pauls where he was buried. After all, the Founder is uncertain.]

But true it is, that this Gate was firſt builded for the Eaſe of Paſſengers toward the Eaſt, and by North; as into Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeſhire, &c. The Travellers into which Parts (before the Building of this Gate) were forced (paſſing out at Aeldgate) to go Eaſt till they came unto the Miles-End, and then turned on the Left Hand to Blethenhall-Green, [now called Bednal-Green,] to Cambridge-heath, and ſo North, or Eaſt, and by North, as their Journies lay. If they took not this Way by the Eaſt out at Aelgate, they muſt then take their Way by the North out at Alderſgate through Alderſgate-ſtreet, and Goſwell-ſtreet, towards Iſeldon: and by a Croſs of Stone on their Right Hand, ſet up for a Mark by the North-end of Golden-Lane, to turn Eaſtward through a long Street, unto this Day called Alder-ſtreet, [or Oldſtreet], to another Croſs ſtanding, where now a Smith's Forge is placed by Sewers-ditch-Church, [or Shoreditch-Church] and then to turn again North towards Totenham, Enfield, Waltham, Ware, &c.

A further Way winding about.

Notes concerning this Gate.

The eldeſt Note that I read of this Biſhopſgate, is, that William Blund, one of the Sheriffs of London, in the Year 1210, ſold to Serle Mercer, and William Almaine, Procurators or Wardens of London-Bridge, all his Land, with the Garden, in the Pariſh of St. Buttolph without Biſhopſgate, between the Land of Richard Caſiarin, towards the North, and the Land of Robert Criſpie towards the South, and the High-way called Bearwards-lane on the Eaſt, &c.

Charter.

Next, I read in a Charter, Dated in the Year 1235, that Walter Brune, Citizen of London, and Roſia his Wife, having Founded the Priory or new Hoſpital of our bleſſed Lady, ſince called S. Mary Spittle, without Biſhopſgate, confirmed the ſame to the Honour of God and our Bleſſed Lady, for Canons regular, the 19th of Henry 3.

Reparations of Biſhopſgat by Merchan of the Han

And now for repairing the ſame: I find, that Henry the 3d confirmed to the Merchants of the Haunſe, that had a Houſe in the City called Guildhalla Theutonicorum, certain Liberties and Privileges: Edward the Firſt alſo confirmed the ſame; in the Tenth Year of whoſe Reign it was found, that the ſaid Merchants ought of right to repair the ſaid Gate called Biſhopſgate.

Preſented fo Neglect.

Baga Quo Warrant. Lon

[About the beginning of which King's Reign they were preſented by ſome of the Wards to the Judges Itinerants ſitting at the Tower for their Neglect thereof in theſe Words, Quod Teutonici non ſuſtentent Biſhopſgate, quam bene ſuſtentare deberent; pro qua liberi ſunt in Civitate, ad dampnum Civitat. i. e. That the Dutch do not ſuſtain Biſhopſgate ſo well as they ought to do; (for which they are free in the City) to the Cities damage.]

Biſhopſgate repaired by the Merchants of the Haunſe.

Whereupon Gerard Marbod, Alderman of the Haunſe, and other then remaining in the City of London, for themſelves and all others, Merchants of the ſaid Haunſe, granted 210 Marks Sterling to the Maior and Citizens; and covenanted, that they and their Succeſſors ſhould (from time to time) repair the ſame Gate. This Gate was again beautifully Builded in the Year 1479, in the Reign of Edward the Fourth, by the ſaid Haunſe Merchants.

Biſhopſgate new Builded.

Biſhopſgate provided to have been new Builded.

Moreover, in the Year 1551, theſe Haunſe Merchants, having prepared Stone for that Purpoſe, cauſed a new Gate to be framed, there to have been ſet up: But then their Liberties, through Suit of our Engliſh Merchants were ſeized into the King's Hand, and ſo that Work was ſtayed, and the old Gate yet remaineth.

The Stone-Figures on this Gate, who they repreſent.

J. S.

Over the Gate-Way on the South and Northſides of this Gate are Figures in Stone (mentioned before) of ſome Antiquity, and (if I miſtake not) of the greateſt Antiquity of any now remaining in London; being probably as old as the Gate it ſelf, that is 240 Years and more. The Stone Figure of a Biſhop on the South-ſide which ſtandeth high, hath a long Beard, Eyes ſunk, and an old mortified Face. The Mitre on his Head, but both his Hands beat or worn off by Time. On the North-ſide of the Gate over the Cart Paſſage is another Figure in Stone of a larger Size, ſtanding ſomewhat lower than the other; hath his Mitre on, cloathed in his Pontificalibus; his Left Hand with the Crozier broken off, the Right Hand bleſſing with the two Fore Fingers: His Face ſmooth. Both theſe I take to be Biſhops of London, (as I hinted before) and this laſt named, to be the Courtly Biſhop William the Norman, and the Conqueror's Favourite; the other to be Erkenwald, that lived near 400 Years before Biſhop William, and was, for his Mortification and good Works, Sainted. Whoſe Shrine extraordinary rich, and ſet out with precious Stones, was preſerved in former Times at St. Pauls. Beſide the Biſhop on that Part of the Gate looking Northward, on each ſide of him, but advanced ſomewhat higher, ſtand two ancient Stone Images; on his Left Hand a Saxon King; very probably K. Alfred, who, after the Deſtruction of the City by Fire, and other Calamities of the People brought upon them by the Danes, reſtored and honourably repaired it. The other is the Repreſentation of ſome great Nobleman, and ſeems to be Aeldred, Earl of Mercia, Son in Law to the ſaid K. Alfred, to whom he committed the Cuſtody thereof.

The Rooms over this Gate are allotted for one of the Lord Maior's Carvers; who is alſo one of the Serjeants of the Chamber for the Time being.]

MOREGATE.

Poſtern called Moregate.

Touching the next Poſtern, called Mooregate, I find, that Thomas Falconer, Maior about the Year 1415, the third of Henry the Vth, cauſed the Wall of the City to be broken near unto Coleman-ſtreet; and there Builded a Poſtern now called Mooregate, upon the Mooreſide, where was never Gate before. This Gate he made for eaſe of the Citizens, that way to paſs upon Cawſeys into the Field for their Recreation; for the ſame Field was (at that time) a Mariſh. This Poſtern was, Re-edified by William Hampton, Fiſhmorger, Maior in the Year 1472. In the Year alſo 1511, the Third of Henry 8. Roger Achely Maior, cauſed Dikes and Bridges to be made, and the Ground to be levelled, and made more commodious for Paſſage. Since which time the ſame hath been heightned ſo much, that the Dikes and Bridges are covered; and it ſeemeth to me that if it be made Level with the Battlements of the City Wall, yet will it be little the dryer, ſuch is the Mooriſh Nature of that Ground. Thus it was in Mr. Stow's Time; but we ſee what an Alteration Time, Pains, and Expence have made for the better. For theſe Fields, before an unhealthful Place, in Sir Leonard Halliday's Maioralty, were turned into pleaſant Walks, ſet with Trees for Shade and Ornament; compaſſed with Brick Walls, made convenient with Vaults under Ground for Conveyance of the Water, which ſtood the City in 5000*l.* or thereabouts.]

The Field a meer Mariſh Ground.

But now turned into pleaſant Fields.

A new Stone Gate made.

R. B.

This Gate being very old, was in the Year 1672 begun to be pulled down, and a new one of Stone was Erected, having a lofty Arch, for that then the City intended to have had a Hay Market in Little More-fields, which Deſign did not take Effect. However the Gate is Built with Poſterns on each Side of the Arch for Foot Paſſengers, this being a great Thoroughfare: The Houſe was the Reſidence of a City Officer, but of late it was made uſe of by a Coffee-Man.

A Poſtern made into Morefields.

Between Biſhopſgate and Mooregate, about the Year 1636, the City Wall, overagainſt Wincheſter-ſtreet, was broken down, and a Poſtern, or Paſſage, there made for Foot People, and a Gate to it.

Another Poſtern made.

Alſo in the Year 1655, another Place in the Wall was broken down overagainſt the North End of Aldermanbury; and another Poſtern made with double Gates for a Paſſage into Foreſtreet.

And ſoon after, another near the North End of Baſſinſhawſtreet, leading into the aforeſaid Foreſtreet, formerly called the Poſtern leading into More-fields.]

CREPLEGATE.

Poſtern of Creplegate.

Abba Floriacenſis. Burchard.

The next is the Poſtern of Creplegate, ſo called long before the Conqueſt. For I read in the Hiſtory of Edmund, King of the Eaſt Angles, written by Abbas Floriacenſis, and by Burchard, ſometime Secretary to Offa, King of Mercia; (but ſince then, by John Lidgate, Monk of Bury,) that in the Year 1010, the Danes ſpoiling the Kingdom of the Eaſt Angles, Alwyne, Biſhop of Helmeham, cauſed the Body of King Edmund the Martyr to be brought from Bedriſworth, (now called Bury S. Edmunds) through the Kingdom of Eaſt Saxons, and ſo to London, in at Creplegate. A Place, ſaith mine Author, ſo called of Cripples begging there. At which Gate, (it was ſaid) the Body entring in, Miracles were wrought, and ſome of the Lame to go upright, praiſing God. The Body of King Edmund reſted for the ſpace of Three Years in the Pariſh Church of S. Gregory, near unto the Cathedral Church of S. Paul. Moreover, the Charter of William the Conqueror, confirming the Foundation of the College in London, called S. Martin the Great, hath theſe Words: I do give and graunt to the ſame Church, and Canons ſerving GOD therein, all the Lands, and the Moore without the Poſtern, which is called Creplegate, on either Part of the Poſtern. Beſides this, Alfune builded the Pariſh Church of S. Giles, nigh a Gate of the City, called Porta contractorum, or Cripleſgate, about the Year 1090.

Martin le grand. Liber S. Bartilmew.

Creplegate a Priſon for Treſpaſſers.

This Poſtern was ſometime a Priſon, whereunto ſuch Citizens and others, as were Arreſted for Debt, or common Treſpaſſes, were committed, as they be now to the Compters. Which Thing appeareth by a Writ of Edward the Firſt in theſe Words: Rex Vic. London ſalutem. Ex gravi querela B. capt. & detent. in priſona noſtra de Cripleſgate pro x.l. quas coram Radulpho de Sandwico, tunc Cuſtod. Civitatis noſtræ London, & I. de Blackwell Civis recognit. debit. &c.

Record.

Creplegate new Builded.

This Gate was new Builded by the Brewers of London, in the Year 1244, as ſaith Fabians Manuſcript.

Edmund Shaw, Goldſmith, Maior in the Year One Thouſand, Four Hundred Eighty Three, at his Deceaſe, appointed by his Teſtament, his Executors, with the Coſt of Four Hundred Marks, and the Stuff of the old Gate, called Crippleſgate, to Build the ſame Gate anew. Which was performed and done in the Year One Thouſand Four Hundred Ninety One.

ALDERSGATE.

Alderſgate.

In a Book called, Beware the Cat.

The next is Ældreſgate or Alderſgate: ſo called, not of Aldrich, or of Elders, that is to ſay, ancient Men, Builders thereof; nor of Eldern Trees, growing there more abundantly than in other Places, as ſome have Fabuled: But for the very Antiquity of the Gate it ſelf, [ſignifying the Elder or Older Gate], as being one of the firſt Four Gates of the City, and ſerving for the Northern Parts, as Aldgate for the Eaſt. Which two Gates being both old Gates, are for difference ſake called, the one Aldgate, and the other Alderſgate.

Fourth Gate.

A Well of great Depth at Alderſgate.

Day the Printer.

This is the Fourth Principal Gate, and hath at ſundry times been increaſed with Buildings; namely, on the Southſide, or Innerſide, a great Frame of Timber hath been added and ſet up, containing divers large Rooms and Lodgings. Alſo on the Eaſt Side is the Addition of one great Building of Timber, with one large Floor, paved with Stone or Tile, and a Well therein, curbed with Stone, of a great Depth, and riſing into the ſaid Room, two Stories high from the Ground; which Well is the only peculiar Note belonging to that Gate; for I have not ſeen the like in all this City, to be raiſed ſo high. John Day, Stationer, a late famous Printer of many good Books, in our time dwelled in this Gate, and builded much upon the Wall of the City, towards the Pariſh Church of St. Anne.

This Gate Rebuilt, in K. James I. his Time.

1000*l.* given towards the New Building of Alderſgate.

This Gate being very Old, Ruinous, and in Danger of falling, the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Common Council, Ordered to have it taken down, and Re-built in a beautiful manner. Towards the New Building whereof, Mr. William Parker, Citizen, and Merchant Taylor, gave 1000*l.* the Money to be paid by his Executor into the Chamber of London, and to be diſtributed according to ſuch Directions as were in his Will expreſſed, viz. 200*l.* at the taking down of the firſt Tile, which was upon the laſt Day of March, 1617; other 200*l.* at the laying of the firſt Stone, which was laid by the Right Worſhipful Sir William Craven, Knt. and Alderman, on Monday the 26th Day of May following; other 200*l.* when the New Building ſhould be one Yard high above the Ground; and other 200*l.* when the New Building ſhould be Arched over the Gate; and the laſt 200*l.* when the Work ſhould be compleatly finiſhed.

Mr. Fox, Supervisor of the Works.

Mr. Richard Fox, Citizen and Clothworker, (a moſt painful, and induſtrious Perſon) having the Direction, Ordering, and Overſight of the ſaid Work.

The Ornaments on the Outſide of this Gate.

On the North, in a large Square over the Arch, is the Figure of K. James the Firſt on Horſeback, in the Poſture as he came into England, (whoſe Entrance was at that Gate) And over that the Arms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, Quartered. On the other Side are two Effigies, viz. on the Eaſt ſide the Prophet Jeremiah, with this Text, Chap. 17. ver. 25. Then ſhall enter into the Gates of this City, Kings and Princes, ſitting upon the Throne of David, riding in Chariots, and on Horſes, they and their Princes, the Men of Judah, and the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem; and this City ſhall remain for ever.

And on the Weſtſide of him, the Figure of the Prophet Samuel, with this Text, 1 Samuel, Chap. 12. Ver. 1. And Samuel ſaid unto all Iſrael, Behold, I have hearkened unto your Voice, in all that you ſaid unto me, and have made a King over you.

On the Southſide is the Effigies of K. James the Firſt, ſitting in his Chair of State in his Royal Robes.

This Gate received great Damage by the general Fire, but was Repaired and Beautified at the ſole Charges of this City, in the Year 1670, Sir Samuel Stirling, Knt. being Mayor.

The Rooms over this Gate and Poſtern for Foot-People, is ſet apart for the Dwelling of the Common Cryer of this City for the Time being.]

The Poſterngate out of CHRIST's Hoſpital.

A Poſtern out of Chriſt's-Hoſpital.

Then there is alſo a Poſterngate made out of the Wall, on the Northſide of the late diſſolved Cloiſter of Fryers Minors, commonly of their Habit called Gray Friers, now Chriſt's-Church and Hoſpital.

This Poſtern was made in the Sixth Year of Edward the Sixth, to paſs from the ſaid Hoſpital of Chriſt's-Church, unto the Hoſpital of Saint Bartholomew in Smithfield: And Licenſe was given to the Lord Maior and Aldermen, to break down ſo much of the Cities Wall as ſhould ſuffice to make the ſame Paſſage, by Vertue of an Act of Common Council, made 1. Auguſti, Anno 6. E. 6. in the Maioralty of Sir Richard Dobbes, Knight.

NEWGATE.

Newgate.

Fifth Gate.

St. Paul's Church in London New Builded.

THE next Gate on the Weſt and by North, is termed Newgate, as latelier builded than the reſt, and is the Fifth principal Gate. This Gate was firſt Erected about the Reign of Henry the Firſt, or of King Stephen, upon this Occaſion. The Cathedral Church of St. Paul, being burnt about the Year 1086, in the Reign of William the Conqueror, Mauritius, then Biſhop of London, Repaired not the Old Church, as ſome have ſuppoſed, but began the Foundation of a new Work, ſuch as Men then judged would never have been performed, it was to them ſo wonderful for Heighth, Length, and Breadth; as alſo in reſpect it was raiſed upon Arches or Vaults, &c. a kind of Workmanſhip brought in by the Normans, and never known to the Artificers of this Land before that time, &c. After Mauritius, Richard Beaumore did wonderfully advance the Work of the ſaid Church, purchaſing the large Streets and Lanes round about, wherein were wont to dwell many Lay-People, which Grounds he began to compaſs about with a ſtrong Wall of Stone and Gates.

By means of this Increaſe of the Church Territory, but more by incloſing of Ground for ſo large a Cœmitery, or Churchyard; the high and large Street, ſtretching from Aldgate in the Eaſt to Ludgate in the Weſt, was in this Place ſo croſſed and ſtopped up, that the Carriage through the City Weſtward, was forced to paſs without the ſaid Churchyard Wall on the Northſide, through Paternoſterrow, and then South down Ave Marie-Lane: and again Weſt through Bowyer-row to Ludgate; or elſe out of Cheap or Watbelingſtreet to turn South, through the OldChange, then Weſt through Carter Lane, again North up Creed Lane, and and then Weſt to Ludgate. Which Paſſage, by reaſon of ſo often turning, was very cumberſome and dangerous, both for Horſe and Man. For Remedy whereof, a new Gate was made, and ſo called, by which Men and Cattle, with all manner of Carriages, might paſs more directly (as before) from Aldgate through Weſt Cheap by S. Pauls on the North ſide, through S. Nicholas Shambles and Newgate Market to Newgate. And from thence to any Part Weſtward over Holborn-bridge, or turning without the Gate into Smithfield, and through Iſeldon, to any Part North and by Weſt.

Newgate firſt Builded, and the Cauſe why.

Newgate a Goal or Priſon-houſe.

Cloſe Roll.

The King repaired it.

This Gate hath of long time been a Goal or Priſon for Felons and Treſpaſſers, as appeareth by Records in the Reign of King John, and of other Kings; amongſt the which I find one teſtifying, that in the Year 1218, the Third of King Henry the Third, the King writeth unto the Sheriffs of London, commanding them to repair the Goal of Newgate for the ſafe keeping of his Priſoners, promiſing that the Charges laid out ſhould be allowed unto them upon their Accompt in the Exchequer.

Jews of Norwich.

Moreover in the Year 1241, the Jews of Norwich were hanged for circumciſing a Chriſtian Child; their Houſe called the Thor was pulled down and deſtroyed. Aaron the Son of Abraham, a Jew at London, and the other Jews were conſtrained to pay Twenty Thouſand Marks, at two Terms in the Year, or elſe to be kept perpetual Priſoners in Newgate of London, and in other Priſons.

An. 1255, King Henry the Third lodging in the Tower of London, upon diſpleaſure conceived towards the City of London, for the Eſcape of John Offrem, a Priſoner, (being a Clark convict,) out of Newgate, which had killed a Prior that was of Alliance to the King, as Couſin to the Queen, ſent for the Maior and Sheriffs to come before him to anſwer the Matter. The Mayor laid the Fault from him to the Sheriffs, foraſmuch as to them belonged the keeping of all Priſoners within the City. And ſo the Maior returned home, but the Sheriffs remained there Priſoners by the ſpace of a Month and more; and yet they excuſed themſelves, in that the Fault chiefly reſted in the Biſhops Officers; for whereas the Priſoner was under Cuſtody, they (at his Requeſt) had granted Licenſe to impriſon the Offender within the Goal of Newgate; but ſo as the Biſhops Officers were charged to ſee him ſafely kept. The King, notwithſtanding all this, demanded of the City 3000 Marks for a Fine.

The Sheriffs of London Priſoners in the Tower, for Eſcape of a Priſoner out of Newgate.

The King's Chancellor Priſoner in Newgate.

In the Year 1326. Robert Baldocke, the King's Chancellor, was put in Newgate, the Third of Edward the 3d.

In the Year 1237, Sir John Poulteney gave Four Marks by the Year to the Relief of Priſoners in Newgate.

In the Year 1385, William Walworth gave ſomewhat to relieve the Priſoners in Newgate; ſo have many others ſince.

In the Year 1414, the Goalers of Newgate and Ludgate Dyed, and Priſoners in Newgate to the Number of 64.

In the Year, 1418, the Parſon of Wrotham in Kent was impriſoned in Newgate.

Newgate new Builded.

The Year 1422, the Firſt of Henry 6. Licenſe was granted to John Coventre, Jenken Carpenter, and William Grove, Executors to Richard Whittington, to Re-edify the Goal of Newgate, which they did with his Goods.

Water conveyed to Newgate and Ludgate.

Thomas Knowles, Grocer, ſometimes Maior of London, by Licenſe of Reynold, Prior of S. Bartholomews in Smithfield, and alſo of John Wakering, Maſter of the Hoſpital of S. Bartholomew, and his Brethren, conveyed the Waſt of Water, at the Ciſtern near unto the common Fountain, and Chapel of S. Nicholas, (ſituate by the ſaid Hoſpital) to the Goals of Newgate and Ludgate, for the Relief of the Priſoners.

Priſoners of Ludgate removed to Newgate.

Tueſday next after Palm-Sunday, 1431, all the Priſoners of Ludgate were conveyed into Newgate, by Walter Chartſey, and Robert Large, Sheriffs of London. And on the 13th of April, the ſame Sheriffs (through the falſe Suggeſtion of John Kingeſell, Goaler of Newgate) did fetch from thence 18 Perſons, Freemen, and theſe were led to the Compters Pinioned, as if they had been Felons. But on the 16th of June, Ludgate was again appointed for Freemen, Priſoners for Debt, and the ſame Day the ſaid Freemen entred by Ordinance of the Maior, Aldermen and Commons; and by them Henry Deane, Taylor, was made Keeper of Ludgate.

L. Egremond, and others, brake Priſon out of Newgate.

In the Year 1457, a great Fray was in the North Country, between Sir Thomas Percy, Lord Egremond, and the Earl of Salisbury's Sons, whereby many were maimed and ſlain; but in the End the Lord Egremond being taken, was by the King's Council found in great Default, and therefore condemned in great Sums of Money, to be payed to the Earl of Salisbury, and in the mean time committed to Newgate. Not long after, Sir Thomas Percy, Lord Egremond, and Sir Richard Percie his Brother being in Newgate, brake out of Priſon by Night, and went to the King; the other Priſoners took the Leads of the Gate, and defended it a long while againſt the Sheriffs and all their Officers, inſomuch that they were forced to call more Aid of the Citizens, whereby at laſt they ſubdued them, and laid them in Irons.

Foundlings.

J. S.

Among the Criminals that this Priſon uſed to be filled with, were formerly abundance of naughty Women that had murthered their Baſtard Children, either by throwing them into Houſes of Office, or otherwiſe. But now of later Years they have better conſulted for their own Lives, as well as the Lives of the poor Infants, by laying them privately in the Night-time at the Doors of Men's Houſes, whereby they are taken care of by the Pariſhes where they are found. And of theſe Foundlings, ſome Pariſhes, eſpecially thoſe without the Walls, have great Numbers to their conſiderable Charges. They are Chriſtened, and Surnamed, commonly after the Name of the Pariſh. Four ſuch Children were laid in the Pariſh of S. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt, in the Year 1708, between the 15th of Auguſt, and the 21ſt of September, which occaſioned an Advertiſement to be put into the Poſtman, That if any would come and inform the Churchwarden, where any of theſe Children were born, or who laid them down, ſhould for each Diſcovery have Twenty Shillings. And theſe Advertiſements are now become frequent.]

The Eaſt-ſide of this Gate was begun to be Repaired in the Year 1630, Sir James Cambell, Knt. being Maior; and finiſhed the Year following, Sir Robert Drury, Baronet, being Mayor.

This Gate is the Common Goal for the County of Middleſex, and was wholly deſtroyed in the general Conflagration, Anno 1666, but now Rebuilt far more ſtrong, and convenient for that Purpoſe: It hath a Poſtern for Foot Paſſengers.] And this may ſuffice for Newgate.

Exhortations ſpoken to the Felons condemned.

J. S.

Dr. Bray.

Only let it be added, that Mr. Robert Dow, Merchant Taylor, that Deceaſed 1612, appointed the Sexton or Bellman of S. Sepulchres, to pronounce ſolemnly two Exhortations to the Perſons condemned: For which, and for Ringing the Paſſing Bell for them as they are carried in the Cart by the ſaid Church, he left 26 s. 8 d. Yearly for ever.

The Exhortation to be pronounced to the condemned Priſoners in Newgate, the Night before their Execution.

You Priſoners that are within,

LUDGATE.

Ludgate.

The Sixth Gate.

In the Weſt is the next and Sixth principal Gate, and is called Ludgate, at firſt Builded, (ſaith Geoffrey Monmouth) by King Lud a Britain, about the Year before Chriſt's Nativity, 66. Of which Building, and alſo of the Name, as Ludſgate or Floodſgate, hath been of late ſome Queſtion among the Learned, wherefore I overpaſs it as not to my Purpoſe; only referring the Reader to that I have before written out of Cæſar's Commentaries, and other Roman Writers, concerning a Town or City amongſt the Britains. This Gate I ſuppoſe to be one of the moſt Ancient; and as Aldgate was Builded for the Eaſt, ſo was this Ludſgate for the Weſt. I read, as I told you, that in the Year 1215, the 17th of King John, the Barons of the Realm being in Arms againſt the King, entred this City, and ſpoiled the Jews Houſes; which being done, Robert Fitzwater, and Geffrey de Magna villa, Earl of Eſſex, and the Earl of Glouceſter, chief Leaders of the Army, applyed all Diligence to repair the Gates and Walls of this City, with the Stones of the Jews broken Houſes. Eſpecially (as it ſeemeth) they then repaired (or rather Builded) Ludgate. For in the Year 1586, when the ſame Gate was taken down to be new Builded, [which coſt the City more than 3000*l.*] there was found Couched within the Wall thereof, a Stone taken from one of the Jews Houſes, wherein was engraved in Hebrew Characters theſe Words followng, הו מצב הר״ משה כי הרבן יצחק:, Hæc eſt ſtatio Rabbi Moſes, filii inſignis Rabbi Iſaac; which is to ſay, This is the Station or Ward of Rabbi Moſes, the Son of the Honourable Rabbi Iſaac. And it had been fixed upon the Front of one of the Jews Houſes, as a Note or Sign that ſuch an one dwelled there.

Roger Windover.
Mat. Paris.

Ludgate new built.

Jews Houſes ſpoiled.

Thus I hav corrected theſe Hebre Words, whic in all the for- mer Editio had almoſt a many Miſtak as Letters. J.

The Lord Coke takes notice of this Antiquity, and dates it earlier than here it is ſet; namely, before the 23. of Henry 2, Anno 1177. And further, will not have this to be an Inſcription upon an Houſe, but an Epitaph upon ſome Jews Grave. And taking that for granted, he ſhews from Hovenden, that before the 23d Year of K. Henry II. all the Jews were Buried within the City of London; but that Year the King gave Licenſe to the Jews of his Land to have a Burying-Place in any City in England, but without the Walls, where they could buy a fit Place to Bury their Dead; and this from that Writer's Words, Prius enim omnes Judæi Mortui Londonia ferebantur ſepeliendi; but this may be interpreted, that the Dead Jews were carried from London to be Buried, as well as in London, and perhaps better; that is, at a greater diſtance, but now they had the Favour to be Buried nearer, even in the Suburbs. But however that be, that Learned Judge was undoubtedly miſtaken in the Hebrew Word מצב, which always ſignifies a Station, (as Stow hath ſet it) or a Place where a Man's Station or Dwelling is, and never for an Epitaph.]

Ludgate re- paired.
Patent.
Images there.

In the Year 1260, this Ludgate was Repaired, and Beautified with Images of Lud, and other Kings, as appeareth by Letters Patents of Licenſe given to the Citizens of London, to take up Stone for the making of thoſe Images, Dated the 25th of Henry the Third. Theſe Images of Kings, in the Reign of Edward the Sixth had their Heads ſmitten off, and were otherwiſe defaced, by unadviſed Folks, and ſuch as judged every Image to be an Idol; and in the Reign of Queen Mary were Repaired, as by ſetting new Heads on their old Bodies, &c. All which ſo remained until the Year 1586, the 28th of Queen Elizabeth, when the ſame Gate (being ſore decayed) was clean taken down, the Priſoners in the mean time remaining in the large South Eaſt Quadrant of the ſame Gate adjoining; and the ſame Year the whole Gate was newly and beautifully Builded, with the Images of Lud and others (as afore) on the Eaſtſide, and the Picture of her Majeſty, Queen Elizabeth on the Weſtſide. All which was done at the common Charges of the Citizens, amounting to 1500*l.* or more.

Ludgate again new Builded.

Ludgate enlarged in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth.

This Gate was made a free Priſon in the Year 1378, the Firſt of Richard the Second, Nicholas Brembar being Maior. The ſame was confirmed in the Year 1382, John Northampton being Maior, by a Common-Council in the Guildhall. By which it was Ordained, that all Freemen of this City, ſhould for Debt, Treſpaſſes, Accompts, and Contempts, be impriſoned in Ludgate; and for Treaſons, Felonies, and other criminal Offences, committed to Newgate, &c.

Ludgate a free Priſon.
Record Guildhall.

In the Year 1439, the Tenth of K. Henry the Sixth, John Wells being Maior, a Court of Common Council Eſtabliſhed Ordinances, (as William Standon and Robert Chicheley, late Maiors, before had done) touching the Guard and government of Ludgate, and other Priſons.

Alſo in the Year 1463, the Third of Edward the Fourth, Mathew Philip being Maior, in a Common Council, at the Requeſt of the well diſpoſed, bleſſed, and devout Woman, Dame Agnes Forſter, Widow, late Wife to Stephen Forſter, Fiſhmonger, ſometime Maior, for the Comfort and Relief of all the poor Priſoners, certain Articles were Eſtabliſhed. Imprimis, That the new Works, then

Memory of a worthy Woman.

Articles for Relief of the poor Priſoners in Ludgate.

then lately Edified by the ſame Dame Agnes, for the enlarging of the Priſon of Ludgate, from thenceforth ſhould be had and taken, as a Part and Parcel of the ſaid Priſon of Ludgate, ſo that both the old and new Work of Ludgate aforeſaid, to be one Priſon, Goal, Keeping, and Charge for evermore.

The Length, Breadth, and Largeneſs of the Quadrant.

The ſaid Quadrant, ſtrongly Builded of Stone, by the forenamed Stephen Forſter and Agnes his Wife, containing a large Walking-place by Ground of 38 Foot and an Half in Length, beſides the Thickneſs of the Walls, which are at the leaſt 6 Foot, makes all together 44 Foot and an Half; ſo that the Thickneſs of the Walls maketh it 35 Foot and an Half in Breadth. The like room it hath over it for Lodgings, and over all fair Leads to walk upon, well Embattelled, all for freſh Air, and Eaſe of Priſoners, to the end they ſhould have Lodging and Water free without Charge; as by certain Verſes graven in Copper, and fixed on the ſaid Quadrant, I have read in Form following:

At Ludgate engraved on a Copper Place.

Devout Souls that paſs this way,
For Stephen Forſter, late Maior,
heartily pray,
And Dame Agnes his Spouſe,
to God conſecrate,
That of Pity, this Houſe made for Londoners in Ludgate.
So that for Lodging and Water,
Priſoners here nought pay,
As their Keepers ſhall all anſwer
at dreadful Dooms-day.

This Place, and one other of his Arms, being Three Broad Arrow-heads, taken down with the old Gate, I cauſed to be fixed over the Entry of the ſaid Quadrant; but the Verſes being unhappily turned inward to the Wall, the like, in effect, is engraven outward in Proſe, declaring him to be a Fiſhmonger; becauſe ſome, upon a light Occaſion, (as a Maiden's Head in a Glaſs Window) had fabled him to be a Mercer, and to have begged there at Ludgate, &c. Thus much for Ludgate.

All the inſide of this Gate, which conſiſted of Timber, was conſumed in the Fire, 1666. and the Stone very much damnified; but of late Years built up very ſubſtantially, and hath a convenient Chapel for Divine Service; and beautifully repaired. On the Eaſt-ſide in three Nitches are ſtill remaining the Effigies of King Lud and his two Sons. And on the Weſt-ſide that of Queen Elizabeth, with the Arms of England and France quartered over her.]

A Breach in the Wall againſt Bridewell.

Next this, there is a Breach in the Wall of the City, and a Bridge of Timber over the Fleet Dyke, betwixt Fleet Bridge and Thames, directly over againſt the Houſe of Bridewell.

J. S.

Theſe are the ſeveral Land-Gates and Poſterns through the Wall, built for the Convenience of Paſſage into and out of the City. Beſides theſe, there were certain Water Gates, of which we ſhall now proceed to ſpeak.]

WATER-GATES.

Watergates.

Water Gates on the Banks of the River Thames have been many; which being purchaſed by private Men, are alſo put to private Uſe, and the old Names of them forgotten. But of ſuch as remain from the Weſt towards the Eaſt, may be ſaid as followeth.

Black Friars.

The Black-Friars Stairs, a Free Landing-Place.

Puddle Wharfe.

Then a Water-Gate at Puddle Wharf, of one Puddle, that kept a Wharf on the Weſtſide thereof, and now of Puddle Water, by means of many Horſes watered there.

Paules Wharfe.

Then Paul's-Wharf, alſo a free Landing-Place, with Stairs, &c.

Broken Wharfe.

Then Broken-Wharf, and other ſuch like.

QUEEN-HITH.

R. B.

But Ripa Reginæ, the Queen's Bank, or Queen-Hith, may well be accounted the very chief and principal Water-Gate of this City, being a common Strand or Landing Place, and much reſorted to by Barges and Lighters; which bring up Goods from the Weſtern Parts of the Kingdom; as Corn, Wood, &c. here being a very great Meal-Market weekly kept. This Place is alſo of great Reſort for the Weſtern Watermen.] Yet equal with, and (of old Time) far exceeding Billinſgate, as ſhall be ſhewed in the Ward of Queen-Hith.

DOWNGATE.

Downgate.

The next is Downgate, ſo called (as may be ſuppoſed) of the ſudden deſcending, or downgoing of that way from St. John's Church upon Walbrook, unto the River of Thames. Whereby the Water in the Channel there hath ſuch a ſwift Courſe, that in the Year 1574, on the Fourth of September, after a ſtrong Shower of Rain, a Lad of the Age of Eighteen Years, minding to have leapt over the Channel, was taken by the Feet, and born down with the Violence of that narrow Stream, and carried towards the Thames with ſuch a violent Swiftneſs, as no Man could reſcue or ſtay him, till he came againſt a Cart-Wheel that ſtood in the Water-Gate; before which time, he was drowned and ſtark dead.

An Inquiſition concerning Downgate.

Merchants of the Hanſe landed their Corn betwixt their Houſe and the Black Friers.

This was ſome time a large Water-Gate, frequented by Ships and other Veſſels, like as the Queen's-Hith, and was a Part thereof, as doth appear by an Inquiſition made in the 28th Year of Henry III, wherein was found, That as well Corn as Fiſh, and all other things coming from the Port of Downgate, were to be ordered after the Cuſtoms of the Queen's-Hith, for the King's Uſe. As alſo, that the Corn arriving between the Gate of the Guild-Hall of the Merchants of Cullen [viz. the Still-yard] which is Eaſt from Downgate, and the Houſe then pertaining to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Weſt from Baynard's-Caſtle, was to be meaſured by the Meaſure, and Meaſurer of the Queen's-Soke, or Queen-Hith. I read alſo in the 19th of Edward III. That Cuſtoms were then to be paid for Ships and other Veſſels reſting at Downgate, as if they rode at Queen-Hith. And as they now do at Billinſgate. But now it is fallen to ſuch great Decay, that not only there is no Uſe made thereof, but alſo by reaſon that the Water-Gates are not repaired, it is very dangerous to Paſſengers travelling through in the Night-ſeaſon. And thus much for Downgate may ſuffice.

Lib. Horne, Lib. S. Alban.

The next after Downgate (of old Time) was callen Wolfsgate in the Ropary, in the Pariſh of Alhallows the Leſs, of later Time called Wolfs-Lane; but now out of uſe, for the lower Part was builded by the Earl of Shrewsbury; and the other Part was ſtopped up, and builded on by the Chamberlain of London.

The next is Ebgate, a Water-Gate ſo called of old Time, as appeareth by divers Records of Tenements, near unto the ſame adjoining. It ſtandeth near unto the Church of St. Lawrence Pountney, but is within the Pariſh of St. Martin Ordegare. In Place of this Gate, is now a narrow Paſſage to the Thames, and is called Ebgate-Lane, but more commonly the Old Swan.

OISTERGATE.

Oiſtergate.

Then is there a Watergate at the Bridge Foot, called Oiſtergate, of Oiſters that were there (of old Time) commonly to be ſold; and was the chiefeſt Market for them, and for other Shell Fiſh. There ſtandeth now an Engine or Forcier, for the winding up of Water to ſerve the City, whereof I have already ſpoken.

BRIDGEGATE.

Bridge Gate.

The Bridge-Gate oftentimes repaired by divers good Benefactors.

W. Dunthorne. Gate at the Bridge-Foot burned.

The next is the Bridgegate, ſo called of London-Bridge, whereon it ſtandeth. This was one of the four firſt and principal Gates of the City, and was long before the Conqueſt, when there ſtood a Bridge of Timber; and is the Seventh and laſt principal Gate mentioned by W. Fitz-Stephen; which Gate being weakly made, when the Bridge was builded of Stone, hath been oftentimes ſince repaired. This Gate, with the Tower upon it, in the Year 1436. fell down, and two of the fartheſt Arches Southwards alſo fell therewith, and no Man periſhed or was hurt thereby. To the repairing whereof, divers wealthy Citizens gave large Sums of Money, namely, Robert Large, ſometime Maior, gave to that Work 100 Marks, Stephen Forſter, 20*l.* Sir John Croſby Alderman, 100*l.* &c. But in the Year 1471. the Kentiſh Mariners, under the Conduct of Baſtard Fauconbridge, burned the ſaid Gate, and thirteen Houſes on the Bridge, beſides the Beer-Houſes at St. Katherines, and many other in the Suburbs.

BUTTOLPHS GATE.

Buttolphs Gate.

King William the Conqueror his Gift of the Gate.

The next is Buttolphs Gate, ſo called of the Pariſh Church of St. Buttolph near adjoining. This Gate was ſometime given, or confirmed by William Conqueror, to the Monks of Weſtminſter, in theſe Words. Will. Rex Angliæ, &c. William King of England, ſendeth Greeting to the Sheriffs, and all his Miniſters; as alſo to all his loving Subjects, French and Engliſh, of London. Know ye, that I have granted to God and St. Peter of Weſtminſter, and to the Abbot Vitalis, the Gift which Almundus, of the Port of St. Buttolph, gave them, when he was there made Monk; that is to ſay, his Lord's Court, with the Houſes, and one Wharf, which is at the Head of London-Bridge, and all other his Lands which he had in the ſame City, in ſuch ſort, as King Edward more beneficially and amply granted the ſame. And I Will and Command, that they ſhall enjoy the ſame well, and quietly, and honourably, with Sake and Soke, &c.

BELINSGATE

Belinſgate.

The next is Belinſgate, now uſed as an eſpecial Port or Harbour for ſmall Ships and Boats coming thereto, and is now the largeſt Watergate on the River of Thames, therefore moſt frequented, the Queenes-Hith being almoſt forſaken. How this Gate took that Name, or of what Antiquity the ſame is, I muſt leave uncertain, as not having read any ancient Record thereof, more than that Geoffrey Monmouth writeth, that Belin, a King of the Britans, about 400 Years before Chriſt's Nativity, builded this Gate, and named it Belinſgate, after his own Name; and that when he was dead, his Body being burned, the Aſhes in a Veſſel of Braſs were ſet in a high Pinacle of Stone over the ſame Gate. But Cæſar, and other Roman Writers, affirm of Cities, Walls and Gates, as ye have before heard; and therefore it ſeemeth to me not to be ſo ancient; but rather to have taken that Name of ſome later Owner of the Place, haply named Beling; as Somer's Key, Smart's Key, Freſh Wharf, and others thereby, took their Names of their Owners. Of this Gate more ſhall be ſaid when we come to ſpeak of Belinſgate Ward.

Other WATERGATES.

Watergate by the Cuſtomhouſe.

Then have you a Watergate on the Weſt ſide of Wool-Wharf or Cuſtomer's Key, which is now of late moſt beautifully enlarged and built. This Gate is commonly called the Watergate, as being at the South End of Water-Lane.

Watergate by the Tower.

One other Watergate there is by the Bulwark of the Tower; and this is the laſt and fartheſt Watergate Eaſtward on the River of Thames, ſo far as the City of LONDON extendeth within the Walls; both which laſt named Water-Gates be within the Tower Ward.

Wharfs and Keys.

Beſides theſe common Water-Gates, were divers private Wharfs and Keys all along from Eaſt to Weſt, on the Banks of the River of Thames. Merchants of all Nations had Landing Places, Warehouſes, Cellars, and Stowage of their Goods and Merchandizes; as partly ſhall be touched in the Wards adjoining to the ſaid River. And therefore concerning theſe Gates, let this ſuffice.

The Gates to be kept and watched. Matt. Paris.

Now for the ordering and keeping of them in the Night Seaſon, it was appointed in the Year of Chriſt 1258. by K. Henry III. in the 42. of his Reign, that the Ports of England ſhould be ſtrongly kept, and that the Gates of London ſhould be newly repaired, and diligently watched in the Night, for fear of French Deceits: Whereof one writeth theſe Verſes:

Per noctem Portæ clauduntur Londoniarum,
Mœnia ne fortè Fraus frangat Francigenarum.

Of the Ancient and preſent Rivers, Brooks, Bournes, Pools, Wells and Conduits of freſh Water, ſerving the City. And particularly the New River, and Thames Water; The preſent State of the City, as to Water.

J. S.

AS the Walls of this City are for Strength and Ornament, and its Gates for Conveniency, ſo for Conveniency alſo, together with Health and the Benefits of Life, another Thing is requiſite, viz. Water. And therefore the next Matter to be treated of concerning LONDON is, how it hath been, and is watered.]

London how watered.

The River of the Wells.

Walbrook.

Langborn.

Anciently, until the Time of the Conqueror, and two hundred Years after, this City of London was watered, (beſides the famous River of Thames on the South Part) with the River of the Wells (as it was then called) on the Weſt, with a Water called Walbrook running through the midſt of the City into the River of Thames, ſevering the Heart thereof; and with a Fourth Water, or Boorn, which ran within the City through Langboorn Ward, watering that Part in the Eaſt. In the Weſt Suburbs was alſo another great Water, called ountains.

Then were there three prinincipal Fountains, or Wells in the other Suburbs; to wit, Holy Well, Clement's Well, and Clark's Well. Near unto this laſt named Fountain, were divers other Wells, viz. Skinner's Well, Fag's Well, Tode Well, Loder's Well, and Rad Well. All which having the Fall of their overflowing into the aforeſaid River, much encreaſed the Stream, and in that Place gave it the Name of Wells.

In Weſt Smithfield there was a Pool, in Records called Horſepoole; and one other near unto the Pariſh Church of St. Giles without Creplegate. Beſides all which, they had in every Street and Lane of the City, divers Wells and freſh Springs: And after this manner was this City then ſerved with ſweet and freſh Water. Which being ſince decayed, other Means have been ſought to ſupply the Want; as ſhall be ſhewed. But, Firſt, of the aforenamed Rivers and other Waters, is to be ſaid as followeth, hames.

THAMES, the moſt famous River of this Iſland, beginneth a little above a Village called Winchcomb in Oxfordſhire; and ſtill encreaſing, paſſeth firſt by the Univerſity of Oxford, and ſo with a marvelous quiet Courſe to London, and thence breaketh into the French Ocean by main Tides: Which twice in Four and twenty Hours Space doth ebb and flow more than Sixty Miles in length, to the great Commodity of Travellers. By the which all kind of Merchandize be eaſily conveyed to London, the principal Storehouſe and Staple of all Commodities within this Realm. So that omitting to ſpeak of great Ships and other Veſſels of Burthen, there pertaineth to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Borough of Southwark, above the Number (as is ſuppoſed) of Two thouſand Wherries, and other ſmall Boats; whereby Three thouſand Poor Men at the leaſt be ſet on work and maintained.

he Conquer's Charter S. Martins.

That at the River of the Wells in the Weſt Part of the City, was of old Time ſo called, it may be proved thus. William the Conqueror, in his Charter to the College of St. Martin Le Grand in London, hath theſe Words. I do give and grant to the ſame Church all the Land and the Moore without the Poſtern which is called Creplegate, on either Part of the Poſtern; that is to ſay, from the North Corner of the Wall (as the River of the Wells, there near running, departeth the ſame Moore from the Wall) unto the running Water which entreth the City. This Water hath been ſince that Time called Turnemil Brook; yet then called the River of the Wells; which Name of River continued; and it was ſo called in the Reign of Edward I. as ſhall be ſhewed, with the Decay alſo of the ſaid River.

In a fair Book of Parliament Records, now lately reſtored to the Tower, it appeareth, that a Parliament being holden at Carliſle in the Year 1307. the 35th of Edward I. Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, complained, that whereas (in Times paſt) the Courſe of Water, running at London under * Oldborne-bridge, and Fleet-bridge into the Thames, had been of ſuch Breadth and Depth, that Ten or Twelve Ships, Navies at once with Merchandiſes, were wont to come to the foreſaid Bridge of Fleet, and ſome of them unto Oldborne-bridge; Now the ſame Courſe (by Filth of the Tanners, and ſuch others) was ſore decayed; alſo by raiſing of Wharfs, but eſpecially by a Diverſion of the Water made by them of the New Temple, for their Mills ſtanding without Baynards Caſtle, in the Firſt Year of King John, and by divers other Impediments: ſo as the ſaid Ships could not enter as they were wont, and as they ought. Wherefore he deſired, that the Maior of London, with the Sheriffs, and other diſcreet Aldermen, might be appointed to view the Courſe of the ſaid Water; and that by the Oaths of good Men, all the foreſaid Hindrances might be removed, and it to be made as it was wont of old. Whereupon Roger le Brabazon, the Conſtable of the Tower, with the Maior and Sheriffs, were aſſigned to take with them honeſt and diſcreet Men, and to make diligent Search and Enquiry, how the ſaid River was in old Time, and that they leave nothing that may hurt or ſtop it, but keep it in the ſame Eſtate that it was wont to be. So far the Record.

The River of the Wells cleanſed.

Whereupon it followed, that the ſaid River was at that Time cleanſed, theſe Mills removed, and other things done for the Preſervation of the Courſe thereof; notwithſtanding never brought to the old Depth and Breadth: Whereupon the Name of River ceaſed, and it was ſince called a Brook; namely, Turnemill or Tremill Brook, for that divers Mills were erected upon it, as appeareth by a fair Regiſter Book, containing the Foundation of the Priory at Clerkenwell, and Donation of the Lands thereunto belonging; as alſo by divers other Records.

Since called a Brook.
Turnemill Brook.

Regiſter Book of Clerkenwel.

This Brook hath been divers Times ſince cleanſed, namely, and laſt of all, to any Effect, in the Year One thouſand five hundred and two, the Seventeenth of Henry VII. the whole Courſe of Fleet-Dike, then ſo called, was ſcowered (I ſay) down unto the Thames. So that Boats with Fiſh and Fewel were rowed to Fleet-bride and Oldborne-bridge, as they of old Time had been accuſtomed, which was a great Commodity to all the Inhabitants in that Part of the City.

Cleanſed again 1502.
After called Fleet Dyke.

In the Year 1589. was granted a Fifteen by a Common Council of the City, for the cleanſing of this Brooke or Dike; and the Money, amounting to a thouſand Marks, was collected; and it was undertaken, that by drawing divers Springs about Hampſtead-Heath into one Head and Courſe, both the City ſhould be ſerved of freſh Water in all Places of Want; and alſo, that by ſuch a Follower, (as Men call it) the Channel of this Brook ſhould be ſcowered into the River of Thames. But much Money being therein ſpent, the Effect failed; ſo that the Brook, by means of continual Encroachments upon the Banks, getting over the Water, and caſting of Soilage into the Stream, is now become worſe cloyed [and choaken] than ever it was before.

Fleet-Dike promiſed to be cleanſed, the Money collected, and the Citizens deceived.

The Running Water, ſo called by William the Conqueror in his ſaid Charter, which entreth the City, &c. (before there was any Ditch) between Biſhopſgate and the late-made Poſtern called Mooregate, entred the Wall, and was truly of the Wall called Walbrook, not of Gualo, as ſome have far fetched. It ran through the City, with divers Windings from the North towards the South, into the River of Thames; and had (over the ſame) divers Bridges along the Streets and Lanes through which it paſſed. I have read in an old Written Book, intituled, The Cuſtoms of London, That the Prior of the holy Trinity within Aldgate, ought to make over Walbrook in the Ward of Breadſtreet, againſt the Stone Wall of the City, viz. the ſame Bridge that is next the Church of All Saints at the Wall. Alſo, that the Prior of the New Hoſpital, St. Mary Spittle, without Biſhopſgate, ought to make the middle Part of one other Bridge, next to the ſaid Bridge towards the North; and that in the 28th Year of Edward I. it was by Inquiſition found before the Maior of London, that the Pariſh of St. Stephen upon Walbrook, ought of right to ſcower † the Courſe of the ſaid Brook; and therefore the Sheriffs were commanded to diſtrain the ſaid Pariſhioners ſo to do. In the Year 1300. the Keepers of thoſe Bridges at that Time, were William Jordan, and John de Bever.

Langborne.

Langborne Ward.

Langborne Water, ſo called of the Length thereof, was a great Stream of Water, breaking out of the Ground in Fen Churchſtreet, which ran down with a ſwift Courſe, Weſt, through that Street, thwart Graſſtreet, and down Lumbardſtreet, to the Weſt End of St. Mary Wolnoths Church, and turning the Courſe South, down Shareborn Lane (ſo termed of Sharing or Dividing) it brake into divers Rilles or Rillets to the River of Thames. Of this Borne that Ward took the Name, and is till this Day called Largborne Ward. This Borne is alſo long ſince ſtoppod up at the Head, and the reſt of the Courſe filled up, and Paved over, ſo that no Sign thereof remaineth more than the Names aforeſaid.

Oldborne.

Oldborne or Holborne was the like Water, breaking out about the Place where now the Bars do ſtand, and it ran down the whole Street to Oldborne Bridge, and into the River of the Wells, or Turnmill Brook. This Bourne was likewiſe (long ſince) ſtopped up at the Head, and in other Places, where the ſame hath broken out; but yet till this Day, the ſaid Street is there called High Olborne Hill, and both the Sides thereof, (together with all the Grounds adjoining, that lye betwixt it and the River of Thames) remain full of Springs. So that Water is there found at Hand, and hard to be ſtopped in every Houſe.

Fitzſtephen concerning Wells in the Suburbs.

There are (ſaith Fitzſtephen) neere London, on the Northſide, ſpecial Wells in the Suburbs, Sweet, Wholſome and Cleere, among which, Holy Well, Clarkes Well, and Clements Well, are moſt famous, and frequented by Schollers and Youths of the City in Summer Evenings, when they walk forth to take the Air.

Holy Well.

The firſt, to wit, Holywell, is much decayed and ſpoiled, with Filthineſs purpoſely laid there, for the heightning of the Ground for Garden Plots.

Clements Well.

The Fountain called Saint Clements Well, North from the Pariſh Church of Saint Clements, and near unto an Inn of Chancerie, called Clements Inne, is yet fair and curbed Square with hard Stone, and is always kept clean for common Uſe. It is always full, and never wanteth Water.

Clarks Well.

Clarkenwell Church.

Plays at the Skinners Well.

The Third is called Clarkes-Well or Clarken-Well, and is curbed about Square with hard Stone; not far from the Weſt-end of this Clarkenwell Church, without the Wall that incloſeth the Church. The ſaid Church took the Name of the Well; and the Well took Name of the Pariſh Clarks in London, who (of old time) were accuſtomed there Yearly to aſſemble, and to play ſome large Hiſtory of Holy Scripture. For Example of later Time, to wit in the Year 1390, the 14th of Richard the Second, I read, that the Pariſh Clarks of London, on the 18th of July, plaid Interludes at Skinners-well, near unto Clarks-well, which Play continued three Days together, the King, Queen, and Nobles being preſent. Alſo in the Year 1409, the Tenth of Henry the Fourth they played a Play at the Skinners-well, which laſted Eight Days, and was of Matter from the Creation of the World; there were to ſee the ſame the moſt part of the Nobles and Gentiles in England, &c.

Skinners Well.

Wreſtling Place.

Other ſmaller Wells were many near unto Clarks-well, namely Skinners-well, ſo called, for that the Skinners of London held there certain Plays, Yearly plaid of Holy Scripture, &c. In Place whereof, the Wreſtlings have of latter Years been kept, and is in Part continued at Bartholomew-tide.

Fags Well.

Then was there Fags-well, near unto Smithfield, by the Charter-houſe, now lately damned up. Todwell, Loders-well, and Radwell are all decayed, and ſo filled up, that their Places are hardly now diſcerned.

Dame Annis the Clear.

Somewhat North from Holy-well is one other Well, curbed Square with Stone, and is called Dame Annis the Clear; and not far from it, but ſomewhat Weſt, is alſo another clear Water, called Perilous Pond, becauſe divers Youths (by ſwimming therein) have been drowned. And thus much be ſaid for Fountains and Wells.

Horſepool.

Horſepoole in Weſtſmithfield, was ſometime a great Water; and becauſe the Inhabitants in that Part of the City did there water their Horſes, the ſame was in old Records called Horſepoole. It is now much decayed, the Springs being ſtopped up; and the Land-water falling into the ſmall Bottom, remaining incloſed with Brick, is but foul, and is called Smithfield-Pond. This ſince the Fire of London is filled up.

Pool withou Creplegate.

The Pool by S. Giles Church-yard was a large Water. For that it is read in the Year 1244, that Anne of Lodbury was drowned therein. This Pool is now (for the moſt Part) ſtopped up, bur the Spring is preſerved, and was cooped about with Stone, by the Executors of Richard Whittington.

The Conduit in Weſt Cheap, by Pauls Gate, (commonly called, The little Conduit) was Builded about the Year 1442. One Thouſand Marks was granted by Common Council for the Building thereof, and repairing of the other Conduits. This Repaired ſince the Fire of London, but not finiſhed.

The Conduit in Aldermanbury, and the Standard in Fleetſtreet, were made and finiſhed by the Executors of Sir William Eaſtfield, in the Year 1471. A Ciſtern alſo was added to the Standard in Fleetſtreet, and a Ciſtern was made at Fleetbridge, and another without Creplegate, in the Year 1478.

From the River of Thames did the Citizens in former Times ſupply themſelves with Water for their Family Uſes; fetching it by the many Lanes that led to the Waterſide in divers Wards of the City. But in time many of theſe Lanes were ſtopt up by thoſe that dwelt thereabouts, for their own Gain, who would ſuffer none to paſs without paying a Duty. This became a great Grievance, inſomuch that in 17. Ed. 3. the Maior, Aldermen, and Commonalty, received great Complaints of ſtopping up theſe Lanes and Paſſages to the Thames. Upon this an Inquiſition was made; and divers Perſons of the ſeveral Wards ſworn to make diligent Enquiry into theſe Grievances, and of all the Lanes that were common Paſſages to the Thames. Of later Times Thames Water was conveyed into Mens Houſes by Pipes of Lead, from a moſt Artificial Forcier, ſtanding near unto London Bridge, and made by Peter Morris, Dutchman, in the Year 1582, for the Service of the City on the Eaſt Part thereof.

The Firſt Thames Water Mill.

J. S.

[It is done by a Mill, and was the firſt Water-Work that was made to ſupply the City with Thames Water; and there it remained till of late, being in the Poſſeſſion of one Mr. Morice, whoſe Anceſtor firſt ſet it up in Q. Elizabeth's Days, and left thereby a conſiderable Benefit to his Family. This Water Mill furniſhed the Neighbour Parts of the City as far as Graſschurchſtreet. It was obſerved, that the Water conveyed into Houſes by this Mill, did ſooner become fine and clear than the New River Water, and was ever a Clearer Water, as Mr. Charles Hopton that was chief Clark there hath told me.]

One other new Forcier was made near to Broken Wharff, to convey Thames Water into Mens Houſes of Weſt Cheape, about S. Paul's, Fleetſtreet, &c. by an Engliſh Gentleman, named Bevis Bulman, in the Year 1594.

A. M.

Another Conduit was alſo Built at Alderſgate, without the Gate, Anno 1610, and Thames Water conveyed unto it in Pipes of Wood and Stone, by an Engliſh Gentleman, named Mr. Thomas Hayes. This is loſt ſince the Fire.

New River Water.

Next to the Conduit Water thus conveyed to Alderſgate, and as you have already heard, that famous (and never to be forgotten) new River, brought from Chadwell and Amwell, by the only Care, Coſt, and liberal Expences of one Worthy Man, Sir Hugh Middleton, Knight and Baronet, Citizen and Goldſmith of London, deſerveth to be Recorded in everlaſting Memory.

Sir Hugh Middleton.

I ſpare here to ſpeak of the Length of Time that ſuch an Intent was in talking on; like much good Matter well motioned, though little minded, long debated, but never concluded: till Courage and Reſolution lovingly ſhook Hands together, as it appears it did in the Soul of this (no way to be daunted) well minded Gentleman.

Malignant Enemies to all honeſt and commendable Actions.

For, if thoſe Enemies to all good Endeavours, Danger, Difficulty, Impoſſibility, Detraction, Contempt, Scorn, Deriſion, yea, and Deſperate Deſpite, could have prevailed by their accurſed and malevolent Interpoſition, either before, at the Beginning, in the very Birth of proceeding, or in the leaſt ſtollen Advantage of the whole Proſecution; this Work of ſo great Worth had never been accompliſhed.

Acts for bringing Water into the City, without Effect.

I am not ignorant of an Act of Parliament, granted by Queen Elizabeth of bleſſed Memory, to her Citizens of London, for cutting and conveying a River from any Part of Middleſex or Hertfordſhire, to the City of London, with a Limitation of ten Years Time for the Performance thereof: But the Expiration of her Royal Life ſooner came, than any ſuch Matter would be undertaken.

Alſo our late Gracious Sovereign King James pleaſed to grant the like Act (but without any Date of Time) for the ſame Effect: And when all elſe refuſed, Mr. Middleton undertook it, to bring his intended River from Chadwell and Amwell, to the North ſide of London, near Iſlington, where he built a large Ciſtern to receive it.

When the Work began at firſt.

Finiſhed in Five Years.

The Work began the 20th Day of February, Anno Dom. 1608, and in Five Years Space was fully accompliſhed. Concerning the Conveyance of it along to London, from Chadwell and Amwell, I my ſelf (by Favour of the Gentlemen) did divers times ride to ſee it, and diligently obſerved, that admirable Art, Pains and Induſtry were beſtowed for the Paſſage of it, by reaſon that all Grounds are not of a like nature, ſome being oozy and very muddy, others again as ſtiff, craggy and ſtony.

The ingenious Conveying of the River in ſome Places.

The Depth of the Trench (in ſome places) deſcended full Thirty Foot, if not more; whereas (in other places) it required as ſprightful Art again, to mount it over a Valley in a Trough, between a Couple of Hills, and the Trough all the while born up by wooden Arches: ſome of them fixed in the Ground very deep, and riſing in Heighth above Twenty three Foot.

The Lord Maior and Aldermen rode to ſee the Ciſtern.

Being brought to the intended Ciſtern, but not (as yet) the Water admitted Entrance thereinto; on Michaelmaſs Day, Anno 1613, being the Day when Sir Thomas Middleton, Knight, (Brother to the ſaid Mr. Hugh Middleton) was elected Lord Maior of London for the Year enſuing: In the Afternoon of the ſame Day, Sir John Swinerton, Knight, and Lord Maior of London, accompanied with the ſaid Sir Thomas, Sir Henry Mountague, Knight, and Recorder of London, and many of the worthy Aldermen, rode to ſee the Ciſtern, and firſt iſſuing of the River thereinto; which was performed in this manner:

The Workmen in the Ciſtern.

A Troop of Labourers, to the Number of Sixty, or more, well apparelled, and wearing Green Monmouth Caps, all alike, carried Spades, Shovels, Pickaxes, and ſuch like Inſtruments of laborious Employment, marching after Drums twice or thrice about the Ciſtern, preſented themſelves before the Mount, where the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and a worthy Company beſide, ſtood to behold them; and one Man (in behalf of all the reſt) delivered this Speech.

The Speech at the Ciſtern, according as it was delivered to me.

Long have we labour'd, long deſir'd and pray'd
For this great Works Perfection: And by th' Aid
Of Heaven, and good Mens Wiſhes, 'tis at length
Happily conquer'd by Coſt, Art and Strength.
And after Five Years dear Expence in Days,
Travail and Pains, beſide the infinite ways
Of Malice, Envy, falſe Suggeſtions,
Able to daunt the Spirits of mighty ones
In Wealth and Courage: This, a Work ſo rare,
Only by one Man's Induſtry, Coſt and Care,
Is brought to bleſt Effect, ſo much withſtood;
His only Aim, the Cities general Good.
And where (before) many unjuſt Complaints,
Enviouſly ſeated, cauſed oft Reſtraints,
Stops, and great Croſſes, to our Maſters Charge,
And the Works Hindrance: Favour now at large
Spreads it ſelf open to him, and commends
To Admiration both his Pains and Ends:
The Kings moſt gracious Love. Perfection draws
Favour from Princes, and (from all) Applauſe.
Then worthy Magiſtrates, to whoſe Content,
(Next to the State) all this great Care was bent,
And for the publick Good, (which Grace requires)
Your Loves and Furtherance chiefly he deſires,
To cheriſh theſe Proceedings, which may give
Courage to ſome that may hereafter live,
To practiſe Deeds of Goodneſs, and of Fame,
And gladly light their Actions by his Name.
Clerk of the Work, reach me the Book to ſhow,

The Maſter of the Timber-work takes place
Next after theſe; the Meaſurer, in like caſe,
Bricklayer, and Engineer; and after thoſe,
The Borer and the Pavier. Then it ſhows
The Labourers next; Keeper of Amwell-head,
The Walkers laſt: So all their Names are read.
Yet theſe but Parcels of Six Hundred more,
That (at one time) have been employ'd before.
Yet theſe in ſight, and all the reſt will ſay,
That all the Week they had their Royal Pay.
Now, for the Fruits then: Flow forth, precious Spring,
So long and dearly fought for, and now bring
Comfort to all that love thee: Loudly ſing,
And with thy Cryſtal Murmurs ſtrook together,
Bid all thy true Well-wiſhers welcome hither.

All this he readeth in the Clerk's Book.

At the letting open of the Sluice.

At which Words the Floodgates flew open, the Stream ran gallantly into the Ciſtern, Drums and Trumpets ſounding in triumphal manner; and a brave Peal of Chambers gave full Iſſue to the intended Entertainment.]

R. B.

This New River is of general Good to this great City; ſerving above 3000 Houſes, [now rather 30000] Three Days every Week. The firſt Undertaker, as was ſaid before, was Sir Hugh Middleton, who for Five Years carried it on at an exceſſive Charge, employing ſeveral Hundred Men to cut and make the River from the Spring Heads of Amwell and Chadwell, near Ware in Hertfordſhire, unto the Ciſtern Head at Iſlington, which in a winding Courſe is about Sixty Miles. And from the ſaid Ciſtern, the Water is diſperſed in large wooden Pipes into moſt Streets, and from them Leaden Pipes are fixed, to convey the Water into Houſes of ſuch as become Tenants to the Company, or Proprietors.

And for the better Management of this great Undertaking, the Sharers do elect certain of them as a Committee, to manage Affairs every Week at their Office by Brokenwharf in London, as well to grant Leaſes, appoint Officers, as to hear Grievances, and to take care about the mending of the Pipes.]

Deſign of bringing Iſtelworth to London.

J. S.

MSS. penes me.

But before this New River Water was thus brought for the Supply of the City, the Projecting for the Conveniency of Water from the North ſide of the City was not out of the Heads of the Citizens. For about the Year Fifteen Hundred Eighty and odd, (as I conceive it) there was one Ruſſel, who propounded to bring Iſtelworth, viz.

the River of Uxbridge, to the ſaid North ſide of London. And that by a Geometrical Inſtrument, he propounded this Invention in Writing to the Lord Burghley: Whom he told in his Paper, that he moved this, not by Skill of Art or Learning, which he did not profeſs; but only by an aſſured and infallibly grounded Conſideration, taken by the Difference of the Heighth of the ſaid Uxbridge River at the Place or Head appointed, and the River of Thames right below the ſame towards Lalam. Which was, he ſaid, to be compared to the Difference between the upper End of Holborn; which was a Point of the New Water, and Thames right againſt it below the Strand. Which Thing rightly noted, did ſhew the eaſy Poſſibility, and ſufficient Current to that Place with diſcreet Leading. For that the Country lay well for that Purpoſe: Yet very dark, and ſeeming hard to all, that took not with them the Conſideration aforeſaid. “So, “added he, it hath pleaſed God to beſtow this “Bleſſing, and to appoint me an Inſtrument in “a Time beſt pleaſing unto his Will: Shewing, “that in all Ages, neither Power, Wiſdom, “Learning or Strength, can perform an Act, “until the appointed Time, and the Inſtrument “to effect it.

This Project the ſaid Lord Burghley was ſo pleaſed with, that he, in Ruſſel's Paper, drew with his own Hand the River and the Town adjacent, deſcribing the River Iſtleworth, and another River, how they fell into Uxbridge River, and how that run by S. Giles.

An Italian propounds an uſeful Invention of Water for the City.

Let me add moreover in this place the mention of an Italian, named Frederick Genebelli; that propounded an Invention to the aboveſaid Lord, for Water-works for London, Anno 1591. Which ſhould benefit the City two ways. Firſt, to cleanſe the filthy Ditches in and about the City; ſuch as Houndſditch, Fleetditch, &c. and to bring, in the room of this Filth, Plenty of wholſome clear Water, for the Uſe of the Inhabitants. And Secondly, To be an Expedient for the ſpedier and more effectual quenching of Houſes on fire. Whereby Twenty five or Thirty Perſons ſhould do more than Three Hundred otherwiſe. And this the ſaid Italian prayed the Lord Burghley to make known to the Queen on his behalf.

The preſent Supply of the City with the Thames Water. Pet. Morice.

At preſent, the Supply of London with good Thames Water is like to be very much enlarged by the great Improvement of the Water-works of Peter Morice, before mentioned; who being an High Dutchman, in the 23d of Q. Elizabith, firſt gave Aſſurance of his Skill in raiſing the Thames Water ſo high as ſhould ſupply the upper Parts of London. For the Maior and Aldermen came down to obſerve the Experiment; and they ſaw him throw the Water over S. Magnus Steeple. Before which Time, no ſuch Thing was known in England, as this raiſing of Water. Whereupon the City let Morice a Leaſe for Five Hundred Years, of the Uſe of the Thames Water, and the Place where his Mills ſtood, and of one of the Arches of London Bridge; paying Ten Shillings into the Chamber of London, as an Acknowledgment. Two Years after, the City let him another Leaſe; wherein they granted him the ſame Term of Five Hundred Years, and another, that is, the Second Arch of the Bridge; ſeeing him ſo well perform what he undertook in the firſt, as that Leaſe ſpecified.

Charles Hopton.

The Leaſe of Morice for the Thames Water ſold to Soams.

This Leaſe and the Buſineſs and Benefit thereof hath continued in the Family of the Morices till Michaelmas 1701. When the preſent Owner perceiving how the New River undermined him, and impaired his Profits, he agreed to ſell all his Right and Title to Richard Soams, Citizen and Goldſmith of London, for the Sum of 38000 l. But Soams foreſeeing that he ſhould have need of another Arch for more Water, Morice, the better to enable Soams to go through with this great Bargain, petitioned the City for another Arch, to raiſe more Water. Hereupon there were ſeveral Committees appointed to examine, whether the granting the Fourth Arch (for the Third belonged to a Wharfinger) would not incommode, and be a Stoppage to the River. But they brought in their Report, that it would be no Damage to let the Fourth Arch go to this Uſe. And it was granted to Morice; and he added his whole Intereſt in this Grant of the Fourth Arch to Soams's Bargain.

Thus having gotten through with Morice, he took a Leaſe of the City at Twenty Shillings, and 300 l. Fine, for ſo much Time as was unexpired of the Five Hundred Years granted to Morice. And now Soams hath divided the Propriety of this Leaſe into Three Hundred Shares, and made it a Company; the Price of each Share being ſet at 500 l. And ſo the Profits to be divided. It hath a good Proſpect of turning to Account, and to gain upon the New River, having ſome Advantages of that Water.

Maribone Water.

There is another Water for the Supply of the City, called Maribone Water, becauſe it comes from Maribone: And ſeveral other Conduit Waters there be; which the City let to certain Perſons, at 700 l. a Year, and 5650 l. Fine, and a Year's Rent aforehand. It was let preſently after the Orphans Act was obtained. Theſe Leſſees had made a very hard Bargain for themſelves; and my Lord Keeper diſcharged them of it. Now the City hath let all theſe Conduit Waters to the beforeſaid Soams, at the former Rent of 700 l. per Ann. Tax-free. And ſo he hath within himſelf and his Partners all the Waters that ſupply the City, except the New River. In this Leaſe alſo the City hath reſerved to themſelves the Proportion of Five Ton an Hour of the ſaid Conduit Water, for the Uſe of the Priſons and Counters, and other publick Places. Tho' it hath been thought by ſome, that all the Water of thoſe Conduits would hardly afford ſo much.

Supply of Water for Southwark.

Let it be added, that Southwark might alſo be well ſupplied with this neceſſary Thing, Water, and, that the City might withal be good Huſbands for themſelves, to raiſe their Revenue as much as they could; they revived an old Act of Parliament, whereby the City had Power to have Water on all ſides of London for Five Miles about, to bring a Supply thereof to the City. So on Southwark ſide, for the furniſhing that Borough with good Water, ſome Gentlemen took a Leaſe of the City for Waters ariſing that way, at 550 l. Fine, and 250 l. a Year. But after all their Pains, they could find no Water ſufficient for their Purpoſe that way; and ſo the Lord Keeper diſcharged them upon their Inability. Southwark uſeth chiefly the Water of Thames; that falls into a great Pond in S. Mary Overies, that drives a Mill, called S. Saviour's Mill. The Owner whereof is one Mr. Gulſton. The Revenue thereof is ſuppoſed by ſome to be worth 1300 l. a Year.

Excellent Springs within the City.

Beſides theſe Waters brought into the City from abroad, it affords Abundance of excellent Springs every where within it ſelf; the Waters whereof are much commended: Particularly, the Pump at S. Martin's Outwich Church, the Pump near S. Antholin's Church, the Pump in S. Paul's Church-yard, the Pump in Chriſt's Hoſpital: At all which Places, and others, are Iron Diſhes hanging, for the Uſe of Strangers to drink in. There be alſo many good Springs in the Lanes aſcending from Thames-ſtreet.]

Thus much for Waters ſerving this City; Firſt, by Rivers, Brooks, Bourns, Fountains, Pools, &c. And ſince by Conduits, partly made by good and charitable Citizens, and otherwiſe by Charges of the Commonalty; as ſhall be more amply ſhewed in our Deſcription of the Wards wherein they are placed.

And now ſome Benefactors to theſe Conduits ſhall be remembred.

Benefactors towards the Water-Conduits.

In the Year 1236, certain Merchant Strangers, of Cities beyond the Seas, to wit, of Amiens, Corby, and Nele, for Privileges which they enjoyed in this City, gave 100 l. towards the Charges of conveying Water from the Town of Teyborne.

Robert Large, Maior, 1439, gave to the new Water Conduits then in hand, 40 Marks; and towards the Vaulting over of Walbroke, near to the Pariſh Church of S. Margaret's in Lothbury, 200 Marks.

Sir William Eaſtfield, Maior, 1438, conveyed Water from Teyborne to Fleetſtreet, where he began a Conduit, and to Aldermanbury, and from * Hightory to Creplegate.

* Highberie firſt Edit.

William Bucke, Taylor, in the Year 1494, towards Repairing of Conduits, gave 100 Marks.

Dame Thomaſin, Widow, late Wife to Sir John Percivall, Merchant Taylor, Maior, in the Year 1498, gave toward the Conduit in Oldborne, 20 Marks.

Richard Shore, one of the Sheriffs, 1505, gave to the Conduit in Oldborne, 10 l.

Edward Jackman, one of the Sheriffs, 1564, gave towards the Conduits, 100 l.

Bernard Randulph, Common Serjeant of the City, 1583, gave to the Water Conduits, 900 l.

Thus much for the Conduits of freſh Water to this City.

How this Vaſt and Populous City of London, with its Suburbs, is ſupplied with Water.

R. B.

Of the forementioned Conduits of freſh Water that ſerve the City, the greater Part of them do ſtill continue, where firſt erected; but ſome, by reaſon of the great Quantity of Ground they took up, ſtanding in the midſt of the principal and high Streets of the City, were a great Hinderance not only to Foot Paſſengers, but to Porters, Coaches and Cars; and therefore thought fit to be taken down, and to be removed to Places more convenient, and not of that Reſort of People. So that the Water is ſtill the ſame.

The Conduits taken away and removed with their Ciſterns, are,

The great Conduit at the Eaſt End of Cheapſide.
The great Conduit called the Tun in Cornhill.
The Standard in Cheapſide.
The little Conduit at the Weſt End of Cheapſide.
The Conduit in Fleetſtreet.
The great Conduit in Graſs Church Street.
The ſmall Conduit in the Stocks Market.
The Conduit at Dowgate.

The reſt of the Conduits beforementioned are ſtill remaining. So that, what with the Spring Water coming from the ſeveral Spring Heads through the Streets of the City to theſe Ciſterns, the New River Water from Chadwell and Amwell, and the Thames Water raiſed by ſeveral Engines, or Waterhouſes; there is not a Street in London, but one or other of theſe Waters runs through it in Pipes, conveyed under Ground: And from thoſe Pipes, there is ſcarce a Houſe, whoſe Rent is 15 or 20 l. per Ann. but hath the Convenience of Water brought into it, by ſmall Leaden Pipes laid into the great ones. And for the ſmaller Tenements, ſuch as are in Courts and Alleys, there is generally a Cock or Pump common to the Inhabitants; ſo that I may boldly ſay, there is never a City in the World that is ſo well ſerved with Water.]

CHAP. VI.

Of the Ancient and Famous River of THAMES; Whence it deriveth her Head or Original, and ſo conveyeth it ſelf on to the City's Service; being ſupplied by divers other ſweet Rivers in her Courſe. Its Tides and Overflowings.

The River of Thames a chief Honour to the whole Land, and eſpecially to the City of London.

[A. M.

YOU have already heard, what Rivers, Brooks, Bourns, Pools and Conduits of freſh Water have liberally afforded (out of their Plenty) moſt commodious Help for the Service of ſo great a City. And yet the River of Thames, much more famous than all the reſt, yielding by Forciers, Conduits, and other Means of Conveyance, ineſtimable Benefit to the City, we have ſaid little or nothing of her due Worth, neither of her Antiquity, Courſe and Original; all which deſerve to be more eſpecially reſpected. According therefore to the Advice of very wiſe and learned Judgments, and borrowing ſuch Helps as they have gladly lent me, I will begin with the Head or Spring of this famous River, and ſhew how it glideth along in Current, until it come to embrace the Boſom of the Sea, and there to take up her Entertainment in his liquid Arms.

The Head or Beginning o
the Thames ou of the ſide o
an Hill in Coſ
wold, near t
Tetbury.

Giving credit to ſuch Mens Writings, as have (of ſet Purpoſe) ſought out the Spring of the Thames, it is faithfully affirmed, That this famous Stream hath her Head or Beginning out of the ſide of an Hill, ſtanding in the Plains of Cotſwold, in Glouceſterſhire, about a Mile from Tetbury, in the ſame County, near unto the Foſſe, (an Highway ſo called of old) where it was ſometime named Iſis, or the Ouſe: although divers do (ignorantly) call it Thames even there; rather of a fooliſh Cuſtom, than any Skill; becauſe they either neglect, or are utterly ignorant, how it was named at the firſt. From hence it runneth directly toward the Eaſt, (as all good Rivers ſhould do) and meeteth with the Cirne or Churne, a Brook, called

Iſis, or the Ouſe.

The Cirne ca
led Corinium.

called in Latin Corinium; whereof Cirnceſter Town in Glouceſterſhire (by which it cometh) doth take the Denomination in moſt Opinions.

From hence it haſteth unto Creekelade, alias Crekanford, Lechlade, Radcote Bridge, Newbridge, and Eveſham, in Worceſterſhire, receiving (by the way) an infinite ſort of ſmall Streams, Brooks, Becks, Waters and Rundels. And here (on this ſide of the Town) divideth it ſelf into two Courſes. Of which one goeth ſtraight to Botley and [Hinkſey in Berkſhire;] the other paſſeth by Godſtow [in Oxfordſhire,] a Village not far off. This latter ſpreadeth it ſelf alſo (for a while) into ſundry ſmaller Branches, which run not far, before they be reunited; and then beclipping ſundry pleaſant Meddows, it paſſeth at length by Oxford, of ſome ſuppoſed rather to be called Ouſeford, of this River: where it meeteth with the Charwell. A little from whence the original Branches do join, and go together by Abbandune (alias Senſham, or Abbington, as we call it) although no part of it (at the firſt) came ſo near the Town as it now doth, till a Branch thereof was led thither from the main Stream, through the Induſtry of the Monks, as (beſide the Teſtimony of old Records thereof, yet extant to be ſeen) by the Decay of Cair Dour, now Dorcheſter it ſelf, ſometime the Thorowfare from Wales, and the Weſt Country, unto London, which enſued upon this Fact, is eaſy to be ſeen.

Creeklade. Lechlade. Radcotebridge. Newbridge, Eveſham.

Oxford or Ouſeford, ſo called of the River. Charwell.

Abbandune, or Abbington.

Some write that the main Stream was brought thither, which ran before between Andredeſly and Culingham. Cair Dour, Dorcheſter.

From hence it goeth to Dorcheſter in Dorſetſhire, and ſo unto Thame in Oxfordſhire, where joining with a River of the ſame Denomination, it loſeth the Name of Iſis or Ouſe, (whereof Ouſennie at Oxford is producted) and from thence is called Thameſis all along as it paſſeth. From Thame it goeth to Wallingford [in Berkſhire,] and ſo to Reading in the ſame County; which (in Time paſt) of the Number of Bridges there, was called Pontium. Albeit, that the Engliſh Name doth rather proceed from Rhee or Ree, the Saxon Word for a Water-Courſe or River; which may be ſeen in Overee, or Suthree, or Surrey, for over the Ree, or South of the Ree; as to the Skilful doth readily appear. Yet ſome hold, (and not altogether againſt Probability and Likelihood, that the Word Suthree, is ſo called of Sudrijc; to wit, the South Kingdom, whereunto (in part) the Thames is a Bound. But that holdeth not in Denomination, either of the ſaid Church, or name of the foreſaid County. Others affirm likewiſe, that Reading is ſo called of the Greek Word (ῥέω, R E O) which is to overflow.

Thameſis at Thame, and ſo forward.

Reding, ſometime Pontium.

Sudryc, the South Kingdom.

(REO) Reding, to overflow.

Surely, as neither of theſe Conjectures are to be contemned, ſo the laſt cometh moſt near to mine Aid, who affirm, that not only the Courſe of every Water it ſelf, but alſo his overflowing, was in times paſt called Rhee, by ſuch Saxons as inhabited this Iſland. And even to this Day, in Eſſex I have oft obſerved, that when the Lower Grounds (by rage of Waters) have been overflown, the People beholding the ſame have ſaid, All is on a Rhee; as if they would have ſaid, all is now a River. Albeit the Word River is derived from the French, and borrowed by them from the Latins; but not without Corruption, as it was brought to them. I will not here give notice how far they are deceived, which call the aforeſaid Church by the Name of St. Mary Auderies, or St. Mary over Iſe or Iſis. But I will proceed with the Courſe of this Noble Stream; which, howſoever theſe Matters ſtand, it hath paſſed by Reading, and there received the Kenet, which cometh from the Hills that lye Weſt of Marlborough and Wilts, and then the Thetis, commonly called the Tide, that cometh from Thetisford. It hyeth thence to Sudlington, otherwiſe called Maidenhead in Berks, and ſo to Windleſhore, or Windſore, Eaton, and then to Chertſey in Surrey, where Erkenwald, Biſhop of London, ſometime builded a Religious Houſe or Cell, as I do read.

The Saxon Name to Watercourſes and Overflows.

All is on a Rhee, All is now a River.

S. Mary Auderies, S. Mary over Iſis or Iſe.

Kenet.

Thetis coming from Thetisford.

Sudlington. Maidenhead. Windleſhore. Eaton, Chertſey.

From Chertſey it haſteth directly unto Stanes, and receiving another Stream by the way called the Cole, (whereupon Colebrooke ſtandeth) it goeth by [Waybridge, where Guildford River falleth in, thence to Shepperton, Walton upon Thames, Sunbury, Hampton Town, and Court,] Kingſton, called Kingſton upon Thames, Shene, Sion, Brentford, or Bregentford. Where it meeteth with the Brane or the Brene, another Brook deſcending from Edgeworth. Upon this Brook alſo, Sir John Thinne had ſometime a ſumptuous and ſtately Houſe, with a marvellous Proviſion to incloſe and retain ſuch Fiſh as ſhould come about the ſame. From Brentford it paſſeth by Mortlake, Putney, Fulham, Batterſey, Chelſey, Lambeth, and ſo to London.

Our famous River being thus brought to London, and haſting on apace to meet with Oceanus her Amorous Husband; the firſt Water that it then meeteth withal is the Brome on Kent ſide, Weſt of Greenwich, whoſe Head is Bromis in Bromley Pariſh; and going thence to Lewſham, it taketh in a Water from the Eaſt, and ſo directeth its Courſe forth right unto the Thames.

The next Water that it meeteth withal is on Eſſex ſide, almoſt againſt Woolwich, and that is the Lee or Ley. And being paſt that, the Darwent alſo meeteth with our Thames on Kent ſide, two Miles and more beneath Erith, it riſing at Tunbridge. The next River that falleth into the Thames, is Weſt of the Wanie Iſles, a Rill of no great Fame, neither long Courſe; for, riſing about Coringham, it runneth not many Miles Eaſt and by South, till it falls into the Mouth of this River which I do now deſcribe. Laſt of all we come to the Medway, a notable River, in mine Opinion, watering all the South and South Weſt Parts of Kent: in whoſe Deſcription we cannot, at this time, proceed any further.

Having in this manner briefly touched this Noble River, and ſuch Brooks as fall into the ſame; I will inſert a Word or two concerning the Commodities of the ſaid River, which I will perform with ſo much Brevity as is poſſible; hereby alſo finding out her whole Tract and Courſe from the Head to the Fall thereof into the Sea. It appeareth evidently, that the Length thereof is at the leaſt an hundred and eighty Miles, if it be meaſured by the Journies of the Land. And as it is in courſe the longeſt of the three famous Rivers of this Iſle; ſo is it nothing inferior to them in abundance of all kind of Fiſh. Whereof it is hard to ſay, which of the Three have either moſt Plenty, or greateſt Variety, if the Circumſtances be duly weighed.

Commodities of this noble River.

The Length of the Thames, from the Head to the Fall into the Sea.

What ſome others write concerning the Rivers of their Countries, it ſkilleth not, neither will I (as divers do) invent ſtrange things of this noble Stream, therewith to nobilitate, and make it more honourable: But this will I in plain Terms affirm, that it neither ſwalloweth up Baſtards of the Celtiſh Brood, nor caſteth up the right-begotten that are thrown in, (without hurt) into their Mothers Lap; as Politian fableth of the Rhene, Epiſtolarum, lib. 8. Epiſt. 6. nor yieldeth Clots of Gold, as the Tagus doth; but an infinite Plenty of excellent, ſweet and pleaſant Fiſh, wherewith ſuch as inhabit near to her Banks, are fed and fully nouriſhed.

An honourable Affirmation of the River of Thames.

Politian in lib. 8. Epiſt. Epiſt. 6.

What ſhould I ſpeak of the fat and ſweet Salmons daily taken in this Stream, and that in ſuch Plenty, (after the Time of the Smelt is paſt) as no River in Europe is able to exceed it? But what Store alſo of Barbels, Trowts, Chevins, Pearches, Smelts, Breams, Roches, Daces, Gudgeons, Flounders, Shrimps, Eeles, &c. are commonly to be had therein, I refer me to them that know by Experience better than I, by reaſon of their daily

The great Plenty of fat and ſweet Salmons taken in the Thames daily.

Trade

The Spoil and Havock of covetous Fiſhermen.

Carps a Fiſh late brought into England, and later into the Thames.

Trade of Fiſhing in the ſame. And albeit, it ſeemeth from time to time to be, as it were, defrauded in ſundry wiſe, of theſe her large Commodities, by the inſatiable Avarice of Fiſhermen; yet this famous River complaineth commonly of no want; but the more it loſeth at one time, the more it yieldeth at another. Only in Carps it ſeemeth to be ſcant, ſith (not long ſince) that kind of Fiſh was brought over into England, and but of late (to ſpeak of) into this Stream, by the violent Rage of Land Floods, that break open the Heads and Dams of divers Gentlemens Ponds, by which means it became ſomewhat Partaker alſo of this ſaid Commodity, whereof, before, it had no Portion that I could ever hear.

The River choaked up with Sands and Shelves in many Places, a Matter much pitied, and requiring Redreſs.

Oh! that this worthy River might be ſpared but one Year from Nets, &c. but alas! then ſhould many a poor Man be undone. In the mean time, it is lamentable to ſee, how it is and hath been choaked of late with Sands and Shelves, by the penning and wreſting of the Courſe of the Water for Commodities ſake. But as this is an Inconveniency eaſily remedied, if good Order were taken for the Redreſs thereof; ſo now the Fine or Pay ſet upon the Ballaſt, ſometimes freely given to the Merchants by Patent, even to the Lands end, (juſques aupoinct) will be another Cauſe of Harm to this noble Stream; and all through the Advantage taken at the want of an (i) in the Word ponct; which grew through an Error committed by an *Engliſh*Notary, unskilful in the French Tongue, wherein that Patent was granted.

The River ebbeth and floweth every 12 Hours, for the Length of 70 Miles.

The Alteration and Difference of the Tides.

The juſt Diſtance between one Tide and another.

Furthermore, the ſaid River floweth and filleth all her Channels twice in the Day and Night; that is, in every twelve Hours once; and this ebbing and flowing holdeth on for the Space of 70 Miles within the main Land, the Stream or Tide being always higheſt at London, when the Moon doth exactly touch the North Eaſt, and South or Weſt Points of the Heavens [which yet by and by will be ſhewn to be erroneous] of which one is viſible, the other under the Earth, and not in our Sight. Theſe Tides alſo differ in their Times, each one coming later than other, by ſo many Minutes as paſs; yet the Revolution and natural Courſe of the Heavens do reduce and bring about the ſaid Planet to theſe her former Places, whereby the common difference between one Tide and another is found to conſiſt of 24 Minutes, which wanteth but 12 of a whole Hour in 24, as experience doth confirm. In like ſort, we ſee by daily Trial, that each Tide is not of equal height and greatneſs. For at the full and change of the Moon, we have the greateſt Floods; and ſuch is their extraordinary Courſe, that as they diminiſh from their Changes and Fulls unto the firſt and laſt Quarters; ſo afterwards they encreaſe again until they come to the Full and Change.

The extraordinary Riſing of the Tides: and how cauſed.

The Stream oftentimes check'd in her Entrance into the Land.

Sometimes alſo they riſe ſo high, (if the Wind be at the North, or North-Eaſt, which bringeth in the Water with more Vehemency, becauſe the Tide that filleth the Channel, cometh from Scotland-ward) that the Thames overfloweth her Banks near unto London; which happeneth eſpecially in the Fulls and Changes of January and February, wherein the lower Grounds are (of Cuſtom) ſooneſt drowned. This Order of flowing in like ſort is perpetual; ſo that when the Moon is on the South-Weſt and North of Points, then is the Water at London at the higheſt. Neither do the Tides alter, except ſome rough Winds out of the Weſt or South-Weſt, do keep back and check the Stream in her Entrance; as the Eaſt and North-Eaſt do haſten the coming in thereof, or elſe ſome other extraordinary Occaſion put by the ordinary Courſe of the Northern Seas, which do fill the ſaid River by their natural Return and Flowing. And that both theſe do happen eſtſoones among, I refer me to ſuch as have not ſeldom obſerved it; as alſo the ſenſible chopping in of three or four Tides in one natural Day, whereof the unskilful do deſcant many things, according to their Minds.

Two ſeveral times of the Moon, the Waters find their true Courſe.

The Error of Pylydore Virgil.

But howſoever theſe ſmall Matters do fall out, and how often ſoever this Courſe of the Stream doth happen to be diſturbed; yet at two ſeveral times of the Moon, the Waters return to their natural Courſe and Limits of Time exactly. Polydore ſaith, that this River is ſeldom encreaſed, or rather never overfloweth her Banks by LandFloods; but he is herein very much deceived, as it ſhall more apparently be ſeen hereafter. For the more that this River is put by of her right Courſe, the more the Water muſt of Neceſſity ſwell with the white Waters which run down from the Land; becauſe the Paſſage cannot be ſo ſwift and ready in the winding, as in the ſtraight Courſe.

Land-Floods do much ſtain the Streams Fineneſs.

Thames Water as clear as that of the Sea.

The Objection of Ariſtotle anſwered.

The Land Floods alſo do greatly ſtain the Fineneſs of the Stream, inſomuch that after a great Land Flood, you take up Haddocks with your Hands beneath the Bridge, as they float aloft on the Water; whoſe Eyes are ſo blinded with the Thickneſs of that Element, that they cannot ſee where to become, and make ſhift to ſave themſelves, before Death take hold on them. Otherwiſe the Water, of it ſelf, is very clear; and, in compariſon, next unto that of the Sea, which is moſt ſubtle and pure of all other; as that of great Rivers is moſt excellent in compariſon of ſmall Brooks. Although Ariſtotle will have the Salt Water to be moſt groſs, becauſe a Ship will bear a greater Burden on the Sea, than on the freſh Water, and an Egg ſinks in this, that ſwimmeth in the other. But he may eaſily be anſwered, by the Quantity of room, and abundance of Waters in the Sea, whereby it becometh of more force to ſuſtain ſuch Veſſels as are committed to the ſame, and whereunto the greateſt Rivers are nothing comparable.

The Bridge over the Thames.

Swans.

Two thouſand Boats upon the Thames, and three thouſand poor Men maintained by the ſame, whoſe Gains come in moſt, in the Term time.

I would here make mention of ſundry Bridges over this noble Stream; of which, that of London is moſt chiefly to be commended; for it is, in a manner, a continual Street, well repleniſhed with large and ſtately Houſes on both ſides, and ſituate upon twenty Arches, whereof each one is made of excellent Free Stone, every of them being threeſcore Foot in height, and full twenty in Diſtance one from another, as I have often viewed. Of the Antiquity of this Bridge we ſhall take a Place to write of. In the like manner, I could treat of the infinite Number of Swans daily to be ſeen upon this River; and of two thouſand Wherries and ſmall Boats, whereby three thouſand poor Watermen are maintained (as was ſaid before) through the Carriage and Re-carriage of ſuch Perſons as paſs or repaſs from time to time upon the ſame. Beſide thoſe huge Tide-boats, Tilt-boats, and Barges, which either carry Paſſengers, or bring neceſſary Proviſions from all Quarters of Oxfordſhire, Berkſhire, Buckinghamſhire, Bedfordſhire, Hertfordſhire, Middleſex, Eſſex, Surrey, and Kent, unto the City of London.]

The Tides.

J. S.

Now concerning the Tides of this River, and its Overflowings of the Lands about it, there being ſeveral things remarkable, we ſhall tarry a little the longer upon them; and to what hath been ſaid, add theſe Obſervations that follow.] And Firſt,

Of the Flux and Reflux: Or, of the Ebbing of the River of Thames.

An Error as to the Time of High Water.

R. B.

It is a received Opinion, (but a vulgar Error) that it is High Water at London, when the Moon is either upon the South Eaſt, or North Weſt Point of the Heavens; but this general Rule is only true under the Poles, where the Equinoctial and Horizon are the ſame. And it alſo ſuppoſeth, that the Departure of the Moon from the Sun were at all times equal; in both which reſpects the Rule is defective.

For at London, (which lies in 51 Degrees 30 Minutes of North Latitude) where a South-Weſt or a North-Eaſt Moon makes a full Sea, or High Water; and that is at Three of the Clock, (and this is true, when the Moon is in either of the Equinoctial Signs Aries, or Libra, or near thereunto, and hath no Latitude) but in the ſame Place, (viz. London) the Moon being in Cancer, and having 5 Degrees of North Latitude, it will be 30 Minutes after Ten of the Clock before the Moon will be at North-Eaſt, which ſhould be at Nine of the Clock by the vulgar Rule, which is an Hour and a half too late: And the ſame Day ſhe will be South-Weſt at half an hour after One, which is an hour and half too ſoon.

The former Error amend-ed.

Now to correct this Error, and to prove the true Time of High Water at Londonbridge, it will be beſt performed by knowing the Day of the New or Full Moon, which every Almanack will acquaint you with; for upon the Day of the New or Full Moon, it will be High Water at London-bridge at Three of the Clock, and every Day after at ſuch Hours and Minutes as this Table doth ſhew.

The TYDE TABLE.

| Days after the New, or Full Moon. | Time of High Water at London. | |
|---|---|---|
| | Ho. | Min. |
| New Moon.Full Moon. | 3 | 00 |
| 1 | 3 | 48 |
| 2 | 4 | 31 |
| 3 | 5 | 14 |
| 4 | 5 | 52 |
| 5 | 6 | 30 |
| 6 | 7 | 3 |
| 7 | 7 | 36 |
| 8 | 8 | 24 |
| 9 | 9 | 27 |
| 10 | 10 | 30 |
| 11 | 11 | 28 |
| 12 | 12 | 26 |
| 13 | 1 | 19 |
| 14 | 2 | 12 |

This Table needs not much explaining the Uſe thereof; for if you look for any Day in the Year in your Almanack, you may quickly count how many Days are paſt ſince the laſt New or Full Moon, then find that Number in the firſt Column of this Table; and right againſt it in the ſecond, you have the Hour and Minute that it will be High Water at London Bridge that Day. So if you ſhould find in your Almanack any Day to be 5 Days after the New or Full Moon, look for 5 in the firſt Column, and right againſt it ſtands 6 Hours and 30 Minutes; and at that time it will be High Water at London Bridge. But here you are to take notice, that there is a conſiderable Difference between the Spring Tydes and the Neap Tydes, in reſpect of Time; for the Neap Tydes will be ſometimes an Hour or more ſooner than the Table gives them to be, as hath been before taken notice of, and ſhall be made more manifeſt by what follows.

he Uſe of is Table.

ifference be-ixt Spring d Neap ydes.

Of the Tydes in the River of Thames.

There are in this River Three Things worthy to be obſerved, viz. Its Spring Tydes, its Overflowing its Banks, and its ſtrange ſhifting of Tydes at ſome times; touching all which, I ſhall deliver the Conceptions of two Learned Philoſophers of our Age. And firſt, things ob-vable in the ames.

Of Spring Tydes.

ring Tydes.

Theſe Tydes are higher than ordinary, and do happen about every Full and Change of the the Moon. The great French Philoſopher Des Cartes endeavours to give us the Reaſon of it, telling us, that from the Theorique of the Moon, that the Moon moves ſo in her Eliptical Orb about the Earth, that at her Full and Change ſhe comes nearer to the Earth, and in each Quarter goes further from it. Whence (from this Hypotheſis) greater Tydes muſt be at the Full and Change; and Neap or Low Tydes at the Quarters; all which, for the moſt part, is true indeed; and without doubt the Moon's Nearneſs at the Full and Change is the Cauſe of the Spring Tydes, even as the Moon's being further off at the Quarters makes then the Neap Tydes.

Greater Tydes at the New and Full Moons.

Neap Tydes at the Quarters.

Mr. Childrey.

But there is another thing conſiderable (ſays another Philoſopher) in the buſineſs, which Des Cartes doth not conſider, or it may be, did not know; that is, that the Spring Tydes in our River of Thames come not juſt upon the Full or Change, but two or three Days after, and the like doth the Neap Tydes after the Quarters; which is againſt his Hypotheſis. Therefore to untye this Knot; I conceive the Cauſe why the Spring Tydes are at the higheſt two or three Days after the Full and Change, and not on the very Day, is the ſame with that, why the ſharpeſt pinching Time of Winter comes not juſt in the ſhorteſt Day, when the Sun is at the loweſt with us, but in January, and about four or five Weeks after: Why alſo the coldeſt Time of the Night is not at Midnight, but about Break of Day. Why the hotteſt Time in Summer is in July, 4 or 5 Weeks after the Solſtice; and why the hotteſt time of the Day is not juſt at Noon, but about Two or Three of the Clock in the Afternoon.

The Reaſons about the High Tydes not being at Full or New Moons.

Why the coldeſt time is not at the ſhorteſt Day; and the hotteſt not at the longeſt.

To demonſtrate the Reaſon of this, he ſaith, Let us ſuppoſe a large Ciſtern, having a Cock at (or towards) the Bottom of it, that conſtantly lets out Six Gallons of Water in a certain ſpace of Time; and over the Ciſtern, ſuppoſe another Cock that conveys Water from ſome other Place into this Ciſtern, and which runs at firſt but very ſlow, but after by Degrees faſter and faſter, until at laſt it lets in 8 Gallons in the ſame Space of Time that the Cock below lets out 6 Gallons. And farther, let us ſuppoſe, that the Cock above, after it hath continued running for ſome ſpace of Time after the Rate of 8 Gallons, doth decreaſe by the ſame Degrees (that before it increaſed by) to 7 Gallons, and ſo to 6, 5, 4, and ſo leſs and leſs, until at length it quite gives over running. There is no Man, I think, but will ſay, that this Ciſtern will be fuller of Water, when it hath decreaſed it from 8 Gallons in a Space to 7 Gallons; and yet fuller when it is decreaſed to 6 Gallons and a half, than when it was at 7; and fulleſt of all juſt before is decreaſed to 6 Gallons in a Square; becauſe till that time there comes more Water into the Ciſtern at the Cock than, there goes at the other.

An Experiment to explain this Reaſon.

Even ſo, though the Heat of the Sun, ſimply conſidered in it ſelf, be not ſo great about the Middle of July, as to the Solſtice in June, becauſe he is deſcended lower; yet becauſe the Heat that the Sun ſends forth in the Air every Day, is greater than the Cold which his Abſence cauſeth by Night, nothing can follow thereupon but an Increaſe of the Heat. And the like may be ſaid of Afternoon Heats, January after Winters, Morning Colds, and of Spring Tides, coming behind the Full Moons, and the Changes.

Of the Overflowing of the Banks.

The Thames overflowing its Banks, proceedeth from ſeveral Cauſes.

The Cauſe of the Thames overflowing.

Firſt, From great Rains, whereby the freſh Waters raiſe up the River, and going down to the Sea are ſtopt by the Floods, whence they muſt needs ſwell above their uſual Height. Of this there was a notable Example in the Year 1555, where by reaſon of exceſſive Rains that had fallen, all St. Georges Fields in Southwark, as alſo the Palace Tard, even Weſtminſter Hall, were overflown.

The Cauſe thereof.

Secondly, Inundations of the Thames may be cauſed by boiſterous Northweſt Winds, which generally cauſe very great Tides, not only in the Thames at the Mouth thereof, but on the Coaſt of Holland, Flanders, Picardy, and the Shores of England oppoſite to them. And this is, becauſe that Wind doth with equal Force blow in the Tide of Flood at both Ends of this Iſland, both Weſtwards and Northwards.

Another Cauſe.

Thirdly, There is another Cauſe of great Tydes and Inundations in the Thames, which is not commonly taken notice of, and that is, the Moon's being in the Perigeon, or in that Part of her Orb neareſt to the Earth; for if (as aforeſaid) the Moon's coming nearer the Earth at her Full and Change makes her Spring Tides; and her withdrawing farther from the Earth at her Quarters makes the Neap Tides, it muſt doubtleſs follow, that if to the Proximiority which the Moon hath to the Earth, by moving in her Eclipſis, there be added that Proximiority which ſhe hath in her Eccentrick (or oppoſite Angles) ſhe ſhould operate ſo much the more extraordinarily upon the Sea, and make the higher Spring Tydes at ſuch Full and Charge. And on the contrary, that when ſhe is eſtranged from us by a double Elongation of the Quarter in her Elipſis, and of her Auge in her Eccentrick, ſhe ſhould operate ſo much the more weakly there ordinarily, and to that Quarter make a ſlack Neap Tyde.

Of the ſtrange ſhifting of the Tydes ſometimes in the River of Thames.

The Cauſe of the ſhifting of the Tydes.

In the Thames, at ſome times there hapeneth ſtrange ſhifting of the Tydes, which is reckoned for a Prodigy, becauſe it hapeneth but ſeldom, and yet it is by ſome known to proceed from a natural Cauſe, as well as other common Effects; now for the finding out the Cauſe I will ſpeak of ſeveral of theſe Shiftings that have happened as taken notice off by our Hiſtorians.

1. On the 12th of October, 1411, the Thames flowed thrice in one Day.

2. On the 17th of September, 1550, the Thames Flowed and Ebbed three times in nine Hours below the Bridge.

3. On the 26th of January, 1564, at Night there were two Tides in two Hours at London-bridge; and likewiſe, next Day there were two in the Morning, and two at Night. And on Sunday the 28th of the ſaid Month, two Tides in the Morning, and at Night but one, as it uſed to be, and ſo continued.

4. On the 6th of November, 1574, in the Morning there happened two great Tydes, the firſt in Courſe, and the other within an Hour after, which overflowed the Marſhes at Lambeth, and many Vaults and Sellers adjoining.

5. On the 19th of February, 1608, it ſhould have been dead low Water at the Bridge, but inſtead thereof it was high Water, and preſently it Ebbed almoſt half an Hour to a Foot Depth, and then ſuddenly it flowed almoſt two Foot higher than it did before, and then Ebbed again, until it came near to its right Courſe, ſo that the next Flood began (in a manner) as it ſhould do. All this happened, ſaith the Chronology, before Twelve a Clock at Noon, the Weather being indifferent Calm.

6. On the 6th of February, 1609, there was a ſtrange ſhifting of the Tydes, but our Author gives not the Time.

7. On the 3d of January, 1622, in the Morning, the Thames ſhifted four Tydes in five Hours, viz. two Floods, and two Ebbs, and then kept its right Courſe.

8. On the 2d of February, 1653, the Thames Ebbed and Flowed thrice in ſix Hours; and the little ſhifting of the Tydes was obſerved in the Maritime Places in Kent at the ſame time.

9. On the 3d of October, the Thames Ebbed and Flowed twice in three Hours.

10. On All-ſaints Day, 1660, betwixt Ten a Clock at Night, and Five the next Morning, there was an unuſual ſhifting of the Tydes; Ebbing and Flowing three times in that Space. But if we examine theſe Shiftings, we ſhall find that in all of them the Tydes were very ſlack, and in a manner at the very neapneſs; and that in all of them (except two, viz. in 1574, and in 1656 (the Moon was in Apogœo, about three or four Days before the Shifting, to make them (if poſſible) more ſlack and neap. By the Examples in 1654, and 1660, I can't but think, that the Cauſe of the ſhifting of the Tydes, is only the overbearing of their Courſe, when at the ſlack by a Northweſt Wind, which is the moſt powerful Adverſary they can have upon our Coaſt; for if a ſlow Ebb be encountered full in the Teeth, what can follow but a Return of the Tyde again? And if the Northweſt Wind either abates its Fierceneſs, or ſhifts into ſome other Quarter, as the Southweſt or Northeaſt for ſome ſhort time, and then either return to its former Place, or reſume its former Force, and does thus once, twice, or thrice (which is uſual at Sea, though at Land its Wandrings are not ſenſible) we ſhall eaſily believe (ſeeing ſo plain a Reaſon for it) that there will be a playing of the Tyde to and fro, and ſeveral Floods and Ebbs ſucceeding one another in a few Hours. And it may be, this ſhifting of the Tydes is the more notable in the Thames, becauſe of its gentle Ebb to the Seaward, which is the more eaſily turned, whereas a ſwift Current in a River would prevail over theſe Irregularities.

Furthermore, in the Example of 1660, it happened upon a Northweſterly Wind, ſometimes blowing pretty freſh, and the Tydes were then at the neapeſt. Indeed in this Shifting the Moon was not in Apogæo, but almoſt in the very Place of her Perigæum. Which makes me think the Apogæoſis is not altogether ſo neceſſary, but that the Neapneſs of the Tydes and the Wind were able to do it of themſelves, (aſſiſted I mean with a private Cauſe,) ſo the alternate Intentions, and Remiſſions of the Wind be but proportionably greater, to ſupply the Want of the Apogæoſis.]

CHAP. VII.

A Survey of the River of Thames, as far as it lyes under the Care and Inſpection of the Lord Maior. And what Care hath been taken of it by the City.

The Extent of Thames under the Juriſdiction of the Lord Maior, and City.

A. M.

HAVING thus far proceeded in the Deſcription of this famous River, even from her Head and Original, till her being embraced by the Sea; I thought good to go on a little further concerning the Extent of the Thames's Juriſdiction; which is, from a Place called Colnie Ditch, a little above the Bridge of Stares, Weſtward, to London Bridge; and from thence to a certain Place called Tendal, alias Tenland, alias Tenleet; and likewiſe of the Water of Medway, as being Matter more proper to the City of London's Survey, than any other Diſcourſe elſe whatſoever. For many Years, the Authority and Juriſdiction of this River hath undoubtedly belonged unto the Lord Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, by the ſufficient Teſtimony of divers Grants, Charters and Confirmations, made by the precedent Kings and Queens of this Land, and by his moſt Royal Majeſty, K. James I. now reigning; beſide ſundry Acts of Parliament ordained to that End. But becauſe ſome Queſtion appeared to be made by the Lord High Admiral of England, concerning that Caſe of Power or Juriſdiction, a full and final Concluſion, was at length eſtabliſhed, between the Lord High Admiral, and the Lord Maior and Commonalty of London alſo, concerning the Prerogative then queſtioned.

Acts of Parlament for the Cities Prerogative on the River.

Whereby, as in former ancient Privileges, the Right and Title hath always been evident, ſo it appeared then a plain and manifeſt Caſe, that the Lord Maior of London for the Time being, and his Succeſſors for ever in that antient Dignity, have full Power and Authority over the ſaid Rivers, the Lord Maior bearing the Stile and Title of CONSERVATOR or Preſerver of them within the forenamed Bounds and Limits; having abſolute Power of inflicting Puniſhment for all unlawful Fiſhings, either by Fiſhermen, or any other fiſhing within the ſame at any time; yea, and to ſearch, overſee, and puniſh all ſuch as ſhall abuſe his lawful Authority in thoſe Proceedings from time to time. And becauſe his great and ſerious Employments, with-hold him from ſuch attending on this important Buſineſs, as the urgent Neceſſity thereof doth almoſt continually require; He hath a Deputy or Subſtitute, named the Water Bailiff of London, who under his Honour's Authority, and by vertue of his more abſolute Power, doth continually ſearch, overſee, and puniſh all Offenders, that dare infringe thoſe Rights of Duty belonging to ſo famous a River, or make ſpoil of that, intended for general Benefit.

A Controver- between the Lord Ad- al and the y, con- ning the ver Thames, ded in be- f of the er.

he Lord aior bears e Stile of ſervator the Rivers hames and edway.

or this End hath his ater Bailiff.

And whereas there are a certain Company of Fiſhermen, called Trinkermen [or Tynkermen] frequenting the River of Thames, Eaſtward, who in times paſt, not only have been reported, but alſo manifeſtly proved and found out, to make an infinite Deſtruction of the young Brood and Frie of Fiſh, by uſe of unlawful Nets, and unpermittable Engines; feeding and glutting their Hogs with them, as Mr. Dr. Dee reporteth; by the diligent and extraordinary Coſt and Care of the Lord Maior, his Brethren, and the reſt of the Citizens of London; as alſo by the vigilant Reſpect of his worthy Officer the Water Bailiff, Day and Night attending to cut off ſuch an horrible Abuſe; thoſe unlawful Nets and Engines are now quite ſuppreſt, and a true and orderly Form of Fiſhing brought into Uſe, that ſuch Waſte and Havock may no more be made.

rinkermen, reat Deſtroy- s of the Fry Fiſh, pre- nted, and opt.

Through which Reſtraint of Robbery, and Application of continual Providence, our River of Thames (the Honour and Beauty of this whole Iſland) is become again moſt rich and plentiful, yielding daily out of her bountiful Boſom great Store of Fiſh of all Kinds, and at much more reaſonable Rates than in many Years paſt hath been ſeen; as our Weekly Markets in this honourable City can better teſtify than I report; a Matter highly to be commended, and no doubt but will be as heedfully continued.

he River of hames re- ored to her leuty.

Upon a general Complaint lately made to the Lord Maior, concerning Timbers ſtanding and being in Tilbury Hope, beneath Graveſend, a Matter not only perillous to Paſſengers upon the River, but a Cauſe alſo to deſtroy infinitely the young Breed and Fry of Fiſh, by the Harms thoſe Timbers did to Fiſhermens Nets, by reaſon of their continual ſtanding in the main Courſe, and ſpeedy Current of the Stream, which was mightily annoyed and injured thereby; his honourable Care extended ſo far, that by the Pains and Diligence of the Water Bailiff, being thereto by his Office and Place warrantably directed; thoſe grievous Hurts and Annoyances were all taken up, and conveyed to the Guildhall in London, as an Example to all that ſhould dare to offend in the like Nature, or preſume to prejudice ſuch an honourable Courſe of our Fiſhing; as it is faithfully reported, at every Tide by Day and Night, Four Buſhels of ſmall Fiſh and Fry (continually throughout the whole Year) are ſaved and preſerved by this worthy Providence; which otherwiſe had remained to the former deſperate Spoil, and continued a great hindrance to the abounding Increaſe now likely to enſue thereby.

Timbers in the Thames, no mean hurt to the River, complained of and redreſſed.

The Lord Maior and Commonalty, within the Compaſs of three Years now laſt paſt, * have cauſed this noble River of Thames Weſtward, to be cleared and cleanſed of Seventy nine Stops or Hatches, conſiſting of divers great Stakes and Piles purpoſely Erected by Fiſhermen for their private Gain; and ſtanding dangerouſly for Paſſengers, near unto the fair Deep, ſo that none of them do now remain upon the River, but only ſuch as ſtand out of the paſſable fair Way, and can be no prejudice to Paſſengers. For otherwiſe they ſerve as a great Succour to the young Breed and Fry, being planted at the Waters Bottom; and placed ſo remotely on the River, that they relieve and comfort many poor Fiſhermen thereon dwelling. Beſide, in the great Heat and Drought of Summer, when Water uſually is moſt ſcanty, theſe Stops are the Cauſe of raiſing the Waters ſo high, that Barges may well and ſafely paſs, with all kind of Goods to our antient Mother City; whereas elſe they would be grounded, how many ſoever, and be void of Paſſage by Loweneſs of the Water.

* That is, between the Years 1515, and 1518, when A. M. firſt wrote and publiſhed this.

The Lord Maior clears the Thames of many Stops or Hatches.

There is likewiſe a Number of Fiſhermen belonging to the River of Thames, ſome ſtiled by the Name of Trinkermen [or Tynkermen] of whom ſomething was ſaid before; Hebbermen, Petermen, Trawlermen, &c. that have lived in preceding Times by very unlawful Fiſhing on this River, and to the great Injury of her abounding Store. But by means of this well provided Reſtriction, ſo forwarded in the main Magiſtrate, and followed in the diligent Endeavour of the careful Water Bailiff, (making no ſpare of his Pains at all whatſoever) their Inſolency hath been reduced to a more temperate Qualification. And the awful Hand of Civil Government appeareth to carry much better Reſpect, than formerly it did.

Unlawful Fiſhermen reſtrained.

Nor let this provident Care, both for the Safety of Paſſengers on the River, and Preſervation of the Breed and Fry, be underſtood as a Matter of Novelty, without any precedent Example in elder Days; ſince it plainly appeareth, that the very like Courſe was kept and effected in the Time of K. Henry IV. the Seventh Year of his Reign, Anno Dom. 1405. Alſo more lately in the Days of K. Henry VIII, &c. As is evident by Records in divers Chronicles, and ſo warranted and avouched, as already hath been ſaid, and ſhall in more ample manner hereafter appear.

The Care the City had of the River in former Times.

Concerning the Controverſial Queſtion about the Rivers of Thames and Medway, all Variance and Difference was abſolutely concluded in the Year 1613, the 20th Day of May; Sir John Swinnerton, Knight, being then Lord Maior, and careful Conſervator of the ſaid River's Rights; and Thomas Sparrey, Eſq; his Subſtitute and reſpective Water-Bailiff, for the performing of ſuch a main Truſt repoſed in him, appertaining juſtly to his Place and Office.

The Controverſy about the Rivers decided, Sir John Swinnerton, Maior.

Courts kept eight Times a Year, in four Counties, for taking care of the Thames.

At Eight ſeveral Times yearly, within the Four Counties of Middleſex, Surrey, Kent and Eſſex, the Lord Maior of London for the Time then being, with his Brethren the Aldermen, for the better maintaining of the River's Rights and Privileges, do ſit in Perſon judicially, and charge Four Juries by Oath, to make Inquiſition after all Offences, committed upon the ſaid River. And as the Verdict, preſented by the ſaid Jury, maketh Appearance, ſo do they accordingly proceed to the Puniſhment of the Tranſgreſſors, anſwerably to the Nature of their Offences, and as to Juſtice ſhall ſeem expedient. Wherein the River's Proſperity, Safety of Paſſengers, and general Good of the Commonwealth, are their chieſeſt Reſpects.

Courts kept in the Time of Sir John Jolles, Maior.

And becauſe it may appear more probable to all Men, in what worthy manner the Lord Maior and his Brethren do proceed in this Caſe, by the Help of Mr. Edmund Howes, Gent. I have hereto added the laſt Courts that were kept about this River's Service, in the Time of Sir John Jolles, Knight, to take away all ſiniſter Scruple or Doubt, that can be otherwiſe alledged. For he being preſent in the Journey, (as I my ſelf might have been, if Leiſure would have ſo permitted) obſerved the Courſe of all that then paſſed; and as he delivered it to me, ſo have I ſet it down; with ſome few other Collections of mine own, out of ſuch Antiquities as have come to my Hands.

The Soil and Ground under Thames is the City's.

J. S.

And not only the Water of Thames, with the Fiſh therein, belong to the City, but the Soil and Ground under it is theirs alſo; being given to them by former Kings of this Land: As appears from a Writing in Q. Elizabeth's Days, (found among the MSS. of the Lord Treaſurer Burghley) proving the Sea Lands and Salt Shores thereof to be the Queen's Property. Wherein are theſe Words: "Alſo for Proof of the Princes Intereſt "in Rivers flowing from the Sea, the Thames, "and Conſervation thereof, was not only given to the City of London; but by their eſpecial Suit, the King gave therewithal the Ground "and Soil under the ſame: Whereupon if any "that hath a Houſe or Land adjoining, do make "a Strand, Stairs, or ſuch like, they pay forthwith a Rent to the City of London, how high "ſoever they be above the Low-water Mark. "Such is the Prince's Intereſt in all Rivers that "ebb and flow.]

CHAP. VIII.

A further Teſtimony concerning the River of Thames; and of the Right and Authority of the Lord Maior of London to the Conſervacy of the ſaid River: Proved learnedly, in a Charge given by the Common Serjeant, Anno 1616. An Order from K. Charles I. to the Judge of the Admiralty.

A Progreſs made by the Lord Maior to Graveſend and Lee, to keep Courts there. Edmund Howes.

IN the Year 1616, on Wedneſday, being the 3d of July, Sir John Jolles, Knight, Lord Maior of the City of London, and Conſervator of the River of Thames and Waters of Medway, aſſiſted and accompanied by Francis Jones, Edward Rotheram, Alexander Preſcot, Martin Lumley, Aldermen of London, and William Gore Alderman, and Sheriff at that Time of the ſaid City, Thomas Jones, Eſq; Common Serjeant of the ſaid City, (in the Abſence of Sir Henry Mountague, Knight, Recorder of the ſame City) attended by Thomas Sparrey, Eſq; Subconſervator of the ſaid River of Thames, with Fifty Officers and other Servants; took Barges at Belingſgate, and within few Hours arrived at Graveſend in Kent: Where a Seſſion for the Conſervacy of the ſaid River was kept before the ſaid Lord Maior, and his forenamed Aſſiſtants.

The Common Serjeant gives his Charge to the Jury at Graveſend.

At which Time and Place, a Jury of Freeholders of the ſaid County, being ſworn to enquire of all Offences, committed in any Part of that River within the ſaid County, Maſter Common Serjeant delivered them a Charge to this Effect:

"THAT foraſmuch as there had not been "any Seſſion of Conſervacy, in many Years paſt, "kept by any Lord Maior of London in that "Place, it was probable, that they could not be "well informed, neither of the Lord Maior's "Juriſdiction and Power, to reform Annoyances and Offences there, nor of the Nature "of the Service by them to be performed in the "Courſe of their Enquiry. And therefore he "thought it fit to make known unto them "both the one and the other. And hereupon "he ſhewed them, that the Juriſdiction of the "City of London in the River of Thames, from "Stanes Bridge Weſtward, unto the Points of the "River next the Sea Eaſtward, appeared to belong to the City, in Manner and Form as followeth; both in Point of Right, and in Point "of Uſage:

The City's Claim to the River proved.

In Point of Right,

I. By Preſcription.
II. By Allowance in Eire.
III. By Ancient Charters.
IV. By Acts of Parliament.
V. By Inquiſitions.
VI. By Decrees upon Hearing, coram Rege ipſo, & in Camerâ Stellatâ.
VII. By Letters Patents.
VIII. By Proclamations.
IX. By Report of the King's Council Learned.
X. By a Quo Warranto.

In Point of Uſage,

I. By Ancient Ordinances.
II. By Puniſhment of Offenders.
III. By Writs and Precepts.
IV. By Accompts for Charges of Searches, from the 17th of Rich. II. till the 2d of Q. Elizabeth.
V. By Commiſſion.
VI. By continual Claim ever ſince 37 Hen. VIII. when the Lord Admiral firſt interrupted the City, to exerciſe her Authority below London Bridge.

K. James's Charter to the City for the Thames.

And to crown all theſe Points both of Right and Uſage, & ad omnem Controverſiam Temporibus futuris tollendam; the City of London hath the King's moſt gracious and liberal Charter in that Point granted, in the Third Year of his Majeſty's moſt happy Reign.

Then the Common Serjeant went over his Arguments.

And Firſt, for Proof of Right.

I. By Preſcription.

Ex Lib. vocat. Dunthorn.

The River belonged to London Time out of Mind.

It appeareth by an ancient Book, called Dunthorne, That Civitatis Fundationis, Ædificationis, & Conſtructionis, Cauſa erat Thameſis Fluvius. Quorum vero, Civitatis & Fluminis, Gubernationem, tam Duces, Maiores, Cuſtodes, Vicecomites, Aldermanni & Magnates Civitatis memoratæ hucuſque obtinuerunt & habuerunt : i. e. The River Thames was the Cauſe of the firſt Founding, Erecting and Building of the City. The Government of which, both City and River, as well the Chiefs, the Maiors, the Keepers, the Sheriffs, the Aldermen and Eminent Men of the ſaid City, hitherto have obtained and held. So as the Government of the River hath belonged to the City Time out of Mind.

The Sheriff goes beyond Tenland, to remove Kidels that annoyed the River.

In the 21 H. III. Jordan Coventrie, one of the Sheriffs of London, was by the Maior and Aldermen ſent to remove certain Kiddels, that annoyed the Rivers of Thames and Medway ; Who ultra Tenland verſus Mare, did take divers Perſons that were Offenders, and impriſoned them. Whereupon Complaint being made to K. Henry III. he took the Matter ill at the firſt, and ſent for the Lord Maior and Citizens to Kennington. And upon hearing of the Matter before the ſaid K. Henry, the City's Juriſdiction on the River was ſet forth and allowed, and the Complainants convicted, and every of them amerced at Ten Pounds, and the Amercement adjudged to the City ; and their Nets were afterward burned, by Judgment given by the Lord Maior and Aldermen in the Huſtings.

In the 37 of H. III. Eodem Anno ante Pentecoſtem, Vicecomites London, quia Aqua Thameſiæ pertinet ad London, per præceptum dict. Dom. Regis, deriverunt omnes alios Gurgites à London uſq; Mare.

In the 1 Rich. II. Writs to the Sheriffs of Kent and Eſſex, reciting the City's Title : with Command, not to ſuffer the Citizens of London to be moleſted, contrary to the Liberties formerly granted and allowed unto them.

II. By Allowance in Eire.

The City's Juriſdiction of the River called in Queſtion.

In the 41 Hen. III. Before Hugh Bigot, being Juſtice Itinerant, the Sheriffs and Citizens of London were called in queſtion, for their Juriſdiction exerciſed on the Thames. Before whom, it was found by a Jury in Southwark, quod nullus aliquid Juris habet in Thameſia, uſque ad novum Gurgitem, niſi Cives London. i. e. That none had any Right and Title in the Thames, as far as to the new Whirlpool, but the Citizens of London.

The new Whirlpool.

The Conſtable of the Tower indicted by the Wards of London.

Lib. Antiq. Reg.

In the 14 Edw. II. Lib. Antiq. Regum, 156. The Conſtable of the Tower was indicted by divers Wards of London, before the Juſtice in Eire at the Tower : De Munerib. & Recep. conc. pro Kidellis in Thamiſiis : Concerning Kiddels ſet in the Thames, which, it ſeems, the ſaid Conſtable had received Conſideration for. Et Conſtabularius ad Kidellos reſpondet, quod Juſtic. non habent Juriſdictionem extra London, placitum ; inde cognoſcere, cum prædicti Kidelli ſunt in aliis Comitatibus. Et Juſtic. dixerunt, Aqua Thameſiæ pertinet ad Civitatem London, uſq; Mare : Et ſi velit, reſpondeat. The Sum of which Words ſeem to be this : That the Conſtable anſwered as to the Kidels, that the Juſtices had not Juriſdiction out of London ; and that the foreſaid Kidels were in other Counties. But that the Juſtices ſaid, That the Water of the Thames, as far as the Sea, belonged to the City of London : And if he pleaſed, he might bring in his Anſwer. Who then pleaded, not Guilty.

III. By Charters.

K. Richard I. his Charter.

In the 8 Rich. I. Dominus Richardus Rex, Filius Henrici II. conceſſit, & firmiter præcepit, ut omnes Kidelli qui ſunt in Thameſia, amoveantur, ubicunq; fuerint in Thameſia. That is, Our Lord Richard the King, Son of Henry II. hath granted and firmly commanded, That all the Kidels that are in the Thames be taken away, whereſoever in the Thames they be.

K. John's Charter.

In the 1 Johan. Rex conceſſit, & firmiter præcepit, ut omnes Kidelli, qui ſunt in Thameſia, vel in Medway, amoveantur ; & ne cæteri Kidelli alicubi ponantur in Thameſia, vel in Medway, ſuper Forſ. x Libr. Sterlingorum. That is, The King hath granted, and firmly commanded, That all the Kidels that are in the Thames, or the Medway, be taken away ; and that no other Kidels be placed in the Thames or the Medway, upon Pain of Forfeiture of Ten Pounds Sterling.

K. Henry III. his Charter, as it is recorded in the Cuſtoms of London.

Henry III. Son to King John, granted his Charter to the City in Form following : Henry by the Grace of God Kynge of England, Lord of Irland, Duke of Normandy and Aquitanye, and Erle of Angeoy ; Unto Archbiſſhops, Biſſhops, Abbattes, Pryours, Erlys, Barons, Juſticis, Sherifs, Stywardis, Mynyſters, and to al Baylyfs, and to al his trewe Men, gretynge : Wetyth wel, That for the Wele of our Soule, and the Helthe of the Soule of Kynge Johan oure Fader, and the Soules of oure Anteceſſours ; And alſo for the common Profyt of our Cite of London, and of al oure Realme ; We have graunted and ſtedfaſtly commaunded, that al the Weris that ben in Thamys or in Medwey by Medwey, where that ever they be in Thamys or in Medwey, be done awaye. And that from hens forwarde no Weres be ſett in Thamys nor in Medwey, upon Forfeitour of x Lib.

Alſo we clayme quyte to oure Citezens of London al that the Conſtables of our Tour of London was wont to take of the ſame Weres. Wherefore we wyll and ſtedfaſtly commaund, That no Conſtable of the Tour ony Tyme from hens forward ony Thing axe, or ony Graunte * do to ony of the ſame Cite, by Encheſon of the ſame Weres. It is knowne inowe to us, and [by] our trewe Men do us to underſtonde, that moſt Prayenge and leſte Profyt myght falle to the ſame Cite, and to al the Realme, by Encheſen of the ſame Weres. Which we make for ever firme and ſtable to the ſame Cite, as the Chartour of our Lord Kyng Johan our Fader, with our Barrons of London therof have reaſonably wytneſſith. Wytnes Euſtas of London, Peter of Wyncheſter, Joklyn of Bath, Rychard of Salyſbury, Biſſhops : Hubert of Brough, Erle of Kent, our Juſtice ; Gylbart of Clare, Erle of Glouceſter and Hertford, Fizt. Nicol, Rychard of Argentin, our Styward. Gyve by the Hande of our Worſhypful Fader, Rauf Biſſhop of Chycheſter, our Chauncelar, at Weſtm. the xviij Day of Feverell, the Yere of our Regne xi.

* Grievance.

This is an Extract out of the Charter of London, granted to the City by K. Richard II. the Sixth and Seventh Articles.

Authority to remove Wears, and to puniſh, by Rich. II.'s Charter.

In the LXVIII Article alſo are theſe Words. " And that the ſame Citezens remeve and do a" way al the Weres in Thamys and Medway : And " that they have the Puniſhmentis therof, long" ing to us.

The Conſtable of the Tower to ſet no Prices upon Victuals by Land or Water.

Likewiſe in the LXXIII Article are theſe Words: "And that the Conſtable of the Tower "of London make no Preſes, by Lond nor by "Water, of Vitayle or ony other Thynges what- "ſoever they ben, of Men of the forſaid Cite, "nor of non other; coming to the Cite, or "going out. Nor he ſhal not areſten, be ony "maner way, Shipes nor Botes bryngyng or le- "dyng Vitayles, or other Marchandyſes to the "Cite, or for [fro] the Cite forſaid.

Henry III. his Grant to the City.

In the 11 of Hen. III. Conceſſimus etiam eiſdem Baronibus noſtris, & Carta noſtra confirmavimus, quod habeant benè, & in Pace, liberè & quietè omnes Libertates ſuas, quibus hactenus uſi ſunt tam in Civitate London, quam extra, tam in Aquis quam in Terris, & omnibus aliis Locis: i.e. We have granted alſo to the ſame our Barons, and have confirmed it with our Charter, that they enjoy well and in Peace, freely and quietly, all their Liberties, which hitherto they have uſed, as well in the City of London, as without, as well in Waters as Lands, and in all other Places.

Edw. III. his Grant concerning the Kidels.

In the 7 of Edw. III. Volumus & concedimus, quod dicti Cives amoveant & capiant omnes Kidellas in Aqua Thamiſiæ & Medway; & habeant Punitiones ad nos inde pertinentes: i e. We will and grant, that the ſaid Citizens remove away, and take all the Kidels in the Water of Thames, and in the Medway; and have and enjoy the Penalties, that thence belong to us.

J. S.

[And there is a Record, 2 Edw. III. allowing the City's Liberty de movend. & capiend. Kedellis in Aqua Thamiſ. & Medway. Mandatum eſt Vicecomit. Middleſex, Eſſex, Kent, Surrey, Suſſex, Suthampton, Oxon, Berks. Whereby alſo the Sheriffs of all the Counties on which the Thames waſhed, were commanded, not to hinder or interrupt the City of London in removing and taking the ſaid Kidels.]

IV. By Acts of Parliament.

Concerning the taking of Salmons.

How puniſhable.

Will. II. Cap. 47. An. 13. L. 1. No Salmons to be taken, from the Nativity of our Lady unto S. Martin's Day, in all Points: Nor none to be taken in Mill Pools, from the Midſt of April until Midſummer. The Offence puniſhable by

1. Burning the Nets and Engines.
2. Impriſonment for a Quarter of a Year.
3. For a whole Year.

The former Act about Salmons confirmed.

The 13 Rich. II. Cap. 19. confirms the other; and reſtrains the taking of young Salmons in many Waters, from the Midſt of April until Midſummer, upon the ſame Pain.

None within that Time to uſe any Nets, called Stalkers, nor any other Engines, by which the Fry may be deſtroyed; upon the ſame Pain.

Juſtices of Peace to be Conſervators for preſerving the Fry.

In the 17 Rich. II. Cap. 9. Juſtices of Peace ſhall be Conſervators, and to ſurvey all Offences againſt the ſaid Statutes; and ſhall ſurvey and ſearch all the Wears, that they be not ſtrait, for the Deſtruction of the Fry and Brood, but of reaſonable Wideneſs after the old Aſſize. And they ſhall puniſh according to the ſaid Statutes. And they to appoint Under-Conſervators, who ſhall be ſworn. And the ſame Juſtices ſhall enquire as well ex Officio, as by Information of the Under-Conſervators: And ſuch as be indicted, they ſhall cauſe to come before them; and if they be thereof convicted, they ſhall have Impriſonment, and make Fine, after the Diſcretion of the ſame Juſtices. And if the ſame be at the Information of any the Under-Conſervators, he ſhall have Half the Fine.

Under-Conſervators.

Pet. Le Neve, Norroy.

[In the Fourth Year of King Henry the VIIth, an Act of Parliament was made, whereby the Maior of London was to have the Rule of the River of Thames, from Stanes Bridge to the Water of Tenland. Vide inter Act. irrotulat. in Canc.]

Power of the Maior in Breaches and Creeks.

In the 11 Hen. VII. Cap. 15. The like Power is granted to the Maior of London, in Breaches and in Creeks, as in the River, ſo far as it ebbeth and floweth: Except in the King's Ground, or in the Liberties and Franchiſes of others.

All killing or taking young Fry of Fiſh forbidden.

In the 1 Eliz. Cap. 17. None ſhall with any manner of Net, Weel, But-eayning, Kepper, Lymecreel, Raw Fag-net, Troll-net, Trim-net, Scaleboat, Webliſter, Stutlamete, or with any other Device or Engines, made of Cheare, Woolbine, Canvas; or ſhall, of any heeling Nets or Trimbleboat, or any other Device, Engine, Cautels, Ways or Means whatſoever, heretofore made or deviſed, or hereafter to be made or deviſed, take and kill any young Brood, Spawne or Fry of Eels, Salmon, Pyke or Pyckerel, or of any other Fiſh, in any Floodgate, Pipe, or the Tayl of any Mill, Weare, or in any Straits, Streams, Brooks, Rivers, Salt or Freſh.

Likewiſe taking Fiſh out of Seaſon;

Secondly, None ſhall take and kill any Salmons or Trouts, not being in Seaſon; being Kepper Salmons, or Kepper Trouts, or Shedder Salmons, or Shedder Trouts.

Or not of due Length.

Thirdly, None ſhall take and kill any Pyke or Pyckerel, not being in Length Ten Inches Fiſh, or more; nor any Trout, not being Eight Inches; nor any Barbel, not being Twelve Inches, and more.

What Nets to uſe in Fiſhing.

Fourthly, None to fiſh with any Nets, Trammels, Keep, Weare, Helme Creele, or by any other Engine, Device, Ways or Means; but only with Net or Trammel, whereof every Meſh, or Maſh, ſhall be Two Inches and an half broad; Angling excepted.

Not to extend to Smelts, Roches, &c.

A Proviſo, that this ſhall not extend to Smelts, Roches, Minoes, Bulheads, Gudgeons or Eels, in Places where the ſame have been uſed to be taken.

Penalty.

The Offenders to loſe, for every Offence xx s. and the Fiſh, and alſo the unlawful Nets, Engines and Inſtruments.

The Maior's Power by this Act.

The Maior of London (inter alia) ſhall have full Power and Authority by this Act, to enquire of all Offences committed contrary to this Act, by the Oaths of Twelve Men, or more; and to hear and determine all and every the ſame.

Who ſhall have the Forfeitures.

The Pains and Forfeitures to be to the Uſe of every ſuch Perſon or Perſons, (being no Body Politick nor Corporate, or Head of the ſame) before whom ſuch Conviction ſhall be had; And to the Uſe of every Body Politick and Corporate, that heretofore have lawfully had any Fines, &c. upon ſuch Conviction.

V. By Inquiſition.

Inquiſitions at Rainham and Graveſend, 9 Hen. V.

By Two Inquiſitions, the one taken at Rainham in Eſſex, the other at Graveſend in Kent, 9 Hen. V. before William Cambridge, Grocer, then Lord Maior of London, and Conſervator of the Waters of Thames and Medway, it was preſented, "That where by the Ancient Ordinance of Lon- "don, the Meſches of Nets ſhould be Two Inches "in the Forepart, and One Inch in the Hinder- "part, &c. And further, it was thereby found, "that the Offences in the ſame Inquiſition, are "contra Libertates & Conſuetudines Civitatis: "And it was adjudged, That the Nets ſhould "be burned, according to the Ancient Cuſtom "in that behalf provided.

VI. By Decrees.

A Decree in the Starchamber in behalf of the City, for the Conſervation of Thames, An. 8 H. 4.

In 8. Hen. 4. The Maior and Aldermen of London, did exhibit their humble Petition to the King's Council, reciting, "That time out of Mind, they have had the Conſervation and Correction of the River of Thames, and of all Trinckes, Nets, and other Gins, whatſoever, in the Rivers of Thames and Medway placed, and have uſed to make a Sub-Conſervator under them. And complained, that Alexander Bonner, then Sub-Conſervator, having done his Duty in removing Kiddels, was evil entreated by the Owners; the ſame Owners dwelling in Erith, Pratriferry, Barking, Woolwich, and other Places in the Counties of Kent and Eſſex. And upon hearing of the Matter in Camera Stellata, i. e. The Star Chamber, they were found guilty, and conſtrained to ſubmit themſelves to the Lord Maior; and ordered always to bring their Nets to the Lord Maior, before they ſhould uſe them. And that the Kiddels then taken ſhould be at the Diſpoſition of the Lord Maior. And the Offenders made their Submiſſion accordingly.

VII. By Letters Patents.

A Grant of a Wear to the Earl of Pembroke, in favour of the City.

A Grant was made by King Edward IV. to the Earl of Pembroke, for Building a Weare in the River of Thames; which Grant was Cancelled at the Requeſt of the Lord Maior and Aldermen, upon ſhewing of their Right; for that it was contrary to their antient Liberties. At which Time the Cities Title to the then Conſervacie of the Rivers of Thames and Medway, was at large ſet forth, and is recited to have been ſhewn to the Lord Chancellor, and to the Earl and his Council; and was afterwards allowed, and the Patent thereupon Cancelled.

VIII. By Proclamation.

K. Henry proclaims the City's Right to the Thames.

By Proclamation made by K. Hen. VIII. in the 34th of his Reign, it is affirmed, that the Lord Maior and his Predeceſſors have had, by divers Grants of the Kings of England, and by Acts of Parliament, and have alſo long enjoyed, the Conſervacie of Thames, without Interruption, or Impediment of the ſaid King Henry VIII. or of any of his Subjects. And by the ſame Proclamation it was commanded, That none ſhould reſiſt, deny, or impugne the Lord Maior or his Deputy, in doing or executing any Thing for the Conſervacie of the River, and of the Fiſh and Fry within the ſame.

IX. By Report.

Q. Elizabeth's Attorney General, reports the Conſervacy of the River to belong to the City.

A Controverſie being between the Lord Admiral and the Lord Maior for the Meaſuring of Coals, and other Things upon the Thames, it then fell into Conſideration to whom the Conſervacie of the ſame River did belong. Which Cauſe, Anno 1597, was by the Lords of the late Queens moſt Honourable Privy Council, referred to the then Attorney General and Sollicitor, who certified, among other Things, that the Conſervacie of the River of Thames did, and ought to belong to the City of London.

X. By Quo Warranto.

Upon a Quo Warranto the City make good their Title to the River.

In the 3d Jacobi Regis, a Quo Warranto being brought againſt the City in the Exchequer, to know by what Title they claimed the Conſervacie of the River of Thames, and of the Waters of Medway: The City made their Title to the ſame by ancient Preſcription. And Judgment was given for them.

And all this was ſpoken for Proof of the Cities RIGHT.

Next for Proof of USAGE. That was ſhewed to be

I. By antient Ordinances.
II. By Puniſhment of Offenders.

Ordinances made by the Maior for the River, from K. Henry the Third's Time.

The Lord Maior and Aldermen have, Time out of Mind, made Ordinances concerning the good Government of the River of Thames, for the Times and Manners of Fiſhing, beneath London-Bridge, Eaſtward, to be obſerved upon Pains. And it appeareth, that from time to time, from the time of K. Henry III. and ſo downward, the Lord Maior hath removed Kiddels, Wears, Trinkes, and other unlawful Engines; and hath reformed the Diſorders of ſuch as have offended in the River of Thames; and puniſhed Offenders, ſometimes by Impriſonment, ſometimes by Fine, and by burning of their unlawful Nets.

III. By Writs and Precepts.

The Maior ſends Precepts for returning Juries.

In the 9th of Henry V. Precepts were iſſued under the Teſte of the Lord Maior to the Sheriffs of Kent and Eſſex, for the returning of Juries before the Lord Maior, to enquire of Offences done in the River of Thames.

IV. By Accompts.

Accompts for the Water Bailiffs Charges.

In the Accompts of the Chamberlains of London, from the 17th of Rich. II. to the 11. Elizabethæ Reginæ, it appeareth, that the Water Bailiff of London hath made ſearch for unlawful Nets, in the Waters of Thames and of Medway.

V. By Commiſſions.

Commiſſion to the Maior to put Acts in Execution about the Thames.

In the 9th of Henry V. Commiſſion was given to the Lord Maior, to put in Execution the Acts of Parliament, made for the Conſervacie of the Waters of Thames and Medway; and to enquire of all Offences, made or done in the ſaid Waters, and to puniſh the Delinquents for the ſame.

A like Commiſſion in the 3d Henry VI.

A like Commiſſion in the 1 Elizab.

A like Commiſſion in the 1 Jacobi.

And all theſe, or the like Commiſſions in this Caſe, were, and are directed to the Lord Maior, for the Time being.

VI. By continual Claime.

Claims and Suits of the City, in regard of the Lord Admirals Pretences to the Thames.

In the 37. Henry VIII. Letters came from the Lord Admiral, for ſtay of ſuch Matters as were then in Queſtion, between his Lordſhip and the City, concerning the Juriſdiction of this City upon the River of Thames.

In the 3d of Edw. VI. Order given, that the Chamberlain ſhould take care for ſtay of certain Inqueſts, charged by Vertue of a Commiſſion directed to the Lord Admiral, to enquire of Abuſes in Fiſhing beneath the Bridge.

In the 4th of Edw. VI. Maſter Common Sergeant was appointed to repair to the Duke of Somerſet, and to inform his Lordſhip of the Cities Authority, in pulling down Wears within the River of Thames.

In the 6th of Edw. VI. Order was given, that Sute ſhould be made to the Kings Majeſty, and his Council, for the Determination and Allowance of the Cities Juriſdiction and Intereſt in the River of Thames.

1. Mariæ Reginæ. A great Number of the Fiſhermen of the Eaſt-ſide of London, preſent in the Court of the Lord Maior and Aldermen, were commanded to obey the Water Bailiff. And that one Hunter, of the Admiralty, ſhould be warned to be before the Lord Maior and Aldermen at the next Court to be holden for the ſame Matter.

1. Eliz. Reginæ. Certain Committees were appointed to confer with the Lord Admiral, touchin the Controverſie between his Honour and the City, concerning the Conſervacie of the River of Thames.

In the 3d of Eliz. certain Committees were appointed to attend the Lord Admiral, concerning the Juriſdiction of the River of Thames.

7 Eliz. The Lord Admiral to be conferred with, touching the Cities Juriſdiction in the River of Thames.

8. Eliz. The Lord Admiral to be conferred with, touching the Cities Right to the Conſervacie of the River of Thames.

13. Eliz. The Lord Admiral to be moved, that the City may enjoy their Liberties in the Thames and Medway.

17. Eliz. The Aldermen and others to confer with the Lord Admiral for the Cities Title in the River Eaſtward.

23. Eliz. Mr. Norton, and others, appointed to attend on the Lord Treaſurer of England, and to inform his Lordſhip touching the Cities Title to the Conſervacie of the River of Thames below London Bridge.

23. Eliz. Seſſions appointed for the Conſervacy of the River of Thames, the 9th of October, at Barking in Eſſex; and on Wedneſday following to be kept at Woolwich in Kent.

24. Eliz. Certain Aldermen were appointed to treat with the Lord Admiral, touching the Conſervacie.

29. Eliz. Aldermen appointed to go to the Lord Admiral, and to inform his Lordſhip touching the Cities Right to the Conſervacie of the River of Thames, from London Bridge to Tenland and the Reculvers.

K. James I. confirms the Cities Right.

In the Letters Patents granted by the King's Moſt Excellent Majeſty, in the Third Year of his Reign, the Cities Title to the Conſervacie of the River of Thames and Water of Medway, is recited and ſet down at large. And therein mention is made, that the City had been interrupted in the ſaid Office, and a Doubt conceived, that the ſame did not belong to his Highneſs's City of London. His Majeſty therefore, of his eſpecial Grace and Favour to the City of London, Ad omnem Controverſiam in hac Parte, temporibus tam præſentibus quam futuris, tollendam, ac omne dubium amovendum; i. e. to take away all Controverſie in this Behalf, for the Times as well preſent as to come, and to remove all doubt, did by thoſe his Letters Patents Grant, Ratify and Confirm to the City of London, the Conſervacie of the ſaid River of Thames and Waters of Medway.

So much concerning the Right and Uſage. Now de Reipſa, i. e. of the Thing it ſelf.

The Meaning and Extent of the Conſervacie.

This Word Conſervacie doth extend it ſelf to the Preſervation of the Stream, and the Banks of the River, as alſo the Fiſh and Fry within the ſame. For by the Laws of the Land all Navigable Rivers are the high Streams of the King, for the Paſſage of Ships, Boats, &c. As the Highway is Via Regia for the People to paſs by. And if the Banks be not kept from Decaying and Encroachment, it will not only be an Annoyance to the River it ſelf, by diverting the Water and hindering the Navigation, but will alſo annoy the Grounds next adjoining to the ſame. And if the Fiſh be taken at undue Seaſons, and the Fry not preſerved, the Fiſhing will be ſoon deſtroyed.

The Charge to the Inqueſt concerning the Stream.

And firſt, touching the Stream, you are to enquire, Whether any Perſon or Perſons have Erected any Wears, Kiddels, or Engines; or knocked any Poſts, Piles, or Stakes, within the Rivers, or any Part thereof, which may in any Sort hinder the Stream, or the Navigation, or Paſſage of any Ships, Barges, Boats, or Veſſels within the ſame. And whether any have caſt any Soil, Duſt, or Rubbiſh, or other Filth whatſoever, into the ſame. You are to preſent the Perſons, Times, and Places, touching the committing of every ſuch Offence.

Concerning Encroachments.

Secondly, you are to enquire of all Encroachments upon the River, and the Banks of the ſame: And of all Bridges, Floodgates, Milldamms, and ſuch like Annoyances, Erected or Builded upon, or near to the Banks of the ſame River: And where, and by whom, and when the ſame were done.

And concerning the Fiſhermen.

Thirdly, For the Preſervation of the Fiſh and Fry within the River, you are to enquire, whether any Fiſherman or other, hath fiſhed at any undue or prohibited Seaſons, or with any unlawful or prohibited Nets or Engines. And when, where, and by whom every ſuch Offence was committed.

Thus much for a general Direction; but for your more particular Inſtruction, and for the Eaſe of your Memories, here be certain Printed Articles which you ſhall have with you; to every one of which, you ſhall give a particular Anſwer.

The like Charge was given by the ſaid Maſter Common Sergeant, on the next Day following at Lee in the County of Eſſex: And the like Seſſions was kept there for the ſame Purpoſe.

This Juriſdiction diſallowed of by King Charles I. as infringing the Admiralty. J. S.

But it ſeems, theſe Privileges and Juriſdictions in the Thames, thus claimed by the City, were not allowed by the Court in K. Charles I. his Time, but thought to encroach upon the Prerogative of the King's High Court of Admiralty: Some Paſſages in the foregoing Diſcourſe giving ſuch Offence, that it had like to have hindred the Sale of the Second Edition of this Book, An. 1633. being then newly Printed. For K. Charles I. as ſoon as he heard of it, commanded Sir Henry Marten, the Judge of the Court of Admiralty, either to obliterate certain Paſſages out of the ſaid Book, before it came forth, or elſe to ſtop the Publiſhing of it. For which Purpoſe, Secretary Coke, by that King's Command, wrote a ſpecial Letter to the ſaid Judge. But it being ſomewhat too late to make theſe Corrections, (the Book being now compleatly Printed off) the ſaid Sir Henry Marten ordered the Company of Stationers to Print the Secretaries Letter to him at the End of the Book, and his own Letter and Order to them thereupon. Which was accordingly done: And they were as follow:

To my Honorable Friend Sir HENRY MARTEN, Knight, Judge of the High Court of the Admiralty.

“SIR, his Majeſty underſtanding that there is a ſecond Edition of Stowes Survey of the City of London, new put to Sale, wherein there are ſome Paſſages prejudicial to his Majeſties Right in his Admiralty, and Derogatory to the juſt Power belonging thereunto; He doth therefore require you his Judge in that High Court to examine the ſaid Book, and to cauſe the ſaid Paſſa-

“ ges inſerted in prejudice of the Admiral Juriſdiction, and in ſupport of any other Pretence “ againſt the ſame, to be left out; or elſe to “ prohibit the Publiſhing and Sale of the ſaid “ Book. And for ſo doing, this Signification of “ his Majeſty's Pleaſure may be your ſufficient “ Warrant. So I reſt

Garlicke Hith, 21. Dec. 1633. Your aſſured Friend to ſerve you,
JOHN COKE.

Further Execution of the Letter abovementioned could not be made, for that it came after the Impreſſion was finiſhed and publiſhed.

HENRY MARTEN.

To the Maſter and Wardens of the Company of STATIONERS.

“ YOU may underſtand by the Contents of “ the Letter abovementioned, directed unto me, what is required at my Hands to perform. “ I am therefore to require you upon your Receipt “ hereof, forthwith to cauſe the Book to be “ brought unto you, and to take Order that all “ the Words, together with the Copy of the Letter, and my Anſwer thereunto, as above made “ for this Impreſſion, to be imprinted Page 939. “ Col. prima, verbatim in all the ſaid Books, as “ well ſold, as hereafter to be ſold, before any “ further Sale of the ſaid Books be made; and “ this ſhall be your Warrant in this behalf.

CHAP. IX.

A more particular Account of the Locks, the Wears, and Mills on the Thames. Publick Orders for the Preſervation of it, and the Fiſh.

he Benefit of e River ames. J. S.

THE Wealth and Health of London is owing chiefly to this Noble River, in reſpect of the plentiful Supplies it affords of Water, the Maintenance of a great and rich Traffick, by the Conveyance of Goods and Commodities outward and inward, and the preſerving of the City ſweet and clean, by the carrying away of all the Filth and Soil that muſt needs be produced by reaſon of ſuch a Number of Families and Employments.

ocks and Vears on it.

And therefore great Care was always taken for the preſerving of this River. In Proceſs of Time, many Wears, and Locks, and Mills were made on it. Whereby the free Paſſage of the Water was hindred. Inſomuch that about the Year 1578. or 1579. there were Three and twenty Locks, Sixteen Mills, Sixteen Floud-gates, Seven Wears on this River, between Maidenhead and Oxford. Whereof one John Biſhop made a Complaint to the Lord Treaſurer Burleigh. To whom he ſhewed, how by theſe Stoppages of the Water, ſeveral Perſons, to the Number of 15 or 16, in four Years only, had been drowned, and their Goods loſt; having been Perſons belonging to Barges and Veſſels uſing the River.

he Danger of em.

he Encreaſe Barges eſtward.

But notwithſtanding theſe Complaints, about the Year 1584 or 1585. there were above Seventy Locks and Wears (that is, Thirty more at leaſt than there was but Six Years before.) And whereas before there were not above Ten or Twelve Barges employed to and fro, now the Number was encreaſed to Fourſcore; and were of much greater Bulk and Bigneſs than before was uſed. Some of theſe Locks were extraordinary dangerous in paſſing. The going up the Locks were ſo ſteep, that every Year Cables had been broken that coſt 400 l. and Bargemen and Goods drowned. And in coming down, the Waters fell ſo high, that it ſunk the Veſſels, and deſtroyed Corn and Malt wherewith they were laden; and eſpecially one Lock, called Marlow Lock, of which there had been great Complaints. It was held by one Farmour. The Streams there were ſo ſtrong, and the Water had ſuch a diſmal Fall, that four Men within a ſhort time were loſt; three whereof drowned, and a fourth had his Brains daſht out. And all the Recompence the poor Widow had, was, that Farmour gave her five Shillings. But beſide the Danger, it was very expenſive to the poor Bargemen, the Millers ſelling the Water in the Stream for above 300*l.* a Year. Two of theſe Locks, which were moſt complained of, were viewed by four Aldermen of the City, and other Citizens, who well perceived the Danger thereof.

Complained of to the Queen.

The forementioned John Biſhop made Complaint again hereof to the Lord Treaſurer; and in Octob. 1585. made his Petition to the Queen, in the Name of the Widows and Fatherleſs Children (whoſe Parents and Huſbands were by theſe Means ſlain) againſt the great Miſchief done to her Loving Subjects, by the great Number of dangerous Locks, Wears, Mills and Floud-gates, unlawfully erected and made in and upon many Places of the River, contrary to the Statutes againſt the ſame neceſſarily provided. He prayed her Majeſty to give Commandment, that his Complaint, and a Proof thereof contained in Writing thereunto annexed, might be diligently heard and examined; and thereupon Order taken as the Neceſſity of the Cauſe required. He ſpake of Eleven Kings that made good Laws againſt theſe Stoppages of the Water in the Thames, viz. Henry III. Edward III. Richard II. Henry IV. Henry V. Henry VI. Edward IV. Henry VII. Henry VIII. Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth.

The Caſe of theſe Mills and Locks defended.

Thoſe concerned in theſe Locks, Wears, and Mills, the very Day after this Complaint, Octob. 14. gave in a Note by way of Petition to the ſaid Treaſurer, of Reaſons for the Maintenance of them upon the River; with the Cauſes of the Danger thereof, and ſome Account of the Perſons lately drowned there.

Firſt, Touching and in behalf of theſe Mills and Locks upon the Thamyſe; That they were of as great Antiquity as the Towns and Villages whereunto they adjoyn; and as ancient Evidence to be ſhewed for them, as any Man hath for any Land he held within the Realm of England. That they were of ſuch Neceſſity, as that without them the great Multitude and Number of the Queen's People, Inhabitants between Maidenhead Bridge and the City of Oxford, ſhould not well know where to have their Corn ground; beſides Mealing to the City of London, and other Places. That they were alſo of great Neceſſity for the Paſſage of Barges, and eſpecially at Low Waters.

For as then, for want of Water, when they lay on Ground, they had no Help but by ſhutting of the ſaid Locks, to ſend down ſome Flaſhes of Water, whereby to ſet them on float, which otherwiſe ſhould lie ſtill for a long Time. That within the Banks or Wears belonging to the ſaid Mills, were contained infinite Loads of Chalk and other Rubbiſh; which if they ſhould be looſed or ſtirred, it were the next way to choak the River, and thereby to overthrow the Subſtance of all Paſſage. That notwithſtanding divers and ſundry Laws heretofore made for the Furtherance and Paſſage of Ships, Barges and other Veſſels; yet were the ſaid Mills, Locks, and Wears within the River of Thamyſe never impeached, as Things repugnant to Law, or offenſive to the Commonwealth, for and until ſuch time as one Biſhop began his outragious Attempts therein. It was alſo to be underſtood, that the Mills, Locks and Wears within the River, amounting in the whole to the Number of LXX. or thereabouts, were for part the Queen's Inheritance: And for the Reſidue, the Inheritance of divers other of her Subjects; the Queen having only a Way or Paſſage for her People thorow the ſaid Locks. And that Marlow Lock particularly, was as well maintained, or better, than ever it was in any Age paſt. And that it was obtained from the Queen in the Tenth Year of her Reign; and that the ſame was now as well and carefully uſed as ever it was; and ſo fully proved by ſundry Depoſitions remaining of Record in her Majeſty's Court of the Star Chamber; beſides ſundry other Depoſitions taken before the Commiſſioners of Sewers; as alſo by the ſeveral Decrees made in the Queen's ſaid Court of Star Chamber.

Barges.

Secondly, As for the Cauſes why the Paſſage through theſe Locks were become ſomewhat more perillous than heretofore; they were, That the Barges were now of greater Burthen than ever they were in Time paſt, being almoſt double of what they were wont to be. That they laded them ſo extremely as therein was no meaſure: That they were in Time paſt wont to unlade part of their Lading beneath the Lock, when they were to come up, and take it in again above. And namely, when they brought up but Seven or eight Loads; whereas now of Twenty Loads, they commonly would not unlade any thing: That they entertained People of no Skill, and ſuch as for many of them, uſed not that Foreſight that were meet. That many times they would travel up and down ſo late and ſo early, that they could not ſee or perceive what they did. That they commonly ſpared neither Sabbath Day, nor others; beſides much ill Demeanor, too long to be recited. And in fine, that there was more likelihood of Peril in theſe Days than heretofore, in that the Number of Barges within the Time of Memory, were encreaſed from the Number of X. or XII. to that of Fourſcore, or thereabouts.

Laſtly, As touching the Perſons drowned and ſlain at Marlow Lock within this Eight Years, one was drowned by manifeſt Negligence, partly that the Barge was overcharged with a greater Burthen than ſhould have been; and alſo, that it wanted Waſh-boards on the Sides, as all other Barges commonly had for their Defence. Another in truth was drowned, but not at the Lock. Another killed by his own Negligence and Folly. Another came up the ſaid Lock in the Winter ſo late, as he could not diſcern what he did. That it was no mervail, though they now and then break a Cable; in that they were many times made of ill Stuff, and their Barges being ſo great, and ſo unmeaſurably laden. That in all Ages paſt, ſome now and then had by Negligence of Watermen periſhed at the ſaid Locks; which, next to the Providence of Almighty God, were by the good Foreſight and Proviſion of the Paſſengers chiefly to be holpen, and could not otherwiſe be provided for.

Reaſons for the maintaining the Wears.

At another Time, when the like Complaint was made againſt theſe Mills, Locks and Wears, theſe Things were ſaid and proved for the Maintenance of them. Firſt, That they were erected and made, and ſo have continued for many Hundred Years, without any Challenge or Interruption. That the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, whereof the laſt was made in the 12. Edw. IV. that touch the Reformation of Locks and Wears, extend only to ſuch as then were erected to the Diſturbance of Barges and other Veſſels. Whereas at that Time there was no common Paſſage for Barges ſo far as Marlow or Byſham, as it was upon vehement Preſumption thought. That it was further to be moſt manifeſtly proved, that within the Memory of ſuch as be yet living, there were not above the Number of Four Barges that paſſed ſo far into the River of Thamyſe as Marlow or Biſham; and that ſuch as then paſſed were not above half the Burthen of ſuch as now commonly paſſed by the ſaid River, being near about the Number of Threeſcore. That it was moſt certain and true, that ſuch inconſiderate People, and namely, of the ſaid Bargemen as wiſhed or deſired the Decay or pulling down the Locks and Wears, deſired therein but their own great Hindrance, or rather Undoing; conſidering that without them they could not paſs; and that many times, and eſpecially at Low Waters, they were enforced to deſire the ſhutting of the ſaid Locks, to the end to convey Water for the removing of their Barges when they were ſet on Ground. That if the ſaid Wears ſhould be pulled down, there were ſuch Quantities of Chalk and other Rubbiſh therein, as that by the looſing thereof, ſuch Hills would grow in many Places, as that a ſmall Boat in divers Places of the Thamyſe would hardly paſs. That in caſe the ſaid Paſſage ſhould be diſturbed, it ſhould not only tend to the great Let and Hindrance of the Queen's Proviſion, and of her City of London, but alſo of divers of her Subjects and People. That the Proviſion for grinding of great Part of the Inhabitants Corn within the Counties of Bucks, Berks, and Oxon, reſted upon the Mills ſituate within the ſaid River; which, without the ſaid Locks and Wears, could not be maintained, or grind any thing; and ſhould they decay, the Inhabitants would be to ſeek where to grind their Corn. That in all the Commiſſions of Sewers, that in any Age or Time had been awarded, theſe Mills and Locks were never thought to be within the Precinct of any Laws, or in any reſpect meet to be reformed. That if any Diſorder were herein, the ſame were to be reformed by the ordinary Proceedings of the Queen's Majeſties Laws, and not otherwiſe.

Corn Mills rected on River.

The City tition the Queen to up certain Mills near Bridge.

About the Year 1508. certain Mills were erected upon this River Thames, near the Bridge, to grind Corn for the better Supply of the City. For the City had for ſome Years paſt ſuffered very much by reaſon of Dearth, and Scarcity of Corn, and that encreaſed greatly for ſome Number of Miles about the City, in regard of the Difficulty of grinding of Corn for the Relief of the Poor. Therefore in the Month of March, 1588. the Maior, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City, petitioned the Queen, that they might erect four Corn Mills on the River of Thames, under two Roofs near the Bridge, in ſuch Places where it ſhould breed no Annoyance. Whereupon ſeveral of the Council, viz. the Lord Chancellor Hatton, the Earl of Leiceſter, Charles Howard, Baron of Effingham, Sir Francis Knollys, Sir Francis Walſingham, ſent their Letter, April 1. 1588. from the Court at Greenwich to Mr. Rookeſby, Maſter of St. Katharines, Mr. Fanſhaw, Mr. Peter Oſborn, Remembrancer of the Exchequer, with this Order, viz. To call before them ſuch as the Maior and City ſhould appoint to follow this Cauſe; and likewiſe ſome of the principal Officers of the Navy, and others of the Maſters of Trinity Houſe; and to adviſe them to conſult together, whether the Erection of theſe Mills might be beneficial or inconvenient; and in what Sort and Place it ſhould be thought neceſſary they ſhould be ſet up. That being by them adviſed, the Queen might be moved to grant their Requeſt, if it ſhould be found behooſeful for the City, and not hurtful to the River of Thames. The Three abovesaid at length returned this Certificate to the Council: That by the Certificate of the principal Officers of the Navy, and the chief Maſters of the Trinity Houſe, and the Eight Maſters and Overſeers of the River, and other the Aſſiſtants of the Company of Watermen, as alſo by their own View and adviſed Conſideration, it was found, that the erecting of the ſaid Mills would not be hurtful nor prejudicial to the Thames any way: And alſo would work Benefit, and no Inconvenience, ſo far forth as hitherto they could ſee and perceive. This was dated May 16. 1588.

The Certificate of the Maſters and Aſſiſtants of the Trinity Houſe was this:

And indeed as London could not be London without the Thames, ſo great Care was taken in former Times to preſerve it clean and clear of all Annoyances, and particularly againſt the Deſtruction of the Fiſh, which were of many ſorts, and very good in their kind. Hence in September, 1584, Orders were ſet forth for the Conſervation of the River of Thames: Which were as follow.

Firſt, That there ſhould be no Purpreſtures, Encroachments, Wharfs, Banks, Walls, or Building of Houſes in or upon the Thames, to the ſtopping of the Paſſage.

Item, That no Dung, Rubbiſh, or other Filth, be caſt into the Thames.

Item, That no Poſts nor Stakes be fixed in the Thames.

Item, That the fair Way be kept as deep and large as heretofore it hath been.

CHAP. X.

A further Account of this famous River of Thames, as to ſo much as the Lord Maior of London is Conſervator of: With a ſhort Deſcription of the divers Towns, and Places, within the ſaid Limits that are ſeated on its Banks; on either ſide, in Kent, Eſſex, Middleſex and Surrey.

The Extent of the Lord Maior's Juriſdiction of the River Thames. R. B.

THE Lord Maior then is Conſervator of the River of Thames from the Mouth thereof, which is at the Block Houſes almoſt againſt Graveſend in the Eaſt, to a Place called Colme Ditch in Surrey, a little above Stanes Bridge in the Weſt. Where is a Stone erected with the City Arms carved thereon, and is called London Mark Stone. The Diſtance betwixt which two Places according to the Courſe of the River is above 60 Miles.

The Banks of this River, which ſevereth the Counties of Eſſex and Middleſex from Kent and Surrey, afford ſuch Variety of Objects, as good Towns, fair Buildings, two of the King's Palaces, viz. Greenwich in Kent, and Hampton Court in Middleſex; beſides all the South ſide of the City of London; alſo the infinite Number of Ships and Veſſels of all ſorts continually floating upon the River, that a German Poet thus writes concerning it:

Tot Campos, Sylvas, tot Regia Tecta, tot hortos,
Artifici excultas dextra, tot vidimus Arces,
Ut nunc Auſonio Thamiſis cum Tibride certet.

We ſaw ſo many Woods and Princely Bowers,
Sweet Fields, brave Palaces, and ſtately Towers:
So many Gardens, dreſt with curious Care,
That Thames with Royal Tyber may compare.

And another Stranger, to the like Purpoſe.

The pleaſant Object of ſweet Verdant Bowers,
Enveloped with Flora's fragrant Flowers:
The goodly Proſpect of Skie-kiſſing Hills,
Of fertile Plains, vein'd o're with purling Rills,
More raviſh'd not my Senſes with Delight,
Than did the Banks of Thames tranſport my Sight.

Of the moſt remarkable Objects, I ſhall give the Reader a brief Account; beginning at Graveſend in Kent, and Tilbury Fort in Eſſex, where the Lord Maior's Juriſdiction begins.

Graveſend.

1. GRAVESEND: Seated on the Southern Bank of the Thames: a Place of great Reſort, as being the common Landing Place for Strangers and Seamen in their Paſſage to London; as likewiſe the accuſtomary Place of taking of Shipping, and the ready Road for France. All which doth occaſion it to be well inhabited and reſorted unto, and ſufficiently furniſhed with Inns, Taverns, and other Houſes of Entertainment: And its Markets, which are Wedneſdays and Saturdays, are well provided with Proviſions. Yet all Things want for no Price. It is a Maior Town. Here is all Conveniency for Travel for its Inhabitants either by Water, or by Land in the Stage Coaches, or Hackney Horſes, which are always to be had either to London, or Rocheſter, or elſewhere.

Tilbury Fort.

2. The BLOCK HOUSES, called Tilbury Fort; the one near Graveſend in Kent, and the other oppoſite to it in Eſſex, near Tilbury, a ſmall Town; of chief Note, for Queen Elizabeth's coming hither to view her Camp, after her defeating the Spaniſh Armado on St. James's Day, in the Year 1588. Theſe two Forts are well ſtored with Ammunition, and Guns, continually mounted and loaded, ſo that no Ship or Veſſel can come in, or go out of the River without their Permiſſion. Of theſe Forts, that in Eſſex ſide is by much the greater, lyeth more open, and better to command Veſſels: And here is always kept a Gariſon of Soldiers for its better Security, with a good Tract of Ground walled in.

Greenhith

3. GREEN HITH: Seated on the Kentiſh ſide; of chief Account for its Chalk Pits; many Hoys and ſmall Veſſels being employed to carry the ſame to London, and other Places; of this Chalk, Lyme being made, ſo uſeful in Building.

Grayes. Stone Ne Long Reac

4. GRATES: An indifferent Market Town, and of ſome Account for Calves and Poultrey. A little further Weſtward is a Place called Stone-Neſs, which is at the Entrance into that Part of the River called the Long Reach.

5. DARTFORD CREEK: So called from the Town of Dartford, not far diſtant. This Town is very good, and well inhabited and furniſhed with Inns and Publick Houſes; as ſeated on the high Road from London to Rocheſter, and ſo to Dover and elſewhere: and by reaſon of the Creek that falleth into the Thames, is a great Conveniency of tranſporting Commodities to London. Which makes its Market, (which is on Saturdays) to be conſiderable, and much reſorted unto by Mealmen and Cornchandlers. In the Reign of King Richard II. Anno 1381. Tyler's impious Rebellion began here, occaſioned by an Abuſe which a Collector of the Poll Money offered to the Daughter of one John Tyler of this Town, who made himſelf Captain or Head of the Rabble; and before they were diſperſed, committed great Spoils: he took the Name of Jack Straw. This Story is ſufficiently taken Notice of in our Hiſtory.

Crayford-Neſs.

6. About a Mile more Weſtward from Dartford Creek, is CRATFORD-NESS.

Erith. Cold Harbour.

7. ERITH: A Town of no great Account. Oppoſite to this Town in Eſſex, is a Place called COLD HARBOUR.

Raynham Creek. Dagenham Creek. Halfway Tree, and Houſe.

8. RATNHAM CREEK: On the ſide of Eſſex. Next to it is Dagenham Creek. About a Mile and a half more Weſtwards, is the Halfway Tree in Eſſex ſide; and over againſt in Kent, is the Halfway Houſe, ſo called, as ſeated in the midway betwixt London and Graveſend.

Barking Creek. Devil's Houſe.

9. BARKING CREEK: And two Miles further Weſtward, and on the ſame ſide is a lone Houſe, called the Devil's Houſe; for what Reaſon, I know not.

Woolwich.

10. WOOLWICH: Seated on the Kentiſh ſide, low, and not over healthful; but by reaſon of its Dock, and Storehouſes for the Navy Royal, is a Place well Inhabited, eſpecially by thoſe that have their Dependance thereon. And in this Dock hath been built the beſt Ships of War; amongſt which the Royal Sovereign, Anno 1637. being in Length by the Keel 127 Foot; in Breadth by the Beam 47 Foot, and in Depth 49 Foot; her Draught of Water 21 Foot: her Burthen in all 2072 Tuns,

The Royal vereign, its Dimenſions, &c.

Tuns, and 1492 Tuns, beſides Guns, Tackle, &c.

She hath Six Anchors; whereof the biggeſt weighs 6000 lib. and the leaſt 4300 lib. She hath Fourteen Cables; whereof the greateſt is 666 Inches Diameter, and 21 Inches in Compaſs, and weighs 9000 lib. Her leaſt Cable being 254 Inches Diameter, and 8 Inches in Circumference, and weighs near 1300 lib.

Unto her belonged Eighteen Maſts and Yards; whereof the Main Maſt is 113 Foot long, and 33 Inches Diameter; her Main Yard 105 Foot long, and 23 Inches Diameter, and her Main Top 15 Foot Diameter.

She carried Ten ſeveral Sorts of Sails, of ſeveral Names; of which her greateſt is her Main Courſe, together with her Bonnet, which contains 1640 Yards of Canvas; and her Fore-Top Gallant Sail contains 130 Yards. One compleat Set or Suit of Sails belonging to her, will coſt 404 l. Sterling.

The Weight of the Sea Store, Tackle and Cordage, is 60 Tons, 800 and odd Pounds.

She carries a Long Boat of 50 Foot; a Pinnace of 36 Foot, and a Skiff of 27 Foot long.

The Weight of her Rigging, 33 Tons.

She carried Three Tire of Guns, all of Braſs; whereof there are 44 in her Upper Tire, 34 in her Second, and 22 in her Lower Tire; in all 100 Guns.

Her Compliment of Mariners, Soldiers and Officers, was 850 Men.

Her whole Charges for Wages, Diet, Ammunition, with Wear and Tear, for every Month ſhe is at Sea, coſts the King 3500 l. As hath been computed by experienced Accomptants in Maritime Affairs.

This Royal Ship was curiouſly carved, and gilt with Gold; ſo that when ſhe was in the Engagement againſt the Dutch, they gave her the Name of the Golden Devil; her Guns being whole Cannon, making ſuch Havock and Slaughter amongſt them.

Ham Creek.

11. Over againſt Woolwich, in Eſſex ſide, is HAM CREEK.

And about Two Miles more Weſtwards, is the River Lee, which parts the County of Eſſex from Middleſex.

Iſle of Dogs.

Next is the ISLE of DOGS; being a low Marſhy Ground, ſo called, as is reported, for that a Waterman carried a Man into this Marſh, and there murthered him. The Man having a Dog with him, he would not leave his Maſter; but Hunger forced him many times to ſwim over the Thames to Greenwich; which the Watermen who plied at the Bridge obſerving, followed the Dog over; and by that means the murthered Man was diſcovered. Soon after the Dog ſwimming over to Greenwich Bridge, where there was a Waterman ſeated, at him the Dog ſnarled, and would not be beat off; which the other Watermen perceiving, (and knowing of the Murther) apprehended this ſtrange Waterman; who confeſſed the Fact, and was condemned and executed.

Greenwich.

12. Over againſt the Iſle of Dogs, is GREENWICH; a large and pleaſant Town, ſeated on the Banks of the River Thames; being well inhabited, and frequented by Gentry, and Citizens of the firſt Rank, and graced with a once ſtately Palace of the King, (being of good Antiquity) whoſe Foundations were firſt laid by Humphry Duke of Gloceſter, and enlarged and beautified by ſeveral ſucceeding Kings. Out of the Ruins of this Structure, King Charles the IId. after his Happy Reſtauration, began to rebuild it, and proceeded to one End of a ſtately Pile of Building, all of Free Stone; but for ſome Reaſons diſcontinued it. And now his late Majeſty K. William hath given it for an Hoſpital for poor, and ancient, and maimed Seamen, that had ſerved in the Royal Fleet. And there is (and according to all Probability will be) a good Revenue ſettled thereon, for the Support thereof; and Governors are choſen, for the looking after the ſame. An Account whereof will be given afterwards.

Adjoining to this Palace, is a ſmall but pleaſant Park; and upon a Hill, about Half a Mile from the Houſe, is a fair Lodge Houſe, which affords a delectable Proſpect.

In this Houſe, there was a Part allotted by King Charles the Second, for Mr. Flamſtead, for his making his Cœleſtial Obſervations of the Planets, &c. in order to further Knowledge and Improvement of Aſtronomy; having a good Stipend ſettled on him, and being accommodated with Teleſcopes of the largeſt and beſt Contrivance, as alſo with other Mathematical Inſtruments, fit for ſuch Uſe; and having alſo a deep Well, to make his Obſervations in. [Which are very large, and printed by his Order in Folio; but by him not yet thought fit to be publiſhed. And tho' he be now of a very great Age, is ſtill making his Obſervations. The Salary he hath, and doth yearly receive, is 200 l. per Annum, as is ſaid.] J. S.

Deptford.

13. DEPTFORD, the Upper and the Lower; which taken together, is very large: The Upper being much the better, both for Buildings, and Inhabitants; and is the more reſorted unto, by reaſon of his Majeſty's Dock and Storehouſes, for the Building and Equipping of the Ships of the Navy Royal. Here is alſo another Yard, for the Building of Ships for Merchants. And this Town parts the Two Counties of Kent and Surrey: So that now we come to the Shores of Middleſex and Surrey. On the North ſide of which Shores, are the Cities of London and Weſtminſter; and on the South, the Borough of Southwark: Which Places muſt be treated of in a larger manner, in the Progreſs of this Work.

Blackwall.

14. But before we come to London, we meet with BLACKWALL, on Middleſex ſide; where there is a very ſpacious Dock and Yard, for the Building and Equipping of Ships, belonging to Sir Henry Johnſon, whoſe Dwelling was there.

Limehouſe.

15. LIMEHOUSE, a very populous Place, with fair Buildings next the River, which are inhabited by Mariners, and thoſe whoſe Dependance is on the Sea. [And therefore here is One of the Fifty New Churches erected.]

On the other Side, (viz. that of Surrey) is Rotherhith.

Cuckolds Point.

Near to this Place is Cuckolds Point; where there is a large Pair of Horns fixed upon a Pole. I know not the Fancy for it.

Thus having given you a View of ſuch remarkable Places on the Eaſt ſide of London Bridge, I now come to ſpeak of thoſe on the Weſt ſide. And then the firſt Place that cometh to our View, is,

The Neat Houſes.

16. The NEATHOUSES; being a Parcel of Houſes taken up by Gardiners for planting of Aſparagus, Melons, Cucumbers, Artichokes, &c. which find good Vent at London, and for which they are of Note.

Chelſea College.

17. CHELSEA COLLEGE, a large and ſtately Structure, with curious Gardens; being made uſe of for an Hoſpital for maimed and ancient Soldiers. I could wiſh that ſuch a Fine Building had been rather appropriated for decayed Gentlemen: But of this Building more will be ſaid, in the Chapter of Colleges and Hoſpitals.

Chelſea.

18. CHELSEA, a Town not large, but graced with good well built Houſes, (eſpecially of late Years;) amongſt which are ſeveral large Houſes, the Seats of Noblemen; as the Right Honourable the Lord Cheney, who is Lord of the Manor: Then a large Houſe, now the Duke of Beaufort's, formerly of the Duke of Buckingham; then the Houſe of the Earl of Lindſey, now Duke of Ancaſter.

Batterſea.

19. BATTERSEA; almoſt over againſt Chelſea, a pretty handſome Town. Both in this Town, as well as in Chelſea, are divers Gardiners, ſerviceable to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, for their Commodities. The Chief Houſe in this Town, is the Seat of Sir Walter St. John, (created by his Majeſty K. George, Lord Batterſea); a fine well built Houſe, ſeated on the Banks of the River Thames, with fine Gardens.

Putney.

20. PUTNEY, alſo ſeated in Surrey, as was the former; graced with large and good Buildings, well inhabited by Gentry: and the more for its good Air, and the Diverſion its large Heath affords. Where there is a Bowling Green, well reſorted unto in the Summer Seaſon.

Fulham.

Muſtow Houſe.

21. FULHAM, in Middleſex; oppoſite to Putney: A pretty large Town, with ſome good Houſes for the Gentry; amongſt which is Muſtow Houſe, very pleaſantly ſeated, a ſmall Diſtance from the Town, with large Orchards and Gardens; the Seat of Sir Williams, Baronet.

Parſons Green.

Then in PARSONS GREEN, which belongs to the Pariſh of Fulham, are very good Houſes for Gentry; where the Right Honourable the Earl of Peterborough hath a large Houſe, with ſtately Gardens. Weſtwards of the Town, the Biſhop of London hath his Palace, which is an old but good Building, with fine Gardens. Repaired by the preſent Lord Biſhop.

Barn Elms.

22. BARN ELMS, of Note for its lofty Elm Trees; at the upper End of which is a large and new Brick Houſe, at preſent the Seat of Sir Matthew Andrews.

Mortlack.

23. MORTLACK, on Surrey ſide, a long Town, graced with divers good Houſes, the Seats of Citizens and Gentry.

Chiſwick.

24. CHISWICK, the Seats of the Earl of Falconbergh, and of ſeveral Gentlemen.

Now we are croſs'd over on Middleſex ſide. On which Side ſtands alſo, Brentford.

25. BRENTFORD, the Old and the New; Both ſeated on the high Road to London: Old Brentford being but meanly inhabited, by reaſon of its Dirtineſs in the Winter, and Duſt in the Summer; as lying low, and the Paſſage ſo narrow, that two Carts or Coaches can hardly paſs one another. But as to New Brentford, not far diſtant, it is a conſiderable Market Town, well inhabited; and by reaſon of its Thorough-fare, hath good Inns and Houſes of Entertainment. Its Market, which is on Tueſdays, is well ſerved with Proviſions, which are bought up by the Higglers. Not far from this Town is the ſtately Houſe, now of the Duke of Somerſet, by Marriage of an Heireſs of the late Earl of Northumberland, called Sion Houſe, delightfully ſeated; and where the firſt Duke of that Name had his Reſidence.

Sion Houſe.

Kew.

26. Over againſt Brentford, and in Surrey, is KEW GREEN; where are ſeveral good Buildings, inhabited by Gentry.

Iſleworth.

27. ISTLEWORTH, in Middleſex; a large Town, full of well built Houſes, much reſorted unto by the Gentry.

Richmond.

28. RICHMOND, in Surrey; a large Town, graced with good Buildings, eſpecially the Green, that fronts the King's Palace, now decayed, and parcelled out in Tenements; and on the Hill, where there are new found out Wells, which draw a great Reſort of Gentry to them, and the Town. Here the Prince of Wales, and Princeſs, have their Summer Habitation.

Twickenham.

29. TWICKENHAM; a good and handſome Country Town, of a good Reſort, and much inhabited by the Gentry. Here the Earl of Bradford hath a good Country Houſe; and near unto it, Sir George Humble, Bar. had another, very graceful to the Eye, and pleaſantly ſeated amongſt fine Gardens.

Teddington.

30. TEDDINGTON; a ſmall Town, of no great Account.

Kingſton.

31. KINGSTON, in Surrey; joined to Kingſtonwick in Middleſex, by a Wooden Bridge, which brings a great Advantage to the Town, for the conveying of Corn, &c. to its Market, which is very conſiderable for Grain, Poultry Ware, and all Sorts of Proviſions; and is much reſorted unto every Saturday by Mealmen, and Higglers. The Town is large, and well inhabited: It is an Ancient Corporation, governed by Bailiffs, &c. And enjoyeth large Immunities; being the uſual Place where one of the Aſſizes for the County is held, and where the Juſtices keep one of their Quarter Seſſions. This Place is of Note, for being the Place where upon a Stage in the open Market Place, was placed the Chair of his Majeſty, where Æthelſtan, Ethelred, and Edwin were crowned Kings, and received their Imperial Sceptres; and from whence 'tis ſaid this Town took its Name of Kingſton, being before called Moreford.

Thames Ditton.

32. THAMES DITTON; a ſmall Place, and of no Account.

Hampton Court.

33. HAMPTON COURT; pleaſantly ſeated betwixt Two Parks. This Palace ſince its late Rebuilding, is moſt ſtately and magnificent; and hath a curious Garden newly made, by the Directions of Mr. London, his Majeſty's principal Gardiner: who in reſpect of his Knowledge in all Things relating to Curious Gardens, hath not his Fellow in the Kingdom.

This Palace was firſt built by Cardinal Wolſey, in Oſtentation of his great Riches; and afterwards enlarged by King Henry the VIIIth, and new beautified by his late Majeſty, K. William.

Not far from this Court, is

Hampton Town.

HAMPTON TOWN; indifferent large, with ſome good Houſes.

Sunbury.

34 SUNBURY, in the ſaid County; of no great Account.

Walton.

35. WALTON, or Walton upon the Thames; a pretty large Town, well inhabited, and in a healthful Air.

Shepperton.

36. SHEPPERTON; ſeated in Middleſex; of no great Account.

Waybridge.

37. WAYBRIDGE; a Town well inhabited by Gentry. Here was a Palace of the King's Oatlands.

King's called Oatlands, now pulled down; and the Park and Houſe that is ſtanding, was the Seat of the late Earl of Torrington, by Leaſe from the Crown; his Lordſhip then living in one of the Lodge Houſes.

Chertſey.

38. CHERTSEY, in Surrey; at ſome Diſtance from the Thames, where it hath a Bridge of Wood, which adds an Advantage to the Town; yet its Market (which is on Wedneſday) is but mean, and ill ſerved, eſpecially with Corn.

Lalam.

39. LALAM; of ſmall Account.

Stanes.

40. STANES; another ſmall Market Town in Middleſex, ſeated on the high Weſtern Road to London, which occaſions it to be of better Reſort, having a Wooden Bridge over the Thames, which leadeth to Egham in Surrey. Its Market is on Fridays; which is but ſmall, either for Corn, or Proviſions.

I have given the Reader a ſhort Deſcription of the Towns and Places, from Eaſt to Weſt, which are ſeated on this famous River, and which are within the Juriſdiction of the Lord Maior of London, who is Conſervator thereof.]

Citizens and Nobles take the Air on the Thames.

J. S.

And thus as this fine River is of great Uſe and Profit to the City; ſo the many neat Towns and Seats on the Banks of it, make it extraordinary pleaſant and delightful. So that the Citizens and Gentlemen, nay, Kings, have in the Summer Time, uſually taken the Air by Water; being carried in Boats and Barges along the Thames, both upward and downward, according to their Pleaſures.

Gower the Poet, contemporary with King Richard II. ſpeaks of that King's going in his Barge upon this River, when the Poet alſo was in a Boat: Whom the King ſeeing, called into his own Barge; and commanded him to write upon ſome Subject, that he might entertain himſelf with reading his Poetry: As he deſcribeth this Matter himſelf, in his Book de Confeſſione Amantis.

As it beſylle upon a Tyde,
As Thynge whych ſhuide tho letyde,
Under the Town of newe Troye,
Whyche toke of Brute hys fyrſte joye,
On Themſe whan it was flowende,
As I by Bote came roende;
So as Fortune hir Tyme ſette,
My Lyege Lorde perchaunce I mette;
And ſo befelle as I came nygh,
Out of my Bote whan he me ſygh;
He bade me come into hys Barge;
And whan I was with hym at large,
Amonges other Thynges ſeyd,
He hath ſoch Charge upon me leyd, &c.]

CHAP. XI.

Two Acts; The one an Act of Parliament for the Preſervation of this River: The other, An Act of Common Council, for the Conſervation and Cleanſing of it.

A. M.

HERE, in the laſt place, we ſhall ſubjoin Two Inſtances of the Care taken of this River in Henry the Eighth's Time, by the Parliament, as well as by the Government of the City, for the keeping it clean, preſerving the Banks, and preventing Breaches. And firſt,

An Act of Parliament for the Preſervation of the River of THAMES, made in the Twenty ſeventh Year of the Reign of our moſt Dread Sovereign Lord, K. HENRY the Eighth.

“WHere before this Time the River of Thames, among all other Rivers within this Realm, hath been accepted and taken, and as it is indeed, moſt commodious and profitable unto all the King's Liege People; and chiefly of all other frequented and uſed, and as well by the King's Highneſs, his Eſtates, and Nobles, Merchants, and other repairing to the City of London, and other Places, Shires and Counties adjoining to the ſame: Which River of Thames is, and hath been moſt meet and convenient of all other, for the Safegard and Ordering of the King's Navy, Conveighance of Merchandiſes, and other Neceſſaries, to and for the King's moſt Honourable Houſhold, and otherwiſe, to the great Relief and Comfort of all Perſons within this Realm; till now of late divers evil-diſpoſed Perſons, partly by miſordering of the ſaid River, by caſting in of Dung and other Filth, laid nigh to the Banks of the ſaid River, digging and undermining of the ſaid Banks and Walls next adjoining to the ſame River, carrying and conveighing away of Way-ſhides, Shore-piles, Boords, Timber-work, Ballaſt for Ships, and other Things from the ſaid Banks and Walls in ſundry places: by reaſon whereof, great Shelfs and Riſings have of late been made and grown in the Farway of the ſaid River, and ſuch Grounds as lye within the Level of the ſaid Water-mark: By occaſion thereof have been ſurrounded and overflown by Rage of the ſaid Water, and many great Breaches have enſued and followed thereupon, and daily are like to do, and the ſaid River of Thames to be utterly deſtroyed for ever, if convenient and ſpeedy Remedy be not ſooner provided in that Behalf.

“For Reformation whereof, Be it enacted, eſtabliſhed, and ordained by the King, our Sovereign Lord, and by the Aſſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That if any Perſon or Perſons hereafter, do, or procure any Thing to be done in the annoying of the Stream of the ſaid River of Thames, making of Shelfs by any manner of Means, by Mining, Digging, Caſting of Dung, or Rubbiſh, or other Thing in the ſame River; or take, pluck, or conveigh away any Boords, Stakes, Piles, Timber-work, or other Thing from the ſaid Banks or Walls; except it be to amend, and the ſame to repair again; or dig or undermine any Banks or Walls on the Waterſide of Thames aforeſaid, to the Hurt, Impairing or Damage of any the ſaid Walls and “ Banks ; then the ſame Perſon or Perſons, and every of them, ſhall forfeit and pay for every Time ſo offending, One Hundred Shillings : The one Moiety thereof to be to the King our Sovereign Lord, and the other Moiety thereof to the Maior and Commonalty of London for the Time being. The ſame to be recovered and obtained by the Maior and Commonalty of London, by Bill or Plaint, Writ of Debt or Information, ſeverally againſt every Offender, in any of the King's Courts ; in which Actions and Suits, or any of them, the Party Defendant ſhall not be eſſoined or wage his Law, or any Protection to be allowed in the ſame.

“ And it is further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if Complaint ſhall happen to be made to the Lord Chancellor of England, Lord Treaſurer, Lord Preſident of the King's Council, Lord Privy Seal, or to any of them, by any Perſon or Perſons, or Body Politick ; that Sir Thomas Spert, Knight, now having the Office and Ordering of, and for Ballaſting of Ships, or any other that hereafter ſhall have the Office and Order of Ballaſting of Ships, do take any Ballaſt for Ships near the ſaid River of Thames, and do not take for Parcel of the ſaid Ballaſting, the Gravel and Sand of the Shelfs between Greenhyth and Richmond, within the ſaid River of Thames, or in any Place or Places, that is or ſhall be unto the Damage or Annoyance of the ſaid River of Thames, or in any Part thereof ; that then upon every ſuch Complaint, the ſaid Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, Lord Preſident of the King's moſt Honourable Council, Lord Privy Seal, and every of them ; calling both the Chief Juſtices of either Bench, or one of them ; ſhall have Power and Authority from Time to Time, to hear and finally determine every ſuch Complaint by their Diſcretion, and to put ſuch Order therein, for the taking of Ballaſt for Ships upon every ſuch Complaint, as by their Diſcretions ſhall ſeem moſt convenient for the Preſervation of the ſaid River of Thames : And the Parties offending ſuch Order, ſhall ſuffer Impriſonment, and make no leſs Fine than Five Pound to the King's Uſe, for every Time offending or breaking the ſame.

“ Provided always, and be it enacted, That it ſhall be lawful to every Perſon and Perſons, to dig, carry and take away Sand, Gravel, or other Rubbiſh, Earth or Thing, lying or being in, or upon any Shelf or Shelfs within the ſaid River of Thames, without Let or Interruption of any Perſon or Perſons, or paying any Thing for the ſame ; any Thing contained in this preſent Act to the contrary notwithſtanding.

An Act of COMMON COUNCIL, concerning the Conſervation and Cleanſing of the River of THAMES ; made the 28th of September, in the Thirtieth Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King HENRY the Eighth.

“ WHere by the Statute made in the 27th Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King HENRY the Eighth, among other, for Reformation of the Miſordering of the River of Thames, by caſting in Dung and other Filth, many great Shelves, and other Riſings, have been of late grown and made within the ſame River : By reaſon whereof, many great Breaches have enſued by occaſion thereof, which of like ſhall be the Occaſion of the utter Deſtruction of the ſaid River, unleſs that the ſame Law be put in due Execution, according to the true Intent and Meaning thereof.

“ Wherefore for a further Reformation of the ſame, and to the Intent that the ſaid good and wholſome Statute may be put in more Execution, and better Knowledge of the People ; It is enacted by the Authority of this Common Council, That Proclamation may be made within this ſaid City, and the ſame to be put in Writing, and Tables thereof made and ſet up in divers Places of this City, That it ſhall be lawful to every Perſon or Perſons, to dig, carry away, and take away Sand, Gravel, or any Rubbiſh, Earth, or any Thing lying or being in any Shelf or Shelves within the ſaid River of Thames, without Let or Interruption of any Perſon or Perſons, and without any Thing paying for the ſame ; and after that to ſell the ſame away, or otherwiſe occupy or diſpoſe the ſaid Gravel, Sand, or other Thing at their free Liberty and Pleaſure. And that all Paviours, Bricklayers, Tilers, Maſons, and all other that ſhall occupy Sand or Gravel, ſhall endeavour themſelves with all their Diligence, to occupy the ſaid Sand or Gravel, and none other, paying for the ſame reaſonably, as they ſhould and ought to pay for other Sand or Gravel digged out of other Mens Grounds about the ſaid City ; which after is filled again with much filthy Things, to the great Infection of the Inhabitants of the ſaid City, and all other repairing unto the ſame. And that further, humble Suit may be made to the King's Highneſs, That all Perſons having Lands or Tenements along the ſaid River ſide, upon certain Pain by his Highneſs, and the Lords of his Honourable Council to be limited, ſhall well and ſufficiently repair and maintain all the Walls and Banks adjoining unto their ſaid Lands, that ſo the Water may not, nor ſhall break in upon the ſame : And the ſame to be continued till the Time that the ſaid Noble River be brought again to his old Courſe and former Eſtate. And that ſtrong Grates of Iron along the ſaid Water ſide, and alſo by the Street ſide, where any Water-Courſe is had into the ſaid Thames, be made by the Inhabitants of every Ward ſo along the ſaid Water, as of old Time hath been accuſtomed. And that every Grate be in Height Four and twenty Inches at the leaſt, or more, as the Place ſhall need, and in Breadth one from another, One Inch ; and the ſame to be done with all Expedition and Speed. And if the Occupiers of the ſaid Lands and Tenements make Default contrary to the Ordinance aforeſaid ; Or elſe if any Perſon or Perſons, in great Rains and other Times, ſweep their Soilage, or Filth of their Houſes into the Channel, and the ſame after is conveyed into the Thames ; every Perſon ſo offending, ſhall forfeit for every ſuch Default twenty Pence : And that upon Complaint to be made to any Conſtable, next adjoining to the ſaid Place where any ſuch Default ſhall be found ; it ſhall be lawful for the ſaid Conſtable, or his ſufficient Deputy for the Time being, from Time to Time to diſtrain for the ſame Offence ; and to retain the ſame irreplegiable. And like Law to be obſerved and kept ; and like Penalty to be paid for every Perſon that burns Ruſhes and Straw in their Houſes, or waſh in the common Streets or Lanes ; and to be recovered as aforeſaid : And the one Moiety thereof to be to the Maior and Commonalty, and the other Moiety to be divided between the ſaid Conſtable that taketh Pain, and the Party Finder of the ſaid Default. And if the Conſtable or his Deputy refuſe to " do his Duty, according to the true Meaning " of this Act, that then the Conſtable, or his " Deputy, which ſhall ſo refuſe to do his Duty as " aforeſaid, ſhall forfeit and pay for every Time " ſo offending, Three Shillings Four Pence. And " the ſame Penalty of the ſaid Conſtable to be " recovered and obtained by Diſtreſs irreplegi- " able, to be taken by any of the Officers of the " Chamber of London, to the Uſe of the Maior " and Commonalty of London.

" And further, That no Perſon or Perſons, ha- " ving any Wharf or Houſe by the ſaid Water " ſide, make not their Lay-ſtalls nigh to the Ri- " ver aforeſaid; except only the common Lay- " ſtalls, where the common Rakers of this City " uſe to repoſe and lay all their Soilage, to be " carried away by them with their Dung Boats. " And that the ſaid Rakers ſhall lay their ſaid " Dung, carried in their Dung Boats, to ſuch " convenient Place or Places, as ſhall be ap- " pointed by the Lord Maior of LONDON, " for the Time being, with the Advice of " his Brethren, the Aldermen of the ſame; " and to no other Place or Places, upon Pain to " forfeit for every ſuch Default Five Pounds; to " be recovered in any of the King's Courts with- " in the City of LONDON, by Bill, Plaint, " Moiety of Debt, or Information by any Per- " ſon that will or ſhall purſue for the ſame: " The one Moiety thereof to be unto the Maior " and Commonalty of London, and the other " Moiety to him or them that will or ſhall pur- " ſue for the ſame. In which Actions or Suits, " no Wager of Law, nor Eſſoign, ſhall be al- " lowed.]

CHAP. XII.

The River LEE or LEY. An Act for a Cut to be made in it. Scowred and made Navigable. A Commiſſion of Sewers for the LEE. Cutts made on the Banks of it in the Night time, to let out the Water.

The River Lee.

J. S.

BECAUSE a conſiderable River, gliding from the North, falleth into the Thames about Limehouſe, or Leymouth, called Lee or Ley, or Leigh, or Lea; and a Right in it claimed for a great way by the City; therefore as an Appendix to this former Diſcourſe, I ſhall remark a few Things of it.

The Cities Right to it. L. Coke's Inſtitut.

This pleaſant and uſeful River, and the greateſt in the County of Hertford, ſtreams along from Hertford and Ware, and ſo by the Counties of Middleſex and Eſſex; waſhing Low Leyton on the Eaſt, (a Village which hath its Name from thence) and ſo to Temple Mill, Old Ford, and Statford Le Bow, and at length loſeth it ſelf in the Thames. The City from ancient Times ſeems to have a Right to it. For it is recorded in the Rolls of Parliament, 2 Hen. 5. that in all Commiſſions touching the Water of Lee, the Maior of London ſhall be one. The City received much Benefit from it.

f great Be- ſit to the ity.

For in former Time it conveyed Corn, Malt, and other Commodities to London; as appears by the Verdict of a Jury given Decemb. 10. the 22d of Edw. IV. touching the Defaults and Impediments, ſtopping and letting the full Courſe and Liberty of the River, called The Water of Ley. Where it was among other Things found and preſented touching the Abbot of Walthams Annoyances, as followeth: " Alſo the Head of the En- " try of the ſaid Abbots Mill, where Water " goeth out of the King's River, is of 10 Foot " broad, where it ſhould be but Four Foot, by " the which the Kynges Servant is ſore hurt. " Alſo the ſaid Abbot hath a Lock, which is but " xv Fote brode, wher it ſhould be xviii Fote. " For the which Cauſe it muſt be broke up; for " it is a great Jeopardy to all manner of Barges " and Boats which goeth by the Water there.

n Act for a w Cut in Lee to ing it to ndon, 13. iz.

In the Year 1571, the 13th of Q. Eliz. was an Act of Parlament made for bringing the River of Lee to the Northſide of the City of London. But it is queſtionable, whether this Cut was ever begun at all, certain it is, it was never finiſhed, and brought to any North Parts of London: However, it is vulgarly ſaid, that the Channel over which the Bridge is built near Temple Mill is Part of that Cut; but it is more likely an antient Branch of the Lee, and never cut by Art. It would have been a good Work had it been done; which the Preamble of the ſaid Act ſufficiently ſets forth; mentioning how " Commodious it would be both " to City and Country, if the River LEE, " otherwiſe called WARE River, might be " brought within the Land to the North Part of " the City, to be cut out of the ſaid River for the " Navigation of Barges and other Veſſels, to " carry Merchandize, Victuals, and other Ne- " ceſſaries from the Town of Ware, and all other " Places near the ſaid River unto London; and " from the ſaid City to the ſame Places: And alſo " for Tiltboats and Wherries for conveying the " Queen's Subjects to and fro.

And thereupon by that Act it was made lawful for the Lord Maior and City of London, and their Succeſſors, at any time hereafter, to lay out convenient Limits of Ground, for making the Trench in the ſaid River, in ſuch Breadth as to them and their Deputies and Workmen ſhould ſeem convenient, and in the Place they ſhould think moſt apt and meet for that Purpoſe: And to have, take, and uſe, ſo much Ground all the Length, as the ſaid new Channel or Cut ſhould paſs, and 50 or 60 Foot in Breadth, on each ſide of the ſaid River all the length of the ſame: And not to take in Breadth both in Channel and in Ground on both Sides, above the Breadth of Eight Score Foot in all; which was thought neceſſary to be had, becauſe the Ground and Soil on each Side muſt be occupied, as well for laying of the Earth that ſhould be caſt out of the ſaid Trench, to ſerve in the lower Grounds, eſpecially near the ſaid River, to make ſubſtantial Banks to keep the Country from Inundations, when the Floods ſhould riſe; as alſo for way to paſs with Trunks and Carts, to carry away the Gravel and other Earth in very great Quantities from the Hills, whereas the Cut muſt be very deep. And alſo when it ſhall be made, that the whole Ground on both Sides of the River might lye in one Level from the City of London to that Place, where the ſaid Trench or River ſhould have his Beginning out of the main River of Lee: And to the End alſo, that in all Places, within that Limit and Diſtance, all People might with great Eaſe and Commodity go in and out of their Tiltboats, and other Veſſels without Peril; and ſo walk on Foot as long as it ſhould pleaſe them; and alſo that the Bargemen might upon the ſame Ground draw their Veſſels from Place to Place along the ſame.

The Maior and Commonalty were to have the ſame Grounds the whole Length by Compoſition, with the Owners and Occupiers of the Soil and Ground. The Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper, might appoint Sixteen Commiſſioners, to treat, agree, and compound with ſuch Number of Freeholders, and Inhabitants of the Counties of Middleſex, Eſſex, and Hartford, for Scouring, Cleanſing, Repairing, and Keeping the ſaid River from the Cut to the Town of Ware. Until Order and Means were deviſed and agreed upon by the ſaid Commiſſioners, and the Commiſſion returned into the Court of Chancery; the Lord Maior, and Citizens, not to put the ſaid Digging and new Cutting in Execution: Nor to take any Man's Ground until they had compounded with the Owners: And ſhould within Ten Years next after the End of the Seſſion of this Parlament cut and finiſh the ſame. That any ſuch as refuſed to be reaſonably compounded withal, the 16 Commiſſioners to appoint and determine the Compoſition. The Maior and Commonalty to have the whole Juriſdiction, Conſervacie, Rule and Government of the new cut River, and Ground of each Side: and alſo the Royalty of the Fiſh and Fiſhing, and the Profits of the ſaid Ground, Soil and Water; and Authority to puniſh all Tranſgreſſors, &c. If there ſhould happen any Breaches, Inundations, and Hurts, the Maior and Citizens to ſtop the Breaches: And to make and maintain at their own Coſt and Charges ſufficient Hedges and Fences between the Grounds ſo by them taken in, and the Grounds of other Owners; and all convenient Bridges and Ways for Paſſage of the Queen's Subjects.

The Difficulties, it ſeems, and the Charges in effecting this Work, appeared ſo exceeding great, that it deterred the City from attempting it. By a Clauſe in the Act aforeſaid, it was to be finiſhed in Ten Years. But nothing was done towards it in Seven Years after.

The new Cut to be made in this River deliberated upon.

For I find that in the Year 1577, the City entred into Conſideration, concerning a new Cut to be made in this River, to bring the Paſſage thereof to Moregate. The Chamberlain ſignified this to Thomas Fanſhaw, Eſq; Remembrancer of the Exchequer, and prayed him to let the Lord Treaſurer Burghley know of it, (who had a Country Houſe at Cheſhunt near this River) adding alſo that there was good Liking and Hope it would be done: And that he [the Chamberlain] meant to bring a Plat of the Ground and Device to his Lordſhip. Whereupon Fanſhaw prayed the ſaid Lord to call upon the Matter, ſuppoſing it would by that means proceed the better. But this good Deſign never came to any Thing.

The River foul and ſhallow, and ſcarcely navigable. A Seſſions moved for Remedy.

In the aboveſaid Year, 1577, Notice was taken of the Foulneſs of the River, and the Shallowneſs of the Water in many Places, for want of Cleanſing; ſo that Boats could ſcarce paſs, unleſs they drew but little Water. So that it was found very needful to look to the remedying of it, leſt the Benefit of Navigation thereon ſhould go wholly into Diſuſe. Fanſhaw and Clark, two Gentlemen in the Parts near Ware, chiefly ſtirred in this Matter. The former, in the Month of October, put the Lord Treaſurer Burghley in mind of appointing a Seſſions, to be made up firſt of his Lordſhip himſelf, and of a competent Number beſides of Commiſſioners, who ſhould have the Dykegraves before them, and give out effectual Orders for the Examination of the Defects, and for the Reparation of it. And it being now at the loweſt, the Faults would beſt appear, and being once perfected would ſo continue. Clark meant, before the ſaid Seſſions, to make a full Trial of the River, and to preſent a Note of all the Impediments and Defects. And to make an Experiment in what Condition the River now was, the ſaid Lord Burghley had a Boat, which in this ſaid Month of October was laden at Ware with two Tun Weight, partly Malt and partly Meal, on purpoſe to make Proof of her Working and Burden. She came well up to London with that Lading without any ſtay; and was laden at the Stern to her utmoſt Depth ſhe was made for, which was Eighteen Inches. By reaſon whereof ſhe touched the Ground in ſome Places, but ſtayed not. Of which Places Notice was taken, that Order might be given for the ſinking them deeper, becauſe other Boats could not paſs, that were of greater Burden, and eſpecially wider. And tho' the Charge of amending all the Impediments would be but ſmall, yet it was feared they would not be done before a Seſſions were appointed by the ſaid Nobleman.

Made Navigable, and cleanſed.

It was not till the Year 1580, that it was made Navigable, by cleanſing and repairing as far as Ware, by Order from the Queen, and the Lords of her Council; wherein Thomas Fanſhaw, Eſq; before mentioned, poſſeſſing the Manor of Ware Park there, was a great Inſtrument for his more convenient Conveyance of Goods and Commodities to and from London, as alſo for the Public Good.

A Commiſſion of Sewers for this River.

Cutts made therein privily.

But this the Malſters and Farmers, in the Pariſh of Enfield, and the Parts thereabouts, were greatly angred at; becauſe the Carriage of Malt and Grain by Water to London being made cheaper than could be afforded by ſuch as brought it by Land Carriage, their Benefit was hereby hurt. Whereupon the Country People made Cuts in the River to let out the Water, that it might not have Depth enough to bear the Barges, hoping hereby utterly to defeat the Paſſage by that River. And a Lock at Waltham was attempted to be burnt. Complaint being made of this to the Lord Burghley, he firſt in September, 1581, ſent his Letters to Sir Henry Cock, Knt. Mr. Fanſhaw, and Mr. Baſh, Gentlemen in thoſe Parts, to enquire into certain Diſorders, and leud Attempts committed in the River of Lee to the Spoil thereof. They met accordingly at Enfield, Waltham, and Hoddeſdon, and diſcovered ſomewhat: But that being not effectual, the ſaid Lord in October following iſſued out a Commiſſion of Sewers to ſeveral Gentlemen beſides to examine theſe Abuſes; whereof William Fletewood, Sergeant at Law, and the Recorder of London, was one. And it was found by the Certificate ſent to the Lord Treaſurer, and Lord Hunſdon, by the ſaid Recorder, Thomas Fanſhaw, Edward Baſh, Thomas Colſhill, Jaſper Leek, and William Clark, Eſquires, Commiſſioners of the Sewers for the River of Lee (who ſat at Totenham at Sheriff Martins Houſe there, (where his Cook made them a great Dinner at the ſame time) that a Bank or Place in Enfield Marſh, called the Pipler, was broken up two ſeveral Times with Spades and Shovels, to let the Water run out of the high Stream in the Night time. The River Bank was again cut up to let out the Water, at another Place in Enfield, called Lotherſey Gate. A Bank or Jutte newly made at Suſternford, for the narrowing of the Water, for the better Paſſage of Boats, was cut up in the Night time. The Lady Wroths old Lock, the Bank there being firm Ground was cut up; and being ſtopt divers Times was broken up again in the Night time for the moſt Part by the Men of Enfield. Waltham Lock was attempted to be ſet on fire with Brimſtone, Roſin, and Straw by night. A new Bank, or Jutty made at Odyeſhelp, at Halifield Marſh in Cheſhunt, was alſo cut or broken up in the Night.

It was alſo depoſed, that one Penifather, Servant to the Miller of Waltham, talking with two Watermen, concerning the ſetting the Lock on Fire, wiſhed there were a Barrel of Gunpowder in the Bottom of the Lock, and another in the Bottom of their Barge, ſo the Men were out of it. And being reproved for this Speech, anſwered, that he had ſaid nothing, but what he would ſtand unto. And further asked the Watermen, What they were the better if they knew who did it; for they could but hang him amongſt them. And if he were hanged, they ſhould have ill going by the River ever after. As if he intended, when he was a Ghoſt, to diſturb them.

Sir Thomas Wroth of Enfield, againſt the Paſſage of the Barges on the Lee.

It was found further, that when Complaint was made to the Lord Treaſurer of theſe Cuts of the Lee Banks; and he thereupon had ſent his Letter to Sir Thomas Wroth of Enfield, for the Regulation thereof, the ſaid Wroth ſent for certain Perſons of Ware, and burſt out into theſe Words to them, viz. "That the Lords of the Council had done them great Wrong in cauſing them to make a Paſſage for Barges and Boats, which was to their undoing. And rather than my Lords of the Council ſhall force us to make up the Breaches again, we will be hanged at our own Gates. And moreover, gave out Words of Encouragement to the Offenders, that were preſent before him, ſaying, That he would warrant them Remedy, and that ſhortly. After which Words ſpoken, there were more Breaches cut out than were before; for they were not ſo ſoon ſtopped but forthwith they were cut out again.

The Number of Horſes employed between Enfield and Shoreditch.

Sir Thomas Wroth's Servants flung out theſe Words againſt this Carriage of Corn by the Lee, (meaning to ſhew the great Damage of it to the Country) that there was 2100 Horſe numbred by Sir Thomas, in one Morning, travelling between Shoreditch and Enfield. But one Hud, an Inhabitant of Ware, an intelligent Man, and a Dealer in Corn and Malt, and Farmer of the Queen's, ſhewed, that in Truth the Reaſon of all the Enfield Men's late Diſturbance at the making this River Navigable, was, that they could not oppreſs the Country, and engroſs the Corn, and foreſtall the Market, as they had done before; and leave the City of London unſerved, or raiſe the Prices there as they pleaſed. His Letter to the Commiſſioners may not be unworthy here to be ſet down, eſpecially ſo much as concerns our City of London.

The Inconvenience of bringing Malt and Corn to London, by LandCarriage.

"Pleaſeth it you to underſtand, That whereas there was one and twenty Hundred Horſe, Numbred in one Morning by Sir Thomas Wroth, (as his own Servants did faithfully report) between Shoreditch and Enfield; and as it may be truly judged Twenty Hundred of thoſe ſame dyed in Ditches [kill'd or worn out with Burden and Travail] within leſs than Seven Years after: Which in ſo long a Space did devour a marvellous Quantity of good Corn, Hay, and Graſs; and dyed, ſerving to no other Uſe but their carrying Carcaſſes to feed the Dogs; the Owners whereof were great Loſers by their Death; as it muſt needs be granted. And the ſame Hay, and Corn, and Graſs, which their Carrion Carcaſſes did conſume and devour, might have been contrived and employed to a great deal more profitable and commodious Uſe; as to feed three or four Thouſand Milch Beaſts; which would have increaſed great Plenty of Butter and Cheeſe and Milk, able to ſuſtain and nouriſh a great Multitude of poor People: And whoſe Carcaſſes are employed to great Uſe for to feed Men withal, after that they wax unfruitful; in which there is no Loſs, which Way ſoever they be employed: Whereas the other, after Life is gone, ſerve to no good Uſe.

"And notwithſtanding all theſe Inconveniences and Diſcommodities prevented and holpen, the City of London may be Victualled and Fraught with all manner of Proviſions with far leſs Charges, than the Horſemen of thoſe ſame Horſe did ſtand in before.

Bakers, Brewers, and Markets of London, ſerved with Corn by Enfield.

"But if it may pleaſe you, this is not the Cauſe of ſo great a Tumult and Stir, raiſed now of late by theſe lewd Perſons; but their greedy Deſire of Gain, the Loſs whereof is an Hell unto them. For there be certain rich Men now dwelling at Enfield, and in other Places thereby, who before the River of Lee was now lately ſcowred and redreſſed, were accuſtomed to ſerve the Bakers and Brewers of the City of London, and alſo the Markets of the ſame with all kind of Grain; who when they had Four or Five Hundred Quarters apiece bought already of the Farmers of the Country, to come in at Days appointed betwixt them: By reaſon whereof the Markets in the Country were ſmall, the Prices enhaunced, the City unſerved; becauſe by reaſon of this corrupt Dealing, the Corn for the preſent Time was come into Mens Hands, for that they had bought it before it came to the Market. And that little which came to ſerve the Market they would likewiſe buy up to raiſe the Prices, to the Intent they might make more Gains of their former Bargains; ſo that in one Week they were able both to raiſe the Prices exceſſively, and alſo abate the ſame. And to help the Matter, when they perceived the Bakers, Brewers, and other the Citizens of London, to be deſtitute, and without Grain, then they would bring in as much Corn as they could. Neither would they pitch it at their Bakers or Brewers in the Markets, but carry it cloſely to their Inns where they baited their Horſes. Who, except they would give four or five Shillings more in every Horſe Load than they paid before, the Baker and Brewer neither could have Meal nor Malt.

The Injury done to the City hereby.

"So that of Neceſſity the Bakers and Brewers muſt come to their own Prices; whereby they are conſtrained to go to the Lord Maior for a ſmaller Aſſize to bake by; which my Lord Maior muſt needs grant according to the Prices as they do pay. And thus was the Commonwealth moſt ſhamefully abuſed, robbed, and deceived, to make Mealmen and Maltmen, by theſe wicked Practices, unreaſonable Gainers; for notwithſtanding their great Charges their Horſes ſtood them in, many of them became great Purchaſers. And for all that, when their Cuſtomers, being Bakers or Brewers, did die or decay, though his Goods came to 500 l. all would not pay the Mealman or Maltman. Whereby his Wife and Children were brought into extreme Poverty, and the Mealman had all.

Theſe Evils redreſt by means of the Lee.

"But ſince the River of Lee was reformed (God's Name be praiſed) they are utterly prevented of theſe former Practices. For if they will not ſell now to the Baker or Brewer, or in the Publick Market for a reaſonable Gain, both the Occupiers and other the Houſholders go down to Queen Hith, or to the Waterſide, and there they make their Proviſion at reaſonable Prices, as the Time doth require. Whereby they are utterly prevented now of their former racking and raiſing of Prices at their Pleaſures. Which is their double Grief, and the chief Cauſe of their Envy, and their Malice they bear to the Maintainers of the River, ſeeking the Spoil of the ſame; for if they were content to deal in the Commonweal for a reaſonable Gain, then would they Traffic by the River as other Men do. But he that is carnally minded, and doth loſe an exceſſive Gain (obtained at his Pleaſure) and is conſtrained to content himſelf with a competent Gain, as other Men do, it is “ a double Death to him. For he had rather be “ hanged. And ſo had they. And ſo they them“ ſelves confeſs.

“ This ſhall be “ teſtified by the “ Teſtimony of
“ one hundred “ Citizens.

TOURS,

THO. HUDDE.

Mr. Fanſhaw of Ware Park inſtrumental in clearing the River Lee.

The People in theſe Parts about Enfield, clamoured moſt of all againſt Mr. Fanſhaw, for being chief in promoting the Carriage by the River Lee; and that he did it for his own Ends, and for the Benefit of his Town of Ware. In anſwer to which, the ſaid Gentleman acknowledged, that the making of that Paſſage coſt him above an 100 Mark, and he received only the Commodity, that he had London Beer brought him to his Houſe at Ware Park for his Money; and all other Carriages better cheap by half than by Land Carriage; and other Profit he made none: For that all the Houſes were holden by certain Rents, either by Charter or Copy; ſo that for any Thing he could ſave, he and his Son ſhould not ſave their Charges in Sixty Years. And the Townſmen found ſo little Profit by it, that none of them ſued for the continuance of the ſame, ſaving Five or Six that had Boats or Barges, (whereupon their Living reſted) and the Smiths. And that the greateſt Commodity that aroſe thereby to Watermen was to Men of other Towns: For of two and Twenty Barges or Boats, there belonged but Six to the Men of Ware.

The Number of Barges belonging to this River.

The Inhabitants of Enfield complain againſt this Water Carriage.

It was within two Years after, viz. Anno 1583, that the Town of Enfield put up their Complaints to thoſe in Power, for carrying Goods by the Waters of Lee; conſiſting in ſeveral Articles: As the reducing ſo many Carriers to Poverty; the Diſcommodity of the Brewers of London; Hindrance of bringing of Grain into the City; the Rudeneſs of Watermen; the conſtant Charge to the Country of repairing the Banks of the River; Decay of the King's Subſidy in Enfield; and of the Swans and Game, and the treading down the Graſs.

Anſwered.

But ſubſtantial Anſwers were ſoon framed to this Complaint: As, “ That the greateſt “ Number of Carriers of Grain by Land were “ always very poor, carrying for other Men; and “ that many of them fell into Decay by the “ great Charge and Loſs of their Horſes. That “ there were about an Hundred and Fifty tall and “ ſerviceable Men maintained, beſides thoſe Farmers,
“ Millers, and Malſters, which as Owners
“ ſent their Corn by Water to London. That all
“ the Beer Brewers, in and about London, both

Another Commiſſion of Sewers for the Lee.

Another Commiſſion of Sewers, iſſued out July 17, 1589, for the River of Lea, and the Limits thereof; viz. From Ware to Waltham, from Waltham to Temple Bridge, from Temple Bridge to Bullifaunt, from thence to Clobſhil, from thence to the Oldford, and ſo to Bow Bridge, and the Four Mill Locks, and ſo to Leemouth, in the River of Thames. For this Commiſſion among many in Nomination, the City being ſo much concerned herein, were named the Lord Maior for the Time being, Sir Thomas Pulliſon, Sir George Barnes, Richard Martin, John Hart, John Spenſer, Henry Billingſley, Aldermen of London.

An Order of Star Chamb concerning this River.

In the Year 1593, and the 35th of the Queen, an Order was made upon a Bill exhibited into the Star Chamber, by Sir William Roe, Knt. late Lord Maior of the City of London, Thomas Fanſhaw, Eſq; Richard Brook, Recorder, and divers Bargemen Plaintiffs, againſt William Thorowgood, and other Defendants, for the riotous ſtopping up of the Paſſage of Barges and Veſſels in this River, by laying down of the High Bridge at Waltham Holy Croſs, and choaking the River with Stones, Timber, Earth and other Things, caſt therein at a Place near to the By-Stream, that leadeth to Waltham Corn Mill, and the riotous beating of the Bargemen, which did tow and draw the Boats upon the Bankſide of the ſaid River: It was ordered by the Court, Nov. 16. that the two Lords Chief Juſtices ſhould, upon Information given by the Council, learned on both Sides, conſider of the State of the Cauſe depending, touching the Right and Law for the free Paſſage upon the ſaid River; as of the Conveniency and Inconveniency thereof; and how the ſame Paſſage hath been uſed for the moſt Part of Twenty Years laſt paſt. The ſaid two Juſtices made their Report in Writing, the 20th Day of June, Anno Regis, 36. which was, That they, upon full Conſideration of the antient Records, Statutes, and Evidences ſhewed

The two Chief Juſtices Opinion.

The Paſſage on the River to be free.

ſhewed to them, did find it ſufficiently proved, that the Paſſage in and upon the River of Lee hath been, and in their Opinion ought to be free, and the ſame River a Navigable River, for Carriage and Recarriage of Veſſels, and all other Things in Boats and Veſſels, thus named in antient Records; and other, viz. Naves, Batelli, Neifes, Batteux, Showts, Barges, and Boats. And by expreſs Words, in a Preſentment or Inquiſition, taken in the Time of K. Edward IV. that the ſame Paſſage upon the ſaid River ſhould be free. And that they the ſaid two Chief Juſtices, did find by a Record in the Time of K. Edward III. that there paſſed Boats of that Time upon the River, of four Tun a piece. And in the Time of K. Henry IV. it ſeemed by another Record, that there paſt upon the ſaid River a Boat of twelve Tun.

Which Way the River went at Waltham anciently.

But they found withal, between the ſaid Plaintiffs and Defendants ſome great Difference, which Way the antient River of Ley went in Waltham Holy Croſs; viz. Whether down the great River, called High Ley or Great Ley; and ſo under the Bridge called the High Bridge, as the Plaintiffs ſay; or elſe down a Lake called The Shire Lake; and ſo under the Bridge called The ſmall Leigh Bridge, as the Defendants allege. And therefore, the two Chief Juſtices thought good to leave that to the Conſideration of the Court [of Star Chamber] upon view of the Records, to teſtify of the ſame.

In what Caſe lawful to paſs through the Old Lock in Waltham.

And the ſaid Juſtices did find alſo, that the Paſſage for the moſt Part of Twenty Years laſt paſt, before the ſaid Order, viz. for Fifteen or Sixteen Years together, was continually uſed with Barges up and down, the Burthen of Six and Seven Tun; and ſome under, through a New Lock made, as is affirmed, by the Authority of the Commiſſioners of Sewers at Waltham Holy Croſs, near the Corn Mill there: Which ſaid Commiſſioners gave Authority, as was ſaid, to the Paſſengers, that when they could not paſs through that New Lock, they might open a Lock in Waltham Holy Croſs, made in the ſame River to draw Water to the ſaid Mill, where the antient Paſſage, as it ſeemed to the ſaid two Juſtices, was thought by the Commiſſioners to have been. After which Order, the Bargemen being denyed of late to paſs through the New Lock, did open the Old Lock, and paſs through the ſame, until they by other Means were interrupted.

Which more convenient, the Water Carriage, or the Land.

And the ſaid two Chief Juſtices did find alſo, touching the Conveniency or Inconveniency, that the Water Carriage is far better cheap than the Land Carriage; and that the ſame Land Carriage by Horſes and Carts is more chargeable; but it doth ſet more on Work than the Water Carriage doth. And therefore they did leave the ſame to the Conſideration of the Court, which ſhall be moſt meet, or both, to be uſed, as they have been.

The final Determination of the Star Chamber.

Whereupon, after a full Hearing of the Council learned on each Part, in the Opinion of this Court, it muſt needs follow, That it is more profitable to the City of London, and Commonwealth, to have free Liberty of Carriages both by Water and Land, as it was before the ſuppoſed riotous ſtopping of the ſame Paſſage, than to be reſtrained thereof. And it was that Day ordered, that the Paſſage in and upon the ſaid River ſhall be and continue free, and in ſuch Sort, and in ſuch Place thereof, and for ſuch Barges and Boats as were uſed in the Time of, or before, the late ſtopping thereof, until the Cauſe were there heard, and otherwiſe ordered. And where it was alledged in this Court by the Defendants, that it was not lawful for the Bargemen to go on the Bankſide to draw and tow their Barges and Boats, for that the ſaid Paſſage of Boats could not be continued without the Bargemen had Liberty to go on the Bankſide: It was therefore in like manner ordered, that the Bargemen ſhould, and might go upon Land by the Bankſide, to tow their Barges up and down, as before they did, without any violent Reſiſtance of any Perſon. And that if any Perſon or Perſons intereſted in the Lands, where the ſaid Bargemen ſhould paſs, ſhould find himſelf grieved therewith, it ſhould be lawful for him in ſuch Caſe, if he ſhould ſo think good, to ſue or implead the ſaid Bargemen, or any of them in any of her Majeſties Courts of Kings Bench or Common Pleas, and there to procede to a due and lawful Trial of the ſame, whether it be lawful for the ſaid Bargemen, to draw or tow their Boats, going on the Bankſide of the ſaid River; and after due Trial had thereof, this Court minded to take ſuch further Order therein as ſhould be meet.

The City chiefly ſupplied with Grain from this River.

There is one Thing more I have to add concerning this River; Namely, that hence it was that the City was chiefly furniſhed with Bread Corn, and the Brewers of London with Malt. And therefore the Magiſtrates of the City much concerned themſelves, that none of this Corn thus conveyed by the Lee, might be ſold elſewhere, but brought fairly to the Markets of the City. Wherefore in the Year 1584, they came to underſtand of, or ſuſpected, ſome underhand Dealing of the Victuallers; that is, thoſe that bought up and brought Corn by this River; and that they did privately ſell it before it came to the Market, to Ships Dutch and Engliſh, that lay at Hand in the River of Thames to receive it; or ſecretly Houſed it at the Brewers Wharfs. Of this a Complaint was made to the Lord Treaſurer, praying him to take ſome Remedy to prevent it, for the good Eſtate of the City, that depended ſo much upon it. And this was the Information and Petition they of the City preferred to the ſaid Lord.

Abuſe of the Victuallers, that came down the Lee.

" Firſt, Foraſmuch as beforetime, all ſuch " Corn as now cometh by the River of Lee to " London, was either brought by Land, or elſe by " ſome other Water by Cocket; whereby the City " from time to time was aſſuredly ſerved, and " certified of whatſoever was brought: It is now " to be feared, for that the like Order is not ſo " directly obſerved, that divers Dutch and Engliſh " Veſſels, lying in the Paſſage to London, may " intercept and take up (as ſome of them late " have done) ſuch Corn and Grain as accuſtomably is brought by the Victuallers; whereby " the Store and Market of the City may be " greatly hindred and foreſtalled.

" Secondly, Whereas it is provided, that all " Wharfs and Keys ſhall keep due Hours in the " Day, for Charge and Diſcharge of Ships, Boats " and Veſſels that come to the City; it is manifeſt, that thoſe Victualers that come down the " River of Lee, have, both by Day and Night, " free Recourſe into and thorough the Brewers " Wharfs and Houſes; making their Market " Places at their Pleaſure, without Controulment. " And for that they are for the moſt part Open " Boats of great Stowage, it is to be feared, and " preſumed greatly upon, that fine Wares and " Merchandizes may as well be conveyed and " brought by them from Ships, as Corn to be carried aboard Ships by them; and the rather ſo " to be doubted, inſomuch as Dutch Hoys and " Ships lie commonly at, or near unto Brewers " Wharfs, which have Cranes.

" Thirdly, This Sufferance and Subornment of " the Victuallers by the Brewers, as it is ſuppoſed, " is not only for ſome private Gain had, and gotten by them, but alſo for the Benefit of their " Servants, whom they advantage by meaſuring " of Corn in their own Houſes, allowing them a “Penny by the Victualler; whereas the ſworn Corn Meeters take but a Halfpenny by the Quarter. The which they would never do, unleſs it were (as it is doubted) for ſome privy Practice, and Breach of good Order. For there hath been ſeen above 300 Quarters of good Wheat in Two Brewers Houſes; when as the ſworn Officers have not meaſured, nor known of the taking up 40 Quarters thereof; nor have they had any Warrant to take it up by. So that it is alſo to be thought, that they have not brewed of the ſame Corn; inſomuch as that they uſe not to brew with any ſo good.

“Laſtly, If ſo be it, that the former Abuſes ſhould be born with, and that the Brewers, Bargemen, and Maltmen ſhould be ſuffered ſo to confederate, and withſtand all good Order; whereas the ſaid River of Lee hath been thought commodious and profitable for the City of London, it will in the End be found both prejudicial to it, and the whole Country beſides, who already cry out of them.

“Beſeeching your good Lordſhip ſo to conſider hereof, as that no Diſorder may be privileged by Authority, nor our neceſſary and ancient Cuſtoms broken by Abuſe.

Remarks of the River Ley out of the Law Books. J. Conyers, Eſq;

Moreover there are theſe memorable Matters in the Statutes and Law Books concerning this Water of Ley; and what Eſteem and Care hath been formerly had for this River, in regard of the Supplies and Proviſions brought by it to the City of London.

19 Ed. 3. lib. Aſſiz. Pla. 6. Fol. 62. Nuſans. A Commiſſion upon a Nuſance here.

In the 19. Edward III. it was found by the Inqueſt, Que l'ewe de le LET eſt haute Eſtrete de Le Roy, i. e. That the Water of the LET is the King's High Street. And a Commiſſion was iſſued out in the ſaid Year, as in Lib. Aſſizar. to this Tenor; Commiſſion iſſuiſt, &c. i. e. ‘A Commiſſion was iſſued out to certain Perſons of a Nuſance made in the Water of the Ley, which holds its Courſe from Ware to Waltham, and ſo to the Water of Thames. And the Annuſance was rehearſed concerning Trenches, or Cutts, made to turn away the Courſe: And alſo for Piles, Fitches, &c. fixed in the Courſe of the ſaid Water of Ley; whereby the Boats and Ships which went by in the ſaid Water were diſturbed in their Paſſage; to the Annuſance of the City of London, and the People coming thence. And the King's Judges argued largely concerning this Enquiry.

This Caſe, and the iſſue of it, the learned Lawyer Callis thus relateth.

The Iſſue of it. Callis Readings. p. 215, 216.

‘A Preſentment was found by Jury before Commiſſioners, that certain Perſons by Name had turned the Courſe of the River of Lee, which is there termed, The King's Stream, and ran from Ware, &c. and had fixed and pitched Piles and Stakes therein; by means whereof Boats and Ballangers were hindred in their Paſſages up and down the River. And upon this Preſentment it was awarded, that thoſe Perſons which were preſented by Name, and who had done part of the Nuſance, ſhould reform the ſame. And becauſe ſome of the Parties could not be diſcovered which had done other part of the Nuſance, it was ordered, that the Sheriff ſhould be commanded by Writ, to him to be directed, to reform that Part of the Nuſance; taking therein to his Aſſiſtance thoſe Perſons who had Grounds next adjoining.

Stops on this River; and the Remedy. Year Book. 9 Hen. 6. C. 9.

In the Year Book under the Reign of King Henry VI. it appears what Letts and Stops were oftentimes made in this River; and that the Lord Chancellor of England might appoint by Law Commiſſioners, as occaſion ſhould ſerve, to examine and remedy theſe Nuſances.

‘Come ordine, &c. i e. As it is ordained by the Statute made in the Time of King Edward, ſince the Conqueſt, the Third, in the 25th Year of his Reign, that all the Gutts, Mills, Eſtanks, Stakes, Piles, and Kidels, that were ſet in the great Rivers of Englaud, in the Time of our Lord Edward, late King of England, Son of Henry. And ſince by the ſaid &c. the Ships and Boats are diſturbed, that they cannot paſs ſo as they were wont; may be removed and quite pulled down. And as ſince in the Parliament of our Lord Henry, late King of England, Father to our Lord the King, which late was held in the firſt Year of his Reign, it is ordained, That as well the ſaid Statute in the ſaid 25th Year, as one other Statute made in the Time of the ſaid Noble King Edward III. the 45th of his Reign, in all their Articles, ſhall be held and firmly obſerved: Adding to them, that Commiſſions ſhould be made to ſufficient Perſons to be Juſtices in any County of England, where need ſhould be, to preſerve and guard all the Waters and grand Rivers within the Realm, and the Defaults to correct and amend, and to do Execution of the ſaid Statutes, &c. And notwithſtanding all the ſaid Statutes, and many other Statutes made for the Conſervacy of the ſaid great Rivers, there be ſuch great Numbers, (de Shelpes deins le River de Ley) of Shelves within the River of Ley, which is in the Counties of Eſſex, Hertfordſhire, and Middleſex, running from the Bridge of Ware Town unto the River of Thames; (the which Shelves are made and come by Force and Courſe of the ſaid Water of Ley) that the Ships and Boats cannot paſs ſo as they ought: For that no Power or Authority is given by any Statute made before, how, nor in what manner the ſaid Shelves may be removed, ſo as by a Petition given in this Parliament, by the Commons thereof, was plainly declared.

Shelves in Ley.

‘Whereupon, by the Advice and Aſſent of the ſaid Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and alſo at the Requeſt of the ſaid Commons, it was granted and ordained, that the Chancellor of England for the Time being, ſhould aſſign certain ſufficient Commiſſioners, who ſhall have Power, by the Authority of this Parliament, to remove and caſt away all the ſaid Shelves out of the ſaid River of Ley, upon the Repairs of the ſaid River, &c. And in caſe (aſcun Chivance, ou Creance) any Credit for any Sums of Money may or can be made for the taking away and removing the ſaid Shelves; that then the Commiſſioners of the ſaid River for the Time being, by them, or their Deputies, may, by Authority of the ſaid Parliament, take and collect of any Ship or Boat freighted, paſſing or coming in the ſaid River, 4*d.* for the Repayment of the ſaid Credits made or done, and for the Conſervacy of the ſaid River without ſuch Shelves, only to the End of Three Years next coming.

And thus much for this River of Ley, ſo ſerviceable to the City.]

London Bridge. The Antiquity of it. When firſt built of Stone. Accidents on the Bridge. The Buildings on it. The modern State of it. Fleet Bridge. Oldborn Bridge. Cow Bridge.

The Bridges of London. J. S.

AND now leaving the Thames, let us next take a View of the famous and wonderful Bridge built over it. And after ſeveral Things obſerved concerning the Antiquity and Building of it, we ſhall paſs to ſome other Bridges laid over other Waters belonging to the City.]

The Antiquity of London Bridge.

* A Ferry over the Thames between London and Southwark.

And firſt concerning the Bridge over the Thames, commonly called London Bridge. The original Foundation whereof, by Report of Bartholomew Linſted, alias Fowle, laſt Prior of S. Mary Overies Church in Southwark, was this. A Ferry being kept in Place where now the Bridge is built, at length the Ferryman and his Wife deceaſing, left the ſame Ferry to their only Daughter, a Maiden named Mary. Which, with the Goods left by her Parents, as alſo with the Profits riſing of the ſaid Ferry, builded a Houſe of Siſters, in Place where now ſtandeth the Eaſt Part of S. Mary Overies Church above the Quire, where ſhe was buried. Unto the which Houſe ſhe gave the Overſight and Profits of the Ferry. But afterwards the ſaid Houſe of Siſters being converted into a College of Prieſts, the Prieſts builded the Bridge of Timber, (as all other the great Bridges of this Land were) and from time to time kept the ſame in good Reparations. Till at length, conſidering the great Charges of repairing the ſame, there was, by Aid of the Citizens of London, and others, a Bridge builded with Arches of Stone, as ſhall be ſhewed.

* The firſt Arched Bridge at Stratford Bow; made by Matild, Wife to Henry I.

The Timber Bridge. W. Malmesbury.

But, Firſt, Of the Timber Bridge: The Antiquity thereof being uncertain; yet thus much I remember to have read [that will ſhew it ancient] That in the Year of Chriſt 994. Sweyn King of Denmark, beſieging the City of London both by Water and by Land, the Citizens manfully defended themſelves, and their King Etheldred. So as part of their Enemies were ſlain in Battel, and part of them were drowned in the River of Thames; becauſe in their haſty Rage, they took no heed of the Bridge.

Canute comes to the Bridge.

Moreover in the Year 1016. Canute the Dane, with a great Navy came up to London, and on the South of the Thames cauſed a Trench to be caſt; through the which his Ships were towed into the Weſt ſide of the Bridge; and then with a deep Trench and ſtreight Siege he compaſſed the City round about.

None reſiſts Earl Godwin at the Bridge.

Alſo in the Year 1052. Earl Godwin, with the like Navy, taking his Courſe up the River of Thames, and finding none that offered to reſiſt on the Bridge, he ſailed up by the South ſide of the ſaid River.

Furthermore, about the Year 1067. William the Conqueror, in his Charter to the Church of St. Peter at Weſtminſter, confirmed to the Monks ſerving God there, a Gate in London, then called Buttolphs Gate, with a Wharf, which was at the Head of London Bridge.

Men went ry-ſhod nder London ridge.

We likewiſe read, that in the Year 1114. the 14th of Henry I. the River of Thames was ſo dried up, and ſuch want of Water there, that between the Tower of London and the Bridge, and under the Bridge, not only with Horſe, but alſo a great Number of Men, Women and Children, did wade over on Foot.

Lib. Bermond.

In the Year 1122. the 22d of Henry I. Thomas Arden gave to the Monks of Bermondſey, and the Church of S. George in Southwark, five Shillings Rent by the Year, out of the Land pertaining to London Bridge.

I have alſo ſeen a Charter under Seal, to the Effect following.

Henry I. his Charter to Battle Abbey.

To be free from the Work of London Bridge.

Henry King of England, to Ralph Biſhop of Chicheſter, and all the Miniſters of Suſſex, ſendeth Greeting. Know ye, &c. I command by my Kingly Authority, that the Mannor called Alceſton, which my Father gave, with other Lands, to the Abbey of Battle, be free and quiet from Shires and Hundreds, and all other Cuſtoms of Earthly Servitude, as my Father held the ſame, moſt freely and quietly; and namely, from the Work of London Bridge, and the Work of the Caſtle at Pevenſey: And this I command upon my Forfeiture. Witneſs, William de Pontlearche at Berry.

The which Charter, with the Seal very fair, remaineth in the Cuſtody of Joſeph Holland, Gent.

Lib. Bermond. Lib. Trin.

Anno 1136. London Bridge burnt, being then of Timber.

In the Year 1136. the Firſt of King Stephen, a Fire began in the Houſe of one Ailewarde, near unto London Stone, which conſumed Eaſt to Aldgate, and Weſt to S. Erkenwalds Shrine in Paul's Church. The Bridge of Timber over the River of Thames was alſo burnt, &c. but afterwards again repaired. For Fitz Stephen writeth, that in the Reigns of King Stephen, and of Henry II. when Paſtimes were ſhewed on the River of Thames, Men ſtood in great Number on the Bridge, Wharfs, and Houſes, to behold.

London Bridge of Timber new built.

Now in the Year 1163. the ſame Bridge was not only repaired, but new made of Timber, as before, by Peter of Colechurch, Prieſt and Chaplain.

Thus much for the old Timber-bridge, maintained partly by the proper Lands thereof, partly by the Liberality of divers Perſons, and partly by Taxations in divers Shires, (as I have proved) for the Space of 215 Years, before the Bridge of Stone was builded.

London Bridge of Stone founded.

Lib. Waverley

London Bridge 33 Years in building with Stone.

Now touching the Foundation of the Stone Bridge, it followeth thus: About the Year 1176, the Stone Bridge over the River of Thames at London, was begun to be founded by the foreſaid Peter of Cole-Church, near unto the Bridge of Timber, but ſomewhat more towards the Weſt: For I read, that Botolph Wharf was, in the Conqueror's Time, at the Head of London Bridge. The King aſſiſted this Work; A Cardinal then being Legate here: And Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury gave One Thouſand Marks towards the Foundation. The Courſe of the River (for the Time) was turned another way about, by a Trench caſt for that Purpoſe; beginning (as is ſuppoſed) Eaſt about Rotherhith, and ending in the Weſt about Patrickſey, now termed Batterſea. This Work, to wit, the Arches, Chapel, and Stone Bridge over the Thames at London, having been Thirty three Years in building, was in the Year 1209 finiſhed by the worthy Merchants of London, Serle Mercer, William Almaine, and Benedict Botewrite, principal Maſters of that Work: For Peter of Cole-Church deceaſed Four Years before the Work was finiſhed; and was buried in the Chapel builded on the ſame Bridge, in the Year 1205.

Cuſtody of London Bridge. Pet. Le Neve. Rot. Clauſ. 7 Joh. c. 19.

King John, in the 7th Year of his Reign, which was in the Year 1205, granted the Cuſtody of London Bridge (which was in the Maior of London) to Friar Weſt.]

K. John's Gift.

King John gave certain void Places in London to build on, the Profits thereof to remain towards the Charges of Building and Repairing of the ſame Bridge. A Maſon, being Maſter Workman of the Bridge, builded (from the Foundation) the large Chapel on that Bridge, of his own proper Charges; which Chapel was then endowed for Two Prieſts, Four Clarks, &c. beſides Chanteries, ſince founded for John Hatfeild, and others: So that in the 23d Year of Henry VI. there were Four Chaplains in the ſaid Chapel. After the Finiſhing of this Chapel, which was the firſt Building upon thoſe Arches, ſundry Houſes (at Times) were erected: And many charitable Men gave Lands, Tenements, or Sums of Money towards the Maintenance thereof: All which was ſometimes noted, and in a Table fair written for Poſterity; remaining in the Chapel, till the ſame Chapel was turned to a dwelling Houſe, and then removed to the Bridge Houſe. The Effect of which Table I was willing to have publiſhed in this Book, if I could have obtained the Sight thereof: But making the ſhorter Work, I find by the Account of William Mariner, and Chriſtopher Eliot, Wardens of London Bridge, from Michaelmas, the 22d of Henry the VIIth, until Michaelmas next enſuing, by one whole Year, that all the Payments and Allowances came to 815 l. 17 s. 2 d. ob.; as there is ſhewed by Particulars. By which Account then made, may be partly gueſſed the great Charges and Diſcharges of that Bridge at this Day, when Things be ſtretched to ſo great a Price.

Chapel on the Bridge, on the Eaſt ſide.

Gifts given to London Bridge, in a Table noted for Poſterity in the Chapel.

The Chapel turned to a Dwelling Houſe.

Bridgehouſe Ground at Eglinſgate.

J. S.

One Parcel of the Revenues of London Bridge, is a large Quantity of Ground, very improveable, ſituate at Eglinſgate, in the Pariſh of S. Olave's Southwark, near the Thames; which was offered publickly to be let by Leaſe in May, 1706, by the Committee of Bridge-Houſe Lands: And all that would bid for the ſame, were deſired to deliver their Propoſals in Writing, ſealed up, to the Clerk Comptroller of the ſaid Revenues, at the publick Compting Houſe at the Bridge-Houſe.

Means for the Repair of the Bridge.

J. S.

This Bridge, within leſs than Seventy Years after its firſt finiſhing, became ruinous. Now for the declaring what was done for the Maintenance and Reparation of it, I find they made uſe of Two ways: One was, By collecting well diſpoſed Peoples Alms throughout the Kingdom: And the other, By laying certain Cuſtoms and Taxes upon the Goods and Proviſions, that were brought either by Water, or over the Bridge only, or which way ſoever elſe, into the City, there to be ſold. Thus 9 Edw. I. Anno 1280, London Bridge was in a ruinous Condition; and Licenſe was granted by the King, (which the Bridge Keepers had the Managing of) de colligend. piis devotorum Subſidiis per totum Regnum; i. e. for gathering the godly Aids of devout People throughout the Kingdom; pro Reparatione ejuſd. quod minatur ruinam; i. e. for Repair of London Bridge, that threatneth Ruin.

Pat. 9. E. I. m. 27.

There are very effectual Letters Patents of the ſaid K. Edward I. extant in the Tower Records, exciting all his People to this Work of Charity; to this Tenor:

K. Edw. I. his Letters to excite to a Contribution to London Bridge.

Rex omnib. Ballivis, & Fidelibus ſuis, ad quos, &c. Salutem. Dolentibus nobis, &c.

That is,

‘The King, to all his Bailiffs, and Liege Subjects, to whom theſe Preſents ſhall come, greeting.

‘It hath been lately notified to us, and grieved us, that London Bridge is in ſo ruinous a Condition; to the Repair of which, unleſs ſpeedy Remedy be put, not only the ſudden Fall of the Bridge, but alſo the Deſtruction of innumerable People dwelling on it, may ſuddenly be feared: And that the Work which may now be helped by ſome before it fall, may for want of Aid, come to the Expence of a Damage not to be repaired. Wherefore We, who are bound to take care of, and more gently to provide for both the publick and the private Commodities, and with Affection to embrace thoſe, whom We perceive to depend upon ſuch Benefits, and them to defend with Royal Safeguard: WE command and require you, That when the Keepers of the ſaid coſtly Work of the Bridge aforeſaid, or their Meſſenger, ſhall happen to come to you, (being a Thing We take into our Eſpecial Protection and Defence) to collect every where throughout our Realm Aids to the ſaid Work from pious Devotion, friendly to admit them at the Contemplation of God, and in Regard of Charity, and for Shew of Devotion on this behalf: Not bringing on them, or permitting to be brought, Wrongs, Moleſtations, Loſs, Hindrance, or Grievance. And if any Damage be done them, ye make them amends without Delay. And when ye ſhall be required by the preſent Keepers, or their Meſſengers, to keep the Reparation of the ſaid Bridge, ye will humbly contribute ſomewhat of your Goods to the ſaid Work, according to your Abilities. And let each of you endeavour to outrun the other in ſuch great Works of Charity; for which ye muſt needs merit from God, and gain Thanks of Us. In Witneſs whereof, &c. Witneſs the King at Walſingham, the 8th Day of January.

And there were other Letters Patents to Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Rectors, and all other Miniſters of Holy Mother-Church; commanding them, That when the Keepers of that coſtly Work of the Bridge aforeſaid, or their Meſſengers, (whom the King took into his Special Protection) ſhould come to gather every where through their Dioceſes, Rectories, &c. or any their Juriſdictions, for the ſaid Work, the pious Aids of the Devout, to admit them in the Contemplation of God, &c. And to permit them to excite the People there with pious Perſwaſions, and charitably to call for the Helps of their Alms, to repair the foreſaid Bridge.

Cuſtoms to be taken for the Reparation.

And becauſe theſe voluntary Alms and charitable Benevolences were not like to bring in the whole Charge of the Buſineſs, therefore the next Year, viz. 10 Edw. I. Anno 1281. the ſame King iſſued out other Letters Patents, for taking Cuſtoms of all Commodities for the ſame in London; and that for a certain Term of Years. Which ran to this Tenor.

Rex Majori ſuo London. Cum nuper propter Subitum, &c.

‘When lately, by reaſon of the ſudden Ruin of London Bridge, We commanded, That aſſociating to you Two or Three of the Diſcreeter and more Loyal Men of the foreſaid City, ye ſhould take until our Parliament after Eaſter next paſt, for the Supply of the Reparation of the foreſaid Bridge, a certain Cuſtom, as in theſe Letters Patents, which We have cauſed to be made from that Time to you, more fully is contained: WE, willing that the taking of ſuch Cuſtom be continued longer, command you, That from the Feaſt of S. Margaret the Virgin next coming, unto the End of Three ‘ Years next following compleated, ye take the underwritten Cuſtom of the foreſaid Bridge; To wit, of every Man on foot, bringing Merchandiſe, or other Things ſaleable, and paſſing over the ſaid Bridge, and betaking himſelf to other Parts, One Farthing: Of every Horſeman paſſing that Bridge, and betaking himſelf to other Parts as beforeſaid, with Merchandiſe, or other ſaleable Things, One Peny: Of every ſaleable Pack, carried and paſſing over the Bridge, One Halfpeny. Nor will We, in the mean Time, that any Thing be taken there on this Occaſion, but in the Subſidy of the Reparation of the Bridge. But the Term of Three Years being compleated, let the foreſaid Cuſtom ceaſe and be void, &c. Witneſs the King at Cheſter, the 6th Day of July.

Further Cuſtom for this Work.

Yet again in the ſame Tenth Year of Edward I. the King ſent to the Maior, with Two or Three of the Diſcreeter and more Loyal Citizens joined with him, to lay a Cuſtom during the ſame Term, for the Reparation of the Bridge, upon every Man that paſſed the Thames on either ſide of the Bridge, from London to Southwark, and from Southwark to London, One Farthing: And of every Horſe ſo paſſing, a Peny; and of every Pack ſo paſſing thereon, One Halfpeny.

The like Impoſition and Cuſtoms were continued, for the Repairing of this Bridge, in 27 and 30 of this K. Edward I.

Likewiſe in the 14th of Edward II. Anno 1320. there was need again of Letters Patents for gathering Alms and Aids, as before, for the Reparation of the Bridge: And Meſſengers were ſent into all Parts of England for that Purpoſe. And the King alſo ſent his Letters to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and other Miniſters of the Church, as before.

Add alſo theſe Matters collected from Records, concerning this Bridge.

The Queen has the Cuſtody of the Bridge.

King Henry III. in the 54th Year of his Reign, Anno 1269, granted the Cuſtody of the Bridge to the Queen his Conſort, with the Liberties, and all other Things belonging thereunto, for the Term of Six Years.

Lands given for the Bridge.

Certain Pieces of Ground near Wolcherch were granted by Edward I. for the foreſaid Bridge. Edward III. granted the Maior and City a certain Place, or Piece of Ground near the Houſe of Friars Minors, [ i. e. Grey Friars ] for the Reparation of the Bridge: Which thoſe Friars (42 Edw. III.) laboured to be granted to them; as it ſeems, for the Enlargement of their Monaſtery: As the Religious in and about London, in this Reign, much enlarged their Houſes with the neighbouring Lands. A Tenement in the Pariſh of Alhallows in Hony-lane, bequeathed by Roger Eſſex, for the Uſe of London Bridge, in King Edward the Firſt's Reign. It is taken notice of on ſome Occaſion, in 46 Edw. III. perhaps to confirm it.

uſtody of he Bridge.

The Jurats of one of the Wards of London, in the Inquiſition taken by the Judges Itinerants at the Tower, in the Reign of King Edward I. preſented, That the Cuſtody of the Bridge, and the Soke thereof, was in the Queen's Hands; they knew not Quo Warranto, i. e. by what Warrant: Cum Socne ejuſdem de antiquo, &c. When the Soke thereof anciently was in the Hands of the Maior and Commonalty of the City, which was then in the Hands of the King's Mother, from the Time of the Battel of Eveſham, to that Time.

This was the fortunate Battel, fought by King Henry III. when he beat Simon Montfort, Earl of Leiceſter, and the Barons. And then the City, which held with them, preſently felt it, by having this Bridge, and the Liberty of it, wreſted from them. They preſented alſo, that the Bridge was not well kept.

This was the Matter of another Preſentment, in the ſame K. Edward I. his Time: Wherein they preſented, That London Bridge was always wont to be in the Hands of the Citizens; but now it was not ſo. Et neſciunt quo Warranto. The King had now ſeized the Liberties of the City into his Hands: Yet the Citizens ſeem by thoſe Words to ſtand upon their Rights and Privileges.

The Jurats alſo of another Ward in London made the ſame Preſentment to the Judges Itinerants, then ſitting at the Tower, in theſe Words: Dicunt, quod Cuſtodia Pontis, &c. ‘ They ſay, That the Cuſtody of the Bridge of London, which is wont to belong to the City, is alienated by the Lady Queen Mother of Edward our King; and the Keepers of the ſaid Bridge appointed by the ſaid Lady Queen, parum apponunt in Emendatione & Suſtentatione, &c. lay out but little in the Amending and Suſtaining of the ſaid Bridge. Whence Danger, which God forbid, may lightly ariſe very much to the Damage of the King, and of the City.

The Rents and Revenues of the Bridge, and the Duties and Cuſtoms belonging to it, were no queſtion very conſiderable. But all now came to the Queen; and ſhe ſubſtituted under her other Keepers, which the City uſed to do. And theſe Men made the beſt of their Time, by making what Gains they could, to the great Neglect of the neceſſary Repairs of the Bridge. This the City complained of, and preſented.]

Gifts to the Repairs of the Bridge.

I find theſe Gifts by Will towards the Repairs of London Bridge.

London Bridge. Regiſt. Lond.

John Feckenham, Civis & Braciator, by his Will dated May 11. 1436, bequeathed to the Maior and Commonalty of the City of London, a Tenement, with a Shop and Garden, in the Pariſh of S. Auguſtin Pappey, between the Tenement and Lands of the Bridge of the City of London, on the Eaſt, &c. To have to the Maior and Commonalty of London, ad Uſum & Suſtentationem Operis Pontis prædict. in perpetuum. On Condition, that the Chaplains of the Chapel of S. Thomas the Martyr, on the Bridge, celebrating, have his Soul, and alſo the Souls of the late Lord Richard II. King of England, Edward Boteler, Kt. and the Lady Anne his Wife, Richard Storme, and Alice his Wife, and the Soul of Joan, his [ the ſaid Feckenham's ] Wife, perpetually recommended in their Prayers.

S. Thomas Chapel on the Bridge.

London Bridge. Regiſt. Lond.

And John Edwards, by his Will, dated the 8th of November, 1442, gave to John Hatherle, Maior of the City of London, and to John Herſt and Thomas Cook, Maſters of the Work of the Bridge of London, for ever, his Tenement, with a Garden, in the Pariſh of S. Botolph Aldgate; ſituate between the Tenement lately John Cornwallys's, on the South, &c. and extends from the King's Street leading from Aldgate towards the Tower, on the Weſt, &c. towards the Suſtaining and Reparation of the ſaid Bridge.]

And now to Actions on this Bridge.

Actions on London Bridge to be noted.

The firſt Action on this Bridge to be noted, was lamentable: For within Four Years after the Finiſhing thereof, to wit, in the Year 1212, on the 10th of July, at Night, a marvelous terrible Chance happened. For the Borough of Southwark, upon the South ſide of the River of Thames, as alſo the Church of our Lady of the Canons there, being on fire, and an exceeding great Multitude of People paſſing the Bridge, either to extinguiſh and quench it, or elſe to gaze and and behold it; ſuddenly the North Part, by blowing of the South Wind, was alſo ſet on fire; and the People which were even now paſſing the Bridge, perceiving the ſame, would have returned, but were ſtopped by the Fire: And it came to paſs, that as they ſtayed, or protracted the Time, the other End of the Bridge alſo, namely, the South End, was fired; ſo that the People thronging themſelves between the Two Fires, did nothing elſe but expect preſent Death. Then there came to aid them many Ships and Veſſels, into which the Multitude ſo unadviſedly ruſhed, that the Ships being thereby drowned, they all periſhed. It was ſaid, that through the Fire and Shipwrack, there were deſtroyed above Three Thouſand Perſons, whoſe Bodies were found in part, or half burned, beſides thoſe that were wholly burnt to Aſhes, and could not be found.

Liber Dunmou. Guil. Covent. W. Packenton.

London Bridge periſhed by Fire.

Five Arches of London Bridge born down.

About the Year One Thouſand Two Hundred Eighty two, through a great Froſt and deep Snow, Five Arches of London Bridge were born down, and carried away.

The Bridge repaired.

Patent the 14 of Edw. II.

In the Year 1289, the Bridge was ſo ſore decayed for want of Reparations, that Men were afraid to paſs thereon; and a Subſidy was granted towards the Amendment thereof, Sir John Britain being Cuſtos of London, Anno 1381, a great Collection or Gathering was made, of all Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, for the Reparations of London Bridge.

Wat Tyler enters by this Bridge.

The ſame Year, Wat. Tyler, and other Rebels of Kent, by this Bridge, entred the City; as ye may read in my Summary and Annals.

A Juſting on the Bridge.

In the Year 1395, on S. George's Day, was a great Juſting on London Bridge, betwixt David Earl of Craford, of Scotland, and the Lord Wells of England: In the which the Lord Wells was, at the Third Courſe, born out of the Saddle: Which Hiſtory proveth, that at that Time the Bridge (being coaped on either ſide) was not repleniſhed with Houſes builded thereupon, as ſince it hath been, and now is.

Nine Perſons crowded to Death on London Bridge.

The next Year, on the 13th of November, the young Queen Iſabel, commonly called the Little, (for ſhe was but Eight Years old) was conveyed from Kennington, beſide Lambeth, through Southwark, to the Tower of London; and ſuch a Multitude of People went out to ſee her, that on London Bridge Nine Perſons were crowded to Death; of whom the Prior of Tiptre, a Place in Eſſex, was one, and a Matron on Cornhill was another.

Tower on London Bridge builded.

The Tower on London Bridge, at the North End of the Draw-bridge, (for that Bridge was then readily to be drawn up, as well to give Paſſage for Ships to Queenhith, as for the Reſiſtance of any foreign Force) was begun to be builded in the Year 1426, John Reinwell being Maior.

Another Tower there is on the ſaid Bridge, over the Gate at the South End towards Southwark; whereof in another Place ſhall be ſpoken.

Jack Cade entred the City by the Bridge.

In the Year 1450, Jack Cade, and other Rebels of Kent, by this Bridge entred the Citie; he ſtrake his Sword on London Stone, and ſaid himſelf then to be Lord of the Citie; but they were by the Citizens overcome on the ſame Bridge, and put to flight, as in my Annals.

Baſtard Fawconbridge beſieged the Bridge.

In the Year 1471, Thomas the Baſtard Fawconbridge beſieged this Bridge, burned the Gate, and all the Houſes to the Draw Bridge, being at that time Thirteen in Number.

An Houſe on the Bridge fell down.

In the Year 1481, an Houſe called the common Stage on London Bridge, fell down into the Thames, through the Fall whereof Five Men were drowned.

Sir Tho. Wyat lay in Southwark, at the Bridge Foot.

The Draw-Bridge cut down.

In the Year 1553, the Third of February, Sir Thomas Wyat and the Kentiſh Men marched from Deptford towards London, after knowledge whereof, forthwith the Draw Bridge was cut down, and the Bridge Gates ſhut. Wyat and his People entred Southwark, where they lay till the 6th of Feb. but could get no Entry of the City by the Bridge, the ſame was then ſo well defended by the Citizens, the Lord W. Howard aſſiſting; wherefore he removed towards Kingſton, &c. as in my Annals.

This Bridge, a Work very rare, deſcribed.

To conclude, I affirm of this Bridge over the ſaid River of Thames, as in other my Deſcriptions, that it is a Work very rare; having with the Draw Bridge Twenty Arches made of ſquared Stone, of Height Sixty Foot, and in Breadth Thirty Foot, diſtant one from another Twenty Foot, compact and joyned together with Vaults and Cellars. Upon both Sides be Houſes builded; ſo that it ſeemeth rather a continual Street than a Bridge. For the continual Fortifying whereof againſt the inceſſant Aſſaults of the River, it hath Overſeers and Officers, viz. Wardens, as aforeſaid, and others.

R. B.

Three Vacancies on the Bridge.

Three Navigable Locks.

Rock Lock.

Draw-Bridge Lock.

S. Mary Lock.

King's Lock.

This Bridge, with a Chappel on the Eaſtſide, and a Gate on the South end, being thus Built all of Stone, as aforeſaid, and Houſes of Timber over the Stone Peers and Arches on both Sides thereof; yet there were and ſtill are in the whole Length of the Bridge, three Vacancies, with Stone Walls and Iron Grates over them, on either ſide oppoſite to each other; through which Grates, People, as they paſs over the Bridge may take a view of the River both Eaſt and Weſt; and alſo may go aſide more to each Side out of the Way of Carts and Coaches, the Paſſage being but narrow, and not only troubleſome but dangerous. Theſe three Vacancies are over three of the middle Arches, for all the Peers are not of a like Thickneſs, nor ſtand at equal Diſtance one from the other; for thoſe under theſe three Vacancies are much wider than the reſt, and are called the Navigable Locks; becauſe Veſſels of conſiderable Burthen may paſs through them. One of theſe is near unto the Gate, and is called the Rock Lock. The Second is under the Second Vacancy, where the Draw Bridge antiently was, and is called the Draw Bridge Lock. And the Third is near the Chapel, and is called St. Maries Lock. There is a Fourth between St. Magnus Church, and the firſt Vacancie, and is called the King's Lock, for that the King in his Paſſage through Bridge in his Barge goes through this Lock. And in this Condition was the Bridge, until the Year 1632.

Anno 1632. A Third Part of the Bridge burnt.

At the latter End of which Year, viz. on the 13th Day of February, between Eleven and Twelve at Night, there happened in the Houſe of one Briggs, a Needlemaker near St. Magnus Church, at the North End of the Bridge, (by the Careleſneſs of a Maid Servant, ſetting a Tub of hot Seacoal Aſhes under a Pair of Stairs) a ſad and lamentable Fire, which conſumed all the Buildings before Eight of the Clock the next Morning, from the North-End of the Bridge, to the firſt Vacancy on both ſides, containing Forty two Houſes; Water then being very ſcarce, the Thames being almoſt frozen over. Beneath, in the Vaults and Cellars, the Fire remained glowing and burning a whole Week after.]

After which Fire, this North End of the Bridge lay unbuilt for many Years; only Deal Boards were ſet up on both ſides, to prevent People's falling into the Thames; many of which Deals were by high Winds oft blown down, which made it very dangerous in the Nights, although there were Lanthorns and Candles hung upon all the croſs Beams that held the Pails together.

Partly rebuilt 1646.

But about the Year 1645, the North End of this Part laſt burnt began to be rebuilt; and in the Year 1646, was finiſhed: The Building was of Timber, very ſubſtantial and beautiful; for the Houſes were Three Stories high, beſides the Cellars, which were within and between the Peers. And over the Houſes were ſtately Platforms, leaded with Rails and Ballaſters about them very commodious, and pleaſant for walking, and enjoying ſo fine a Proſpect up and down the River; and ſome had pretty little Gardens with Arbors.

The other Part remained unbuilt.

This Half being thus finiſht, the other Half was intended to be rebuilt anſwerable to this, which would have been a great Glory to the Bridge, and Honour to the City, the Street or Paſſage being 20 Foot broad; whereas the other Part at the South End was not above 14, and in ſome Places but 12.

Burnt again, Anno 1666.

And in this Condition was London Bridge until the Year 1666, being the general Conflagration of London, on the 2d of September 1666, which continued burning the 3d and 4th Days, and then was all the new Buildings conſumed. But the old Ones at the South End, ſome of which were built in the Reign of King John, were not burnt.

The Modern State of this Bridge.

Thus have we had an Account of this Bridge from its firſt building of Timber; when it began to be built of Stone, which was in the Year 1176, unto the Year 1666, which is 490 Years. I ſhall now give you a View of this Bridge as to its preſent Condition, Anno 1700. God grant it may long ſo continue, being a Pile of ſuch Building as cannot be paralled upon any Bridge in the World.

The North End of the Arches Repaired.

Firſt then,, by reaſon of the Fire in 1666, the Fall of the Buildings on the North End, together with the Violence of the Fire, did ſo batter and weaken the Stone Work upon which they ſtood, that the Repairing the Stone Peers and Arches, before they could be made ſtrong enough to build upon, did amount to above 1500*l.* All which was paid out of the Bridge Rents.

The Reparations of the Stone Work being finiſhed, divers Perſons did take Leaſes of ſo many Foot in Front on both Sides of the Bridge to Build upon at 10*s.* a Foot: and to Build thereon after ſuch a Form, and ſubſtantial Manner, as was preſcribed, and is now Built for the Term of 61 Years. And by this means, all the North End was in the ſpace of five Years, or thereabouts built Four Stories high; the Street, or Paſſage being 20 Foot Broad.

North End of the Bridge new built.

This North End being thus finiſhed, it was high time to conſider of an Expedient to make the South End anſwerable to the North; for all the old Buildings were out in Leaſes in ſeveral Hands, ſome having more, and ſome fewer Years to come, and ſome were quite out. And how to bring this to an equal Balance, that all Perſons might have Right done them, was the Buſineſs to be taken into Conſideration; which the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Commoners, that were appointed for the letting of the City and Bridge Houſe Lands, together with the Aſſiſtance of Mr. Philip Odde, then Clerk Comptroller of the Bridge Houſe, did in a few Months bring to an Iſſue by theſe Means following.

Method for Building the Bridge after the Fire.

Firſt, they cauſed to be meaſured, how many Foot every Proprietor had in Front of his Houſe. Secondly, What Annual Rent he paid to the Bridge Houſe. And Thirdly, What Number of Years of his Leaſe were unexpired. The next Rank were of thoſe whoſe Leaſes were expired. The Third ſuch as were near expired. Theſe they purchaſed at a valuable Conſideration of the Tenants, who were not able to Build. And for ſuch as had a longer Time, they (in Conſideration thereof) added a competent Time to what they had to come of their old Leaſes, with an Abatement of Rent, anſwerable to what the Houſe, or Houſes would coſt the Rebuilding, which was to be in the ſame Form of Building, as the North End was then done: The City being at the Charges of repairing and making good the Stone Work, fit for the new Buildings; which Reparations coſt the City near 1000*l.* more. And by this Means the South End was in four or five Years new Built in all Reſpects anſwerable to the North; ſo that now it is the moſt ſtately Bridge in the whole World, all Things conſidered; its Houſes, Inhabitants, and their Trade in the firſt Place to be conſidered. And therefore moſt juſtly deſerves this following Encomium.

The South Part builded.

The Arches. The Uſes of them.

J. S.

The Arches of this Bridge ſerve not only for Strength and Ornament to the Bridge it ſelf, but alſo for Communication of the Benefits of the River Thames, to all that lye on its Banks from Weſtminſter and upwards, unto thoſe Parts of it where it falls into the Sea. For through theſe great Arches Veſſels of conſiderable Burthen paſs with Goods, as well as ſmall Wherries with Paſſengers. Other Uſes were made of theſe Arches, as for Conveyance of Thames Water into the City, to ſupply the Southern Parts, and for Mills for grinding Corn. Of which laſt Uſe, I find there were in Q. Elizabeth's Reign, certain Mills Erected for that Purpoſe, under or near London Bridge, by order of the Magiſtrates of the City. To which as ſoon as they were ſet up ſome Exception was taken, and Complaint made, as it ſeems to the Court; as that they might prove injurious to the Bridge or to the River. But it was ſhewn, that the Bridge could take no Harm by theſe Works. And it was provided for by this Means, that the Water had, or ſhould have its full Courſe through the Arches; and that that Part of the Mill which ſhould ſtand neareſt unto the Stone work of the Bridge ſhould be twelve Foot off from any Part of the Bridge. And becauſe the City ſhould have a ſpecial Care for the Preſervation of the River, before the Work was taken in Hand, there was good Conſultation had touching this Point by the Magiſtrates, who called unto them divers grave and expert Men in Water Works, that took a careful View and Conſideraation of the whole Work, and found the ſame nothing hurtful to the Bridge nor the River. And for further Tryal, there were alſo certain wiſe and diſcreet Perſons, viz. the Maſter of the Requeſts, Mr. Fanſhaw, and others, appointed as Commiſſioners, to make Enquiry, whether the ſame might be hurtful to the Bridge or no; who calling before them the Maſters of Trinity Houſe, and the Eight Maſters of the Watermen, with others of beſt Experience in theſe Matters, found the ſame to be nothing hurtful to the Bridge nor River in any reſpect: and ſo made their Report.

Mills for Corn Erected here.

The Benefit thereof.

The Profit of theſe Mills was, that whereas in time of Dearth the common People could not have any Corn ground under four, five, or ſix Pence the Buſhel, and many times could not have it ground at all in a long Space, (by means whereof People were conſtrained to buy Meal in the Market at ſuch Prices as the Seller himſelf would) this would be remedied by the Uſe of theſe Mills. Alſo the Badgers or Meal Sellers, enhaunced the Prices as they liſted; which could not be remedied, but by good Proviſion of Corn made by the Citizens, and ſold in the Market, as Experience had ſhewed.

Two Arches employed for the Water Mills.
A Rock under one Arch.

The two Arches next London are now ſtopt up for the Uſe of the Water Mills; but without any Prejudice to the Current of the Thames. The Third Arch on Southwark ſide is ſeldom and very rarely paſſed through, becauſe of a Rock grown there a little to the Eaſt, which is viſible at low Water. This Rock hath been obſerved this many a Year; therefore this Arch is called The Rock Lock. Two of theſe Arches are much larger than the reſt; viz. That over which is the Draw Bridge; and the other called The Simile Lock. Theſe were for the Uſe of greater Veſſels, that went through Bridge, Weſtward. The Drawbridge formerly was upon ſuch Occaſions taken up; but now a-Days never, but when it wants Repairing. The Reparation of theſe Arches, and the ſtriking down Piles for ſecuring them, is continual, and Men are kept on Purpoſe to take care of it, and to do it. Whereof they have two Maſter Workmen; viz. a Head Carpenter, whoſe Name is Wiſe, if he be yet living; and a Head Maſon; whoſe Office it is to look after the Bridge, under the Bridge Maſters.]

Drawbridge.

Of other Bridges in this City.

In old Time there were divers Bridges over ſeveral Rivers, Boorns, and Brooks, which ran through ſeveral Streets and Places of this City; of which ſome are yet remaining; but the moſt taken down, when the River or Brook was ſtopped up.

Fleet Bridge.

Fleet Bridge in the Weſt without Ludgate: A Bridge of Stone fair Coped on either ſide with Iron Pikes: On the Weſt toward the South, be alſo certain Lanthorns of Stone, for Lights to be placed in Winter Evenings for Commodity of Travellers. Under this Bridge runneth a Water called (as I have ſaid) The River of the Wells, ſince Turn Mill Brook, now Fleet Dike, becauſe it runneth by the Fleet, and ſometime about the Fleet, and ſo under Fleet Bridge into the River of Thames. This Bridge was far greater in Times paſt; but hath been leſſened as the Water Courſe hath been narrowed.

Rebuilt.
R. B.

Since the Rebuilding of London it appears a fair Stone Bridge, being the Breadth of the Street for the Conveniency of Coaches and Carts; and contrived alſo for the ſafe paſſing of thoſe that walk on Foot, it being ſo great a Thorowfare. The Sides are raiſed above Breaſt high, and thereon the City Arms engraven with their Supporters. Under this Bridge goes the Canal (as it is now called) as far as Holborn Bridge, where a little Water called Turn Mill Brook falleth in, and emptieth it ſelf into the Thames. On this fair Canal ſtand two other Bridges of free Stone, on each Hand of Fleet Bridge, with a comely high Arch that Veſſels may paſs under, being aſcended by ſeveral Stone Steps: One of theſe Bridges being oppoſite to Bridewell; and the other to Fleet Lane, near the Fleet Priſon.]

It ſeemeth, this laſt Bridge to have been made or repaired at the Charges of John Wells, Maior, in the Year 1431; for on the Coping was ingraved, Wells embraced by Angels, like as on the Standard in Cheape, which he alſo Builded. Thus much of the Bridge; for of the Water Courſe and Decay thereof, I have ſpoken in another Place.

Oldborne Bridge.

Oldborne Bridge, over the ſaid River of the Wells more towards the North, was ſo called, of a Bourne that ſometimes ran down Oldborn Hill into the ſaid River. This Bridge of Stone, like as Fleet Bridge, from Ludgate, Weſt, ſerveth for Paſſengers, with Carriage or otherwiſe, from Newgate toward the Weſt and by North.

Cow Bridge.

Cowbridge, more North over the ſame Water, by Cowbridge Street, or Cow Lane; this Bridge being lately decayed, another of Timber is made ſomewhat more North, by Chick Lane, &c.

Bridges over the Town Ditch.

Bridges over the Town Ditch there are divers: to wit, without Aldgate, without Biſhopſgate; the Poſtern called Moregate; the Poſtern of Creplegate, without Alderſgate, the Poſtern of Chriſt's Hoſpital, Newgate and Ludgate; all theſe be overpaved Level with the Streets. But one other there is of Timber over the River of Wells, or Fleet Dike, between the Precinct of the Black Friars, and the Houſe of Bridewell.

Bridges over the Courſe of Walbrooke.

There have been of old time alſo, divers Bridges in ſundry Places over the Courſe of Walbrooke. I read, that every Perſon having Lands on either ſide of the ſaid Walbrooke, ſhould Vault, or Bridge, and mend the ſame, ſo far as their Lands extended.

More, in the Eleventh of Edward the Third, the Inhabitants upon the Courſe of this Brooke, were forced to Pile and Wall the Sides thereof.

Horſeſhoe Bridge now Vaulted over and Paved.

Alſo, that in the Third of Henry the Fifth, this Water Courſe having had many Bridges, as ye have heard, I have read of one by the Name of Horſe-ſhoe Bridge, by the Church of St. John Baptiſt, now called S. Johns upon Walbroke, which hath been ſince Vaulted over with Brick; and the Streets and Lanes where through it paſſed, ſo Paved, that the ſame Water Courſe or Brook is now hardly diſcerned. Order was taken in the Second of Edward the Fourth, that ſuch Perſons as had any Ground on either Side of Walbrooke, ſhould Vault and Pave it over, ſo far as his Ground extended. And of all theſe Bridges there is none remain but Four, and theſe are all over the Canal, viz. Bridewell Bridge, Fleet Bridge, Fleet Bridge Lane, and Holborn Bridge. And thus much for the Bridges.

Of ſuch antient Towers and Caſtles, as have been in and about this City of LONDON. Tower on London Bridge. Baynard's Caſtle. Mountfichet Tower on the Thames. Tower on the Weſt Bridewell. Barbican. Tower Royal. Sernes Tower.

J. S.

IN this Chapter I ſhall ſay nothing of that famous Tower of London, but rather aſſign it a few Chapters by it ſelf: For that ſo many Things are to be ſpoken of it, being now in a better Condition both for Strength and Beauty than ever it hath been ſince its firſt Building. This Chapter ſhall ſhew us ſuch other Towers, and Caſtles in the City, as (except the Name) Time hath decayed, or rather quite demoliſhed.] And Firſt;

The Tower on London Bridge.

Tower at the rth End of e Draw idge.

The next Tower on the River of Thames was on London Bridge, at the North End of the Draw Bridge. This Tower was new begun to be builded 1426, John Reynwell, Maior of London, laid one of the firſt Corner Stones in the Foundation of this Work; the other Three were laid by the Sheriffs and Bridge Maſters; upon every of theſe Four Stones was ingraven in fair Roman Letters the Name of IHESUS. And theſe Stones I have ſeen laid in the Bridge Storehouſe, ſince they were taken up, when that Tower was of late newly made of Timber.

This Gate and Tower was at the firſt ſtrongly builded up of Stone, and ſo continued until the Year 1577, in the Month of April, when the ſame Stone Arched Gate and Tower, being decayed, was begun to be taken down, and then were the Heads of the Traytors removed thence, and ſet on the Tower over the Gate at the Bridge Foot towards Southwark. This ſaid Tower being taken down, a new Foundation was drawn, and Sir John Langley, Lord Maior, laid the firſt Stone, in the preſence of the Sheriffs and Bridge Maſters on the 28th of Auguſt. And in the Month of September, the Year 1579, the ſame Tower was finiſhed, a beautiful and chargeable Piece of Work, all above the Bridge being of Timber.

Tower on the South of London Bridge.

ower at the uth End of e Bridge.

Another Tower there is on London Bridge; to wit, over the Gate at the South End of the ſame Bridge, toward Southwark. This Gate, with the Tower thereupon, and two Arches of the Bridge fell down, and no Man periſhed by the fall thereof, in the Year 1436. Towards the new Building whereof divers charitable Citizens gave large Sums of Monies; which Gate being then again new Builded, was with thirteen Houſes more on the Bridge, in the Year 1471, Burned by the Mariners and Sailers of Kent, Baſtard Fawconbridge being their Captain.

. Dunthorne. he South ate on London Bridge rnt.

Baynard's Caſtle.

ynard's Ca- . Fitzſte- n. Gervaſ. lbery.

In the Weſt Part of this City (ſaith Fitzſtephen) are two moſt ſtrong Caſtles, &c. Alſo Gervaſius Tilbury, in the Reign of Henry the Second, writing of theſe Caſtles, hath to this Effect: Two Caſtles (ſaith he) are built with Walls and Ramparts, whereof one is in right of Poſſeſſion Baynard's; the other, the Barons of Mountfitchet. The firſt of theſe Caſtles, Banking on the River Thames, was called Baynard's Caſtle of Baynard, a Nobleman that came in with the Conqueror, and then Builded it, and deceaſed in the Reign of William Rufus; after whoſe deceaſe Geffrey Baynard ſucceeded; and then William Baynard, in the Year 1111, who by Forfeiture for Felony, loſt his Barony of little Dunmow, and King Henry gave it wholly to Robert Fitz Richard, the Son of Gilbert Earl of Clare, and to his Heirs, together with the Honour of Baynard's Caſtle. This Robert Married Maude de Sent Licio, Lady of Bradham, and deceaſed 1134, was Buried at St. Needes by Richard Earl of Clare. Walter his Son ſucceeded him, he took to Wife Matilda de Becham; and after her Deceaſe, Matilde the Daughter and Coheir of Richard de Lucy, on whom he begat Robert, and others. He deceaſed in the Year 1198, and was Buried at Dunmow; after whom ſucceeded Robert Fitzwater, a valiant Knight.

S. Neots.

Matilde de Lucy. Firſt Edition.

Lib. Dunmow

About the Year 1213, there aroſe a great Diſcord betwixt King John and his Barons, becauſe of Matilda, ſurnamed the Fair, Daughter to the ſaid Robert Fitzwater, whom the King unlawfully loved, but could not obtain her, nor her Father would conſent thereunto; whereupon, (and for other like Cauſes) enſued War through the whole Realm. The Barons were received into London, where they greatly endamaged the King. But in the End, the King did not only (therefore) baniſh the ſaid Fitzwater amongſt other, out of the Realm, but alſo cauſed his Caſtle, called Baynard, and other his Houſes to be ſpoiled. Which then being done, Matilda the Fair, a Meſſenger being ſent unto her about the King's Suit, whereunto ſhe would not conſent, was Poiſoned; Robert Fitzwater, and ſome other being then paſſed into France, and ſome others into Scotland, &c.

Robert Fitzwater Baniſhed. Baynard's Caſtle deſtroyed. Virginity defended with the Loſs of Worldly Goods, and Life of the Body, for the Life of the Soul.

It happened in the Year 1214, King John being then in France with a great Army, that a Truce was taken betwixt the two Kings of England and France, for the Term of Five Years, (and a River, or Arm of the Sea being then betwixt either Hoſt) there was a Knight in the Engliſh Hoſt that cryed to them of the other ſide, willing ſome one of their Knights, to come and juſt a Courſe or twain with him; whereupon, without ſtay, Robert Fitzwater, being on the French Part, made himſelf ready, ferried over, and got on Horſeback, without any Man to help him, and ſhewed himſelf ready to the Face of his Challenger, whom at the firſt Courſe he ſtrook ſo hard with his great Spear, that Horſe and Man fell to the Ground; and when his Spear was broken he went back again to the King of France: Which when the King had ſeen, By God's Tooth, quoth he (after his uſual Oath) he were a King indeed, that had ſuch a Knight. The Friends of Robert hearing theſe Words, Kneeled down and ſaid; O King he is your Knight. It is Robert Fitzwater. And thereupon the next Day he was ſent for, and reſtored to the King's Favour; by which Means Peace was concluded, and he received his Livings, and had Licenſe to repair his Caſtle of Baynard, and other Caſtles.

King John's Oath.

Robert Fitzwater reſtored to the King's Favour. Baynard's Caſtle again Builded.

This Year 1216, the Firſt of Henry the Third, the Caſtle of Hertford, being delivered to Lewis the French, and the Barons of England, Robert Fitzwater requiring to have the ſame; becauſe the keeping thereof did by ancient Right and Title pertain to him, was anſwered by Lewis; That Engliſhmen were not worthy to have ſuch Holds in keeping, becauſe they did betray their own Lord, &c.

The keeping of Hertford Caſtle belonged to Robert Fitzwater.

This Robert Deceaſed in the Year 1234, and was Buried at Dunmow, and Walter his Son ſucceeded him, 1258. His Barony of Baynard, was in the Ward of King Henry in the Nonage of Robert Fitzwater. This Robert took to his Second Wife, Ælianor, Daughter and Heir to the Earl of Ferrars, in the Year 1289. And in the Year 1303. on the 12th of March, before John Bland, Maior of London, he acknowledged his Service to the ſame City for his Caſtle Baynard; and ſware upon the Evangeliſts, that he would be true to the Liberties thereof, and maintain the ſame to his Power, and the Counſel of the ſame to keep, &c.

Acknowledgeth Service to the City.

The Rights that belonged to Robert Fitzwater, Chaſtilian and Banner Bearer of London, Lord of Wodeham, were theſe.

Robert Fitzwater, Caſtilian and Banner Bearer of London.
Right belonging to him in Time of War.

THE ſaid Robert and his Heirs, ought to be, and are Chief Banners of London, in Fee for the Chaſtiliary, which he and his Anceſtors had by Caſtle Baynard, in the ſaid City. In Time of War, the ſaid Robert and his Heirs ought to ſerve the City, in manner as followeth; that is,

The ſaid Robert ought to come, he being the Twentieth Man of Arms on Horſeback, covered with Cloth, or Armour, unto the great Weſt Door of St. Paul, with his Banner diſplayed before him of his Arms. And when he is come to the ſaid Door, mounted and apparelled, as before is ſaid; the Maior, with his Aldermen and Sheriffs, armed in their Arms, ſhall come out of the ſaid Church of St. Paul unto the ſaid Door, with a Banner in his Hand all on Foot; which Banner ſhall be Gules, the Image of St. Paul, Gold; the Face, Hands, Feet, and Sword, of Silver. And as ſoon as the ſaid Robert ſhall ſee the Maior, Aldermen, and Sheriffs come on Foot out of the Church, armed with ſuch a Banner; he ſhall alight from his Horſe, and ſalute the Maior, and ſay to him; Sir Mayor, I am come to do my Service which I owe to the City.

Banner of St. Paul.

And the Maior and Aldermen ſhall anſwer:

We give to you, as to our Banneret of Fee in this City, the Banner of this City to bear and govern, to the Honour and Profit of this City, to your Power.

And the ſaid Robert and his Heirs ſhall receive the Banner in his Hands, and go on Foot out of the Gate, with the Banner in his Hands; and the Maior, Aldermen, and Sheriffs, ſhall follow to the Door, and ſhall bring an Horſe to the ſaid Robert, worth Twenty Pound; which Horſe ſhall be ſaddled with a Saddle of the Arms of the ſaid Robert, and ſhall be covered with Sindals of the ſaid Arms.

Alſo they ſhall preſent to him Twenty Pounds Sterling Money, and deliver it to the Chamberlain of the ſaid Robert, for his Expences that Day. Then the ſaid Robert ſhall mount upon the Horſe which the Maior preſented to him, with the Banner in his Hand: And as ſoon as he is up, he ſhall ſay to the Maior, that he cauſe a Marſhal to be choſen for the Hoſt, one of the City; which Marſhal being choſen, the ſaid Robert ſhall command the Maior and Burgeſſes of the City, to warn the Commons to aſſemble together, and they ſhall all go under the Banner of St. Paul; and the ſaid Robert ſhall bear it himſelf unto Aldgate, and there the ſaid Robert and Maior ſhall deliver the ſaid Banner of St. Paul from thence, to whom they ſhall aſſent or think good. And if they muſt make any Iſſue forth of the City; then the ſaid Robert ought to chuſe Two forth of every Ward, the moſt ſage Perſonages, to foreſee to the ſafe keeping of the City, after they be gone forth. And this Councel ſhall be taken in the Priory of the Trinity near unto Aldgate. And again, before every Town or Caſtle, which the Hoſt of London ſhall beſiege, if the Siege continue a whole Year, the ſaid Robert ſhall have for every Siege, of the Commonalty of London, One hundred Shillings for his Travel, and no more.

Theſe be the Rights that the ſaid Robert hath in the Time of War. Rights belonging to Robert Fitzwater, and to his Heirs in the City of London, in the Time of Peace, are theſe; That is to ſay, The ſaid Robert hath a Soke or Ward in the City; that is, a Wall of the Canonry of St. Paul, as a Man goeth down the Street before the Brewhouſe of St. Paul, unto the Thames, and ſo to the ſide of the Mill, which is in the Water that cometh down from the Fleet Bridge; and goeth ſo by London Walls, betwixt the Friars Preachers and Ludgate; and ſo returneth back by the Houſe of the ſaid Friars, unto the ſaid Wall of the ſaid Canonry of St. Paul; that is, all the Pariſh of St. Andrew, which is in the Gift of his Anceſtors, by the ſaid Seniority: And ſo the ſaid Robert hath appendant unto the ſaid Soke, all theſe Things underwritten: That he ought to have a Sokeman, and to place what Sokeman he will, ſo he be of the Sokemanry, or the ſame Ward; and if any of the Sokemanry be impleaded in the Guildhall, of any Thing that toucheth not the Body of the Maior that for the Time is, or that toucheth the Body of no Sheriff, it is not lawful for the Sokeman of the Sokemanry of the ſaid Robert Fitzwater, to demand a Court of the ſaid Robert; and the Maior and his Citizens of London ought to grant him to have a Court; and in his Court he ought to bring his Judgments, as it is aſſented and agreed upon in the Guildhall, that ſhall be given them.

Rights belonging to Robert Fitzwater in the Time of Peace.

A Court to be granted Robert Fitzwater, for his Sokeman.

If any therefore be taken in his Sokemanry, he ought to have his Stocks and Impriſonment in his Soken; and he ſhall be brought from thence to the Guildhall, before the Maior, and there they ſhall provide him his Judgment that ought to be given of him: But his Judgment ſhall not be publiſhed till he come into the Court of the ſaid Robert, and in his Liberty.

And the Judgment ſhall be ſuch, that if he have deſerved Death by Treaſon, he to be tied to a Poſt in the Thames at a good Wharf, where Boats are faſtned, Two Ebbings and Two Flowings of the Water.

Judgment for Diverſity of Offences.

And if he be condemned for a common Thief, he ought to be led to the Elms, and there ſuffer his Judgment as other Thieves. And ſo the ſaid Robert and his Heirs hath Honour, that he holdeth a great Franchiſe within the City, that the Maior of the City and Citizens are bound to do him of Right; that is to ſay, that when the Maior will hold a great Council, he ought to call the ſaid Robert and his Heirs, to be with him in Council of the City; and the ſaid Robert ought to be ſworn to be of Council with the City, againſt all People, ſaving the King and his Heirs. And when the ſaid Robert cometh to the Huſtings of the Guild-Hall of the City, the Maior or his Lieutenant ought to riſe againſt him, and ſet him down near unto him, and ſo long as he is in the Guild-Hall, all the Judgments ought to be given by his Mouth, according to the Record of the Recorders of the ſaid Guild-Hall. And ſo many Waiſes as come ſo long as he is there, he ought to give them to the Bailiffs of the Town, or to whom he will, by the Council of the Maior of the City.

Theſe be the Franchiſes that belonged to Robert Fitzwater in London, in Time of Peace; which, for the Antiquity thereof, I have noted out of an old Record.

This Robert deceaſed in the Year 1305, leaving Iſſue, Walter Fitzrobert, who had Iſſue, Robert Fitzwalter; unto whom, in the Year 1320, the Citizens of London acknowledged the Right which they ought to him and his Heirs for the Caſtle Baynard. He deceaſed 1325; unto whom ſucceeded Robert Fitzrobert, Fitzwalter, &c. More of the Lord Fitzwalter may ye read in my Summary and Annals, in the 51ſt of Edward III. But now how this Honour of Baynards Caſtle, with the Appurtenances, nances, fell from the Poſſeſſion of the Fitzwaters, I have not read; only I find, that in the Year 1428. the Seventh of Henry VI. a great Fire was at Baynards Caſtle; and that Humphrey Duke of Glouceſter builded it new. By his Death and Attainder in the Year 1446. it came to the Hands of Henry VI. and from him to Richard Duke of York, of whom we read, that in the Year 1457, he lodged there as in his own Houſe.

Robert Fitzwater deceaſeth.

Baynard's Caſtle periſhed by Fire. Humphrey Duke of Glouceſter new builded it. Richard Duke of York, Owner of Baynard's Caſtle.

Edward IV. elected in St. John's Field. Earl of March lodgeth in his Caſtle Baynard.

Edward IV. took on him the Crown in Baynard's Caſtle.

In the Year 1460, the 28th of February, the Earls of March and of Warwick, with a great Power of Men, (but few of Name) entred the City of London, where they were of the Citizens joyfully received; and upon the Third of March, being Sunday, the ſaid Earl cauſed his People to be muſtred in S. John's Field; where unto that Hoſt was ſhewed and proclaimed certain Articles and Points, wherein King Henry, as they ſaid, had offended; and thereupon it was demanded of the ſaid People, Whether the ſaid Henry was worthy to reign as King any longer, or not? Whereunto the People cried, Nay. Then it was aſked of them, Whether they would have the Earl of March for their King? And they cried, Yea, yea. Whereupon certain Captains were appointed to bear Report thereof to the ſaid Earl of March, then being lodged at his Caſtle of Baynard. Whereof when the Earl was by them advertiſed, he thanked God and them for their Election; notwithſtanding, he ſhewed ſome Countenance of Inſufficiency in him, to occupy ſo great a Charge; till by Exhortation of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of Exceſter, and certain Noblemen, he granted to their Petition. And on the next Morrow at Pauls, he went on Proceſſion, offered, and had Te Deum ſung. Then was he with great Royalty conveyed to Weſtminſter, and there in the great Hall ſet in the King's Seat, with St. Edward's Scepter in his Hand.

Ex lib. Erſwick. Treaſon ſurmiſed againſt many Men.

Divers Aldermen unjuſtly charged with Treaſon.

In the Seventh Year of King Edward's Reign, many Men were arreſted of Treaſon ſurmiſed againſt them, where-through many of them were put to Death, and other eſcaped for great Sums of Money. Amongſt whom were, Sir Tho. Cooke, Sir John Plummer, Knights, Humphrey Heyward, and other Aldermen of London arreſted, and charged with Treaſon: Whereof they were acquitted; but they loſt their Goods to the King, to the Value of 40000 Marks, or more, as ſome have written. And for Example, Sir Tho. Cooke, lately before Lord Maior of London, was by one named Hawkins, appeached of Treaſon; for which he was committed to the Tower, his Place in London ſeized on by the Lord Rivers, and his Lady and Servants clearly put out thereof; the Cauſe being thus:

The Reaſon of Sir Thomas Cooke's Troubles.

The Brake, or Rack in the Tower, uſually called, The Duke of Exceſter's Daughter.

An Oyer Determiner for the Trial of Sir Thomas Cooke.

The forenamed Hawkins came (upon a Time) to the ſaid Sir Thomas Cooke, requeſting him to lend him a Thouſand Marks upon good Surety; whereunto he anſwered, that he would firſt know for whom it ſhould be. At length underſtanding that it ſhould be for the Uſe of Queen Margaret; he anſwered, He had no current Wares, whereof any Shift might be made, without too much Loſs; and therefore required Hawkins to move him no further, for he intended not to deal therewithal. Yet the ſaid Hawkins requeſted but one Hundred Pounds at length, and went away without it, or the Value of One Penny, and never after came again to move him. Which reſted ſo, for 2 or 3 Year after, till the ſaid Hawkins was committed to the Tower; and brought at length to the Brake or Rack, commonly called, The Duke of Exceſter's Daughter, becauſe he was the Deviſer of that Torture. By means of which Pain, he revealed many Things; and among the reſt, the Motion which he had made to Sir Thomas Cooke, was one. In regard whereof, the ſaid Sir Thomas was troubled, as you have heard; and a Jury, by the means of Sir John Fogg, indicted him of Treaſon. After which, an Oyer Determiner was held in the Guildhall, where ſate the Lord Maior, the Duke of Clarence, the Earl of Warwick, the Lord Rivers, Sir John Fogge, with other of the King's Council.

Sir Thomas Cooke acquitted by the Jury.

When Men are in Diſtreſs, much Spoil is made of them.

Sir John Markham, Lord Chief Juſtice, loſt his Office for doing Juſtice.

To this Place was the ſaid Sir Thomas brought, and there arraigned upon Life and Death: Where he was acquitted of the ſaid Indictment, and ſent to the Compter in Breadſtreet, and from thence to the King's Bench. Being thus acquitted, his Wife got Poſſeſſion again of his Houſe, the which ſhe found in a very evil Plight; for the Servants of Sir John Fogge, and of the Lord Rivers, had made Havock of what they liſted. Alſo, at his Place at Giddy Hall in Eſſex, another ſort had deſtroyed the Deer in his Park, his Conies and Fiſh; and ſpared not Braſs, Pewter, Bedding, and all that they could carry away; for which never a Penny might be gotten back again in Recompence, nor Sir Thomas Cooke be delivered, until he had paid 8000 Pounds to the King, and 800 Pounds to the Queen. And becauſe that Sir John Markham, Knight, then Chief Juſtice of the Pleas, determined ſomewhat againſt the King's Pleaſure (that the Offence done by Sir Thomas Cooke was no Treaſon, but Miſpriſion, the which was no Deſert of Death, but to be fined at the King's Pleaſure:) the Lord Rivers, and the Dutcheſs of Bedford his Wife, procured, that he loſt his Office afterward.

Richard the Third took on him the Crown in Baynard's Caſtle.

Edward IV. being dead, leaving his eldeſt Son Edward, and his ſecond Son Richard, both Infants; Richard Duke of Glouceſter, then Protector, practiſed here for the Crown, and as it were by Election of the Commons in the Guildhall of London, took on him the Title of the Realm, as offered and impoſed upon him, in this Baynard's Caſtle, as ye may read ſet down and penned by Sir Thomas Moore, and in my Annals.

Baynard's Caſtle repaired by K. Hen. VII.

Lodgeth there.

Henry the Seventh, about the Year 1487. the 31ſt of his Reign, repaired, or rather new builded this Houſe, not imbattelled, or ſo ſtrongly fortified Caſtle-like; but far more beautiful and commodious for the Entertainment of any Prince or great Eſtate. In the Seventh of his Reign, he, with his Queen, were lodged there, and came from thence to Paul's Church, where they made their Offering, dined in the Biſhop's Palace, and ſo returned.

The 18th of his Reign he was lodged there; and the Ambaſſadors from the King of the Romans were thither brought to his Preſence, and from thence the King came to Paul's; and was there ſworn to the King of the Romans, as the ſaid King had ſworn to him.

Henry the Seventh and Knights of the Garter rode in their Habits from the Tower to Paul's Church; and thence to Baynard's Caſtle.

The Twentieth of the ſaid King, he, with the Knights of the Order, all in their Habits of the Garter, rode from the Tower of London through the City, unto the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's, and there heard Evenſong; and from thence they rode to Baynard's Caſtle, where the King lodged, and on the next Morrow, in the ſame Habit, they rode from thence again to the ſaid Church of St. Paul's, went on Proceſſion, heard the Divine Service, offered, and returned. The ſame Year the King of Caſtile was lodged there.

This Caſtle came afterwards to the Earls of Pembroke.

The Council aſſembled at Baynard's Caſtle, and proclaimed Queen Mary.

In the Year 1553, the 19th of July, the Council, partly moved with the Right of the Lady Mary's Cauſe, partly conſidering, that the moſt of the Realm was wholly bent on her ſide, changing their Mind from the Lady Jane, lately proclaimed Queen; aſſembled themſelves at this Baynard's Caſtle, where they communed with the Earl of Pembroke, and the Earl of Shrewſbury, and Sir John Maſon, Clerk of the Council, ſent for the Lord Maior; and then riding into Cheap to the Croſs, where Garter King at Arms (Trumpets being ing ſounded) proclaimed the Lady Mary, Daughter to King Henry VIII. and Queen Katharine, Queen of England, &c.

R. B.

This Caſtle of Baynard's; as alſo that of Mount Fitchet, near adjoyning, are now pulled down, and converted into Timber Yards, Wood Wharfs, and private Buildings; only a round Tower, part of Baynard's Caſtle, yet ſtands, and with other additional Buildings, is converted into a dwelling Houſe.]

Next adjoining to this Caſtle was ſome time a Tower, the Name thereof I have not read; but that the ſame was builded by Edward II. is manifeſt by this that followeth.

A. M.
A Tower by Baynard's Caſtle, builded by Edward IV.

King Edward III. in the Second Year of his Reign, gave unto William de Ros, of Hamelake in Yorkſhire, a Tower upon the Water of Thames, by the Caſtle Baynard, in the City of London, which Tower his Father had builded; he gave the ſaid Tower and Appurtenances to the ſaid William Hamelake, and his Heirs, for a Roſe Yearly, to be paid for all Service due, &c.

This Tower, as it ſeemeth to me, was ſince called Legates Inn, the 7th of Edward IV.]

Tower of MOUNTFIQUIT.

Named from the Baron Mountfichet.

The next Tower or Caſtle banking alſo on the River of Thames, was (as is afore ſhewed) called Mountfiquit's Caſtle, belonging to a Nobleman, Baron of Mountfichet, the firſt Builder thereof, who came in with William the Conqueror, and was Surnamed Le Sire Mountfichet. This Caſtle he builded in a Place not far diſtant from Baynard's, towards the Weſt. The ſame William Mountfichet lived in the Reign of Henry I. and was Witneſs to a Charter then granted to the City for the Sheriffs of London. Richard Mountfiquit lived in King John's Time, and in the Year 1213. was by the ſame King baniſhed the Realm into France, when (peradventure) King John cauſed his Caſtle of Mountfiquit, amongſt other Caſtles of the Barons, to be overthrown. The which, after his Return, might be by him again re-edified; for the total Deſtruction thereof, was about the Year 1276. when Robert Kilwarby, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, began the Foundation of the Houſe of the Fryars Preachers Church there, commonly called the Black Friars, as appeareth by a Charter, dated the 10th of June, in the Fourth of Edward I. remaining of Record in the Tower. Wherein is declared, that Gregory de Rockeſley, Maior of London, and the Barons of the ſame City, granted and gave unto the ſaid Archbiſhop Robert Two Lanes or Ways next the Street of Baynard's Caſtle, and the Tower of Mountfiquit, to be applied for the Enlargement of the ſaid Church and Place: In theſe Words.

The Ruins thereof made uſe of for Black Fryars.

Turr. Record. Ex Charta. The Preaching Friars Church founded by Baynard's Caſtle; before which Time, their Church was in Oldborne.

Gregory Rockeſley, Lord Maior, and the Barons of London, granted, and gave to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Robert Kilwarby, Two Lanes or Ways, lying next to the Street of Baynard's Caſtle, and the Tower of Mountfiquit, or Mountfichet, to be deſtroyed. In the which Place, the ſaid Robert builded the late new Church of the Black Friars, with the reſt of the Stones that were left of the ſaid Tower. For the beſt and choice Stones the Biſhop of London had obtained of King William Conqueror, to reedify the upper Part of St. Paul's Church, which was then (by chance of Fire) decayed.

This Charter of King Edward II. before mentioned, ran in this Tenor.

The Tower on the THAMES.

Tower on the Thames.

A Third Tower there was alſo, ſituate on the River of Thames, near unto the ſaid Black Friars Church, on the Weſt Part thereof, builded at the Citizens Charges, but by Licence and Commandment of Edward I. and of Edward II. as appeareth by their Grants. By the latter whereof, in the 10th of his Reign, an Impoſition was granted towards the building of a new Tower on the Wall near the Friar Preachers.] Which Tower was then finiſhed, and ſo ſtood for the Space of 300 Years; and was at the laſt taken down by the Commandment of John Sha, Maior of London, in the Year 1502.

Impoſition for building this Tower.

King Edward his Command for this Tower.
J. S.

This Tower was large and magnificent, and ſuch as was fit for the Reception of a King; and where King Edward I. intended ſometime at his Pleaſure to lye. It was not finiſhed in the Beginning of his Reign. But gave Order for the finiſhing of it to the Maior, Sheriffs, and Citizens, out of the Three Years Toll he had granted them to take upon Commodities brought to the City to be ſold, for the Reparation of the Walls; and particularly for finiſhing the Wall begun near the Black Friars, not far from which at the Thames, ſtood this Tower. And that we may ſee what it was, and what Opinion that King had of this Tower, and concerning the Situation, let us read his Letter to the City.

The King's Letter for finiſhing a Wall and a Tower near Black Friars. Lib. Horn. Fol. 183.

' Whereas we have granted you for Aid of the ' Work of the Walls of our City, and the Clo-
' ſure of the ſame, divers Cuſtoms of vendible
' Things, coming to the ſaid City, to be taken
' for a certain Time, We command you, that you
' cauſe to be finiſhed the Wall of the ſaid City,
' now begun near the Manſion of the Friars
' Preachers, and a certain good and comely Tower
' at the Head of the ſaid Wall within the Water
' of Thames there. Wherein We may be received
' and tarry with Honour, to our Eaſe and Satis-
' faction in our Comings there; out of the Pence
' taken, and to be taken of the ſaid Cuſtoms, &c.

Another Tower in the Weſt.

Tower or Caſtle on the Weſt of London, by St. Brides Church.

Another Tower or Caſtle alſo was there, in the Weſt Part of the City, pertaining to the King.

For I read, that in the Year 1087. the 20th of William the Firſt, the City of London, with the Church of S. Paul being burned, Mauritius then Biſhop of London, afterward began the Foundation of a New Church, whereunto King William (ſaith mine Author) gave the choice Stones of this Caſtle, ſtanding near to the Bank of the River of Thames, at the Weſt End of the City. After this Mauritius, Richard his Succeſſor purchaſed the Streets above Paul's Church, compaſſing the ſame with a Wall of Stone, and Gates. King Henry the Firſt gave to this Richard, ſo much of the Moat or Wall of the Caſtle, on the Thames ſide to the South, as ſhould be needful to make the ſaid Wall of the Churchyard, and ſo much more as ſhould ſuffice to make a way without the Wall on the North ſide, &c.

In Vita Arkenwald.

This Tower or Caſtle being thus deſtroyed, ſtood, as it may ſeem, in Place where now ſtandeth the Houſe called Bridewell. For notwithſtanding the Deſtruction of the ſaid Caſtle or Tower, the Houſe remained large, ſo that the Kings of this Realm long after were lodged there, and kept their Courts. For in the Ninth Year of Henry the Third, the Courts of Law and Juſtice were kept in the King's Houſe, whereſoever he was lodged, and not elſewhere. And that the Kings have been lodged, and kept their Law Courts in this Place, I could ſhew you many Authorities of Record; but for a plain Proof, this one may ſuffice: Hæc eſt finalis Concordia, facta in Curia Dom. Regis apud Sanct. Brigid. Lond. à Die Sancti Michaelis, in 15 Dies, Anno Regni Regis Johannis ſeptimo; Coram G. Fil. Petri, Euſtacio de Fauconberg, Johanne de Geſtlinge, Oſbart Filio Hervey, Walter de Criſping, Juſticiar. & aliis Baronibus Domini Regis.

Lib. Burton ſuper Trent.

More, (as Matthew Paris hath) about the Year 1210, King John, in the Twelfth Year of his Reign, ſummoned a Parliament at S. Brides in London; where he exacted of the Clergy, and Religious Perſons, the Sum of One Hundred Thouſand Pounds: And beſides all this, the White Monks were compelled to cancel their Privileges, and to pay 40000 l. to the King, &c. This Houſe of S. Brides (of later Time) being left, and not uſed by the Kings, fell to Ruin; inſomuch that the very Platform thereof remained (for great part) waſte, and as it were, but a Lay-ſtall of Filth and Rubbiſh, only a fair Well remained there. A great Part whereof, namely on the Weſt, as hath been ſaid, was given to the Biſhop of Saliſbury; the other Part toward the Eaſt remained waſte, until King Henry the Eighth builded a ſtately and beautiful Houſe thereupon, giving it to Name Bridewell, of the Pariſh and Well there. This Houſe he purpoſely builded for the Entertainment of the Emperor Charles the Fifth; who in the Year 1522 came into this City, as I have ſhewed in my Summary, Annals, and large Chronicles.

The Tower of Barbican.

On the North Weſt ſide of this City, near unto Redcroſs Street, there was a Tower, commonly called Barbican, or Burhkenning; for that the ſame, being placed on an high Ground, and alſo builded of ſome good Height, was (in old Time) uſed as a Watch Tower for the City; from whence a Man might behold and view the whole City towards the South, and alſo ſee into Kent, Suſſex and Surrey, and likewiſe every other way, Eaſt, North, or Weſt.

Barbican, or Burhkenning.

Other Watch Towers.

Some other Burhkennings or Watch Towers there were of old Time, in and about the City, all which were repaired, yea, and others new builded, by Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloceſter, in the Reign of King Henry the Third, when the Barons were in Arms, and held the City againſt the King. But the Barons being reconciled to his Favour, in the Year 1267, he cauſed all their Burhkennings, Watch Towers, and Bulwarks, made and repaired by the ſaid Earl, to be plucked down, and the Ditches to be filled up, ſo that nought of them might be ſeen to remain. And then was this Burhkenning, amongſt the reſt, overthrown and deſtroyed; and altho' the Ditch near thereunto, called Houndſditch, was ſtopped up, yet the Street (of long Time after) was called Houndſditch, and of late Time (more commonly) called Barbican. The Plot or Seat of this Burhkenning, or Watch Tower, King Edward III. in the Year 1336, and the Tenth of his Reign, gave unto Robert Efford, [or Ufford] Earl of Suffolk, by the Name of his Manor of Baſe-Court, in the Pariſh of S. Giles without Cripplegate, of London, commonly called the Barbican.

Tower Royal.

Tower Royal was of old time the King's Houſe; King Stephen was there lodged; but ſince called the Queen's Wardrobe. The Princeſs, Mother to King Richard the Second, in the Fourth Year of his Reign, was lodged there; being forced to fly from the Tower of London, when the Rebels poſſeſſed it. But on the 15th of June, (ſaith Froſard) Wat Tyler being ſlain, the King went to this Lady Princeſs his Mother, then lodged in the Tower Royal, called the Queen's Wardrobe; where ſhe had tarried two Days and two Nights: Which Tower (ſaith the Record of Edward the Third, the Thirty ſixth Year) was in the Pariſh of S. Michael de Pater noſter, &c.

Joh. Froſard.

In the Year 1386, King Richard, with Queen Anne his Wife, kept their Chriſtmas at Eltham; whither came to him Lion King of Ermony, under Pretence to reform Peace betwixt the Kings of England and France. But what his Coming profited, he only underſtood. For, beſides innumerable Gifts that he received of the King, and of the Nobles, the King lying then in this Tower Royal, at the Queen's Wardrobe in London, granted to him a Charter of a Thouſand Pounds by Year, during his Life. He was, as he affirmed, chaſed out of his Kingdom by the Tartarians. The reſt concerning this Tower ſhall you read, when you come to the Vintry Ward, in which it ſtandeth.

Serne's Tower.

Serne's Tower, in Bucklerſbury, was ſometimes the King's Houſe. Edward the Third, in the Eighteenth Year of his Reign, appointed his Exchange of Monies therein to be kept; and in the Two and thirtieth, he gave the ſame Tower to his free Chapel of S. Stephen at Weſtminſter.

Proſpects for the Tower.

To have a ſatisfactory Account of the Situation, Form, and the various Places, Apartments, and Parts of the Tower, it would be deſirable, that there were certain particular Maps and Proſpects of it, both as it was formerly, and at preſent: The doing of which muſt be left to ſome ingenious and ſkilful Perſon. J. S.

And here, for the better Deſcription of this important Part of the City, divers Things are to be particularly ſhewed. As, I. Its Situation and Magnitude. II. The Liberties and Bounds of it. III. The Church of S. Peter within the Tower. IV. The Governors and principal Officers. V. Its Antiquity and firſt Buildings. VI. Of the Enlarging, Repairing, and Fortifying of it. VII. ### Of the Situation and Magnitude of this Great Fortreſs, the TOWER.

How ſituate.

R. B.

It is ſituate upon a large Plot of Ground, called the Tower Liberty, which contains both the Tower Hills, viz. the greater and the leſſer, and Part of Eaſt Smithfield, Roſemary Lane, Well-Cloſe, &c.

It is encompaſſed with a broad and deep Ditch, ſupplied with Water out of the Thames, which is its Southern Bounds; and over this Ditch it hath Two Bridges, one for Carts and Coaches, by the Lions Tower; and the other for Foot-Paſſengers, over a Draw-Bridge on the South ſide.

Beſides, it hath a Paſſage, or Cut out of the Thames, which is called Traitors Bridge; ſo called, for that formerly all Perſons committed to the Tower for Treaſon, were brought through thither by Boat.

Its Extent.

The Piece of Ground on which the Tower ſtands, contains Twenty ſix Acres, a Rod, and ſomething more.

Its Compaſs.

The Compaſs about the Tower, on the Outſide of the Ditch, is 3156 Foot. And the Quantity of Ground comprehended within the Walls and Ditch, is Twelve Acres, and odd Rods. The whole, with its Liberty as aforeſaid, contains ſomething above Twenty ſix Acres of Ground.

A Plan of the Tower.

A Sight of this Tower is here repreſented, taken from the River of Thames, and an Ichnographical Ground Plot; in which you may ſee the Poſition and Situation of the ſeveral Places mentioned in this Diſcouſe of the Tower; all of them being either expreſs'd by Letters, or Figures, according to this following Table; which is a better Satisfaction to the Reader, than a Multitude of Words.

Sir Thomas Overbury, who was poiſoned in a Chamber in the Tower, on the Weſt Part of that old Wall. And therefore Weſton, the principal Murtherer, was tried before Commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer in London; and ſo was Sir Gervaſe Elways, Lieutenant of the Tower, as acceſſary.

The Liberties
f the Tower.
J. S.

And here it will be proper to take ſome View of the Liberties; that is, of ſome certain Extent of Ground bordering upon the Tower; to which was annexed a peculiar Liberty, viz. to be ſubject to no Juriſdiction but that of the Tower it ſelf. This, being upon the Confines of the City, hath occaſioned ſometimes great Difference between the Tower-Officers, and the Maior and City of London. As in the Fifth of Edward IV. in the Firſt of Q. Elizabeth, alſo in the Year 1585; as ſhall be ſhewn more at large in the Chapter for Towerſtreet Ward. To which may be added theſe Contentions following.

In Eaſt Smithfield, at Hoglane End, a Gibbet was ſet up, for the Execution of one R. Dod, for the Murther of one Mrs. Skinner, in her own Houſe lying thereabout, in the Year 1580. But when the Sheriff brought the Malefactor to be hanged, Sir Owen Hopton, then Lieutenant of the Tower, commanded the Sheriffs Officers back again to the Weſt ſide of a Croſs, that ſtood there: (Which ſeems to have been the Mark ſet up for the Boundaries of the Liberties of the Tower.) And he took the Sheriff and the Malefactor into an Houſe: Whence after a good while Stay, they all departed. The Gibbet was taken away; the Malefactor carried to Tyburn in the Afternoon, and executed there. Thus did the Tower contend with the City, about their Right to the Confines of the Tower. This Hollingſhed relates from Stow's Chronicle.

Contentions
ith the City bout the Lierties.

In the Year 1589, one John Cox, a Limeman, attempted the Building of a Wharf into the Thames at the Watergate, ſituate about the Weſt End of the Tower Wharf; and had ſet up his Frame. The Place was ſaid to be within the Liberties of the City of London. But he had the Countenance of an Officer of the Tower, as he pretended. The Inconvenience of this Building was, that it was at a publick Place of Paſſage for the Queen's Subjects, Brewers and others, to fetch Water with Carts, and for other common Affairs. Which Wharf would have tended to the ſtraitning of the Place, and to the great Let and Hindrance of the common Paſſage. Sir Richard Martin, Maior, gave Order for Stay of the Proceeding with this Building: Which nevertheleſs Cox would not obey. For when one from the Lord Maior commanded him to forbear his Building, he heaved up a Staff againſt him, to ſtrike him; and he ſtill proceeded. Whereat the ſaid Maior informed the Lord Treaſurer; praying, That Cox might be commanded to take away his Frame, and to ſurceaſe his ſaid Erection. And withal he beſeeched his Lordſhip, That whereas many times heretofore Variances had ariſen between the City and the Officers of the Tower of London, touching Encroachments upon the common Soil within the Liberties of the City; which ſome Perſons, reſpecting their private Profit, had ſuppoſed to appertain to the Officers of the Tower; And had therefore procured Grants from ſome Officers unto themſelves, and ſo ſtirred Contention between the City and Mr. Lieutenant, (as was well known to his Lordſhip, and the Queen's Honourable Council.) And where heretofore for Stay of Troubles between the City and Mr. Lieutenant, it pleaſed their Lordſhips to give Order, That nothing ſhould be attempted on either ſide, until Order ſhould be taken for Pacification of the Controverſy therein: HE therefore humbly beſeeched his Lordſhip, to extend for the City his Favour ſo far, that by his Means the Titles on each ſide might be examined, touching this, and all other Cauſes of Controverſy, (which reſted as yet undecided) to ſet a quiet End of Controverſies for Time to come; And that all Occaſions of Unkindneſs between the City and Mr. Lieutenant, and other the Queen's Officers of the Tower, might be taken away: As the ſaid Maior ſignified, in a Letter to the Lord Treaſurer.

The Apprentices make an Inſurrection within the Liberties.

Near this Time, a dangerous Quarrel happened about the ſaid Liberties of the Tower. For on a Sunday, the Apprentices took Occaſion to make an Inſurrection; and held their Rendevouz near, or within thoſe Liberties. Thither the Lord Maior, and the Sheriffs, and their Attendants, came to them thus tumultuouſly met together; And, in the Hurly Burly, came it ſeems within the Liberties. Whereat ſome of the People of the Tower began to be aggrieved, as infringing their Privileges. Whereat they began to reſiſt the Maior and his Company. But of this, as an Affront offered to him and the City, he made Complaint to the Queen and Council, againſt the Lieutenant, Sir Michael Blount: Who in his own Vindication, gave this Account of himſelf, and of what he did: Viz. That as ſoon as he was advertiſed of this Tumult, being in his Lodging in the Tower, he went forth to the Gate of the Tower, in his Doublet, and Hoſe and Slippers, and his little walking Staff only in his Hand; and by courteous Meſſage, ſent by one only Man, admoniſhed the Lord Maior, That his Entring within the Liberties, bred Offence; and prayed him to remember the Liberty of the Place. And that he neither by Word, Meſſage, nor any other Action, either commanded or conſented to any Violence, to be offered to the Lord Maior, or Sheriffs, or any of their Company; but did his Endeavour in peaceable manner to appeaſe the Tumult. That he put his own Life in Peril, in putting himſelf forth to repreſs the Diſorder; and both reſtrained his own Servants, and her Majeſty's Servants, from offering any Violence; and with his own Arms drew them, and held them within the Gates of the Tower: And was not willing, nor thought it convenient at that Time, (as it ſeems he was accuſed) to have any Queſtion of the Liberties; but by all means ſuppreſs'd the Queſtion and Offence growing to her Majeſty's ſworn Servants to the Tower, to ſee the Liberties infringed. The Occaſion of her Majeſty's Service at that time not requiring it, the Lieutenant made choice of one of her Majeſty's ſworn Servants, diſcreet, and of peaceable and quiet Condition, in all ſeemly and courteous manner to advertiſe the Lord Maior of it. Which Meſſenger was aſſaulted, and illy intreated; and ſuch Violence as was offered, grew from the Company of the Lord Maior. And all this he offered to aver and prove, before the Lords of her Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council.

The Maior aſſaulted.

Webb Maior ſollicits the L. Treaſurer about the Bounds.

The Buſineſs about the Bounds between the City and the Tower, was not yet (Anno 1591.) ended, but ſtill depending: Yet the Lord Treaſurer had promiſed, that he would give Order for the ſpeeding forth a Commiſſion, touching the deciding of the Limits. This Sir William Webb, Maior, by Letters earneſtly excited him to: Which (as he ſaid) except it were done in ſome convenient Time, might be a Cauſe of ſome Trouble and Diſſenſion hereafter; when the Officers of both Places ſhould have Occaſion, according to Order, to viſit their ſaid Bounds. In this Letter, the Lord Treaſurer wrote with his own Hand the Names of the Perſons to whom the abovеſaid Commiſſion ſhould be directed; viz. The Queen's Two Chief Juſtices, the Chief Baron, Mr. Forteſcue, and the Maſter of S. Katharines.

Variance about the Limits ſtill.

In the Year 1595, Sir John Spenſer Maior, the Buſineſs was not yet adjuſted between the City and the Tower. For certain Apprentices, in the Month of June this Year alſo, riſing in a tumultuous manner in divers Places of the City, and chiefly (as it ſeems) taking their Shelter here; the Maior, with the Swordbearer and Officers, went thither to ſuppreſs them. But the Lieutenant's Men hurt the Swordbearer, the Lieutenant himſelf preſent, and his Sword pulled down: Of which he complained to the Lord Treaſurer.

The Bounds controverted, Where.

The Bounds controverted were at Little Tower Hill, the Poſtern and Eaſt Smithfield, on one ſide; and on the other, the Extent of Tower Hill, and toward Barking Church. The Particularities whereof will further appear, by a Paper I have ſeen in the Tower, entitled,

Points of Controverſy between the City and Lieutenant of the Tower, and other Officers there, as yet remaining undecided.

G. Holmes Deputy Keeper of the Tower Records.

1. Imprimis, It is ſaid for the City, That the Poſtern Gate in the End of London Wall, near the Tower of London, is the City's: And that the Houſes builded upon, and near unto the ſaid Wall and Poſtern, are the City's, and were all builded by the City: And that the City had, and ought to have the Profit and Juriſdiction thereof. Wherein the City is diſturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

2. Item, That all the void Ground within the Poſtern Gate of London Wall, near the Tower of London, viz. the whole Hill and Ground where the Scaffold ſtandeth for Execution of Traitors, and where the Sheriffs of London receive Priſoners from the Tower to be executed, (from which Place the Bound Stone is removed by Mr. Lieutenant's Command) with the Watergate, and the Gardens under London Wall, and certain Houſes and Sheds builded upon the Soil there, are the City's, and within the Liberties and Freedom of the City of London, and within the Pariſh of S. Alhallows Barkin, in the Ward of the Tower of London; and ſo Time out of Mind hath been, and of right ought to be. And that the City hath had, and ought to have, the Juriſdiction thereof. Wherein they are likewiſe diſturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

3. Item, That the whole Ground and Soil, called the Tower Hill, without the Poſtern Gate, being Parcel of Eaſt Smithfield, is the City's, and within the Liberties, Suburbs, and Freedom of the City: And that the City hath had, and ought to have, the Profits and Juriſdiction thereof. Wherein they are likewiſe diſturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

4. Item, Where Mr. Lieutenant holdeth Plea in the Court of the Tower, for all Matters of Debt, Treſpaſſes, &c. be the ſame never ſo great, the Truth is, that that Court is only a Court Baron, and no Court of Record: And no Plea ought there to be holden for any other Matter, than may ordinarily be holden in the Court Baron at the Common Law.

5. Item, There be Exactions unjuſtly required and taken of Victuallers, bringing Victuals, Fuel, and other Things by Water to the City; which are taken by the Officers of the Tower, in the Name of Prizage, directly contrary to the Liberties of the City granted by her Majeſty's Progenitors, and confirmed by her Majeſty.

6. Item, There be Exactions unjuſtly required and taken at the common Watergate, near the Tower, of Citizens and others bringing Joiners Ware, and other Stuff over the Water, from Southwark, and other Places; which was ever wont to be free, and no ſuch Exactions uſed to be taken there.

7. Item, There be other Exactions alſo demanded and taken of Poor and others, for drying of Cloaths, whiting of Cloths, and ſuch like, both within and without London Walls; which was alſo wont to be free, and no ſuch Exactions uſed to be taken.

There was another Paper, entitled,

A Brief Note or Abſtract of Proofs, on the Part of the Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, touching the Differences between the Lieutenant and them.

The Contents whereof were theſe:

I. Concerning the Poſtern. It appears by divers Accounts, beginning Anno 32 Edward I. and ſo continuing till Anno 7. Henry VIII. That the Maior and Commonalty of London did repair the Poſtern; and provided Locks and Keys for it, and ſcowred the Ditch there, to their great Charge. That it was called ſometime Poſterna apud Turrim; ſometime juxta Turrim, and ſometime, the Poſtern in the Tower Ditch.

Item, That they appointed Keepers of it, [the Poſtern Gate] as all other Gates of the City; and in Time of Danger, appointed Men to guard it. And they ſometimes gave Charge to theſe Keepers, that they ſuffered not Leprous Perſons to enter into it; Viz. 5. Edward II. and 19. Edward III.

In the 29th of Henry VIII. there was made a Preſentment by the Wardmote Inqueſt of London, That the Dwellers there were common Bawds; and that they lodged ſuſpicious Perſons; uſing theſe Words, The Poſtern within our Ward.

The Lieutenant of the Tower, in Anſwer to this, ſaid, That the Citizens had a Poſtern, but it was not this now in queſtion, but a Poſtern in another Place further to the North in London Wall. To which the City replied, That by all Proofs, the Poſtern which the City had, muſt be a Place of Building and Habitation: But the ſuppoſed Place never was but a Bulwark of Stone; which ſome few Years paſt was taken down, as was teſtified by Witneſſes. Again; the Poſtern which the City had, muſt be a Place of common Paſſage in and out of the City; which the ſuppoſed Poſtern never was, nor never could be. For it was an Entry into the Bulwark now decayed. And the great Tower Ditch lieth along to it: Which could be no Paſſage, nor never was, by Bridge or otherwiſe.

Alſo, it muſt be at the Tower Ditch, as the Evidence doth plainly appear; which the ſuppoſed Place is not.

Moreover, Mr. Lieutenant did make no Proof for the Poſtern, but only ſince K. Edward the IVth's Time; and that only a Proof of Poſſeſſion; viz. That they have Leaſed it, and held ever ſince. Whereas indeed, the Controverſy hath been as old between the City and them at the leaſt. And therefore their Poſſeſſion, no quiet Poſſeſſion. And ſo great and old an Adverſary as the Lieutenant of the Tower being in Poſſeſſion, is not eaſily gotten out; eſpecially ſhadowing himſelf under Colour of defending the Queen's Right.

II. Touch-

The Soil of Tower Hill.

II. Touching the Soil of the Tower Hill, both within and without the Poſtern.

That it was proved in the Cities behalf from time to time. They have amended the Way on the Hill within the Poſtern, and erected and amended the Scaffold, Gallows, and the Gibbets there. And when ſome other Perſons, Anno 8. Ed. 4. erected Gallows there, the King by his Proclamation diſclaimed in it, and commanded it ſhould not be taken in derogation of the Franchiſes, Liberties, and Privileges of the City. That it was not until the 6. Ed. 4. they did leaſe Gardens here, and received Rents for the ſame. That in that Year of K. Edward IV. they granted the Queen certain Grounds at Tower Hill near the Poſtern, to build a Chapel upon; and from thence the Rents of the City's Gardens ceaſed; and the Queen's Majeſty holdeth the Grounds to this Day.

That Preſentments have been made before the Coroner of London, touching the Death of Men on Tower Hill, and in the Tower Ditch, naming each Place in ſome Pariſh in London.

That the Pariſhioners of Barkin in the Tower Ward, London, had uſed in their Perambulation to compaſs Tower Hill within the Poſtern.

That the Sheriffs of London have uſually received Priſoners out of the Tower, at a Stone near Outergate or Bulwark. At which Place the Liberties of the City reached; but by Order of ſome of the Lieutenants of the Tower that Stone was taken away.

Where the Victualling Office now ſtands.

That touching the Tower Hill without the Poſtern, it appeared in 19. Ed. 2. that the City was at charge to make a Ditch there at the Poſtern. That in the 13. R. 2. the Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens, ſold to the Abbot of Graces, (which is at the furtheſt Part of the ſaid Tower Hill toward the Eaſt) two waſte Pieces of Ground, lying on Tower Hill on the Weſt Part of the Abby. That divers ancient Preſentments had been made within London, of Encroachments committed in that Place, in 21. H. 7. and in 21, and 22. H. 8. That the Watering Place at the End of the Tower Ditch next to the Poſtern was defective for want of Rails; and that the Reparation belonged to the Chamber of London. It appeared by ancient Accounts, that the Tower Ditch, without the Poſtern, and certain Vaults and Sewers near the Poſtern, were cleanſed at the Charge of the City. And that at this Day,* and Time out of Mind, the City held and Leaſed out divers Gardens lying upon the Poſtern, where Houſes were then lately built.

* When this Controverſy was in Hand, which was in Elizabeth's Reign.

III. Touching the Watergate. In 3. Ed. 4. it was by Act of Common Council appointed, to be one of the Places where Ruſh Boats ſhould be brought for Sale of Ruſhes.

The ſame Watergate, and the Places near joining to it, had from time to time been paved at the Charge of the City.

Now to underſtand the Pleas on both Sides, here ſhall follow

The Lieutenant of the Tower, his Anſwer to the Cities Breviate.

That the City by their firſt Article challenged a Poſtern ſituate, as in their own Records is ſpecified, ſometimes juxta, ſometimes prope, ſometime apud Turrim. Which proveth, that the Precinct of the Tower Liberty ſhould extend to the Poſtern; but aſſigned no certain Place where the ſaid Poſtern was ſeated.

That the Second and Third Articles made nothing to their Title For that they made no direct Proof where that Poſtern ſtood, other than the Poſtern deſcribed in their ancient Map; which is moſt probable to be the Poſtern, whereunto they did make their Challenge.

Their Preſentments in Wardmote can give them no Title to the Queens Soyl.

It is not confeſſed, that the City had a Poſtern near the Poſtern now in Queſtion: And it is abſolutely denyed, that any Poſtern ſhould be a common Paſſage; but in the right Nature ought to be as a ſmall Sally only, to view the outward Part of the Wall and the Ditch; or for ſome privy way of Paſſage along the Ditch in time of Danger.

To all their Allegations it is replyed, that their Proofs, being only out of their own Manuſcripts and Memorials, are not of Force ſufficient to diſinherit any Subject of his juſt Poſſeſſion and Title, much leſs her Majeſty.

The Mark-ſtone.

As for the Mark Stone, where the Sheriff uſed to receive the Priſoner, thus it is anſwered; The Stone where they would infer to be the City Boundary, was no Bound Stone but a Looſe Stone. And the Boundaries of London had always the City Arms, or other Mark ſet on them, which this had not, neither could have, being ſo ſmall.

Their Fee'd Chronicler, Mr. Stow, in ſetting out the Boundaries of the Liberty of Cree Church within Aldgate, lately ſold by the Lord Thomas Howard to the City, doth abuttal it thus, viz. From Aldgate unto the Gate of the Bailiffs of the Tower, called Congate, and all the Lane called Chick Lane, &c. by this appeareth, that the Tower had a Poſtern and a Gate next unto Eaſt Smithfield. Which can be no other but the Tower Poſtern, now in her Majeſties Poſſeſſion.

The King's Mudwall by the Tower.

Vid. Lib. A. Fol. 15. b.

In the 9. Ed. 2. the Maior of London, John Giſors, and Citizens, ſubmit themſelves to the King's Pleaſure, for breaking down the King's Mudwall, over againſt the outward Part of the King's Tower. And in the 10th Year of the ſaid King they paid a Fine of a Thouſand Marks for the Offence, and repaired the Wall.

Herbage without the Tower.

For Herbage of the Place without the Tower, there was anſwered unto the King upon an Account in the 16. Ed. 2. for one Year, 3*s.* 6*d.* And in 29. Ed. 2. Pro Herbagio unius placee extra Poſterram veterem, v. Sol. i. e. For Herbage of a Place without the old Poſtern, Five Shillings.

Eaſt Smithfield.

De ſiccatione pellium in Eaſtſmithfield, nichil hoc anno, de eo quod propter perturbationem hominum Civitatis commmotam, nichil inde levari potuerit, i. e. Concerning drying Pells in Eaſtſmithfield nothing this Year; for nothing could be levied thence by reaſon of a Diſturbance raiſed by the Citizens.

Anno 20. Ed. 2. uſque ad annum primum. Ed. 3. xi. li.

De Herbagio placee extra Poſternam, ſeu de pellibus ſiccandis ſuper placeas in Eſtſmithfield extra portam ejuſdem turris, non reſpond. temp. predict.

Anno 2. Ed. 3. xil.

S. Mary Graces.

The Free Chapel of S. Mary Graces is abuttailed by Record to lie next the Tower of London, 25. Ed. 3. 36. Hen. 3.

The King granted to the Abbot of S. Mary Graces juxta Turrim, all his Tenements in the Pariſh of S. Buttolphs without Aldgate, between the Place called The Tower Hill and Eaſt Smithfield on the North Part, and a green Place of the King's Land there on the South Part. 36. Ed. 3.

Fair on Tower Hill.

The King granted to the Maſter, Brothers, and Chaplain, and Siſters, of St. Katharines, that they for ever ſhould have one Fair upon Tower Hill over againſt the Abby of Graces, upon the King's Ground, in all Places thereof, 20. Hen. 6.

Bounds of the Tower Liberty, taken by Inqueſt, 27. H. VIII.

It was preſented by the Inqueſt, ſworn before Sir Anthony Kyrgeſton, Knt. High Conſtable of the Tower, that the King's Ground, and Liberty of the Tower, did begin at the Watergate next the Ramſhead in Petty Wales; and ſo ſtretched North unto a Mudwall called Pykes Garden, now being Raſe Johnſons, on this Side the Crutched Friars; and ſo ſtrait Eaſt unto the Wall of London, with Nine Gardens above the Poſtern, and above the Broken Tower, right unto the midſt of Hog Lane End; and ſo ſtrait unto the Thames. And ſo ſix Foot without the Stairs at the Eaſtgate of the Tower towards St. Katharines, 27 H. 8.

Precinct of the Tower.

By all which it appears, that the Precinct of the Tower begins at the Tower Dock, and extends unto the End of Towerſtreet; and ſo is deſcribed to lye Juxta Barking Church on the Weſtſide; Juxta Crutched Friars on the North; Juxta S. Mary Graces, and St. Katharines on the Eaſt. Juxta can have no other Conſtruction but conjunctim; ſo as there cannot be any Thing Interpoſitum, i. e. put between. And therefore London is ſecluded to have any Soil or Liberty between Barking Church, and Crutched Friars, St. Mary Graces, and St. Katharines.

Add this concerning the Extent of the Maior and Cities Cognizance of Crimes done hereabouts: that there is a Roll in the Tower Records, viz. That Tranſgreſſions done infra Portam exteriorem, i. e. beneath the Outer Gate of the Tower, be not drawn before the Maior and Sheriffs of London. Pro Willimo. Firchirſeld.

St. Peter's Church in the Tower.

But now to look within the Tower; the firſt Place that with deference to Holy Things is to be regarded is the Church; the Place appropriated for the Inhabitants of the Tower and Liberties to reſort to for Divine Worſhip.

The Pariſh of St. Peter's in the Tower.

The Tower is a Pariſh of it ſelf, and the Church is called S. Peter's ad Vincula within the Tower. And it is ſaid ſometimes to be the Rectory, ſometimes the Chappelry of S. Peter's. The Bounds are all the Compaſs of the Tower, and it hath ſome Territories without, as Little Tower Hill; which was therefore called, The King's Soil of Little Tower Hill; adjoining to which was a Place called, The King's Waſt of Roſemary Lane or Hog Lane. But what are the Boundaries of the Pariſh, and of the Tower, hath been an old Controverſy, between the Magiſtrates of the City, and the Officers of the Tower. The antient Tithes and Benefits belonging to the Rector of this Church, appears in Part by an old Record, 8. H. 5. Pro Joanne Salmonby Rectore Capelle in Turre, &c. whereby is granted to him 60*s*, Rent, and the Appurtenances in Candlewick Street, London, for and towards his Subſiſtance 38*s*. 8*d*. for that Tenement on Tower Hill and Little Wales, 58*s*. per Annum; from the Hoſpital of St. Katharines, 10 Mark per Annum, paid by the Couſtable of the Tower; and 20*s*. per Annum of his good Will; 13*s*. per Annum from the Maſter of the Mint; and of every Artificer and Stipendiary a certain Tithe, out of their Wages and Stipends. This Church is commonly called St. Peters, in the Tower, and antiently called The Free Chapel of St. Peter's in the Tower. The Incumbent of it was called the Rector of St. Peter's. Several Chaplains alſo belonged to it, to perform Sacred Offices. All which were preſented by the King.

The Tithes.

Pat. 8. H. 5. m. 5.

It had a Rector and Chaplains.

Thus in 21. Ed. 4. the Rectory was granted to William Fitz Herbert, Clerk, by Patent for Term of his Life. K. Edward III. ſeems to have been the Founder. For it appears by the Tower Records, that in the 28th of his Reign, for the Rector and three Chaplains, there appointed by the King, he granted certain Rents, at a certain Cuſtom of Stabotes or Stalbotes, which were a kind of Fiſher Boats. And two Years after, to wit, in the 30th of his Reign, he added two Chaplains more. And for the Maintenance of the Rector, and five Chaplains of this St. Peter's, there were granted by the King certain Allowances to be paid for ſome Tenements in London, and at Tower Hill and Petty Wales. And moreover, Fees of the Conſtable, and of the Officers, and of the Moneyers. And in the 36th of the ſame K. Edward the Founder, he granted a Chaplainſhip. Conceſſ. Tho. de O. unam perpetuam Capellaniam ſive Cantariam, i. e. "To "Thomas de O. one perpetual Chaplainſhip, or "Chantry in the Chapel there. And laſtly, I find 27. H. 6. a Confirmation of the King's Grants and Donations to the Rector there.

What this Church was in former time.

This Church, no doubt, was formerly very large and ſpacious, ſince the Kings uſed to repair hither ſometimes to their Devotions. In Henry the IIId's Time, here were Stalls for the King and Queen: And it had two Chancels belonging to it, viz. the Chancel of St. Peter, and another Chancel of which St. Mary was Tutelary. It was Adorned alſo with Mary and her Shrine, and with the Images of St. Peter, St. Nicholas, and St. Katharine. This and more we learn from a Letter mandatory of the King to the Keeper of the Tower Works, in the 25. Hen. 3. Anno 1241, for the Repair and further Adorning of this Church: Which ran to this Tenor:

For the Repair of S. Peter's.

Inſtead of Columns on each Side of this Monument are the Figures of two great Guns Erected. And underneath, the Repreſentation of a Ship in the Sea under Sail.

But there is another more antient than any before mentioned, viz. of Cholmondley, ſometime Lieutenant of the Tower in the time of K. Henry VII. and his Wife's. His Figure is in Armor; and hath a Collar gilded (which ſeems to be a Collar of SS.) about his Neck, and a Roſe hanging before. Upon the Edges of the Stone the Figure lies upon, is this Inſcription; Jacent Corpora Richardi Cholmondeley Militis, & Dominæ Eliſabethæ conjugis ſuæ. Qui --------. Quorum aiabus Deus propitietur. Amen.

This Tomb ſtood formerly in the middle of the Church; but hath been removed to the Side againſt the North Wall.

There was lately a fair Monument erected at the Eaſt End of the Chapel without, for William Bridges, Eſq; Surveyor General of the Ordinance, the firſt Year of King George.

St. John's Chapel in the White Tower.

Beſides this Chapel or Church of St. Peter, there was another Chapel, which was that in the White Tower, of more private Uſe to the Kings and Queens, when they reſided in the Tower. This aſcends by a great many Steps. It is darkſome, and venerable for the Pillars, which are very Antique, and of the plaineſt Order, and the Capitals of them different. Now it is only uſed for repoſiting the old Records, where they lye in Duſt and Confuſion: But of late the Houſe of Lords addreſſed to her late Majeſty Q. Anne, to give order, that they may be carefully looked over, and digeſted in Order and preſerved, being many of them of great Uſe and Behoof; which the Queen accordingly took particular care of, and committed the Management of the ſame to that Learned and Worthy Antiquary, Will. Petyt, Eſq; late Keeper of her Records.

Order from K. Henry 3. for the Repairing of it.

But in antient Times, when this Place was made uſe of for a Chapel, care was taken for the Repairs thereof, as was for that of St. Peter's. And the ſame King Henry the Third in the ſame Year, Month, and Day, that he ordered the Repair of the ſaid St. Peter's, did the like for this Chapel of St. John's; for that was the Saint it was Dedicated to: As appears by this Record.

Dealbari etiam faciatis totam Capellam Sancti Johannis Evangeliſtæ in eadem Turri. Et fieri faciatis in eadem Capella tres feneſtras vitreas, unam ſcil. ex parte boreali cum quadam Mariola tenente puerum ſuum, reliquam in Parte Auſtrali [cum Imagine] de Trinitate; & tertiam de Sancto Johanne Apoſtolo & Evangeliſta in eadem parte Auſtrali. Et depingi faciatis patibulum & Trabem ultra Altare ejuſdem Capel. bene & bonis coloribus. Et fieri faciatis & depingi duas Ymagines pulchras, ubi melius & decentius fieri poſſint in eadem Capell. Unam de Sancto Edwardo tenente anulum, & donante & tendente Scto. Johan. Evangeliſte, &c.

That is: 'And that ye cauſe the whole Chapel 'of St. John Evangeliſt in the ſaid Tower to be 'Whited. And that ye cauſe three Glaſs Win'dows in the ſame Chapel to be made; to wit, 'one on the North ſide, with a certain little Mary 'holding her Child; the other on the South Part 'with the Image of the Trinity; and the Third, 'of St. John the Apoſtle and Evangeliſt on the 'ſame South Part. And that ye cauſe the Croſs 'and the Beam [i. e. the Rood] beyond the Altar 'of the ſame Chapel, to be Painted well and 'with good Colours. And that ye cauſe to be 'made and painted two fair Images, where more 'conveniently and decently they may be done 'in the ſame Chapel, one of St. Edward holding 'a Ring, and giving and reaching it out to 'St. John Evangeliſt, &c. ſignifying perhaps thereby that King to be the Founder of that Chapel; and this the Ceremony in thoſe Days of the Dedication of holy Places to the Saints.

Of the Governor and principal Officers of the Tower.

Conſtable of of the Tower.

J. S.

THE firſt and chief Officer of the Tower of London is called the CONSTABLE: Whoſe Place is of high Honour and Reputation, as well as of great Truſt. Many Earls, and one a Duke, have been Conſtables of the Tower. I ſhall not (nor perhaps is it poſſible to) ſet down an exact Liſt of them. Who the Four firſt were, Stow hath left on Record. I ſhall add a few more; and particularly ſhall preſerve the Memory of two or three of later Times; and the rather, having ſomething to ſay of them. There will be alſo intermixt other memorable Matters, as we paſs.

Othowerus

Godfrey Magraville
Earl of Eſſex
} Succeſſive Conſtables in King Stephen's Day.

Henry Fitz Aucher, Conſtable and Cuſtos in the Reign of Henry III.

Othon, Conſtable Anno 1263. in the ſame King's Reign.

Sir John de Sandwike: his Lieutenant was John de Blakebroke, before whom John Le Blount was ſworn Maior 31. Edward III.

John Darcy
John de Beauchamp
Robert Le Morle
Richard La Vache
Alan de Buxhil
Sir Tho. Murrieux
} Theſe Six are mentioned in a Patent of King Richard II.

John Holland, Duke of Exceſter, Conſtable in the Reigns of King Henry V. and K. Henry VI.

Robert Brakenbury, An. 1483. Ledger Book. K. Richard III.

Robert Brakerbury, Eſq; being a Truſty Friend of King Richard III. was conſtituted Conſtable of the Tower in his firſt Year, viz. 1483. where I obſerve two Errors in Hiſtorians. For both Stow in his Summary, and Baker in his Chronicle, name him Lieutenant, and the latter gives him the Title of Knight. Whereas I am well aſſured by an Original Ledger Book of that King's, that he had only the Qualification of Eſquire; and that he had the Office of Conſtable conferred on him. For thus it is recorded, Robert Brakenbury, Eſq; hath the Office given him of Conſtable of the Tower of London, for Term of Life. And in another Place, Robert Brakenbury, Conſtable of the Tower with an 100*l. for Term of Life, to be perceived of the Revenues of* Writtel, &c. This Brakenbury, beſide Conſtable, had other Offices in the ſaid Tower very beneficial, conferred on him by that King, to gratify and keep him tight and true to him: As the Office of Maſter and Operator of the Monies, as it was called, and the Office of Keeper of the Exchange within the Tower of London during his Life. And laſtly, the Office of keeping the Lions, with the Wages of 12*d. per Diem* for himſelf; and for the Meat of every Lion and Leopard 6*d.* by the Day. Beſides theſe, he had the Office of Conſtable of Tunbrigg Caſtle in Kent, with Ten Marks Fee, and the Stewardſhip of the Lordſhip of Ware, with the Fee of an 100 Shillings. He was alſo High Sheriff of Kent. Moreover, to the ſame Robert were granted the Manors of Mote Morden, Dething, Newingdon in Kent, and all other Lands, late the Earl Rivers, to the Value of 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* Yearly. And the Manors of Crawthory, and Coberede, late John Chenies, Robert Heins, and Humphrey Cheynes, and all other Lands and Tenements in Rumney Marſh, late the ſaid John's, Robert's, and Humphrey's, of the Value of 50*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* And the Manor of Glaſſenbury, and all other Lands and Tenements in the County of Kent, Surrey, and Suſſex, which were Walter Roberts's, to the Value of 40*l.*

Had other Offices in the Tower.

He ſurrenders the Keys of the Caſtle for one Night.

A Matter happened to this Conſtable ſomewhat rare, and ſeldom heard of. It was a Command iſſued once from the King to him, to ſurrender up the Keys of the Tower (which was in effect to give up all his Power) to Sir James Tyrrel, only for the Space of a Night, for the ordering of ſome ſpecial Matters there. Which was in truth, to murther the Two young Princes, Edward and Richard. Which the ſaid Conſtable, being privately dealt with about the Buſineſs, honourably declined. But Tyrrel, a Man of a more profligate Conſcience, undertook; and for that Purpoſe was in a ſort Conſtable of the Tower for that black Night. To this Knight the King was alſo very bountiful, and conferred on him many Lands and Offices, if they could but have made his Mind eaſy under the Weight of his Guilt. He had granted him the Office of Steward of the Lordſhips of Lanemtherry, Lantheſant, and Port Wenloke, &c. in Wales, and the Marcles, for Term of Life, with the Wages, Fees, &c. accuſtomed; and to make Officers in the ſaid Offices under him. Likewiſe the Office of the Caſtle of Dundagel, within the Dutchy of Cornwal, during Life, with Wages and Fees. Alſo, to be Superviſor of the Caſtle and of the Town of Guiſnes in Picardy, in the Abſence of the Lord Mountjoy. And allow me to add one thing more, John Dighton, one of the proſtituted Villains that actually ſmothered the Princes, was gratified with the Bailiſhip of Aiton, in the County of Stafford, with Wages accuſtomed during Life.

Sir Jam. Tyrel.

The Earl of Oxford Conſtable.

Brakenbury (though he had the Conſtableſhip for Life) yet in the Year 1585, that is, the firſt Year of Henry VII. he was diſcharged, and a Nobleman, the Earl of Oxford, ſucceeded in that Honourable Charge.

Sir Tho. Lovel Conſtable, and Sir Will. Kingſton.

Under the next King, Henry VIII. Sir Thomas Lovel was Conſtable, Sir Edmund Walſingham Lieutenant. And afterward, in the Time when Queen Anne Bolen was committed to the Tower, Sir William, [Anthony rather] Kingſton, was Conſtable, according to Hollingſhed.

Sir John Gage Conſtable.

E Theieri MSS.

In the Reign of King Edward VI. Sir John Gage, Knight, was Conſtable, a Man of great Quality, ſometime Comptroller of the Houſhold to King Henry VIII. afterward a Privy Counſellor to the ſame Prince. In the Month of October, 1552, were Articles and Ordinances eſtabliſhed by the King's Majeſty for Sir John Gage, Conſtable of the Tower, and Sir Edward Warner, Lieutenant, and the Yeomen of the Guard, with others appointed to give Attendance in the Tower of London, for the ſure keeping of the ſame, to be obſerved and kept upon Pains therein limited.

Earl of Lincoln Conſtable.

But toward the latter end of that Reign, he was diſcharged by the Intereſt of the Great Duke of Northumberland, who then did all; and Clinton, Earl of Lincoln, Lord Admiral, towards the very Concluſion of King Edward's Life, was placed there politickly by the ſaid Duke, in the Quality of Conſtable, ſuppoſing him his aſſured Friend and Creature, the better to bring to paſs the Pretenſion of Jane Grey to the Crown, married to the ſaid Duke's Son. But he was deceived; for that Earl ſoon turned about for the Lady Mary; and made his former Miſtreſs, Queen Jane, his Priſoner. And Queen Mary obtaining the Crown, put Sir John Gage into the Place of Conſtable again. But ſhe made Sir Thomas Bridges (Lord Chandois ſoon after) Lieutenant of the Tower.

Anno 1552, May 28. A Patent was granted to Sir Edward Bray, Knight, of the Conſtableſhip of the Tower, in Reverſion after the Death of Gage, by the annual Fee of 100*l.* durante Vitâ.

The

His Privileges. Ex Rotul. Claus. Anno 9. Regn. Reg. Richard II.

The Conſtable had many great Privileges time out of mind, due to him from the Ships of the Merchants of London, (as is mentioned in an ancient Record) as of every Ship laden with Wines coming into the Port of London, one Flagon of Wine before the Maſt, and another behind it: Of every Boat laden with Oiſters, Muſcles, or Cockles, coming to the City, una Manda, i. e. One Maund [a certain Meaſure] of every Boat laden Cirpis [ſcirpis, i. e. Bulruſhes] unum Bracticale [i. e. as much as a Man could take up in his Arms.] There belong alſo to him every Ship, Barge, or Boat, or any other Veſſel whatſoever, that ſhall be upon the Bank of the Thames, ſtraying between Graveſend and London Bridge, if no Perſon be found in the ſaid Veſſels. Every Swan or Cygnet which cometh or returneth upon the ſaid Banks in ſwimming, from the ſaid Bridge to Graveſend; every Beaſt that by Misfortune falleth into the Water of the Thames, ſwimming between the foreſaid Bounds, without the Protection of any. And the Stalboats, which are wont to belong to the Conſtable; and as yet, do belong, of which the Men of the City will not pay any thing, as they have accuſtomed to do.

K. Richard II. confirms his Privileges againſt the City.

But now by reaſon of certain Liberties and Franchiſes granted of late by King Richard II. unto the Citizens, they refuſed to allow theſe Duties unto the Conſtable. Whereupon the Conſtable, (whoſe Name was Sir Thomas Murrieux) petitioned the ſaid King. Who thereupon iſſued out his Proclamation, that notwithſtanding the Privileges granted to his City, yet he required theſe before mentioned Privileges of the Conſtable to ſtand, and be in force. And this was ratified by Parliament, as appears by this Inſtrument taken from the Original.

This was a Second Inſtrument granted to Sir Thomas Murrieux, ratificatory of his Privileges, as Conſtable of the Tower. Which was the Effect of a Petition he made to the King and Parliament, upon the impeaching thereof by the City. The former Grant of King Richard II. to the ſaid Conſtable, was in the Sixth of his Reign, that is, three Years before: And being an antient and valuable Piece of Antiquity, and expreſſive of the Privileges of old belonging to the chief Officer of the Tower, and directed to the Maior and Commons of the City, I ſhall here ſet it down at length, taken from an authentick Copy.

That is in Engliſh:

RICHARD, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland, to the Maior and Sheriffs of London, ſendeth Greeting. Foraſmuch as we have underſtood, that the Conſtables of our Tower of London, time out of mind, even to the Time now laſt paſt; and in particular John Darcy, John de Beauchamp, Robert Le Morle, Richard La Vache, and Alan de Buxhil, heretofore Conſtables of the ſaid Tower, have had the Cuſtoms, Pence and Profits underwritten, by Right belonging to the foreſaid Tower, and in quiet manner taken them by themſelves, or their Servants: To wit, Of every Boat laden with Ruſhes brought to the foreſaid City, ſuch a Quantity of Ruſhes to be laid upon Tower Wharf, as may be contained within a Man's Arms: Of every Boat accuſtomed to bring Oiſters, Muſcles, and Cockles, to the foreſaid City, one Maund, thence to be brought and laid upon the ſaid Wharf: From every Ship laden with Wines coming from Bourdeaux, or elſewhere, unto the foreſaid City, one Flagon before the Maſt, and another behind the Maſt: Whatſoever Ship, Barge, or Boat, or other Veſſel, which ſhall go looſe by reaſon of Storm or Wind, or the Ropes and Cordage being broke, ſhall float from London Bridge to Graveſend, or from thence to the ſaid Bridge, to be taken by the Conſtable of the ſaid Tower, or his Servants, and to be applied to the Uſe of the ſaid Conſtable: What Swans ſoever coming under the ſaid Bridge towards the Sea, or from the Sea toward the ſaid Bridge; all manner of Horſes, Oxen, Cows, Hogs and Sheep, which have fallen from the ſaid Bridge into the Water of Thames; which the foreſaid Conſtable, or his Servants, may take any ſuch like Creature ſwimming thorow the middle of the ſaid Bridge to the foreſaid Tower; which the ſame Conſtable or his Servants aforeſaid have taken: Of every Foot of ſuch like Creature feeding within the Ditch of the ſaid Tower, One Penny: Every Cart empty, or laden, which ſhall fall into the aforeſaid Ditches, as a Forfeiture or Fee of the ſaid Conſtable: And that the foreſaid Conſtables, as well thoſe before named as others, have uſed and enjoyed the Uſages underwritten, from the Time beforeſaid; to wit, that no Cart, empty or laden, ought to come from the End of the Street called Petty Wales, upon the ſaid Tower Hill, nor near the foreſaid Ditch, to the High Street called Towerſtreet, unleſs it be taken and brought within the ſaid Tower: And that no Cart ſhall paſs beyond the Bridge between the Ditch of the ſaid Caſtle, and the Ditch of the Hoſpital of St. Katharines, without the Licence of the Conſtable of the ſaid Tower; and if it do, and break the Bar, that Cart ought to be brought within the ſaid Tower, and to make Satisfaction for the Tranſgreſſion, according to the ſaid Conſtable's Will.

WEE, willing to maintain all and ſingular the Rights and Liberties of our Tower aforeſaid, that they periſh not, or be unlawfully taken away, command you, that you permit our beloved and loyal Sir Thomas Murrieux, now Conſtable of the Tower, to take and have the Cuſtoms, Pence and Profits by himſelf and his Servants in Form aforeſaid, and to uſe and enjoy the foreſaid Uſages freely, and without any Impediment, as he ought to take and have ſuch Cuſtoms, Pence and Profits, and to uſe and enjoy the beforeſaid Uſages; and he and all other Conſtables of the ſaid Tower have reaſonably accuſtomed to take and have thoſe Cuſtoms, Pence and Profits, and to uſe and enjoy the foreſaid Uſages from the Time beforeſaid. And that by no means neglect this. Witneſs my ſelf, at Eltham, the XVI. Day of Novemb. in the Sixth Year of our Reign.

By the KING.

It agrees with the Record.

This cauſed the Struggle between the City and the Conſtables and Lieutenants of the Tower for a long Time, till King James I. ſettled this Matter in favour of the City.

Injunſtions to to Conſtables of the Tower, Tower Rec.

I find certain Injunctions given the Conſtables by former Kings. In 11. Henry III. that King iſſued out his Command to the Conſtable of the Tower, to compel thoſe that brought Fiſh to ſell in Ships to London, and ſtayed beyond London Bridge, viz. on that Part of the Tower of London, to bring the ſaid Fiſh [uſq; ad Hetham Reginæ] to Queenhith, there to be ſold, as hath been accuſtomed.

C. 10. H. III. M. 14.

And the Year before, Quod ducet piſcem venientem ap. London ad Ripans Reginæ vendendum.

The Conſtable of the Tower his Power extended to the Five Ports, and to arreſt their Ships in the Thames, if there were occaſion. Thus a Precept was given forth to him in the 9th of Hen. III. to arreſt thoſe Ships in a Time of Dearth of Corn, to prevent the Tranſport of it. The Subſtance of the Writ was, De arreſtando naves quinque Portuum in Tameſia de Blado non carriando niſi ad Portus Regni.

In the 52. Hen. III. the King commanded the Conſtable to permitt the Abbot of Weſtminſter, cariare buſcam, blada, & alia Victualia tam per terr. quam per aquam, uſq; ad Abbiam predict. ita quod nulla inde fiat priza ad opus Regis, i. e. to carry Bruſh or Underwood, Corn, and other Victuals, as well by Land as by Water, unto the ſaid Abby: So that no Prizal be made for the King's Uſe.

In the 14th Edward II. there were Letters Patents for making Allowances to the Conſtables of the Tower, pro vadijs Priſonator. Regis ibm. i. e. for the Wages of the King's Priſoners there, viz. For a Knight 2*d.* a Day, and for an Eſquire, 1*d.* a Day.

In the 38th Edward III. That the Conſtable of the Tower ought to repair the Defects in the Water, or the Banks thereof, running from Ware to Waltham, and ſo to London. This was the River Ley.

Salary and Fees of the Conſtable in Queen Mar Reign. MSS. penes m

Now theſe were the Fees of the Conſtable, as it was ordered by K. Philip and Queen Mary, October 12. in the ſecond and third Years of their Reign. The Conſtable ſhall have of their Majeſties at the Receipt of the Exchequer for his Entertainment the Yearly Fee or Wages of an 100*l.* and one other 100*l.* by the Year for the Diet of poor Priſoners that have not wherewith of their own to pay for their Diets. So that the ſaid poor Priſoners may be examined within ſeven Days after their coming to his Cuſtody, and diſcharged again from his Cuſtody within ſeven Days next after they have been examined.

The Prerogatives, Duties, and Privileges belonging to the Conſtable, and other Officers there.

What to ceive of ſu as are co mitted Pri ners.

Firſt, The ſaid Conſtable ſhall have of every Duke, if there be any committed by their Majeſties unto the ſame Tower, for the Suit of his Irons 20*l.* And for a Marquis 16*l.* And for the Board of every ſuch Duke or Marquis Weekly, 3*l.* 10*s.* And for the Chaplains Board of every ſuch Duke or Marquis every Week 6 s. 8 d. And for every of his Gentlemen 6 s. 8 d. And for every of his Yeomen waiting upon him 5 s. before his Attainder; and after his Attainder, as their Majeſties ſhall appoint.

Item, The ſaid Conſtable ſhall have for every Earl and Viſcount, for the Suit of his Irons, 20 Marks. And for their Board every Week, 46 s. 8 d. And for the Gentlemen and Yeomen, as in the Duke's Diet before the Attainder; and after, at their Majeſties Will.

Item, The ſaid Conſtable ſhall have for every Baron and Lord, of the Degree as the younger Son of a Duke or Marquis, and for a Knight of the Garter, for the Suit of Irons, 10 l. And for his Board weekly, 35 s. And for his Gentleman and Yeoman, as before.

Item, The aforeſaid Conſtable ſhall have for every other Knight or Gentleman, above One Hundred Pounds Lyving, for Suit of his Irons, 5 l. And alſo for his Board weekly, 23 s. 4 d. And for every of his Gentlemen and Yeomen, as before.

Item, The ſaid Conſtable ſhall have of every Gentleman of Livelode of an Hundred Pounds by the Year, and under, for the Suit of his Irons, 40 s. And his Board weekly, 17 s. 6 d. And other Men not having Lands and Poſſeſſions, and yet having Goods ſufficient to find themſelves, for Suit of Irons, 20 s. And for their Week's Board, 13 s. 4 d.

Item, All other to live of the Houſe; except their Majeſties appoint the ſame a better Diet by Warrant.

The Porter's Allowance.

Item, The Porter ſhall have of every Priſoner, commanded by the King and Queen's Majeſties for Treaſon to the ſaid Tower, his uppermoſt Garment, or agree with him for it.

Item, He ſhall have of every Perſon delivered out of the Tower, 5 s.

Item, It is ordered, That the Conſtable ſhall no more take the Bedding, Goods and Plate, or Money of any Priſoner attainted, or not attainted; except that he may ſtay the ſame for the Time that he be anſwered and contented for his Fees and Diets, after the Rate aforeſaid. And except that upon the Attainder of every ſuch Priſoner, the ſaid Conſtable ſhall have their wearing Apparel and Bedding of the ſame Priſoner ſo attainted, and the Plate and Jewels of the ſame, if any do remain, to be kept to their Majeſties Uſe.

e Fees va-

Theſe Orders were made out of the Queen's good Husbandry: For theſe Allowances to the Priſoners, were made for the moſt part out of the Princes Purſes. What a Regulation and Reduction of the Fees this was, may appear to him that ſhall compare this Note of Fees following, brought in by the Lieutenant in the Reign of King Edward the VIth, for the Duke of Norfolk, the Dutcheſs of Somerſet, and Edward Lord Courtney, Eldeſt Son to the Marquis of Exeter, executed; Viz.

Lieutenant of the Tower.

Of later Times, theſe Conſtables have been more rarely ſet over the Tower; (None, I think, thorough the long Reign of Queen Elizabeth;) but inſtead thereof, a Lieutenant (who was an Officer ſubordinate to the Conſtable and his Deputy) had the chief Government of this important Place; and therefore was ſometimes called the Conſtable's Lieutenant.

Lieutenants of the Conſtable. R c rd. Turr.

I meet with Two Lieutenants in former Times, who are ſaid in expreſs Terms to be the Lieutenants of the Conſtables; Viz. John Chauncy, Lieutenant of Holland, Duke of Exon, 31 Henry VI. and John Winwike, Lieutenant to the Conſtable of the Tower, 16 Edward III. To whom a Command came, to this Import:

Turr. London. Rex mandavit Johan. Winwike, Locumtenenti Conſtabulario ejuſdem, & W. L. Capital. Carpentar. ſuo, quod reduci fac. Ingenium ſuum magnum ab Sandwico uſque Turr. prædict. & ad Naves arreſtand. & capiend. pro Vectura, &c. ejuſdem. That is, Tower of London. The King hath commanded John Winwike, Lieutenant to the Conſtable of the ſame, and W. L. his Chief Carpenter, to bring back his great Engine [a Ship, I ſuppoſe] from Sandwich, to the Tower aforeſaid; both to arreſt Ships, and to take for Fraught, &c. of the ſame.

Cuſtodes of the Tower.

There were alſo in Times paſt, Cuſtodes, or Keepers, ſometimes ſet over the Tower: Who had chief Power and Government of it; but only the Title not ſo high as that of Conſtable.

Yet Henry Fitz Aucher, who was Conſtable of the Tower, had a particular Fee for keeping of the Tower, which was 50 l. per Annum; as tho' Conſtable and Cuſtos had been Two ſeveral and diſtinct Places. The Record runs, That this Henry Fitz Aucher, Conſtable of the Tower, be paid ad Kaiam Regis, i. e. at the King's Key, before the Tower, 20 l. 12 Henry III. and 50 l. per Ann. for keeping of the Tower, Anno 13 Henry III. And 14 Hen. III. it is recorded, That the Conſtable took 50 l. for the Cuſtody of the ſaid Tower.

Record. Turr.

The King granted the Keeping of his Tower, with the Appurtenances, and his City of London, to Thomas Ipgreve; unà cum Armatur. inſtaurand. & Victualib. ſuis, per Cirographum liberand. in the 52 H. III. Here was a Cuſtos both of the Tower and the City too.

Record. Turr.

Such another was Radulphus de Sandwich, in the 13th of Edward I. Turris London, cum Pertinentiis, commiſſa Rad. de Sandwico, quamdiu Domino Regi placuerit. Ita quod de Exitu inde proven. Regi reſpondeat ad Scaccarium. 13 Edw. I. Idem Rad. habet Cuſtodiam Civitat. London, ut ſupra. Et iterum, Anno 17.

Record. Turr.

Again; William Archbiſhop of York was Cuſtos of the Tower, 1 Edw. I. And there was Order for the Payment of a Hundred Pound for his Fee.

Theſe Cuſtodes, or Keepers, I find were often changed. For in the 3d of Edward I. the Keeping of the Tower was granted by the King to Anthony Beke, durante Beneplacito; as Philip Baſſet before had it. And he was to receive 100 l. per Annum for his ſaid keeping.

Again; the Cuſtody of the Tower of London was granted to John Cromwell, for Term of Five Years; and to take the Fees and Cuſtoms. And it is commanded to Thomas Walter, to deliver the ſame to him by Indenture, with the Appurtenances; together with the Arms, Victuals, and all other Things and Priſons being there; 1 Edward III.

Rec. Turr.

Again; the Cuſtody of the Tower was granted to William de Monte Acuto, or Mountague, for Life, after the Death of John de Crombwell, who now hath it for Term of Life, 9 Edw. III. And it was granted pro Michael de la Beche: Et Anno 20, pro Johan. Darcy.

Rec. Turr.

And for the Repairing of the King's Key, near the Tower of London, it was commanded to the Keeper of the King's Foreſt of Windſor, That he cauſe John Crombwell, Keeper of the foreſaid Tower, to have 300 Palos de Alneto, i. e. Pales, or Poles from the Alderwood, in the foreſaid Foreſt. And it is commanded to the Sheriff of Berks, That he cauſe the ſaid Poles to be felled, and to be carried unto the Tower of London, out of the Iſſues of the County. And this for the Cuſtodes of the Tower To return to the Lieutenants.

Sir Edward Warner Lieutenant.

The firſt Lieutenant under Queen Elizabeth, was Sir Edward Warner; who had been alſo in that Place under K. Edward VI. In the Year 1562, he was deprived of this Truſt, and committed to Cuſtody, upon the coming together of the Earl of Hertford and the Lady Katharine Grey; who had privately concluded of Marriage together, without the Queen's Conſent: And ſo were put into ſundry cloſe Priſons, not to come at one another. But they corrupted their Keepers. This the Lieutenant rued; otherwiſe an honeſt and worthy Man.

Sir Owen Hopton.

The next Lieutenant of the Tower, was Sir Owen Hopton, preferred to this Place by the Intereſt of the Lord Treaſurer. He was an active, and brave-ſpirited Man. And yet I find him complained of for ſome Neglects in his Truſt, in the Year 1572; being a Year of great Terror to the Engliſh Nation; fearing ſome Maſſacre, or Inſurrection, or Violence to be offered the Queen's Perſon. For in this Year happened the bloody Maſſacre of the Proteſtants in France, which aſtoniſhed this Kingdom. In this Year were Two great Peers cut off, the Duke of Norfolk, and the Earl of Northumberland, for Treaſon and Rebellion. The Queen alſo fell ſick of the Small Pox. There were alſo great Apprehenſions from the Queen of Scots, and her Party; ſhe being now a Priſoner in England. Theſe Uneaſineſſes and Fears made the People concerned for the Preſervation of the Tower; and great Complaints were made to the Lords of the Council againſt Hopton, and of Matters in and about the Tower. As, That the ſaid Lieutenant ſhewed the Wardens that they were perjured, if they did not firſt ſhew him of all Treaſons, Conſpiracies, or any other like Matters, that they ſhould know or hear of, before they uttered the ſame to any of the Queen's Majeſty's Council. Whereupon he took an Oath of all ſuch Yeomen, as came of late to ſerve there under him.

Complaints againſt him.

That the Priſoners had much more Liberty to walk and meet upon the Leads of Cold Harbour, and to go one to another; and alſo to ſend their Minds and Letters to their Friends, as they ſhould think good: Which had not heretofore been accuſtomed to be ſuffered. Which Liberty they had, by reaſon of ſuch needy Perſons as Mr. Lieutenant had appointed to be their Keepers: To whom he gave very little Wages to maintain them.

That there ſhould be Sevenſcore Gunners belonging to the Tower; whereof there wanted a great Number. And that the moſt Part of them that took Wages, were unſkilful. So that if the Queen's Majeſty ſhould ſtand in need of Service, ſhe ſhould be diſappointed. And beſides, that many of them were Papiſts.

That the Clerk of the Ordnance was a very earneſt Papiſt.

That there wanted the moſt Part of ſuch Warders, as ought to watch and ward, and to lye within the Tower: And the Hamlets did neither watch nor ward, according to their bounden Duties. For if the Tower Ditch ſhould be frozen, conſidering there were no better Order taken for the Defence of the ſame, and conſidering the State of the Time, and if Need ſhould ſo require, it might be in great Danger. Wherefore all the Yeomen ſhould be commanded, daily to wait, and to lye within the Tower every Night, for the Preſervation of the ſame: Seeing the Watches of London and S. Katharines were not kept as of late, but now moſt needful, until this Time be paſt.

It was likewiſe informed, That December the 29th, the Earl of Southampton ſtood leaping upon the Tower; his Wife being right over againſt him, on the other ſide of the Ditch. And when one Philip a Gunner ſeeing this, demanded, if this might be allowed, the Servants very angrily asked him, If he were therewithal offended?

That Commandment had been given by their Honours, That no great Ordnance ſhould be ſhot off at any time upon the Tower Wharf, or about the Tower; except it were only for the Queen; Notwithſtanding they continued ſhooting from Time to Time of great Pieces. Which Pieces were to be ſold, or elſe lent to divers Perſons, with the Queen's own Powder; conveyed by them out of the Tower in Barrels. That this Shooting utterly marred the Wharf, being ſore worn and ſhaken already; brake the Glaſs-Windows; looſed the Tiles of the Houſes newly repaired.

Further, That they did receive and diſcharge upon the ſame Wharf, divers Mens Stuffs, as Timber, Logs, Billets, Faggots, Rubbiſh, Hay, Straw, and all other Things; and carry and recarry the ſame with Cars and Carts. Which did greatly decay the Wharf, and wear the Queen's Cranes.

That they made a common Highway, with all manner of Carriages, from S. Katharines leading to the Minories: By reaſon whereof, the Way is greatly decayed; the Banks of the Tower Ditch ſunken, and the Ditch filled with Earth and Filth; whereas it was wont to be chained betwixt Two great Poſts. And likewiſe by the Tower Hill, there was another Chain with Two great Poſts by the Bulwark Gate, for the reſtraining all Carriages, ſaving only for the Queen. By reaſon whereof, the Banks there are greatly decayed, and the Ditch overcome with Earth by the Sufferance thereof.

And this was the Tenor of the Complaint made at this dangerous Juncture againſt the Lieutenant, and of the Information of Things amiſs pertaining to the Tower: Which I have the rather ſet forth at length, to let in the more Light into the State of this ſtrong Place in former Times.

Vindicates himſelf.

But the Lieutenant was not negligent to vindicate himſelf, by a Letter to the Lord Burghleigh, his Friend and Advancer; Vowing to God, that he ſerved her Majeſty the more dutifully and painfully, becauſe he was preferred by his Lordſhip, whom he loved and honoured: And deſcending to Particulars, he enumerated what he had done more than other Lieutenants before him.

Sir Michael Blount, Lieutenant.

Sir Owen Hopton continued Lieutenant a great while, till the Year 1590; when he delivered up to the Cuſtody of Michael Blount, Eſq; by Indenture bearing Date July the 6th, all the Priſoners of the Tower. He was ſoon after Knighted. This Gentleman was ſo ſenſible of the Honour and Truſt repoſed in him, and did ſo value himſelf for the Importance of his Place and Government, that about the Year 1594, he had this Communication with ſome of his intimate Friends in the Tower, (the Queen at that Time being reported to be ſick) That if God ſhould call her Majeſty, he held himſelf bound to obey no Counſellors in general nor particular; for that they were then no Counſellors, but private Men. But would keep the Place, until the Succeſſor were eſtabliſhed according to the Truth of his Title. And that he would permit none of the Officers of the Ordnance to enter into the Tower, unleſs they would take their Oath to take ſuch Part as he would take. For that the whole Charge was then in him. And for that he held divers of the Warders to be Knaves, he would turn them forth, and call the reſt before him; and ſuch as would not be ſworn to obey him, as by their Oath they ought to do, as he ſaid, he would turn them forth, and furniſh the Houſe with his own Friends. And by this Means, and having the Munition in his own Hands, he ſhould be able to arm more Men than Half the Realm beſide: And ſo be able to ſtrike a general Stroke, in ſwaying of the Matter according to the Truth of the Title. All this did Edmond Nevyl de Latymer, Eſq; teſtify before the Lord Cobham and Lord Buckhurſt, Two of the Privy Council appointed to examine him. He teſtified alſo, That the Lieutenant had often asked him his Opinion, how many Men would ſerve to keep the Tower; and what Courſe were beſt to take for the Victualling it? But theſe Things looking very ſuſpiciouſly, raiſed Jealouſies in the State againſt him; and he was brought into Trouble.]

The preſent State of a Lieutenant of the Tower.

R. B.

His Privileges.

As for the modern State of this primary Officer of the Tower, he is uſually a Perſon of great Worth and Fidelity; and by virtue of his Office, is to be in Commiſſion of the Peace for the Counties of Kent, Surrey and Middleſex. He is High Steward of a Court held within the Tower. He may refuſe an Habeas Corpus: He may give Protection to all Debtors belonging to the Tower, infra Regnum Angliæ. He hath the Privilege to take unam Lagenam, i. e. One Flagon, that is, Two Gallons and a Pint, ante Malum & retro, i. e. before the Maſt and behind, of all Wine-Ships that come. He is to be (as ſome hold) Cuſtos Rotulorum of the County of Middleſex: And he hath his Deputy. His Salary is 200 l. per Annum. The Perquiſites belonging to him are great. His uſual Fee for every Priſoner ſent to the Tower, is 20 l. And 3 l. a Week for an Earl; and 5 l. for a Knight. For a Baron, or a Degree higher, 50 l. at their Entrance: To whom the King allows weekly 10 l. Whereof Two Parts go to the Priſoner, and the Third to the Lieutenant, for Lodging and Diet. And 50 l. to the Lieutenant, upon the Priſoner's Diſcharge.]

A Room in the Lieutenant's Lodgings.

J. S.

In an upper Chamber in the Lieutenant's Lodgings, is an ingenious Device to deſcribe the Gunpowder Treaſon Plot, ſet up about that Time by Sir William Wade, Lieutenant of the Tower. The Monument conſiſteth of ſeveral Pieces of Marble, in Faſhion round, inlay'd with Inſcriptions on them; in the Middle whereof is a larger Stone. On the Extremities, ſeveral Coats of Arms of the Chief Nobility, as of Howard, Cecil, &c. It is ſcarcely legible, the Inſcription being almoſt worn out. In the ſame Room, is a fine lively Figure of the foreſaid King, with his Hat on, and, as it ſeems, very much reſembling him.

Gentleman Porter.

A Third Chief Officer of the Tower, is the Gentleman Porter: Who holds his Place by Patent; and at the Entrance of any Priſoner, hath for his Fee Veſtimenta Superiora, i. e. their upper Garments; or elſe a Compoſition is made for the ſame.

John de London in Edw. IIId's Time.

J. S.

I find this Office as ancient as the Times of King Edward the Third, and how much ancienter I cannot tell. For in the Tower Records, Mention is made in that King's Reign, Cuſtod. Portæ ejuſdem [i. e. Turris] conceſſ. Jo. de London; that is, of the Cuſtody of the Tower Gate, granted to Jo. de London.

Names of Gentlemen Porters.

In the Reign of K. Edward VI. Henry Web was Gentleman Porter. There were Four in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth; whoſe Names were, Mr. Chamberlain, (firſt, Porter under Queen Mary,) whoſe Deputy one Chriſtopher Southows ſeemed to be. Next to him, Sir William Gorge, Mr. Shelton, and laſtly, Mr. Worthington.

This Officer had allowed him a watching Gown.

This Officer, among the reſt of the Benefits of his Place in former Times, had allowed him yearly out of the King's Wardrobe, broad Cloth for a watching Gown; and ſo had the other Yeomen: As appears by this Extract out of King Edward's Book of Warrants: "A Warrant to Sir "Raſe Sadler, Knight, [He was Maſter of the King's Wardrobe] "to deliver to Henry Web, "Porter of the Tower of London, and to Fourteen Yeomen of the Chamber attending there, "and to every of them, Five Yards of broad "Cloth, of London Ruſſet, at 4 s. 1 d. the Yard, "for their watching Gowns.

Claimed the Benefit of the Ground in the Tower Liberty.

This Officer ſeemed to have a Right to the Benefit of the Ground within the Liberties of the Tower. For in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, he received Rents for many Edifices ſtanding thereon. Concerning which there happened a Controverſy between the Tenants and the Gentleman Porter. For we muſt know, that between the Years 1570 and 1580, (if I miſtake not) many Houſes and Tenements were built within the Liberties, ſome at the Poſtern Gate, ſome within the Bulwark, ſome without it, and others on Tower Wharf; where formerly were ſmall Shops, and Parcels of Ground encloſed. So that within the Space of Ten Years, were Forty Houſes, or more, built; beſides divers other Yards and Encloſures. For the pulling down which Yards, and laying open the Encloſures, an Order came from the Council. The Chief Landlord of theſe Tenements was the Gentleman Porter; who about this Year, viz. 1580, was Sir William Gorge: Between whom and ſome of the Builders, Agreement was made; They to allow him, beſides Fines, certain Conſiderations yearly, in Lieu of Rent. But at length Gorge being dead, and another (by Name, Mr. Worthington) ſucceeding in his Place, he required the Tenants to remove, or to come to new Terms with him: And ſo many of them did, rather than turn out.

Buildings within the Liberties.

Complaint by the Petty Landlords againſt the Gentleman Porter.

But the Builders and Petty Landlords found themſelves aggrieved hereat: For the Porter came upon the Occupiers, and took no notice of them: Whereupon, in the Year 1587, they made a Complaint to the Lord Treaſurer againſt him; "That they had builded ſundry Tenements "upon noiſome Places, in the Liberties of the "Tower, to their great Charge: But the preſent "Gentleman Porter, contrary to former Uſage, "had required them to depart, either to drive "the Petitioners to change their Habitations, “ or otherwiſe to get to himſelf great improved “ Rents. A Matter, which if permitted, would work “ the undoing of moſt of his Lordſhip's Orators. The Lord Treaſurer referred the Examination of this Buſineſs to one Necton, who underſtood by the ſaid Gentleman Porter, that he, as Lord, would not allow of any Petty Landlords, not ſuffering them to be Tenants to him; but only ſuch of the Tenants as were commorant Tenants to the Petty Landlords, quite excluding the Petty Landlords from him; and that upon theſe two Cauſes; the one, for that they did not dwell upon any of their Tenements; the other, that they had reſerved to themſelves far greater Rents than they paid to him, which he then minded to take to his own Uſe, as he found them improved; but yet he was willing to allow every Petty Landlord for their ſeveral Buildings, as much in reaſon as they by Proof had laid out.

Petition of the Tenants againſt the Petty Landlords.

This Petition of the Petty Landlords againſt the Gentleman Porter was ſeconded with another of the Tenants againſt the Petty Landlords. The Effect whereof was; “ That they complained, “ that the ſaid Landlords had moleſted them, and “ threatned daily to arreſt them for their Rents “ that they had then paid to the Gentleman “ Porter.

The Rents of the Gentleman Porter.

The Rents which the Gentleman Porter at this time received were as follows:

| | l. | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Of 26 Tenants within the Liberties of the Tower for Tenements and Shops, | 49 | 10 | 06 |
| Beſides, of the Petty Landlords, | 27 | 09 | 00 |
| And there remained to them, beſides this Payment to the Gentleman Porter, | 54 | 15 | 00 |

In the Particulars I obſerve, that the Yearly Rent of a Tenement ordinarily amounted to 20, 21, or 22 Shillings; and of a Shop 5 Shillings, or 6 Shillings 8 Pence, rarely 10 Shillings per Annum.

Conteſt between the Porter and the Queen's Bowyer about a Garden. MSS. *De Surr. pen. me.

The ſaid Worthington, Gentleman Porter held for his Garden a longiſh Plot of Ground, adjoining to that Part of the Tower called The Queen's Lodgings on the Weſt; on which bordered a leſs Piece of Ground, being the Garden of the Queen's Bowyer, whoſe Manſion Houſe was contiguous. The Bowyer contemporary with the ſaid Worthington, was named Bolt, who about the Year 1596, contended with him about this Garden, which he claimed a Right to by Vertue of the Queen's Letters Patents, aſſigning him, as chief Bowyer, a Manſion Houſe and a Garden, which was ſo bounded and abutted that he took the whole Plot, containing both the Gardens, to be his. And indeed the Words of the Patents granted to the chief Bowyer of the Tower by divers Princes ſucceſſively from Edward IV. to Q. Elizabeth, ſeemed to favour him againſt the Porter. In all which Patents the Words were, “ A certain Manſion within the Tower of London, with a Garden to the Manſion adjoining, and ſituate between the Tower called The round Tower, of the “ Artillery on the Weſt Part, and the Tower, called “ The King's Lodging on the Eaſt Part. Which took in the whole Plot of Ground, and included all the Porters Garden. However, the ſaid Worthington kept and challenged the greater Part of the ſaid Garden, being found divided from the other Part in the Time of Pykeman the Queen's Bowyer, immediate Predeceſſor to Bolt, and quietly poſſeſt and uſed by Mr. Chamberlain and Sir William Gorge, Gentlemen Porters, until the time of Mr. Shelton their next Succeſſor; with whom Bolt firſt contended for the ſame. This Matter at length came into the Exchequer; and the Lord Treaſurer Burghley, committed the Examination thereof to Richard Barkely and N. Raynberd, who made their Report of the ſame to him accordingly.

By the Teſtimony of the Witneſſes it appeared, that Pykeman (whoſe Patent bears Date Jan. 13. in the 10. of the Queen) enjoyed the whole Plot. And that in his Time Partitions were made partly by himſelf, and partly by Gorge the Gentleman Porter. That after his Death Bolt pulled down the Partition. But Shelton, that was Porter next after, laid Claim thereto, and made up the Partition; which Bolt pulled down again. The Suit depended at the Court within the Tower, till Bolt removed it into the Exchequer, and before the ſame was determined Shelton dyed. Other Witneſſes ſaid, that there was never a Bowyer heretofore before Bolt, that had the Poſſeſſion of that Part of the Garden the Gentleman Porter challenged; and that to their knowledge there never was any Claim laid thereto by any other Bowyer. What Iſſue this Buſineſs had I am ignorant.]

Gentleman Jaylor. R. B.

The Gentleman Jaylor is an Officer put in by the Lieutenant of the Tower. His Fee is 40 s. for a Gentleman, and 5 l. for a Knight.

There are likewiſe Forty Warders of the Tower; who are accounted the King's Domeſtick Servants; and are ſworn by the Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſties Houſhold, or by the Clerk of the Check. They were all to be habited with the ſame Caps and Coats as thoſe of the Yeomen of the Guard that attend the King.]

The Fees anciently. J. S.

This is a more modern State of the Officers of the Tower. For in a Paper of the Fees of all the Officers in the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's Reign, there were but 23 Warders, and no Gentleman Jaylor at all. Which I ſhall here exemplify from the Original Draught of the ordinary Charges of the Tower for one half Year, given into the Exchequer by Sir Edward Warner the Lieutenant, ſigned by his own Hand.

EDWARD WARNER.

The preſent Denomination of the Officers of the Tower and Hamlets.

But more lately, there is ſome Variation in the Names of theſe Officers of the Tower. And how theſe Officers, together with thoſe of the Tower Hamlets, were denominated and entitled, Anno 1701, may appear from the Account of the proclaiming of the late Queen Anne, viz.

The Right Honourable the Lord Lucas, Chief Governor of her Majeſty's Tower of London, and Lord Lieutenant of the Hamlets, thereunto belonging.

The Deputy Governor.
Chief Steward.
Deputy Lieutenant.
Juſtices of the Peace.
Gentleman Porter.
Tower Major.
Yeomen Warders.

High Conſtables of the Liberty and Hamlet, and all other Peace-Officers within his Lordſhips Juriſdiction.

Theſe all attended at the Proclamation of Queen Anne, Queen of England, &c. upon the Parade in the Tower, Tower Hill, White Chapel, Spittlefields, and Shadwel Market.

CHAP. XVI.

The Antiquity and firſt Foundation of the Tower. Its Buildings, Reparations and Improvements. The New Armoury.

HAVING thus conſidered the Government of this Royal Arſenal, our Curioſity will lead us to enquire into the Antiquity and firſt Founding of it. Which we ſhall therefore proceed to ſhew; and likewiſe the various Reparations and Addititions that have been made to it from time to time.

The Antiquity and Firſt Buildings.

Julius Cæſar reported the Founder.

It hath been the common Opinion, and ſome have written, (but of none aſſured Ground) that Julius Cæſar the firſt Conqueror of the Britains, was the original Author and Founder as well thereof, as alſo of many other Towers, Caſtles and great Buildings within this Realm. But (as I have already before noted) Cæſar remained not here ſo long; nor had he in his Head any ſuch Matter, but only to diſpatch a Conqueſt of this barbarous Country, and to proceed to greater Matters. Neither do the Roman Writers make mention of any ſuch Buildings Erected by him here.

In my Annals.

William the Conqueror built the White Tower, Anno 1078.

And therefore leaving this, and proceeding to more grounded Authority, I find in a fair Regiſter Book of the Acts of the Biſhops of Rocheſter, ſet down by Edmond of Hadenham, that William the Firſt (ſurnamed Conqueror) Builded the Tower of London; to wit, the great White and Square Tower there, about the Year of Chriſt 1078, appointing Gundulph, then Biſhop of Rocheſter, to be principal Surveyor and Overſeer of that Work; who was for that Time lodged in the Houſe of Edmere a Burgeſs of London. The very Words of which mine Author are theſe; Gundulphus Epiſcopus mandato Willielmi Regis magni præfuit Operi magnæ Turris London. Quo Tempore hoſpitatus eſt apud quendam Edmerum Burgenſem London. Qui dedit unum Were Eccleſiæ Roffen.

Ye have heard before, that the Wall of this City was all round about furniſhed with Towers and Bulwarks, in due Diſtance every one from other; and alſo that the River of Thames, with his Ebbing and Flowing, on the South ſide had ſubverted the ſaid Wall and Towers there. Wherefore, it is ſuppoſed, King William, for defence of this City, in Place moſt dangerous and open to the Enemy, having taken down the ſecond Bulwark in the Eaſt Part of the Wall from the Thames, Builded this Tower, which was the great ſquare Tower (now called the White Tower) and hath been ſince at divers Times enlarged with other Buildings adjoining, as ſhall be ſhewed hereafter.

Damaged by Tempeſt, and Repaired.
Will. Malmſb.
Matt. Paris.
J. London.

This Tower was by Tempeſt of Wind ſore ſhaken in the Year 1090, the Fourth of William Rufus [when the Chronicles ſpeak of the Roof of Bow Church taken off, and 600 Houſes in London overthrown.] But it was again by the ſaid Rufus and Henry I. repaired. They alſo cauſed a Caſtle to be builded under the ſaid Tower, to wit, on the Southſide toward the Thames. And alſo incaſtellated the ſame round about.

K. Will. Rufus, Polls the People for his Buildings about the Tower.
Hen. Huntingt. Libr. 6.

And the bearing of this expenſive Building put the ſaid K. William upon Exactions, as one of our Hiſtorians writes] William Rufus challenged the Inveſtiture of Prelates: he pilled and ſhaved the People with Tribute, eſpecially to ſpend about the Tower of London, and the great Hall at Weſtminſter.

The firſt Conſtables of the Tower.
They held Eaſtſmithfield, and made it a Vineyard.

[Othowerus, Acolinillus, Otto, and Geffrey, Magnaville Earl of Eſſex, were Four the firſt Conſtables of this Tower of London by Succeſſion. All which held by Force a Portion of Land, that pertained to the Priory of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, that is to ſay, Eaſt Smithfield, near unto the Tower, making thereof a Vineyard; and would not depart from it till the Second Year of K. Stephen, when the ſame was adjudged and reſtored to the ſaid Church.

This ſaid Geffrey, ſurnamed Magnaville, was Earl of Eſſex, Conſtable of the Tower, Sheriff of London, Middleſex, Eſſex, and Hertford Shires, as appeareth by a Charter of Maud the Empreſs, Dated 1141. He alſo fortified the Tower of London againſt K. Stephen. But the King took him in his Court at S. Albans, and would not deliver him, till he had rendred the Tower of London, with the Caſtles of Walden and Pleſhey in Eſſex.

The Tower intruſted to Richard de Lucie, Cuſtos of the Tower.

In the Year 1153, the Tower of London, and the Caſtle of Windſor were by the King delivered to Richard de Lucie, to be ſafely kept.

Tho. Becket re- pairs the T er.
Roger Win dover.

In the Year 1155, Thomas Becket being Chancellor to Henry II. cauſed the Flemmings to be baniſhed out of England; their Caſtles lately Builded to be pulled down, and the Tower of London to be Repaired.

Longchamp, L. Chancello encompaſſet the Tower with a Wa and Ditch.
John Bever.

About the Year 1190. the Second of Richard the Firſt, William Longchamp, Biſhop of Ely, Chancellor of England, for cauſe of Diſſenſion between him and Earl John the King's Brother, that was Rebel, encloſed the Tower and Caſtle of London with an outward Wall of Stone embattelled; and alſo cauſed a deep Ditch to be caſt about the ſame, thinking (as I have ſaid before) to have environed it with the River of Thames. By the making of this Ditch in Eaſt Smithfield, the Church of the Holy Trinity in London loſt half a Mark Rent by the Year, and the Mill was removed, that belonged to the poor Brethren of the Hoſpital of St. Katharine, and to the Church of the Trinity aforeſaid; which was no ſmall Loſs and Diſcommodity to either Part. And the Garden which the King had hired of the Brethren for ſix Marks the Year, for the moſt part was waſted and marred by the Ditch. Recompence was often promiſed but never performed, till King Edward coming after, gave to the Brethren five Marks and an Half for that Part which the Ditch had devoured; and the other Part thereof without he yielded them again, which they hold; and of the ſaid Rent of five Marks and an half they have a Deed, by virtue whereof they are well paid to this Day.

St. Kath Mill ſtood where now the Iron Ga of the Tow

Encroachments mad by the Ditc upon the City.

It is alſo to be noted, and cannot be denied, but that the ſaid Incloſure and Ditch, took the like or greater Quantity of Ground from the City within the Wall; namely, on that Part called the Tower Hill, beſides breaking down of the City Wall, from the White Tower to the firſt Gate of the City, called the Poſtern. Yet have I not read of any Quarrel made by the Citizens, or Recompence demanded by them for that Matter; becauſe all was done for good of the Cities Defence thereby, and to their good Likings.

Mat. Paris.

Bulwarks the Tower Builded by K. Henry I

But Matthew Paris writeth, that in the Year 1239, "King Henry the Third Fortified the "Tower of London to another End; where-"fore the Citizens fearing leſt that was done "to their Detriment, complained: and the "King anſwered; That he had not done it to "their Hurt; but (ſaith he) I will from hence-"forth do as my Brother doth, in building and "fortifying Caſtles, who beareth the Name to be "wiſer than I am.

Weſt Gate Bulwarks the Tower down.

"It followed in the next Year, (ſaith mine Au-"thor) the ſaid Noble Buildings of the Stone "Gate and Bulwark, which the King had cauſed "to be made by the Tower of London, on the "Weſtſide thereof, was ſhaken as it had been with "an Earthquake, and fell down, which the King "again commanded to be built in better ſort than "before, which was done.

Wall and B warks ag fall down, new Build

"And yet again in the Year 1241, the ſaid "Wall and Bulwarks that were newly Builded, "wherein the King had beſtowed more than "twelve Thouſand Marks, were unrecoverably "quite thrown down, as afore; for the which "Chance the Citizens of London were nothing "ſorry; for they were threatned, that the ſaid "Wall and Bulwarks were builded, to the End, "that if any of them would contend for the Li-"berties of the City, they might be impriſoned: "And that many might be laid in divers Priſons, "many Lodgings were made that no one ſhould "ſpeak with another.

Thus much Matthew Paris avoucheth for this Building.

To which may be added his Reparations and Strengthnings of the Garner or Storehouſe, the great Tower, and the Chapel therein, and likewiſe the Church of St. Peters in the Tower. Concerning the fitting up and beautifying of which he ſent Letters to thoſe that had the Care of his Works in the Tower: What that King ordered to be done about the Storehouſe, and about the great Tower, appears by this Order following:

But concerning the ſaid Wall and Bulwark, the ſame was finiſhed, though not in his Time. For I read, That Edward I. in the Year 1274, and the ſecond of his Reign, commanded the Treaſurer and Chamberlain of the Exchequer, to deliver out of his Treaſury unto Giles of Andwarp, 200 Marks of the Fines taken of divers Merchants, or Uſurers of London (for ſo be the Words of the Record) toward the Work of the Ditch, then new made about the ſaid Bulwark; now called the Lion Tower.

Edition.

I find alſo recorded, that Henry III. in the 46th of his Reign, wrote to Edward of Weſtminſter, commanding him, That he ſhould buy certain Perie Plants, and ſet the ſame in the Place without his Tower of London [within the Wall of the ſaid City; which of late he had cauſed to be encloſed with a Mud Wall, as may appear by this that followeth; The Maior and Commonalty of London were fined for throwing down the ſaid Earthen Wall againſt the Tower of London the 9th of Edward II.] Edward IV. in place whereof builded a Wall of Brick: He fortified the Tower, and made it ſtrong.

The Lions in the Tower.

But now for the Lion Tower, and Lions in England, the Original, as I have read, was thus:

Firſt Park in England.

Henry I. builded the Manor of Woodſtock, with a Park, which he walled about with Stone ſeven Miles in compaſs, deſtroying for the ſame divers Villages, Churches and Chapels; and this was the firſt Park in England: The Words of the Record are theſe following. He appointed therein (beſide great Store of Deer) divers ſtrange Beaſts, to be kept and nouriſhed, ſuch as were brought to him from far Countries; as Lions, Leopards, Linxes, Porpentines, and ſuch other: For ſuch was his Eſtimation among Outlandiſh Princes, that few would willingly offend him.

Lions in Woodſtock Park.

Lions ſent to Hen. III. and kept in the Tower.

More I read, that in the Year 1235. Frederick the Emperor ſent to Henry III. three Leopards, in token of his Regal Shield of Arms, wherein three Leopards were pictured; ſince which time, thoſe Lions, and others, have been kept in a Part of this Bulwark, now called the Lion Tower, and their Keeper there lodged. King Edward II. in the Twelfth Year of his Reign, commanded the Sheriffs of London to pay the Keeper of the King's Leopards in the Tower of London, 6 d. the Day, for the Suſtenance of the Leopards; and Three Halfpence a Day for Diet of the ſaid Keeper, out of the Fee Farm of the ſaid City.

More, the 16th of Edward III. one Lion, one Lioneſs, one Leopard, and two Cattes Lions, in the ſaid Tower, were committed to the Cuſtody of Robert, the Son of John Bowre.

Edward IV. builded Bulwarks without the Tower.

Edward IV. fortified the Tower of London, and encloſed with Brick (as is aforeſaid) a certain Piece of Ground, taken out of the Tower Hill, Weſt from the Lion Tower, now called the Bulwark. His Officers alſo, in the Fifth of his Reign, ſet upon the ſaid Hill both Scaffold and Gallows, for the Execution of Offenders; whereupon the Maior and his Brethren complained to the King; and were anſwered, that the ſame was not done in Derogation of the Cities Liberties; and therefore cauſed Proclamation to be made, &c. as ſhall be ſhewed in Tower Street.

Scaffold and Gallows firſt ſet on Tower Hill.

Richard III. repaired the Tower. Workmen taken up for that Purpoſe. J. S.

Richard III. repaired and builded this Tower ſomewhat. [For I find in an old Ledger Book of that King, that in the Year 1484, a Commiſſion was directed to Tho. Daniel, (Surveyor, as it ſeems, of the King's Works) to take and ſeize for Uſe within this Realm as many Maſons, Bricklayers, and other Workmen, as ſhould be thought neceſſary for the haſty Expedition of the King's Works within the Tower of London, and Palace of Weſtminſter.]

White Tower repaired by Hen. VIII.

Henry the 8th, in 1532, repaired the White Tower, and other Parts thereof.

A Bulwark of the Tower blown up.

In the Year 1548, the ſecond of Edward the Sixth, on the 22d of November; in the Night, a Frenchman, who lodged in the round Bulwark, betwixt the Weſt Gate and the Poſtern, or Draw Bridge, called the Warders Gate, by ſetting Fire on a Barrel of Gunpowder, blew up the ſaid Bulwark, burnt himſelf, and no more Perſons. This Bulwark was again forthwith new Builded.

Gates and Poſterns of the Tower.

And here, becauſe I have (by Occaſion) ſpoken of the Weſt Gate of this Tower; the ſame (as the moſt principal) is uſed for the Receipt and Delivery of all Kinds of Carriages; without the which Gate be divers Bulwarks and Gates turning towards the North, &c. Then near within this Weſt Gate, opening to the South, is a ſtrong Poſtern for Paſſengers, by the Ward Houſe over a Draw Bridge let down for that Purpoſe. Next, on the ſame South ſide, toward the Eaſt, is a large Water Gate, for Receipt of Boats and ſmall Veſſels, partly under a Stone Bridge from the River Thames. Beyond it is a ſmall Poſtern, with a Draw-Bridge ſeldom let down, but for the Receipt of ſome great Perſons Priſoners. Then towards the Eaſt is a great and ſtrong Gate, commonly called the Iron Gate, but not uſually opened.

Later Buildings, Enlargements, and Reparations.

For the Buildings and Enlargements of and about the Tower of later Times, take this (however imperfect) Account.

Buildings in Q. Elizabeth's Reign.
J. S.

In Q. Elizabeth's Reign a Piece of a Wall was built near the Ward Houſe. Some time after, Anno 1594, a Brick Wall was reſolved to be gone in Hand with, to be made along the Tower Wharf, from the ſaid Piece of the new Wall, to be continued thence to the Croſs Wall, near the Iron Gate, near St. Katharines, containing in Length Eight Hundred Twenty two Foot: the ſame Wall to be Nine Foot high; with the repairing of the Decay of the Wharf under it throughout, containing Forty ſix Rods, at Eighteen Foot to the Rod, which in all manner of Stuff and Workmanſhip came to the Sum of - - - - 161 00 00

Item, There was more to be made, viz. Three Stone Door Caſes, with Doors, Locks, and Hinges to them, at 46*s.* the Piece. - - - - - - 06 18 00

Item, For Scaffolding, Stuffs, Trays, and Shovels, and Clerks Wages by Eſtimation, 08 16 00

Sum. Totalis 176 14 00

This was the Account brought in by the Undertakers to the Lord Treaſurer; praying him alſo to direct his Warrant for the making of the Wall through the Houſes encroached over the Ditch, thereby to ſatisfy the Inhabitants there.

Tenements within the Liberty ſet up.

Let it be added alſo, that there were many Tenements about the Middle of this Queen's Reign, built upon her waſt Ground in the Liberty of the Tower. Viz.

Edward Hemmyng, built Fourteen Tenements, which ſtood at the Poſtern Gate.

Mr. Skinner builded eight Tenements, which ſtood at the Poſtern Gate.

Item, The ſaid Mr. Skinner alſo let out certain Ground at the Poſtern to divers Perſons, which builded Houſes thereupon, and paid him Rent for them, albeit the Ground was the Queen's, and belonged to her Tower.

John Cox, Limeman, Built up a Wharf and certain Rooms, for the Selling of his Lime, ſtanding by Petty Wales under the Tower Wall; and paid for the ſame 10*l.* Fine, and 6*l.* a Year.

George Waters built an Houſe upon the Queen's Highway, being Paved; and none never before in that Place.

William Beare built an Houſe in the Liberty.

One Fiſher dwelt in an Houſe next Will. Beare, built alſo about the ſame time.

Lambert Bowet alſo built his Houſe within this Time, being before but as it were a Shed.

Henry Nayler built two Houſes upon Tower Ditch, where none ever was before.

Drinkwater, the Smith, built a little Tenement, where never any one was before.

William Hammon having a Chamber over the Gate in the Bulwark, built it from a Chamber to a Dwelling Houſe within ſix Years.

Francis Parton having a little Houſe greatly enlarged it.

William Bunche built up a Houſe in the Bulwark from a Shed.

Roger Eſton, Glover, built up two Houſes in the Bulwark; the one with a Chimney, the other without.

Robert Morebread built up a Houſe from a Shed in the Bulwark.

James Thomas built up a Shop hard to the Bulwark Gate.

Beſides divers Yards left unnamed. For that there was an Order from the Council for the pulling of them down. And as theſe Buildings did but cumber up and weaken the Tower, ſo the taking them away was but the Repairing and Improvement of it.]

his Reign.
R. B.

But to come nearer our own Times, the whole Reign of K. James I. and the firſt fifteen Years of K. Charles I. were proſperous and peaceful. But in the Year 1640, the 3d of November the long Parliament began; and ſoon after this Royal Caſtle was made a Garriſon; and as a Place of Cuſtody, there were committed hitherto more Noblemen, Reverend Prelates, and Worthy Knights, and Gentlemen of good Quality, for the Defence of their Religion and Loyalty to their King, than were in the common Goal of Newgate for Murther and Felony. But after Ten Years of Civil Wars, and Thirteen Years Vacancy without a King in England, it pleaſed God to reſtore his Majeſty K. Charles II. to his Royal Throne, being brought in with all the Acclamations of Joy; and in the Firſt Year of his Reign after his Reſtauration he made that conſtant Royaliſt, Sir John Robinſon, a Citizen of London, Lieutenant of this Royal Citadel. And now I ſhall proceed to the farther Reparations, Augmentations, and Fortifyings of the ſame.

In the Year 1663, the Ditch was Cleanſed, and all the Wharfing about it new Built of Brick and Stone, ſo that the Water of the Thames running into it is there kept in by Sluces, and to be let out as Occaſion requires.

The Fire of London endan gered the Tower.

In the Year 1666, the Fire of London, ending at the Eaſt End of Tower Street, whoſe Extent came juſt to the Dock on the Weſt Side of the Tower, there was nothing between the Tower Walls and it, but the Breadth of the Dock, and a great many old Timber Houſes, which were built upon the Banks of the Dock, and in the outward Bulwark of the Tower and Tower Ditch, (which then was very foul) to the very Wall of the Tower it ſelf. Which old Houſes, if the Fire had taken hold of, the Tower it ſelf, and all the Buildings within it, had in all Probability been deſtroyed. But ſuch was this Lieutenant's Care of the great Charge committed to him, that to prevent future Danger, a few Weeks after, he cauſed all theſe old Houſes which ſtood between the Tower Dock and the Tower Wall to be pulled down; and not only them, but alſo all thoſe which were Built upon, or near the Tower Ditch, from the Bulwark Gate, along both the Tower Hills, and ſo to the Iron Gate; and cauſed ſtrong Rails of Oak to be ſet upon the Wharf where thoſe Houſes ſtood, which were about 350 or 400; ſo that by this means, not only the White Tower, but the whole Outer Tower Wall, and the Ditch round about the ſame, are all of them viſible to Paſſengers; and make a fine Proſpect.]

J. S.

The Tower Ditch being Cleanſed, and the Wharfing about it thus Repaired, I will now come within the Walls, and take a view of the Reparations, and new Buildings, which (after the Cleanſing of the Ditch) began to be made; which are ſo many, that the certain Year when they were began or finiſhed cannot be determined; for ſeveral of them were in Hand at the ſame time; but take them all together, they do amount to more than all that hath been done in that kind to the Tower ſince the Reign of K. Edward the IVth. And ſo to mention only what the ſeveral Reparations and Buildings are, and how it is at this preſent. Firſt, the Walls and Windows of the White Tower were very much decayed, two of the Turrets wholly taken down, and all of them Repaired; and new Funds ſet up, with the Kings Arms and Imperial Crowns over them, which were wholly new made, the old being defaced in the time of the Rebellion when this Tower was a Garriſon.]

To omit the reſt, very lately on the North Eaſt of the White Tower, near the Armoury, are two fair good Brick Houſes erected; the one is the Surveyor's Houſe; the other the Storekeeper's.

The Armoury.

But the nobleſt and moſt magnificent Structure of all is the new Armoury, that was begun in K. James the Second his Reign, and finiſhed in K. William's. Wherein are Arms laid up in a moſt ſurprizing, Artificial Order and Beauty to Admiration, by one Mr. Harris. In this Armoury, they ſay, are Arms ſufficient to Arm out 60000 Men. As to the Building it ſelf, it is ſituate North of the White Tower, and runs out in Length about Sixſcore and Ten Yards, in Depth about Twenty, more or leſs. It hath a graceful Walk before it Paved with Freeſtone the whole Length, and Planted with Lime Trees, without the Paved Walk. In the midſt of the Building, a comely Front with large Pillars of Stone on each ſide the Gate, two, of the Dorick Order. Under the Pediment is the King's Coat of Arms largely cut in Stone, with the Supporters the Lion and Unicorn, curiouſly engraven.

ſtantine Aelulfe g'd.

In the Year 1222, the Citizens of London, having made a Tumult againſt the Abbot of Weſtminſter; Hubert of Burgh, Chief Juſtice of England, came to the Tower of London, and called before him the Maior and Aldermen, of whom he enquired for the principal Authors of that Sedition; amongſt whom, one named Conſtantine Fitz Aelulfe avowed that he was the Man, and had done much leſs than he thought to have done. Whereupon, the Juſtice ſent him (with two others) to Falks de Brent, who with Armed Men brought him to the Gallows, and there hanged him, and the other twain.

Griffith of Wales fell from the Tower.

In the Year 1244, Griffith the Eldeſt Son of Leoline, Prince of Wales, being kept Priſoner in the Tower, deviſed Means of Eſcape; and having (in the Night) made of the Hangings, Sheets, Towels and Table Cloths, a long Line, he put himſelf down from the Top of the Tower. But in the ſliding, the Weight of his Body (being a very big and a fat Man) brake the Rope, and he fell and brake his Neck withal; whoſe miſerable Carkaſs being found in the Morning by the Tower Wall, was a moſt pitiful Sight to the Beholders. For his Head and Neck were driven into his Breaſt between both the Shoulders. The King hearing thereof puniſhed the Watchmen, and cauſed Griffith's Son, that was impriſoned with his Father, to be more ſtraitly kept.

Sheriffs of London Priſoners in the Tower.

In the Year 1253, King Henry the Third impriſoned the Sheriffs of London in the Tower more than a Month, for the eſcape of a Priſoner out of Newgate.

K. Henry lodged in the Tower, and held his Parliament there.

In the Year 1260, King Henry with his Queen (for fear of the Barons) were lodged in this Tower. The next Year he ſent for his Lords, and held his Parliament there.

Citizens of London, deſpiſed the Queen, Wife to Hen. 3.

In the Year 1263, when the Queen would have removed from the Tower by Water, towards Windſor, ſundry Londoners got them together to the Bridge, under the which ſhe was to paſs, and not only cryed out upon her with reproachful Words, but alſo threw Mire and Stones at her, by which ſhe was conſtrained to return for the time.

But in the Year 1265, the ſaid Citizens were fain to ſubmit themſelves to the King for it; and the Maior, Aldermen, and Sheriffs were ſent to divers Priſons, and a Cuſtos alſo was ſet over the City; to wit, Othon, Conſtable of the Tower, &c.

Leoline. Prince of Wales, his Head ſet on the Tower.

In the Year 1282, Leoline Prince of Wales, came down from the Mountain of Snowdon to Montgomery, and was taken at Bluith Caſtle. Where uſing reproachful Words againſt the Engliſhmen, Roger le Strange ran in upon him, and with the Sword wherewith he was girt cut off his Head, leaving his dead Body on the Ground. Sir Roger Mortimer cauſed the Head of this Leoline to be ſet upon the Tower of London, crowned with a Wreath of Ivy. Such was the End of Leoline, betrayed by the Men of Bluith; and this was the laſt Prince of the Britains Blood that bare Rule and Dominion in Wales.

Sir John Lovetot, Juſtice of the lower Bench, three Thouſand Marks. Sir William Bromtone, Juſtice, ſix Thouſand Marks, and proportionably of the reſt. Of their Clerks for their Redemption; of Robert Littlebury, 1000 Marks; and of Roger of Leiceſter, 1000 Marks; and of a certain Clerk of the Courts called Adam de Stratton, 32000 Marks, of old Money and new; beſide Jewels (without Number) and precious Veſſels of Silver, which were found in his Houſe, and a King's Crown, which ſome Men ſaid was King John's. Moreover, the King conſtrained the Juſtices to ſwear, that (from thenceforth) they ſhould take no Penſion, Fee or Gift of any Man, except only a Breakfaſt or ſuch like Preſent.

A. M.

A Mint in the Tower, Florences of Gold Coined there.

One of Lucca Mint Maſter.

In the Year 1344, King Edward the Third, in the 18. Year of his Reign, commanded Florences of Gold to be made, and coined in the Tower; that is to ſay, a Penny Piece of the Value of Six Shillings and Eight Pence; the Half Penny Piece of the Value of Three Shillings and Four Pence; and a Farthing Piece worth Twenty Pence. Percevall de Porte of Luke, being then Maſter of the Coin. And this is the firſt coyning of Gold in the Tower, whereof I have read; and alſo the firſt Coinage of Gold in England.

The King's Exchange in Bucklesbury.

I find alſo recorded, that the ſaid King, in the ſame Year, ordained his Exchange of Money to be kept in Sernes Tower, a Part of the King's Houſe in Buckles Bury. And here, to digreſs a little (by occaſion offered) I find, that in times before paſſed, all great Sums were paid by Weight of Gold or Silver; as ſo many Pounds or Marks of Silver, or ſo many Pounds or Marks of Gold, cut into Blanks, and not ſtamped, as I could prove by many good Authorities, which I overpaſs. The ſmaller Sums alſo were paid in Starlings, which were Pence ſo called; for other Coins they had none.

Round Plates, called Blanks, delivered by Weight, Argent and Pecunia, after called Eſterling.

The Antiquity of this Starling Penny uſually in this Realm, is from the Reign of Henry the Second; notwithſtanding the Saxon Coins (before the Conqueſt) were Pence of fine Silver, the full Weight, and ſomewhat better than the latter Starlings, as I have tryed by Conference of the Pence of Burgbrede King of Mercia, Ælfred, Edward, and Edelred, Kings of the Weſt Saxons, Plegmond Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and others.

Will. the Conqueror's Penny.

William the Conqueror's Penny alſo was fine Silver, of the Weight of the Eaſterling, and had on the one Side ſtamped an Armed Head, with a Beardleſs Face, (for the Normans wear no Beards) with a Scepter in his Hand. The Inſcription in the Circumference was this, Le Rei Wilam. On the other Side, a Croſs double to the Ring, between Four Rowels of Six Points.

W. Malmsbury.

Henry I. his Penny.

King Henry the firſt his Penny was of the like Weight, Fineneſs, Form of Face, Croſs, &c.

This Henry, in the Eighth Year of his Reign, ordained the Penny which was round, ſo to be quartered by the Croſs, that they might eaſily be broken into Half Pence and Farthings.

R. Hovenden.

In the Firſt, Second, Third, Fourth, and Fifth of K. Richard the Firſt his Reign, and afterwards, I find commonly Eaſterling Money mentioned, and yet oft-times the ſame is called Argent, as afore, and not otherwiſe.

Eaſterling Money.

The firſt great Sum that I read of to be paid in Eaſterlings, was in the Fifth of Richard the Firſt, when Robert Earl of Leiceſter, being Priſoner in France, proffered for his Ranſom a Thouſand Marks Eaſterlings; notwithſtanding the Eaſterling Pence were long before.

Weight of Starling Pence 32 Grains of Wheat.

The Weight of the Eaſterling Penny may appear by divers Statutes, namely of Weights and Meaſures, made in the 51. Year of Henry the Third, in theſe Words, Thirty two Grains of Wheat, Dry and Round, taken in the midſt of the Ear, ſhould be the Weight of a Starling Penny; Twenty of thoſe Pence ſhould weigh one Ounce, Twelve Ounces a Pound Troy. It followeth in the Statute, Eight Pound to make a Gallon of Wine, and Eight Gallons a Buſhell of London Meaſure, &c. Notwithſtanding which Statute, I find in the Eighth of Edward the Firſt, Gregorie Rokeſley, Maior of London, being chief Maſter or Miniſter of the King's Exchange or Mints, a new Coin being then appointed, the Pound of Eaſterling Money ſhould contain (as afore) Twelve Ounces; to wit, fine Silver, ſuch as was then made into Foyl, and was commonly called Silver of Gutherons Lane; Eleven Ounces, two Eaſterlings, and one Ferling or Farthing, and the other ſeventeen Pence half penny Farthing to be Lay [Alloy]. Alſo the Pound of Money ought to weigh twenty Shillings three Pence by Account. So that no Pound ought to be over twenty Shillings four Pence, nor leſs than twenty Shillings two pence by Account; the Ounce to weigh twenty Pence, the Penny Weight twenty four Grains.

Which twenty four by Weight then appointed, were as much as the former thirty two Grains of Wheat; a Penny Force twenty five Grains and an Half; the Penny Deble or Feeble twenty two Grains and an half, &c.

The Penny Eaſterling how it took the Name.

Now for the Penny Eaſterling how it took that Name I think good briefly to touch. It hath been ſaid, that Numa Pompilius, the Second King of the Romans, commanded Money firſt to be made: of whoſe Name they were called Numi. And when Copper Pence, Silver Pence, and Gold Pence were made, (becauſe every Silver Penny was worth Ten Copper Pence, and every Gold Penny worth Ten Silver Pence) the Pence were therefore called in Latin, Denarii. And oftentimes, the Pence are named of the Matter and Stuff of Gold or Silver. But the Money of England was called of the Workers and Makers thereof; as the Floren of Gold is called of the Florentines that were the Workers thereof; and ſo the Eaſterling Pence took their Name of the Eaſterlings which did firſt make this Money in England, in the Reign of Henry the Second.

H. 2. made a new Coin in the 3d of his Reign.

Thus have I ſet down, according to my ſmall reading in Antiquity, theſe Money Matters; omitting the Imaginations of late Writers; of whom ſome have ſaid, Eaſterling Money to take that Name of a Star ſtamped in the Border or Ring of the Penny; other ſome, of a Bird, called a Star or Starling, ſtamped in the Circumference; and other (more unlikely) of being coyned at Strivelin or Starling, a Town in Scotland, &c.

Starling Money, when it took begining in this Land.

Of Halfpence and Farthings.

Now concerning Halfpence and Farthings. The Accompt of which is more ſubtiller than the Pence, I need not ſpeak of them more, than that they were only made in the Exchange at London, and no where elſe: Firſt, pointed to be made by Edward the Firſt, in the Eighth of his Reign; and alſo at the ſame time the ſaid King's Coin was ſome few Groats of Silver, but they were not uſual. The King's Exchange at London was near unto the Cathedral Church of S. Paul, and is to this Day commonly called, The Old Change; but in Evidences, The Old Exchange.

The Old Change.

The King's Exchanger's Office.

The King's Exchanger in this Place, was to deliver out to every other Exchanger throughout England, or other the King's Dominions, their Coining Irons; that is to ſay, one Standard or Staple, and two Truſſels, or Punchions. And when the ſame were ſpent and worn, to receive them with an Account what Sum had been coined, and alſo their Pix, or Box of Aſſay, and to deliver other Irons new graven, &c. I find that in the 9th of King John, there was, beſides the Mint at London, other Mints at Wincheſter, Exceſter, Chicheſter, Canterbury, Rocheſter, Ipſwich, Norwich, Linne, Lincoln, York, Carleil, Northampton, Oxford, S. Edmondsbury, and Durham. The Exchanger, Examiner, and Tryer, buyeth the Silver for Coinage; anſwering for every Hundred Pound of Silver, bought in Bullion, or otherwiſe 98 l. 15 s. for he taketh 25 s. for Coinage.

Diminiſhing of Coin.

Starling Money forbidden to be tranſported.

King Edward the Firſt, in the 27th of his Reign, held a Parliament at Stebunheth, in the Houſe of Henry Waleis, Maior of London, wherein amongſt other Things there handled, the tranſporting of Starling Money was forbidden.

First Groats and Half Coined.

In the Year 1351, William Edington, Biſhop of Wincheſter, and Treaſurer of England, a wiſe Man, but loving the King's Commodity more than the Wealth of the whole Realm and Common People, (ſaith my Author) Cauſed a new Coin, called a Groat and a Half Groat, to be coined and ſtamped, the Groat to be taken for 4 d. and the Half Groat for 2 d. not containing in Weight according to the Pence called Eaſterlings, but much leſs, to wit, by 5 s. in the Pound. By reaſon whereof Victuals and Merchandizes became dearer through the whole Realm.

The old Coin of Gold changed.

About the ſame Time alſo the old Coin of Gold was changed into a new; but the old Floren or Noble, then ſo called, was worth much above the taxed Rate of the new. And therefore the Merchants ingroſſed up the old, and conveyed them out of the Realm, to the great Loſs of the Kingdom. Wherefore a Remedy was provided, by changing of the Stamp.

Coins of Gold enhaunced. A new Coin of Nobles.

In the Year 1411. King Henry IV. cauſed a new Coin of Nobles to be made of leſs Value than the old by 4 d. in the Noble, ſo that Fifty Nobles ſhould be a Pound, Troy Weight.

Nobles Clipped or Waſhed.

In the Year 1421. was granted to Henry V. a Fifteen to be paid at Candlemas, and at Martinmaſſe, of ſuch Money as was then currant Gold, or Silver, not overmuch clipped or waſhed; to wit, that if the Noble were worth 5 s. 8 d. then the King ſhould take it for a full Noble of 6 s. 8 d. and if it were leſs of Value, than 5 s. 8 d. then the Perſon paying that Gold, to make it good to the Value of 5 s. 8 d. the King alway receiving it for an whole Noble of 6 s. 8 d. and if the Noble ſo payed were better than 5 s. 8 d. the King to pay again the Surpluſage, that it was better than 5 s. 8 d. Alſo this Year was ſuch ſcarcity of white Money, that though a Noble were ſo good of Gold and Weight, as 6 s. 8 d. Men could get no white Money for them.

More plenty of Coin in Gold than in Silver.

Coins of Gold allayed, and alſo raiſed in Value, in Ed. IVth, his Reign.

In the Year 1465, King Edward the Fourth cauſed a new Coin both of Gold and Silver to be made, whereby he gained much. For he made of an old Noble a Royal, which he commanded to go for 10 s. Neverthele ſs to the ſame Royal was put 8 d. of Allay, and ſo weighed the more, being ſmitten with a new Stamp, to wit, a Roſe. He likewiſe made half Angels of 5 s. and Farthings of 2 s. 6 d. Angelets of 6 s. 8 d. and half Angels 3 s. 4 d. He made Silver Money of Three Pence, a Groat, and ſo of other Coins after that Rate, to the great Harm of the Commons.

Roſe Nobles.

L. Haſtings, Maſter of the Mints.

"W. Lord Haſtings, the King's Chamberlain, " being Maſter of the King's Mints, ſaith the Re- " cord, undertook to make the Monies under " Form following; to wit, of Gold a Piece of " 8 s. 4 d. Starling, which ſhould be called a No- " ble of Gold. Of the which there ſhould be Fifty " ſuch Pieces in the Pound Weight of the Tower. " Another Piece of Gold, 4 s. 2 d. of Starlings, " and to be of them an Hundred ſuch Pieces in " the Pound. And a Third Piece of Gold, 2 s. 1 d. " Starling. Two Hundred ſuch Pieces in the " Pound, every Pound Weight of the Tower to " be worth 20 l. 16 s. 8 d. of Starlings. The which " ſhould be 23 Carects, 3 Grains, and half 5, " &c. and for Silver 37 s. 6 d. of Starlings. The " Piece of 4 Pence, to be 112 Groats, and two " Pence in the Pound Weight.

Half faced Groats, in Hen. 7. his Reign.

In the Year 1504. King Henry VII. appointed a new Coin; to wit, a Groat, and Half a Groat, which bare but half Faces. The ſame time alſo was coined a Groat, which was in Value 12 d. but of thoſe but a few, after the Rate of Forty Pence the Ounce.

In Hen. 8. his Reign.

In the Year 1526. the 18th of Henry VIII. the Angel Noble, being then the ſixth Part of an Ounce Troy; ſo that ſix Angels were juſt an Ounce, which was 40 s. Sterling, and the Angel was alſo worth two Ounces of Silver; ſo that ſix Angels were worth twelve Ounces of Silver, which was 40 s. A Proclamation was made on the 6th of September, that the Angel ſhould go for 7 s. 4 d. the Royal for 11 s. and the Crown for 4 s. 4 d. And on the 5th of November following, again by Proclamation, the Angel was enhaunced to 7 s. 6 d. and ſo every Ounce of Gold to be 45 s. and the Ounce of Silver at 3 s. 9 d. in Value.

Gold and Silver enhaunced.

Baſe Monies coined and currant in England.

In the Year 1544. the 35th of Henry VIII. on the 16th of May, Proclamation was made for the enhauncing of Gold to 48 s. and Silver to 4 s. the Ounce. Alſo the King cauſed to be coined baſe Monies [called Teſtons] to wit, Pieces of 12 d. 6 d. 4 d. 2 d. and 1 d. in Weight as the late Sterling, in ſhew good Silver, but inwardly Copper.

Theſe Pieces had whole or broad Faces, and continued current after that rate till the 5th of Edward VI. when they were on the 9th of July called down, the Shilling to 9 d. the Groat to 3 d. &c. and on the 17th of Auguſt, from 9 d. to 6 d. &c. And on the 30th of October, was publiſhed new Coins of Silver and Gold to be made; a Piece of Silver 5 s. Sterling, a Piece 2 s. 6 d. of 12 d. of 6 d. a Penny with a double Roſe, a Halfpenny a ſingle Roſe, and a Farthing with a Port-Cloſe. Coins of fine Gold, a whole Soveraign of 30 s. an Angel of 10 s. an Angelet of 5 s. Of Crown Gold, a Soveraign 20 s. half Soveraign 10 s. 5 s. 2 s. 6 d. and baſe Monies to paſs as afore.

Crowns and half Crowns of Silver Coined, in Edw. 6. his Reign.

Which continued till the ſecond of Q. Elizabeth, then called to a lower Rate, taken to the Mint, and refined, the Silver whereof being coined with a new Stamp of her Majeſty, the Droſs was carried to foul Highways to heighten them. This baſe Monies (for the time) cauſed the old Starling Monies to be hoarded up, ſo that I have ſeen 21 s. currant, given for one old Angel to gild withal. Alſo Rents of Lands and Tenements, with Prices of Victuals, were raiſed far beyond the former Rates, hardly ſince to be brought down. Thus much for baſe Monies, coined and currant in England have I known; but for Leather Monies, as many People have fondly talked, I find no ſuch Matter. I read that King John of France, being taken Priſoner by Edward the Black Prince, at the Battel of Poictiers, payed a Ranſom of three Millions of Florences, whereby he brought the Realm of France into ſuch Poverty, that many Years after they uſed Leather Money, with a little Stud or Nail of Silver in the midſt thereof. Thus much for Mint and Coinage, by occaſion of this Tower, [where the chief Coining hath long continued] (under Correction of other more ſkilful) may ſuffice. And now to other Accidents there.

Monies refined under Q. Elizabeth.

Accidents.

In the Year 1360, the Peace between England and France being confirmed, King Edward came over into England, and ſtraight to the Tower, to ſee the French King then Priſoner there, whoſe Ranſom he Aſſeſſed at three Millions of Florences, and ſo delivered him from Priſon, and brought him with Honour to the Sea.

In the Year 1381, the Rebels of Kent drew out of the Tower (where the King was then lodged) Simon Sudburie, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, Robert Hales, Prior of St. John's, and Treaſurer of England, William Appleton, Friar, the King's Confeſſor, and John Legge a Sergeant of the King's, and beheaded them on the Towerhill. [The particular Hiſtory whereof is taken out of John Stow's Annals, in the Life and Reign of Richard II. and tranſcribed Verbatim by A. M. and by him inſerted at length in this Place; and is as follows.]

Rebels of Kent enter the Tower.

In the Year 1381, and the Fourth Year of the Reign of King Richard the Second, was granted to the King a grievous Tax and Tallage of his Subjects, both Spiritual and Temporal; through the which was raiſed in England a Shipwreck of great Troubles: For divers Courtiers, deſirous to enrich themſelves with other Mens Goods, informed the King and his Court, that the Tallage was not gathered up faithfully to the King's Uſe by the Collections. Whereupon they offered to the King, that they would pay a great Sum of Money for the Farm of that which they would gather over and above that which had been paid, if they might be by the King thereunto authorized.

A grievous Tax and Tallage granted to the King, which cauſed a great Rebellion in England.

Some of them getting the King's Letters and Authority, ſate in divers Places of Eſſex and Kent, and handled the People ſore and uncourteouſly, almoſt not to be ſpoken, for the levying of the ſaid Sum of Money. Which ſome of the People taking in evil Part, ſecretly took Counſel together, gathered Aſſiſtants, and reſiſted the Exactors, riſing againſt them. Of whom ſome they ſlew, ſome they wounded, and the reſt fled.

The People miſuſed in very baſe manner.

This Tumult began principally in Kent, and after this manner, as I find the ſame ſet down in a Chronicle of St. Albans: One of the Collectors of the Groats, or Pole Money, coming to the Houſe of John (others ſay Watt) Tylar, in the Town of Dartford in Kent, demanded of the Tylar's Wife, for her Husband, for her ſelf, for her Servants, and for their Daughter (a young Maiden) every one of them a Groat, which the Tylar's Wife denied not to pay, ſaving for her Daughter, who (ſhe ſaid) was a Child, and not to be accounted as a Woman. That will I ſoon wete (anſwered the Collector) and taking the young Maiden diſhoneſtly, turned her up to ſearch whether ſhe were undergrown with Hair or not; (for in many Places they had made the like ſhameful Tryal) whereupon her Mother cryed out, which cauſed Neighbours to come in, and her Husband (being at Work in the ſame Town tiling of an Houſe) when he heard thereof, caught his Lathing Staff in his Hand, and ran preſently home. Where reaſoning with the Collector, Who made him to be ſo bold? The Collector anſwered with ſtout Words, and ſtrake at the Tylar. But the Tylar avoiding the Blow, ſmote the Collector with his Lathing Staff, that the Brains flew out of his Head. Where through great Noiſe aroſe in the Streets, and the poor People being glad, every one prepared to ſupport the ſaid John Tylar.

The Kentiſh Men ariſe in a Tumult. For there the Miſchief began.

The Pole Groat called (by ſome) the grope Groat.

The Husband cometh Home haſtily from his Work.

The Collector ſlain by the Tylar.

Thus the Commons being drawn together went to Maidſtone, and from thence back again to Blackheath. And ſo (in ſhort time) they ſtirred all the Country (in a manner) to the like Commotion. Then, beſetting the Ways that led to Canterbury, arreſted all Paſſengers, compelling them to ſwear: Firſt, That they ſhould keep Allegiance to King Richard, and to the Commons: and that they ſhould accept no King that was named John, in envy they bare unto John Duke of Lancaſter, who named himſelf King of Caſtile: And that they ſhould be ready whenſoever they were called: And that they ſhould agree to no Tax to be levied (from thenceforth) in the Kingdom, nor conſent to any, except it were a Fifteen.

The Commons flock together in the Tylar's Defence.

An Oath exacted by the Rebels on all Paſſengers.

The Fame of theſe doings ſpread into Suſſex, Hertford, Eſſex, and Cambridgeſhire, Norfolk, Suffolk, &c. And when ſuch aſſembling of the common People daily took Increaſe, and that their Number was now made almoſt infinite, ſo that they feared no Man to reſiſt them; they began to ſhew ſome ſuch deſperate Acts, as they had raſhly conſidered on in their Minds; and took in Hand to behead all Men of Law, as well Apprentices, as utter Bariſters, and old Juſtices, with all the Jurors of the Country, whom they might get into their Hands. They ſpared none whom they thought to be Learned, eſpecially, if they found any to have a Pen and Inkhorn about him, they pulled off his Hood, and all with one Voice crying, Hale him out, and cut off his Head. The Bondmen, and other of Eſſex, being joined with them of Kent on Blackheath, there came Knights to them from the King, to enquire the Cauſe of their Aſſembly; to whom they made anſwer, That for certain Cauſes they were come together to have Talk with the King; and therefore willed the Knights to tell him, that he muſt needs come unto them that he might underſtand the Deſire of their Hearts.

Evil News do always quickly ſpread themſelves.

Juſtices, Lawyers, and Jurors beheaded.

Bondmen of Eſſex joyn with them of Kent.

Ex Chron. Dun.

Inſolent Fury is eaſily moved.

The Palace of the Archbiſhop at Lambeth ſpoiled.

The King was counſelled by ſome, to make haſte unto them; but Simon Sudbury, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, and Robert Hales, of St. John's, Treaſurer, affirmed, That it was not meet for the King to go to ſuch a rude Company, but rather ſome Order to be taken for their Suppreſſion. Which when the Commons heard, being moved to a furious Rage, they ſwore, That they would go ſeek the King's Traitors, to take off their Heads. Forthwith they took their Journey towards London, and came to Southwark; where they felled all the Places of that Borough, and in the Country about. They ſpoiled the Archbiſhop's Palace at Lambeth, for Deſpite they bare him. The Lord Maior of London and Aldermen (fearing the City's Spoil) decreed to ſhut up the Gates: But the Commons of the City, eſpecially the poorer People, favouring the Commons of the Country, would not ſuffer the Maior to ſhut them out, but threatned Death to them that went about it.

The Commons of London heartned on by the Rebels.

The poorer Citizens join with the Rebels, and burn the Savoy, the D. of Lancaſter's Houſe.

All the Night following, to wit, Corpus Chriſti Even, the Rebels enjoyed free Ingate and Outgate, and encouraged the Commons of London, as alſo of all the Realm, to favour their Cauſe. For, ſaid they, their Purpoſe was but to ſearch out the Traitors of the Land, and ſo to ceaſe. The more Credit was given to their Speeches, becauſe they took nothing from any Man, but at a juſt Price; and if they found any Man with Theſt, they beheaded him. The Morrow after, to wit, on Corpus Chriſti Day, coming into the City, talking with the Commons of procuring Liberty to them, and apprehending of Traitors, (as they termed them) eſpecially the Duke of Lancaſter; they ſhortly got all the poorer Citizens to conſpire with them. And the ſame Day after it was waxen ſomewhat warm, and that they had taſted divers Wines, (for the Citizens did ſet open their Cellars for them, to enter at their Pleaſure;) they exhorted each other, That going to the Savoy, the Duke of Lancaſter's Houſe, (to the which there was none in the whole Realm to be compared, for Beauty and Statelineſs) they might ſet it on fire, and burn it down to the Ground.

The Rebels would have nothing to any private Man's Uſe.

Ex Hen. Knighton.

The Rebels burn one of their Fellows.

Two and thirty Rebels mured up in a Cellar.

Straitway they ran thither, and ſetting Fire on it round about, applied their Travel to deſtroy it. And that it might appear to the Commonalty, that they did not any Thing for Avarice; they cauſed to be proclaimed, That none (upon Pain of loſing his Head) ſhould preſume to convert to his own Uſe, any Thing that was there; but that they ſhould break ſuch Plate, and Veſſels of Gold and Silver, (as was there in great Plenty) into ſmall Pieces, and then to throw the ſame into the Thames, and ſo all (whatſoever) was deſtroyed. But one of the Rebels (ſaith Henry Knighton) contrary to the Proclamation, took a goodly Silver Piece, and hid it in his Boſom; But another that eſpied him, told his Fellows, who forthwith hurled him and the Piece of Plate into the Fire, ſaying, We be zealous of Truth and Juſtice, and not Thieves or Robbers. Alſo, Two and thirty of thoſe Rebels entred a Cellar of the Savoy, where they drank ſo much of ſweet Wines, that they were not able to come out again in Time; but were ſhut in with Wood and Stones, that mured up the Door; where they were heard crying and calling Seven Days after, but none came to help them out, till they were all dead.

The New Temple of London burnt, in anger to Sir Robert Hales.

The Rebels murther one another.

Theſe Things being done, they brake down the Place called the New Temple at the Bar, in which Place, Apprentices at the Law were lodged; for Anger which they had conceived againſt Sir Robert Hales, Maſter of St. John's Hoſpital; unto which Hoſpital of St. John's the Temple belonged, where many Monuments, which the Lawyers had in their Cuſtody, were conſumed with Fire. After a Number of them had ſacked this Temple; what with Wearineſs of Labour, and what with Wine, being overcome, they lay down under the Walls and Houſing, and were ſlain like Swine; one of them killing another for old Grudges, and other alſo made quick Diſpatch of them.

The Priory of St. John, beyond Smithfield, burnt.

The Manor of Highbury burnt.

The Rebels divided into Three Bands.

The Rebels command the King; and he goeth to them to the Mile's-End.

Another Troop (in the mean time) ſet fire on the Noble Houſe of St. John, at Clerkenwell, cauſing it to burn by the Space of Seven Days together, not ſuffering any to quench it. On Friday, they burned the Manor of Highbury, the whole Number of the Common People being (at that time) divided into Three Parts. Of the which Diviſion, one Part was attending to deſtroy the Manor of Highbury, and other Places belonging to the Priory of St. John: Another Company lay at the Mile's-End, Eaſt of the City. The Third kept at the Tower Hill, there to ſpoil the King of ſuch Victuals as were brought towards him. The Company that were aſſembled on the Mile's-End, ſent to command the King, That he ſhould come to them without Delay, unarmed, or without any Force; which if he refuſed to do, they would pull down the Tower, neither ſhould he eſcape alive. The King taking Counſel, with a few unarmed, went toward them in great Fear on Horſeback; and ſo the Gates of the Tower being ſet open, a great Multitude of them entred into it.

The Rebels entred into the Tower of London, and their impudent Behaviour there.

Their bold Inſolence to the King's Mother.

There was (at the ſame Time) within the Tower Six Hundred armed valiant Perſons, and expert in Arms, and Six Hundred Archers; all which did quail in Stomach, and ſtood as Men amazed. For the Baſeſt of the Ruſticks (not many together, but every one by himſelf) durſt preſume to enter the King's Chamber, and his Mother's, with their Weapons, to put in fear each of the Men of War, Knights and other. Many of them went into the King's Privy Chamber, and played the Wantons, in ſitting, lying and ſporting them on the King's Bed: And that which is much more ſawcily, invited the King's Mother to kiſs with them; yet durſt none of thoſe Men of War (ſtrange to be ſaid) once withſtand them. They went in and out like Maſters, that were but baſe Slaves, and of moſt vile Condition.

The Rebels ſought for the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

The Archbiſhop dreadleſs of the Rebels Cruelty; and his Speeches with them.

The Archbiſhop is fetch'd out of the Tower, and dragged to the Tower Hill.

While theſe rude Wretches ſought for the Archbiſhop, running up and down with terrible Noiſe and Fury; at length finding one of his Servants, they charged him to bring them where his Maſter was, whom they named Traytor. The Servant not daring to diſpleaſe them, brought them to the Chapel; where, after Maſs had been ſaid, and having received the Communion, the Archbiſhop was buſy in his Prayers: For not unknowing of their Coming and Purpoſe, he had paſſed the laſt Night in Confeſſing of his Sins, and in devout Prayers. When therefore he heard that they were come, with great Conſtancy, he ſaid to his Men; Let us uow go; ſurely it is beſt to dye, when it is no Pleaſure to live. And with that, the Tormentors entring, cried, Where is the Traitor? The Archbiſhop anſwered, Behold, I am the Archbiſhop, whom you ſeek; not a Traitor. They therefore laid Hands on him; and dragging him out of the Chapel, they drew him forth of the Tower Gate, to the Tower Hill; where being compaſſed about with many Thouſands, and ſeeing Swords about his Head drawn in exceſſive manner, threatning Death to him, he ſpake unto them in theſe Words:

The Archbiſhop's Words to the Rebels on Tower Hill.

What is it (Dear Brethren) you purpoſe to do? What is mine Offence committed againſt you, for which you will kill me? Tou were beſt to take heed, that if I be killed, who am your Paſtor, there come not on you the Indignation of the juſt Revenger, or (at the leaſt) for ſuch a Fact, all England be not put under Interdiction.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury moſt cruelly beheaded by the Rebels.

Unneath could he pronounce theſe Words, before they cried out with an horrible Noiſe; That they neither feared the Interdiction, nor allowed the Pope to be above them. The Archbiſhop ſeeing Death at hand, with comfortable Words (as he was an eloquent Man, and wiſe beyond all the wiſe Men of the Realm) ſpake fairly to them. Laſtly, After Forgiveneſs granted to the Executioner that ſhould behead him, kneeling down, he offered his Neck to him that ſhould ſmite off his Head. Being ſtricken in the Neck, but not deadly, he putting his Hand to his Neck, ſaid, Aha, It is the Hand of God. He had not removed his Hand from the Place where the Pain was, but that being ſuddenly ſtricken again, his Fingers Ends being cut off, and Part of the Arteries, he fell down; but yet he died not, till being mangled with Eight ſeveral Strokes in the Neck and Head, he fulfilled moſt worthy Martyrdom. There lay his Body unburied all that Friday, and the Morrow till Afternoon; none daring to deliver his Body to Sepulture. His Head thoſe wicked Villains took, and nailing thereon his Hood, they fixed it on a Pole, and ſet it on London Bridge, in the Place where before ſtood the Head of Sir John Minſtarworth.

The Inhumanity to his Body after he was dead.

A further Relation concerning this worthy Archbiſhop, and his Religious Actions.

This Archbiſhop, Simon Tibald, alias Sudbury, Son to Nicolas Tibald, Gentleman, born in the Town of Sudbury in Suffolk, Doctor of both Laws, was Eighteen Years Biſhop of London; in the which Time, he built a goodly College, in place where his Father's Houſe ſtood, and endowed it with great Poſſeſſions; furniſhing the ſame with Secular Clarks, and other Miniſters; being valued at the Suppreſſion, at 122 l. 16 s. in Lands by the Year. He builded the upper End of St. Gregory's Church at Sudbury. Afterward, being tranſlated to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury, Anno 1375, he re-edified the Walls of that City, from the Weſt Gate (which he builded) to the North Gate; which had been deſtroyed by the Danes, before the Conqueſt of K. William the Baſtard.

The Walls of Canterbury re-edified by this Archbiſhop.

He was ſlain, as you have heard, and afterward buried in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury. There died with him Sir Robert Hales, a moſt valiant Knight, Lord of St. John's, and Treaſurer of England; and John Legg, one of the King's Serjeants at Arms; and a Franciſcan Fryar, named W. Appledore, [Appleton] the King's Confeſſor: All whom they drew out of the Tower, and beheaded them on Tower-Hill. Richard Lyons alſo, a famous Lapidary and Goldſmith, late one of the Sheriffs of London, was drawn out of his Houſe, and beheaded in Cheap. Many that Day were beheaded, as well Flemings as Engliſhmen, for no Cauſe; but only to fulfil the Cruelty of the rude Commons. For it was a ſolemn Paſtime to them, if they could take any that was not ſworn to them, to take from ſuch a one his Hood, with their accuſtomed Clamours, and forthwith to behead him. Neither did they ſhew any Reverence to Sacred Places; for in the very Churches they did kill any whom they had in Hatred. They fetched Thirteen Flemings out of the Auguſtin Fryars Church in London, and Seventeen out of another Church, and Thirty two in the Vintry, and ſo in other Places of the City, as alſo in Southwark; all which they beheaded; except they could plainly pronounce Bread and Cheeſe. For if their Speech ſounded any thing on Brot or Cawſe, off went their Heads, as a ſure Mark that they were Flemings.

The Lord Prior of S. John's beheaded with the Archbiſhop.

Many beheaded, both Flemings and Engliſh, to fulfil the headſtrong Cruelty of the Commons.

The Villains made a Paſtime of putting Men to Death.

The King coming to the Mile's-End, the Place before recited, was greatly afraid, beholding the mad-headed Commons; who (with froward Countenances) required many Things, which they had put in Writing, and to be confirmed by the King's Letters Patents.

The Demands made by the Rebels to the King at Mile's-End.

The firſt Article.

1. That all Men ſhould be Free from Servitude and Bondage; ſo as (from thenceforth) there ſhould be no Bondmen.

The Second Article.

2. That he ſhould pardon all Men, of what Eſtate ſoever, all manner of Actions and Inſurrections committed, and all manner of Treaſons, Felonies, Tranſgreſſions and Extortions, by any of them done, and to grant them Peace.

The Third Article.

3. That all Men (from thenceforth) might be enfranchiſed to buy and ſell in every County, City, Borough, Town, Fair, Market, and other Place within the Realm of England.

The Fourth Article.

4. That no Acre of Land, holden in Bondage or Service, ſhould be holden but for Four Pence: And if it had been holden for leſs in former Time, it ſhould not hereafter be inhanſed.

Reprehenſion of the King's Government.

Theſe, and many other Things they required: And told him moreover, That he had been evilly governed till that Day; but from that Time forward, he muſt be governed otherwiſe.

A hard Extremity for a King.

The Eſſex Men returned home.

The King goeth to Weſtminſter.

The King perceiving that he could not eſcape, except he granted to their Requeſt, yielded to the ſame; and ſo craving Truce, departed from them; and the Eſſex Men returned homeward. On the Morrow, being Saturday, and the 15th of June, the King (after Dinner) went from the Wardrobe in the Royal in London, to Weſtminſter, to viſit the Shrine of St. Edward the King, and to ſee if they had done any Miſchief there. Then went he to the Chapel, called our Lady in the Piew, where he made his Prayers; and returning by the Suburbs of Weſt Smithfield, he found all that Place full of People, to wit, the Kentiſh Men. Wherefore he ſent to ſhew them, That their Fellows, the Eſſex Men, were gone home; and that he would grant to them the like Form of Peace, if it liked them to accept thereof.

The King ſendeth to the Kentiſh Men.

Walter Hilliard, alias Tylar, their Chief Captain.

Their Chief Captain, named John, or, as other affirm, Walter Hilliard, alias Tylar, being a crafty Fellow, and of an excellent Wit, but wanting Grace, anſwered; That he deſired Peace, but with Conditions to his Liking: Meaning to feed the King with fair Words until next Day, that he might in the Night Time have compaſſed his Purpoſe. For they thought (the ſame Night) to have ſpoiled the City; the King being firſt ſlain, and the Great Lords that were about him; then to have burnt the City, by ſetting Fire in Four Parts thereof. But God, that reſiſteth the Proud, did ſuddenly diſappoint him. For whereas the Form of Peace was written in three ſeveral Charters, and thrice ſent to him; none of them could pleaſe him. Wherefore at length, the King ſent to him one of his Knights, named Sir John Newton, not ſo much to command as to intreat him (for his Pride was well enough known) to come and talk with him about his own Demands, to have them put into his Charter: Of which Demands I will ſet down One, that it may plainly appear, how contrary to Reaſon all the reſt were.

The wicked and bloody Intent of the Rebels in the Night-time.

The King ſendeth Sir John Newton to Wat Tylar, about his own Demands.

One of Wat Tylar's arrogant Demands made to the King.

Firſt, He would have a Commiſſion to behead all Lawyers, Eſcheators, and others whatſoever, that were Learned in the Law, or communicated with the Law, by reaſon of their Office. For he had conceived in his Mind, that this being brought to paſs, all things afterward ſhould be ordered according to the Fancy of the Common People. And indeed it was ſaid, that he had (but the Day before) made his vaunt, putting his Hand to his own Lips, That before Four Days came to an End, all the Laws of England ſhould proceed from his Mouth. When Sir John Newton was in hand with him for Diſpatch, he anſwered him with Indignation: If thou art ſo haſty, get thee to thy Maſter, for I will come when it pleaſeth me. Notwithſtanding, he followed on Horſeback a ſlow Pace; and by the way, there came to him a Doublet Maker, who had brought to the Commons Threeſcore Doublets, which they bought and wore; and he demanded Thirty Marks for them, but could have no Payment. Wat Tylar anſwered him, ſaying, Friend, appeaſe thy ſelf, thou ſhalt be well payed before this Day be ended; keep thee near to me, I will be thy Creditor.

A bold Brag of a Rebel.

John Tickle, the Doublet-maker, his coming to Wat Tylar, and what Anſwer he made him.

Setting Spurs to his Horſe, he departed from his Company, and came ſo near to the King, that his Horſe had touched the Crooper of the King's Horſe; and the firſt Words he ſpake, were theſe: Sir King, Seeſt thou all yonder People? Yea, truly, quoth the King; Wherefore ſayſt thou ſo? Becauſe (ſaid he) they be all at my Commandment, and have ſworn to me their Faith and Truth, to do all that I would have them. In good Time, replied the King, I believe it well. Then ſaid Wat Tylar, believeſt thou, King, that theſe People, and as many more as be in London, at my Command, will depart from thee thus, without having thy Letters? No, ſaid the King, ye ſhall have them, they be ordained for you, and ſhall be delivered to every one of them.

Wat Tylar's coming to the King, and his audacious Words to him.

A lamentable Caſe when a King ſhould be in ſuch Diſtreſs.

At theſe Words, Wat Tylar ſeeing the Knight Sir John Newton near to him on Horſeback, bearing the King's Sword, was offended, and ſaid, It had become him better to be on Foot in his Preſence. The Knight (not having forgot his old accuſtomed Manhood) anſwered, That it was no harm, ſeeing himſelf was alſo on Horſeback. Which Words ſo offended Wat, that he drew his Dagger, and offered to ſtrike the Knight, calling him Traitor. The Knight anſwered, that he lied; and drew his Dagger likewiſe. Wat Tylar, not ſuffering ſuch an Indignity to be done him, and before his ruſtick Companions, made as if he would have run upon the Knight. The King therefore, ſeeing the Knight in Danger, to aſſwage the Rigor of Wat for the Time, commanded the Knight to alight on Foot, and to deliver his Dagger to Wat Tylar. But when his proud Mind could not be ſo pacified, but he would alſo have his Sword, the Knight anſwered, It was the King's Sword; and (quoth he) thou art not worthy to have it, nor durſt thou aſk it of me, if here were no more but thou and I. By my Faith, ſaid Wat Tylar, I ſhall never eat, until I have thy Head, and would have run in upon the Knight.

Wat Tylar's Words to Sir John Newton, who did bear the King's Sword.

The Knight commanded to alight on Foot before the Rebel.

At that very Inſtant came to the King William Walworth, Lord Maior of London, a bold, courageous, and brave minded Man, with many Knights and Squires to aſſiſt the King, and he ſaid, “My Liege, it were a great Shame, and ſuch as never had before been heard of, if in that Preſence, they ſhould permit a Noble Knight to be ſhamefully murthered, and before the Face of their Sovereign; wherefore he ought to be reſcued, and Tylar the Rebel to be arreſted.” Which Words being heard, the King, although he were but of tender Years, taking Boldneſs and Courage to him, commanded the Maior of London to lay Hand upon him. The Maior, being a Man of an incomparable Spirit and Boldneſs, without any further Delay or Doubting, ſtraight arreſted him with his Mace upon the Head; and in ſuch ſort, that he fell down at the Feet of his Horſe. By and by, they which attended on the King, environed him round about, whereby he was not ſeen of his Company. And an Eſquire of the King's, called John Cavendiſh, alighted from his Horſe, and thruſt his Sword into Wat Tylar's Belly: Albeit, more Opinions do hold, that the Maior did it with his Dagger, and many beſide, thruſt him in, in many Places of his Body, and then drew him from among the People, into the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew. Which, when the Commons perceived, they cried out, that their Captain was traterouſly ſlain, heartning one another to fight, and to revenge his Death, bending their Bows. But the King rode to them, ſaying, What a Work is this, my Men? What mean you to do? Will you ſhoot at your King? Be not quarrellous, or ſorry for the Death of a Traytor and Ribald: I am your King, I will be your Captain and Leader: Follow me into the Field, there to have whatſoever you will require.

The coming of William Walworth, Lord Maior of London, to the King, and his worthy Words to him.

William Walworth, Lord Maior of London, arreſted Wat Tylar, and felled him to the Ground.

Wat Tylar, the Rebel, ſlain in Smithfield.

The King's kind Words to the rude Multitude.

This the King did, leſt the Commons, being bitterly bent in mind, ſhould ſet fire on the Houſes in Smithfield, where their Captain was ſlain. They therefore followed him into the open Field, and the Soldiers that were with him, not knowing as yet whether they would kill the King, or be in reſt, and depart home with the King's Charter. In the mean while, worthy Walworth, the (for ever) famous Maior of London, to ſecond his firſt Piece of Service which fell out to ſo good Purpoſe, only with one Servant, riding ſpeedily into the City, began to cry, “You good Citizens, come to help your King, that is in doubt to be murdered; and ſuccour me your Maior, that am in the like Danger: Or if you will not ſuccour me, yet leave not the King deſtitute.” When the Citizens heard this, in whoſe Hearts the Love of the King was ingrafted, ſuddenly, and very ſeemly prepared, (to the Number of a Thouſand) they tarried in the Streets for ſome one of the Knights to lead them (with the Lord Mayor) to the King: And by good Fortune, Sir Robert Knowles, a Freeman of the City, came in the very Inſtant, whom they all required to be their Leader. He gladly undertook Part of them; and Perducas Dalbert, the Lord Maior, and ſome other Knights, led on the reſt to the King's Preſence. The King, and all that were with him, rejoiced not a little at the unhoped for coming of theſe brave armed Citizens, ſuddenly compaſſed the whole Multitude of the Commons.

They followed the King into the Field.

Another worthy Action performed by the Lord Maior.

A Noble and Loyal Forwardneſs in true-hearted Citizens for the Succour of their King, being in great Diſtreſs.

There might a Man have ſeen a wonderful Change of God's Right Hand; how the Commons did now throw down their Weapons, and fall to the Ground, beſeeching Pardon; who lately before did glory that they had the King's Life in their Power; and now were glad to hide themſelves in Caves, Ditches, Corn Fields, &c. The Knights therefore, deſirous to be revenged, beſought the King to permit them to take off the Heads of an Hundred or two of them. But the King would not condeſcend to their Requeſt; but commanded the Charter which they had demanded, written and ſealed, to be delivered to them for the Time, to avoid any more Miſchief: As knowing well, that Eſſex was not yet pacified, nor Kent ſtayed; the Commons and Ruſticks of which Countries were ready to riſe again, if he did not ſatisfy them the ſooner. The Commons having got the Charter, departed homeward; and the rude People being diſperſed and gone, the King called for his valiant Maior of London, William Walworth, whom (with great Honour) he Knighted there in the Field, and as he had very worthily deſerved. The like he did to Nicholas Brember, John Philpot, Robert Lawnd, John Standiſh, Nicholas Twiford, and Adam Francis, Aldermen. Afterward the King, with his Lords and his Company, orderly entred into the City of London with great Joy, and went to his Royal Mother,

A wonderful Alteration among the Rebels.

Great Wiſdom and Diſcretion in the King, being ſo young.

W. Walworth, Lord Maior of London, Knighted in the Field, and other Aldermen with him.

ther, who was lodged in the Tower Royal, called the Queen's Wardrobe. And there ſhe had remained two Days and two Nights, very much abaſhed and amazed. But when ſhe ſaw the King her Son, ſhe was highly comforted, and ſaid, Ah fair Son, what great Sorrow have I ſuffered for you this Day! The King anſwered, and ſaid; “Certainly, Madam, I know it well; but now rejoice, and thank God, for I have this Day recovered my Heritage, and the Realm of England, which I had near hand loſt.”

The comfortable Words of the King to his Mother.

The Archbiſhop's Head was taken off the Bridge, and Wat Tylar's Head ſet up in the Place.

Wat Tyler's Head.

The Arms of London augmented by Addition of a Dagger.

Here we are further to conſider, that for an eternal Remembrance of this happy Day, and the Cities Honour withal, the King granted, that there ſhould be a Dagger added to the Arms of the City, in the Right Quarter of the Shield, for an Augmentation of the ſame Arms, and a Memory of the Lord Maior's valiant Act, as doth appear unto this Day. For till that Time, the City bare only the Croſs without the Dagger.

Concerning vulgar miſtaking the Captain's Name of the Rebels.

And whereas it hath been far ſpread abroad by vulgar Opinion, that the Rebel ſmitten down ſo manfully by Sir William Walworth, the then worthy Lord Maior of London, was named Jack Straw, and not Wat Tylar; I thought good to reconcile this raſh conceived Doubt, by ſuch Teſtimony as I find in ancient and good Records. The principal Leaders and Captains of the Commons, were Wat Tylar, as the firſt Man that took himſelf to be offended. The ſecond was John or Jack Straw; the third, was John Kirkby; the fourth, Allen Thredder; the fifth, Thomas Scot; the ſixth, Ralph Rugge. Theſe, and many other, were Leaders of the Kentiſh and Eſſex Men. At Mildenhall, and Bury in Suffolk, was Robert Weſtbrome, that made himſelf a King; and was moſt famous, next to John Wrawe, who being a Prieſt, could not ſet Crown upon Crown; but left the Name of King and Crown to the ſame Robert. At Norwich, John Liteſter, a Dyer, exerciſed the Name and Power of a King, till he was taken and hanged for his Pains. Thus dangerouſly had this Rebellion diſperſed it ſelf abroad. But the happy and proſperous Succeſs at London, with other good Care for them further off, gave a gracious Iſſue to all in the End.

The Name of the chief Captains and Ring Leaders in the Rebellion.

The Rebellion had extended it ſelf into many Pieces.

After the Death of Wat Tylar, and Jack Straw being taken, with divers other, as chief Actors in this monſtrous Diſorder; the forenamed Lord Maior ſat in Judgment upon the Offenders, and pronounced the Sentence of Death upon them. At which Time, the Lord Maior ſpake openly to him thus: John (quoth he) behold, thy Death is at hand without all doubt, and there is no Way through which thou mayſt hope to eſcape; wherefore, for thy Soul's Health, without making any Lie, tell us what you purpoſed to have done among you; and to what End you did aſſemble the Commons? When he had ſtayed a while, as doubtful what to ſay, the Maior began thus again to him: Surely thou knoweſt, John, that the Thing which I demand of thee, if thou do it truly, it will redound to thy Soul's Health, &c. He therefore, animated by the Lord Maior's good Words, began as followeth:

The Lord Maior ſat in Judgment on the Rebels; and his Words that he uſed to Jack Straw.

The Confeſſion of Jack Straw to the Lord Maior of London, before his Death.

“Now it booteth not to lie, neither is it lawful to utter any Untruth; eſpecially underſtanding that my Soul is to ſuffer more ſtraiter Torments, if I ſhould ſo do. And becauſe I hope for two Commodities by ſpeaking the Truth: Firſt, That what I ſhall ſpeak, may profit the Commonwealth; And Secondly, after my Death, I truſt by your Suffrages to be ſuccoured, according to your Promiſes, which is to pray for me; I will ſpeak faithfully, and without any Deceit.

What they intended to do at Black Heath.

Their Intent for keeping the King.

“At the ſame Time as we were aſſembled upon Blackheath, and had ſent to the King to come unto us; our Purpoſe was to have ſlain all ſuch Knights, Squires, and Gentlemen, as ſhould have given their Attendance thither upon him. And as for the King, we would have kept him among us, to the End that the People might more boldly have repaired to us; ſith they would have thought, that whatſoever we did, the ſame had been done by his Authority. Finally, when we had gotten Power enough, that we needed not to fear any Force which might be made againſt us, we would have ſlain all ſuch Noblemen as might either have given Counſel, or made any Reſiſtance againſt us; eſpecially we would have ſlain the Knights of the Rhodes or St. John's: And laſtly, We would have killed the King himſelf, and all Men of Poſſeſſions; with Biſhops, Monks, Canons, and Parſons of Churches. Only Friars Mendicants we would have ſpared, that might have ſufficed for Miniſtration of the Sacraments.

The killing of all Noblemen, Killing the King, and all that had any Poſſeſſions.

Laws deviſed by themſelves.

Creation of Kings among them.

Their Malice to the Archbiſhop; for what Cauſe.

Their Intent to burn London.

“When we had made a Riddance of all thoſe, we would have deviſed Laws, according to which Laws the Subjects of the Realm ſhould have lived. For we would have created Kings, as Wat Tylar in Kent, and other in other Countries. But becauſe this our Purpoſe was diſappointed by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, that would not permit the King to come to us; we ſought by all means to diſpatch him out of the way, as at length we did. Moreover, the ſame Evening that Wat Tylar was killed, we were determined (having the greateſt Part of the Commons of the City bent to join with us) to have ſet Fire in Four Corners of the City, and ſo to have divided among our ſelves the Spoil of the chiefeſt Riches that might have been found, at our own Pleaſure. And this (ſaid he) was our Purpoſe, as God may help me now at my laſt End.

After this Confeſſion made, he was beheaded, and his Head ſet on London Bridge by Wat Tylar's, and many other.]

Now to proceed to other Actions in the Tower.

D. of Bucks beheaded.

In the Year 1521, (upon ſome Speeches caſt forth) a Difference happened betwixt Cardinal Wolſey and the Duke of Buckingham; whereupon the Cardinal finds Means to take away his Life; He alledging, that the Duke ſhould ſay to the Lord Abergavenny, (who married his Daughter) That if King Henry died without Iſſue, he would look to have the Crown himſelf: So that he being tried by his Peers, was found guilty; and upon the 17th of May, he was led by John Keyme and John Skevington, then Sheriffs of London, to the Scaffold upon Tower Hill, and was there beheaded.]

Fiſher and More committed to the Tower, and executed.

J. S.

In the Year 1534, John Fiſher, Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Sir Thomas More, late Lord Chancellor, (both remarkable Men) were committed to the Tower, for denying to ſwear to the Act of Succeſſion made the laſt Parliament: Yet both profeſſing a Readineſs to ſwear to the Succeſſion it ſelf, but not to the whole Act; wherein the Marriage with Queen Katharine, the King's firſt Wife, was declared to be againſt the Law of God; and wherein alſo were ſome Touches againſt the Pope's Authority. For this Refuſal, they were attainted by Parliament. And afterwards, in another Parliament, an Act paſſed for the King's Supremacy, and for Aboliſhing of the Pope's Power in this Realm. This Act alſo they refuſing to ſwear to, in June, Anno 1535, upon the ſaid Attainder, the Biſhop was executed on Tower Hill; and the next Month, the Knight in the ſame Place.] The Biſhop was much lamented, as being a Man of great Learning, and of a good Life: And Sir Thomas More was both learned, and very wiſe; but ſo given to the Vein of merry Jeſting and Scoffing, that he could not refrain it at the Time of his Death. When he was carried to the Tower, his upper Garment being demanded, (meaning his Gown) he gave them his Cap, ſaying, That was the uppermoſt Garment he had. When he had been there cloſe Priſoner for ſome Time, they took from him all his Books; whereupon he ſhut up all his Windows; and being aſked, why? He anſwered, 'Tis Time to ſhut up Shop, when the Ware is all gone. Nay, when he was upon the Scaffold, the Executioner kneeled down, and aſked him Forgiveneſs: I forgive thee, ſays he. And when he was to lay his Head down on the Block, he (having a great grey Beard) ſaid to the Executioner, I pray let me lay my Beard over the Block, leaſt you ſhould cut it; for though you have a Warrant to cut off my Head, you have none to cut my Beard.]

In the Year 1661, July the 1ſt, the Lord Mounſon, Sir Henry Mildmay, and Mr. Robert Wallop (three of the King's Judges in the pretended High Court of Juſtice) were brought to that Bar in the Parliament Houſe, and there ſentenced to be drawn upon Sledges, with Ropes about their Necks, from the Tower to Tyburn, and back again to the Tower, which was accordingly executed on the 27th of January following.

Corbet, Okey, and Baxter, taken and executed.

Upon the 16th of March, the ſame Year, Miles Corbet, John Okey, and John Baxſter or Baxſted (three other of the King's Judges, who fled) were taken at Delft, by Sir George Downing, and brought Priſoners to the Tower; and on the 16th of April following they received Sentence of Death, juſtly due unto them; and on the 19th of the ſaid Month they were all three drawn upon Sledges from the Tower to Tyburn, and there Hanged and Quartered, and their Heads and Quarters ſet up as cuſtomary for Traitors.

Sir Hen. Vane Executed.

In the Year 1662, Sir Henry Vane was Indicted, and found guilty of High Treaſon; and Collonel Lambert the like on the 9th of June; and on the 11th both received their Sentence of Death; but Lambert's Execution was reſpited by order from his Majeſty, becauſe of his prudent, and civil Deportment at his Tryal; but on the 14th Sir Henry Vane was beheaded on Tower Hill.

3 others committed.

On the 16th of January, 1662, Mr. Edward Bagſhaw, a Miniſter, was committed to the Tower, for Treaſonable Deſigns and Practices. Upon the 18th Philip Gibbs was removed from Newgate to the Tower. And upon the 26th, Archibald Johnſton was committed to the Tower for Crimes of High Treaſon; and on the 22d of July following, was Executed at Edinburgh in Scotland, upon a Gibbet 22 Foot high.

In the Year 1663, Abraham Goodman was committed to the Tower, for attempting to murther the Duke of Buckingham.

In the Year 1665, on the 30th of October, Sir Thomas Bludworth was ſworn Lord Maior of London, at the outmoſt Gate of the Bulwark by Sir John Robinſon, Lieutenant of the Tower, by vertue of his Majeſty's Commiſſion for that Purpoſe to him directed.]

Commiſſioners appointed to view the State of the Tower, and Priſoners, Anno 1590. J. S.

The reſt of the Executions on Tower Hill, of ſuch as were detained Priſoners in the Tower, it would be too long to inſert, and may eaſily be ſearched for in our Chronicles by ſuch as are deſirous to know them. Therefore we ſhall ſtep back to the Year 1590, when Sir Michael Blount firſt became Lieutenant of the Tower. Commiſſioners were then, in the Month of June, appointed to take a careful View of the State of that Place, as it was at that time; as likewiſe of the Priſoners at that time there, the Queen being in great Apprehenſion that Year of another Invaſion from Spain, that threatned as much, or more than that in 1588. And to do this the more exactly, there proceeded from the Lord Treaſurer, a Note of ſuch Remembrances as were then to be examined by the ſaid Commiſſioners; which was this that followeth.

A Note of Things to be enquired into. MSS. de Turr. pen. me.

“Imprimis, To enquire in what Repair are the Queens Majeſties Lodgings, and all other Places for the keeping of Priſoners, and the Lieutenants Lodgings. And in what Parts of the Queen's Privy Lodging Priſoners are kept; and who they are.

“Item, To ſurvey all Places, or Houſes, or Lodgings, wherein any Perſons do inhabit or uſe to lodge; and how many of them have cauſe to dwell or lodge there for the Service of her Majeſty within the Tower. And how many Perſons are in every ſuch Family or Lodging, both of Men, Women, and Children.

“Item, How many Families or Perſons be Lodged there, that have no ordinary Cauſe of Reſort to the Tower for the Queen's Majeſty's Service; and how long have they there continued; and by whoſe means came they to thoſe Dwelling Places or Lodgings.

“Item, How many Priſoners are in the Tower, and in what Places are they lodged. And whether any Perſons dwell ſo near to the Priſon, as that the Priſoners and they may have ſecret Conference together.

“Item, To enquire of the Queen's Ordinary, Yeomen Wardens; and how they do their Service by themſelves, or by their Deputies.

“Item, To enquire of the Houſes lately Erected againſt the Tower Walls, or near to the Tower Ditches or Wharfs; and how they are fit to be continued, or not; and who dwells in them; and to whom they pay their Rents.

“Item, What Annoyances are offered to the Houſe and Ditches by the Citizens of London, and the Inhabitants there adjoining, as well within the Liberties, as without.

Priſoners in the Tower, An. 1590.

Whereupon, this Liſt of the Names of the Priſoners in the Tower, delivered to the Cuſtody of Sir Michael Blount from Sir Owen Hopton by Indenture, was given in.

A Priſoner ſleeps but 10 Hours in 7 Weeks.

Here let me ſubjoin a remarkable Paſſage, concerning a Priſoner in the Tower in Q. Elizabeth's Reign (whoſe Name I cannot aſſign) that ſlept but Ten Hours in Seven Weeks, by the Oath of them that watched him. As I collect out of a Note-book of Sir Michael Hicks, Secretary to the Lord Treaſurer Burghley. Who alſo makes mention there of another named Heywood, (and a Priſoner, I ſuppoſe,) that ſtrained himſelf ſo much with immoderate Laughing, that he bled Thirty Ounces of Blood.

The Imperial Crown and Globe ſtolen away, but recovered.

But among all the memorable Accidents that have happened in the Tower, hardly any Hiſtory of our Country, can equal that cunning, audacious and villanous Attempt of one Blood in K. Charles the Second's Time, in ſtealing the Crown, and his Camerade the Globe, out of the ſafe Place where they with the reſt of the Regalia were kept; and carrying them out of the Tower: tho' they were diſcovered at laſt and ſeized. A faithful Relation deſerves to ſtand upon Record. And ſuch a Relation is this that follows, which I had from the Favour of Mr. Edwards himſelf, the late Keeper of the Regalia.

The Manner, how. Mr. Edwards.

About three Weeks before this Blood made his Attempt upon the Crown, he came to the Tower in the Habit of a Parſon, with a long Cloak, Caſſock and Canonical Girdle, and brought a Woman with him whom he called Wife. Altho' in truth his Wife was then ſick in Lancaſhire. This pretended Wife deſired to ſee the Crown; and having ſeen it feigned to have a Qualm come upon her Stomach, and deſired Mr. Edwards (who was Keeper of the Regalia) to ſend for ſome Spirits, who immediately cauſed his Wife to fetch ſome; whereof when ſhe had drunk, ſhe courteouſly invited her up Stairs to repoſe her ſelf upon a Bed: Which Invitation ſhe accepted, and ſoon recovered. At their Departure they ſeemed very thankful for this Civility.

About three or four Days after, Blood came again to Mrs. Edwards, with a preſent of Four Pair of White Gloves from his Wife. And having thus begun the Acquaintance; they made frequent Viſits to improve it: She profeſſing, that ſhe ſhould never ſufficiently acknowledge her Kindneſs.

Having made ſome ſmall Reſpit of his Compliments, he returned again, and ſaid to Mrs. Edwards, that his Wife could diſcourſe of nothing but of the Kindneſs of thoſe good People in the Tower. That ſhe had long ſtudied, and at length bethought her ſelf of a handſome way of Requital. You have, ſaid he, a pretty Gentlewoman to your Daughter, and I have a young Nephew who hath two or three Hundred a Year Land, and is at my Diſpoſal. If your Daughter be free, and you approve of it, I will bring him hither to ſee her, and we will endeavour to make it a Match.

This was eaſily aſſented to by old Mr. Edwards, who invited the Parſon to dine with him that Day, and he as readily accepted of the Invitation; who taking upon him to ſay Grace, performed it with great Devotion, and caſting up of Eyes, and concluded his long winded Grace, with a hearty Prayer for the King, Queen, and Royal Family. After Dinner he went up to ſee the Rooms, and ſeeing a handſome Caſe of Piſtols hang there, he expreſt a great deſire to buy them, to preſent a young Lord who was his Neighbour. That was his Pretence, but his Purpoſe probably was to diſarm the Houſe againſt the Time that he intended to put the Deſign in Execution.

At his Departure (which was with a Canonical Benediction of the good Company) he appointed a Day and Hour to bring his young Nephew to his Miſtreſs; and it was that very Day that he made his Attempt; viz. the 9th of May, about Seven in the Morning, An. Dom. 1673.

The old Man was got up ready to receive his Gueſt, and the Daughter had put her ſelf into her beſt Dreſs to entertain her Gallant; when behold Parſon Blood, with three more came to the Jewel Houſe, all Armed with Rapier Blades in their Canes, and every one a Dagger, and a pair of Pocket Piſtols. Two of his Companions entred in with him, and the Third ſtayed at the Door, it ſeems, for a Watch. The Daughter thought it not modeſt for her to come down till ſhe was called, but ſhe ſent the Maid to take a View of the Company, and to bring her a Deſcription of the Perſon of her Gallant. The Maid conceived that he was the intended Bridegroom who ſtayed at the Door, becauſe he was the youngeſt of the Company; and returned to her young Miſtreſs with the Character that ſhe had formed of his Perſon.

Blood told Mr. Edwards, that they would not go up Stairs till his Wife came, and deſired him to ſhew his Friends the Crown to paſs the Time till then. Aſſoon as they were entred the Room where the Crown was kept, and the Door (as uſually) was ſhut behind them, they threw a Cloak over the Old Man's Head, and clapt a Gag into his Mouth, which was a great Plug of Wood, with a ſmall Hole in the Middle to take Breath at. This was tyed on with a waxed Leather, which went round his Neck. At the ſame time they faſtened an Iron Hook to his Noſe, that no Sound might paſs from him that Way neither.

When they had thus ſecured him from crying out they told him, that their Reſolution was to have the Crown, Globe and Sceptre. And that if he would quietly ſubmit to it they would ſpare his Life, otherwiſe he was to expect no Mercy. He thereupon forced himſelf to make all the Noiſe that poſſibly he could to be heard above: Then they knocked him down with a Wooden Mallet, and told him, that if yet he would lie quietly, they would ſpare his Life, but if not, upon the next Attempt to diſcover them, they would kill him, and pointed three Daggers at his Breaſt. But he ſtrained himſelf to make the greater Noiſe: Whereupon they gave him Nine or Ten Stroaks more upon the Head with the Mallet, (for ſo many Bruiſes were found upon the Skull) and ſtabbed him into the Belly.

Whereat the poor Man, almoſt Eighty Years of Age fell, and lay ſome time entranced. One of them kneeled on the Ground to try if he breathed; and not perceiving any Breath come from him ſaid, He is dead, I'll warrant him. Mr. Edwards came a little to himſelf, heard his Words; and conceived it beſt for him to be ſo thought, and lay quietly.

Then one of them named Parrot put the Globe into his Breeches. Blood held the Crown under his Cloak. The Third was deſigned to file the Sceptre in two, (becauſe too long to carry) and when filed it was to be put into a Bag brought for that Purpoſe.

But before this could be done, young Mr. Edwards, (Son of the Old Gentleman) who had attended upon Sir John Talbot into Flanders, and upon his firſt landing in England, was with Sir John's Leave come away Poſt to ſee his Old Father, chanced to arrive at the very Inſtant that this was acting; and coming to the Door, the Perſon that ſtood Centinel for the reſt, asked him with whom he would ſpeak? He made Anſwer, He belonged to the Houſe. But young Edwards, perceiving by his Queſtion, that he himſelf was a Stranger, told him, that if he had any Buſineſs with his Father he would go and acquaint him with it; and ſo went up, where he was welcomed by his Mother, Wife and Siſter.

In the mean time the Centinel gave notice of the Son's Arrival, and they forthwith haſted away with the Crown and Globe, but left the Sceptre, not having time to file it. The Old Man returning to himſelf got upon his Legs, pulled off the Gag (for they concluded him dead, and ſurprized with the Son's unexpected Arrival, had omitted to tye his Hands behind him) and cryed out, Treaſon! Murther!

The Daughter hearing him, haſted down, and ſeeing her Father thus wounded ran out upon the Tower Hill, and cryed Treaſon, The Crown is ſtolen. This gave the firſt Alarm: And Blood and Parrot making more than ordinary Haſte, were obſerved to jog each other with their Elbows as they went, which cauſed them to be ſuſpected and purſued.

By this time, young Mr. Edwards, and Captain Beckman, upon the Cry of their Siſter were come down, and left their Father likewiſe to run after the Villains; but they were advanced beyond the main Guard; and the Alarm being given loudly to the Warder at the Drawbridge, he put himſelf in poſture to ſtop them. Blood came up firſt, and diſcharged a Piſtol at him. The Bullet (if any there were) miſſed him, but the Powder or Fear made him fall to the Ground; whereby they got ſafe to the little Wardhouſe Gate; where one Sill, who had been a Soldier under Cromwell ſtood Centinel; who altho' he ſaw the other Warder ſhot made no Reſiſtance. By whoſe Cowardice, or Treachery, the Villains got over that Drawbridge, and through the outward Gate upon the Wharf, and made all poſſible haſte toward their Horſes, which attended at St. Katharine's Gate, called the Iron Gate; crying themſelves, as they ran, Stop the Rogues. And they were by all thought innocent, he being in that grave Canonical Habit, till Captain Beckman got up to them. Blood diſcharged his Second Piſtol at Captain Beckman's Head, but he ſtooping down avoided the Shot, and ſeized upon the Rogue, who had the Crown under his Cloak; yet had Blood the Impudence, altho' he ſaw himſelf a Priſoner to ſtruggle a long while for the Crown; and when it was wreſted from him ſaid; It was a gallant Attempt (how unſucceſsful ſoever) for it was for a Crown.

A Servant belonging to Captain Sherburn ſeized upon Parrot, before Blood was taken.

There was ſuch a Conſternation in all Men, and ſo much Confuſion in the Purſuit, that it was a wonder ſome innocent Perſons had not ſuffered for the Guilty. For young Edwards overtaking one that was bloody in the Skuffle, and ſuppoſing him to be one of thoſe who had murthered his Father, was going to run him through, had not Captain Beckman cryed, Hold, he is none of them.

And as Captain Beckman made more than ordinary haſte in the Purſuit, the Guards were going to fire at him, ſuppoſing him to be one of the Rogues; but one of them who by good Fortune knew him, cryed out, Forbear: He is a Friend.

Blood and Parrot being both ſeized (as hath been ſaid) Hunt, Blood's Son in Law, leaped to Horſe, with two more of the Conſpirators, and rid far away. But a Cart ſtanding empty in the Street, chanced to turn ſhort, and Hunt run his Head againſt a Pole that ſtuck far out; but he recovering his Legs, and putting his Foot in the Stirrop, a Cobler running to enquire after the Diſaſter, ſaid, This is Tom Hunt, who was in that bloody Attempt upon the Perſon of the Duke of Ormond : Let us ſecure him. A Conſtable being accidentally there, ſeized him upon that Affirmation, and carried him before Juſtice Smith. Who, upon his confident Denial of himſelf to be Hunt, was about to let him go; but the Hue and Cry coming, that the Crown was taken out of the Tower, he was committed to ſafe Cuſtody.

Young Edwards propoſed to Lieutenant Rainsford, to mount ſome of his Soldiers upon the Horſes that were left, and ſend them to follow the reſt that eſcaped; but he bad him follow himſelf, if he would: It was his Buſineſs: And led the Fellows Horſes into the Tower, as forfeited to the Lieutenant.

Hunt.

Hunt (as hath been ſaid) was Son in Law to Blood, and trained up in his Practices.

Parrot.

Parrot was a Silk-Dyer in Southwark; and in the Rebellion had been Major General Harriſon's Lieutenant.

Blood.

Duke of Ormond.

Blood was the Son of a Blackſmith in Ireland; a Fellow that thought ſmall Villanies below him. One of his virtuous Camerades, having received Sentence of Death in Yorkſhire for ſome Crime, he reſcued out of the Hands of the Sheriffs Men, as they were leading him to the Gallows. He, with others, laid a Deſign in Ireland, to ſurprize the Caſtle of Dublin, and the Magazine therein, and to uſurp the Government. But being diſcovered by the Duke of Ormond the Night before the intended Execution, ſome of them were apprehended, and ſuffered as Traitors. Whoſe Death Blood and the reſt of the ſurviving Rogues bound themſelves by ſolemn Oath, to revenge upon the Duke's Perſon. This occaſioned his Third Enterprize. For he, with five or ſix more of his Aſſociates (whereof Hunt was one) well mounted, came one Night up to his Coach ſide, before he came to his own Gate, dwelling then at Albemarl Houſe, took him out of his Coach, forced him up behind one of the Horſemen, and were riding away with him as far as Berkely Houſe. Where the Duke threw himſelf off the Horſe with the Villain, who had tied the Duke faſt to him. The reſt turned back, diſcharging two Piſtols at the Duke; but taking their Aim in the Dark, miſſed him. By this Time the Neighbourhood was alarmed, and the Rogues having Work enough to ſave themſelves, rid for it, and got away.

It was no ſmall Diſrepute to that helliſh Contriver amongſt his Camerades, to fail in a Project which he had laid ſo ſure, and repreſented to them ſo eaſy to be effected. Therefore, to redeem his Credit with them, he entred immediately upon the Contrivance of another, that ſhould fully recompence all former Miſcarriages, with an infallible Proſpect of Gain, and the Reputation of a daring Villany: Which was that of ſharing the Regalia.

In the robuſtious Struggle for the Crown, as was ſhewed before, the great Pearl and a fair Diamond fell off, and were loſt for a while, with ſome other ſmaller Stones. But the Pearl was found by Katharine Maddox (a poor Sweeping Woman to one of the Warders) and the Diamond by a Barber's Apprentice; and both faithfully reſtored. Other ſmaller Stones were by ſeveral Perſons picked up, and brought in. The fair Ballas Ruby belonging to the Sceptre, was found in Parrot's Pocket. So that not any conſiderable Thing was wanting. The Crown only was bruiſed and ſent to repair.

Young Mr. Edwards went preſently to Sir Gilbert Talbot; and gave him an Account of all that had paſſed. Who inſtantly went to the King, and acquainted his Majeſty with it. His Majeſty commanded him to make haſte to the Tower, to enquire, how Matters ſtood; to take the Examination of Blood and the reſt; and to return and report all to him. Sir Gilbert accordingly went and found the Priſoners (whoſe Wounds had been already dreſs'd) with their Keepers in the White Tower. Blood lay in a Corner dogged and lowring, and would not give a Word of Anſwer to any one Queſtion.

His Majeſty was in the mean time perſuaded by ſome about him to hear the Examination himſelf. And the Priſoners were forthwith ſent for to Whitehall. Nothing but that could poſſibly have ſaved Blood from the Gallows. But that which ought to have been his ſurer Condemnation, proved to be his Safety. For all Men concluding, that none but thoſe who had the Courage to adventure upon ſuch a daring Villany as that of the Crown, could be guilty of the Practice upon a Peer of that Magnitude as was the Duke of Ormond; eſpecially the Parliament than ſitting. Amongſt other Queſtions therefore it was thought fit to interrogate him, Whether he had not a Hand in that Aſſault? For the Authors of it were as yet altogether in the Dark.

Blood examined before the King.

Blood (as if he had valued himſelf upon the Action, and poſſibly ſuſpecting that the King might have made ſome Diſcovery of it already, without any manner of Scruple or Heſitation, confeſſed he had. It was then aſked him, Who his Aſſociates were; He anſwered, that he would never betray a Friend's Life; nor never deny a Guilt, in Defence of his own. It was next aſked him, What Provocation he had to make ſo bold an Aſſault upon the Duke of Ormond? He ſaid, the Duke had taken away his Eſtate, and executed ſome of his Friends; and that he and many other had engaged themſelves by ſolemn Oath to revenge it.

And leſt any of his audacious Villanies ſhould leſſen the Romance of his Life, by lying concealed in his Examination about the Crown, he voluntarily confeſſed to the King, (but whether truly or falſly, may very well endure a Queſtion, as I ſhall endeavour to ſhew anon) that he had been engaged in a Deſign to kill his Majeſty with a Carbine from out of the Reeds by the Thames ſide, above Batterſea; where he often went to ſwim. That the Cauſe of this Reſolution in himſelf, and others, was his Majeſty's Severity over the Conſciences of the Godly, in ſuppreſſing the Freedom of their Religious Aſſemblies. That when he had taken his Stand in the Reeds for that Purpoſe, his Heart was checked with an Awe of Majeſty; and he did not only himſelf relent, but diverted the reſt of his Aſſociates from the Deſign.

He told his Majeſty, that he had by theſe his Confeſſions, laid himſelf ſufficiently open to the Law; and he might reaſonably expect the utter Rigor of it; for which he was (without much Concern of his own) prepared. But he ſaid withal, that the Matter would not be of that Indifference to his Majeſty; inaſmuch as there were Hundreds of his Friends, yet undiſcovered, who were all bound to each other by the indiſpenſible Oaths of Conſpirators, to revenge the Death of any of the Fraternity upon thoſe who ſhould bring them to Juſtice. Which would expoſe his Majeſty and all his Miniſters to the daily Fear and Expectation of a Maſſacre. But on the other ſide, if his Majeſty would ſpare the Lives of a few, he might oblige the Hearts of many; who (as they had been ſeen to do daring Miſchiefs) would be as bold, if received into Pardon and Favour, to perform eminent Services for the Crown. And he pretended ſuch an Intereſt and Sway amongſt the Fanaticks, to diſpoſe them to their Fidelity, as though he been their choſen General, and had them all entered in his Muſter Roll.

Fanaticks.

Pardoned.

In ſhort, Blood and his Aſſociates were not only pardoned, and ſet free, but the Arch Villain himſelf had 500*l. per Ann.* conferred upon him in Ireland, and admitted into all the Privacy and Intimacy of Court. Mr. Edwards had the Grant of 200*l.* and his Son 100*l.*

A Continuation of this Narrative. J. S. Sir Gilbert Talbot.

I have, ſince the Writing of what is aboveſaid, met with a Continuation of Blood's ſtealing the Crown, in Mr. Edwards's MSS. writ, as it ſeems, by Sir Gilbert Talbot. Which is as follows.

Quakers.

What his Operation had been among the Quakers (who are his moſt beloved Sect above all others, and in whoſe Synagogue he hath his eminent Seat) the World is yet to learn; except it be, that he had multiplied their Congregations, and increaſed their Swarms in all Counties. But where lies his Majeſty's Service in all this? Oh! they are kept quiet, and do not moleſt the Government. Indeed the Quakers have ever been reputed an innocent, harmleſs kind of Madmen: But he muſt be as mad as they, that can think them ſo, while Blood is of their Congregation.

Some Cenſures thereupon.

Since this Villain's Crimes then are viſible to all Mankind, and his Merits altogether incomprehenſible, every Man will take the Liberty to conjecture, what Conſideration could poſſibly beget his Pardon. His Crimes were without Controverſy the higheſt Breaches of Human Laws: Murther acted upon a poor old Gentleman for defending his Truſt; and Murther intended to be acted upon a Great Peer, with all the Circumſtances of Contempt: A Deſign laid to ſurprize the King's Caſtle; a violent Seizure of his Crown and Sceptre; and a confeſſed lying in wait to deſtroy his Perſon.

It requires a great Meaſure of Mercy in a Prince (for it is not decent to attribute it to any thing elſe) to forgive ſuch Injuries, done to himſelf. But it is above his Mercy to pardon the Offence committed againſt another, becauſe Heaven, which is all merciful, forgiveth not the Treſpaſſes which we commit againſt our Neighbours, without Reſtitution. Yet the Lord Arlington came in his Majeſty's Name to the Duke of Ormond to tell him, that he would not have Blood proſecuted, for Reaſons which he was commanded to give him. The Duke replied, That his Majeſty's Command was the only Reaſon that could be given, and that therefore he might ſpare the reſt. It was a gallant Anſwer of his Grace, and ſuch as well became the Loyalty of his Family. But it is great Pity in the mean time, that the World ſhould want the Knowledge of his Lordſhip's Reaſons, which had Weight enough in them to ſmother a Matter of that high Concernment, to the Diſhonour of Juſtice, and the Dignity of Peerage.

How great a Miſery ſoever it is to the World Blood and his Aſſociates were not only pardoned and ſet free, but the Arch Villain himſelf had the forementioned Land conferred upon him in Ireland; and that meritorious Perſon admitted into all the Privacy and Intimacy of the Court. No Man more aſſiduous than himſelf in both Secretaries Offices. If any one had a Buſineſs in Court that ſtuck, he made his Applications to Blood, as the moſt induſtrious and ſucceſsful Sollicitor. Nay, many Gentlemen courted his Acquaintance, as the Indians pray to the Devils, that they may not hurt them.

Blood had no body but his own black Deeds to advocate for him. Yet thus was he rewarded. And although many ſollicited for old Mr. Edwards; and had raiſed their Arguments from his Fidelity, Courage and Wounds received; yet all that could be obtained for him was a Grant of 200*l.* out of the Exchequer, and 100*l.* to his Son, as beforeſaid. The Payment whereof was ſo long delayed, and his Chirurgeons calling upon him daily for Satisfaction for their Drugs and Pains, he was forced to ſell his Order for 100*l.* Ready Money, and the Son his for 50*l.* and lived not long to enjoy the Remainder. For he died within a Year and a Month after the Wounds received.

Reflexions.

But now to reflect a little, as I promiſed, not only upon the myſterious Redemption of this Rogue from the Gallows; but upon the (never to be enough wondred) Recompence for his Villanies, of 500*l. per Ann.* a Reward which the moſt meritorious Vertue hath ſeldom met with. Let us therefore conſider him firſt, as taken in ſo flagrant a Crime, that no Plea could poſſibly lie in favour of his Life, nor no Hopes could be ſo impudent as to expect it. Obſerve then what he doth. He maketh a voluntary Confeſſion of three other rapping Crimes. One his Attempt upon the Duke of Ormond. And his alledged Provocation to that, was by Conſequence a Confeſſion of his Conſpiracy upon the Caſtle of Dublin. Thus much he thought neceſſary to acknowledge, to ſhew his Power and Audacity; that in caſe he were brought to Execution, he ſhould ſtand recorded in Story to have died like a daring Sinner, and not as a petty Malefactor. Then he declareth freely and of his own Accord, his Intention to aſſaſſinate his Majeſty in the River. I aſk any Man of Reaſon, What other Conſideration could move him to that Confeſſion? But to bring in this other Part of his Story, he was to tell his Majeſty, that his Heart relented, being ſurpriz'd with Awe and Reverence of his Perſon, (he had none of his Crown) and that he [not] only forbore the Execution himſelf, but diſſuaded his Aſſociates likewiſe from it.

There is ſo great a Probability, that this profeſſed tender Forbearance of his, tended only to diſpoſe his Majeſty (who of all Mankind is captivated with good Nature) to return the like Mercy towards him, that with the good Favour of Mr. Blood's Check of Conſcience, which diverted him from the Execution, it is eaſy to be conjectured, that there was never any ſuch Deſign really laid; but that the Story was feigned, to work upon his Majeſty's Tenderneſs towards him.

But leſt that ſhould not prevail, Blood ſeemed not to be at all troubled with the Apprehenſion of his own Death, for which he ſtood prepared; but it grieved him, forſooth, to conſider the ſad Conſequence of it: Which would be an Attempt of Revenge upon the Perſon of the King and his Miniſters, by the ſurviving Conſpirators, bound by Oath, &c. So that (if Mercy were defective) he could try what Fear could operate; and leſt both theſe ſhould fail, he hath another Fetch in ſtore; which is to perſuade them to pardon him upon the Score of good Politicks; by ſhewing how uſeful an Inſtrument he can be to quiet the Minds of all the diſaffected Party, and ſecure the Government from popular Inſurrections, if his Life may be ſpared.

I cannot eaſily be perſuaded to believe that this Proffer of Service in Blood could much prevail upon his Majeſty's Judgment; becauſe it was natural to conclude, that he who is able to quiet a Party, is likewiſe able to irritate it; and that he who is bribed by 500*l. per Ann.* to do the one, may be gained with 1000*l. per Ann.* to do the contrary. And what Security can there be, that he will not, but the bare Word of a Villain.

In the mean time, nothing can more betray the Weakneſs of a Government, than that it ſhould have Recourſe to ſuch Inſtruments to ſupport it. Nor can any thing make the Authority more deſpiſable, than that it ſhould be terrified from the Execution of Juſtice upon the greateſt Malefactor that Hiſtory, from the Creation hither, recordeth, for fear that Blood's Ghoſt ſhould riſe, or his ſurviving Confederates meditate Revenge.

Beſides, it is as far from Reaſon, that a Man of Blood's Principles ſhould be truſted with the Power and Intereſt that muſt go to the Managing of a Party, as that thoſe who truſt him ſhould expect any good Services from the confeſſed Author of ſo many black Deeds, or Heaven give a Bleſſing to the Endeavours of ſuch an impious Creature. ]

Uſe of the Tower to defend the City, &c.

Thus much for theſe Accidents. And now to conclude thereof in Summary. This Tower is a Citadel, to defend, or command the City : A Royal Palace for Aſſemblies, and Treaties : A Priſon of Eſtate, for the moſt dangerous Offences : The only Place of Coinage for all England at this Time : The Armory for warlike Proviſion : The Treaſury of the Ornaments of Jewels of the Crown ; And general Conſerver of the moſt Records of the Kings Courts of Juſtice at Weſtminſter.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the MINT in the Tower. The ſeveral Officers belonging to it. And of ſuch Monies, both Gold and Silver, as have been Coined there. Divers particular Matters relating to the Mint.

J. S.

THE laſt Matter to be looked upon, whilſt we are within the Walls of this Ancient and Royal Caſtle, (beſides what hath been ſaid of it already) is a Threefold Office kept here, highly important to the Kingdom. Namely, That of the Mint, that of the Ordnance, and that of the Records. We begin with the firſt.]

The Office of the Mint.

R. B.

The MINT is the Office and Place where the King's Coin is made, be it Gold or Silver : Which is at preſent, and for a long Time hath been kept in the Tower of London.

Officers of the Mint.

To the Mint there belong divers Officers ; which have not been always alike : At preſent they are theſe :

Warden.

1. The Warden, who is the Chief ; and by his Office, is to receive the Silver from the Goldſmiths, and to pay them for it ; and alſo is to overſee all the reſt that belong unto this Office. His Fee, or Salary, is 100 l. per Annum.

Maſter Worker.

2. The Maſter Worker, who receiveth the Silver from the Warden, cauſeth it to be melted ; and delivers it to the Moniers, and takes it from them again when it is made. His Allowance is not any ſet Fee, but according to the Pound Weight.

Comptroller.

3. The Comptroller, who is to ſee that the Money be made the juſt Aſſize ; to overſee the Officers, and controll them, if the Money be not as it ought to be. His Fee is a Hundred Marks per Annum.

Maſter of the Aſſay.

4. The Maſter of the Aſſay, who weigheth the Silver, and ſeeth whether it be according to the Standard. His yearly Fee alſo is a Hundred Marks.

Auditor.

5. The Auditor, who is to take the Accounts, and to make them up, Auditor-like.

Surveyor.

6. The Surveyor of the Melting ; who is to ſee the Silver caſt out, and not to be altered after it is delivered to the Melter ; which is, after the Aſſay-Maſter hath made Trial of it.

Clerk of the Irons.

7. The Clerk of the Irons ; who ſeeth that the Irons be clean, and fit to work with.

Graver.

8. The Engraver, which graveth the Stamps for the Money.

Smiter.

9. The Smiter of Irons, who after they are graven, ſmiteth them upon the Money.

Melters.

10. The Melters, that melt the Bullion before it comes to the Coining.

Blanchers.

11. The Blanchers, who do anneal, boil and cleanſe the Money.

Porter.

12. The Porter, that keeps the Gate of the Mint.

Provoſt.

13. The Provoſt of the Mint ; who is to provide for all the Moniers, and to overſee them.

Moniers.

14. The Moniers ; who are, ſome to ſheer the Money, ſome to forge it ; ſome to beat it broad, ſome to round it, and ſome to ſtamp or coin it.

Wages.

Their Wages is not by the Day, or Year ; but uncertain, according to the Weight of the Money coined by them.

Other Officers, that have been in former Times, are ſaid now to be out of uſe.

Coins.

Beſides the ſeveral Coins which Mr. Stow hath taken notice of, theſe following I ſhall add.

Monies coined by K. Edw. VI.

The Monies coined in the Reign of K. Edward the VIth, were Pieces of 5 s. of 2 s. 6 d. of 1 s. of 6 d. 4 d ¼. and ſome ſmaller Pieces. On the Pieces of 5 s. were ſtamped upon one ſide, the King's Effigies on Horſeback, with the Date of the Year under the Horſe's Feet ; and between the Rings, EDVARDUS D.G. ANG. ET FRAN. REX. On the other ſide, the Arms of England and France quartered, with this Motto, POSUI DEUM ADJUTOREM MEUM.

And on the Half-Crowns, Shillings, Sixpences, &c. were ſtamped the King's Effigies, with a foreright Face, as was his Father's King Henry the VIIIth's ; and about it, EDKAR. VI. D.G. ANG. ET FRAN. REX.

And about the Arms on the other ſide, the forementioned Motto.

New Coins under Q. Mary.

In the firſt Year of Queen Mary, certain new Coins were proclaimed of Gold and Silver ; viz. A Sovereign of Gold, 30 s. ; the half Sovereign, 15 s. ; an Angel, 10 s. : Of Silver, the Groat, half Groat, and Penny.

Philip and Mary Coin.

Alſo Queen Mary coined the ſame Pieces as her Brother Edward the VIth had done. And after her Marriage with King Philip, both their Effigies were ſtamped on one ſide of the Piece, facing each other ; and the Arms of England and France quartered, impaled with the Arms of Spain. About the Effigies was engraven, PHIL. ET MAR. D.G. R. ET REG. ANG. FRA. And about the Arms on the other ſide, their Motto.

Q. Elizabeth Coin.

Queen Elizabeth coined the ſame Pieces of Money as King Edward the VIth did, with the ſame Arms and Motto ; but her Effigies was a half Face, looking to the ſiniſter Hand.

K. James I. his Money.

King James the Firſt coined alſo Crowns of 5 s. half Crowns of 2 s. 6 d. Shillings of 12 d. Sixpences, &c. Having on the one ſide ſtamped his Effigies, with a dexter Face, and this Inſcription about it, JACOBUS D.G. MAG. BRIT. FRA. ET HIBER. REX. On the other ſide, the Arms of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, quartered, in this Order : In the firſt Quarter, the Arms of France and England, quartered. In the Second Quarter, the Arms of Scotland. In the Third Quarter, the Arms of Ireland. The Fourth, the ſame with the firſt; with this Motto about them, Quem Deus conjunxit, Nemo ſeparet.

Theſe laſt mentioned Kings and Queens coined ſeveral Pieces of Gold, all which (ſome few excepted) bare the ſame Stamp and Inſcriptions as did their Silver Money. For I find that King James, in the 11th Year of his Reign, came himſelf in Perſon to the Star-Chamber, where he had appointed the Mint Men to meet. And there (for the better keeping of the Gold Coins within the Realm) he raiſed the Prices thereof; ordering the Piece called the Unity, which went before but for 20 s. to be current now for 22 s.; the double Crown, and all other Pieces, to increaſe in like Proportion. The Motto of this Piece of Gold was, Faciam eos in Gentem unam.

K. Charles I. his Coin.

King Charles the Firſt coined the ſame Pieces, both of Gold and Silver, as his Father K. James had done before. His Effigies was a half Face, looking to the ſiniſter Hand. The Arms the ſame; but the Motto was, CHRISTO AUSPICE REGNO.

England voted a free State; and new Stamps for Money.

Some ſhort Time after the Martyrdom of this King, in the Year 1649, when England was voted by the Rump Parliament, a Free State, there was Money coined in the Tower, both of Gold and Silver; viz. 20 s. Pieces of Gold; and of Silver, Pieces of 5 s. Pieces of 2 s. 6 d; Shillings, Sixpences, Groats, Half Groats, and Pence. All which Pieces had upon one ſide the Croſs of England, in a ſingle Eſcotcheon; and on the other ſide the Engliſh Croſs in one Eſcotcheon, and the Iriſh Harp in another; not impaled, but joined together in two ſeveral Eſcotcheons. On that ſide that had the Croſs of England, there was engraven, The Commonwealth of ENGLAND: And on the other ſide, where the Arms of England and Ireland were in two Eſcotcheons, was engraven, God with Us.

Money coined at Oxford.

Alſo about the Year 1643, and 1644, King Charles I. was forced to coin Money at Oxford, and other Places, for the Supply of his Armies at that Time.

After the Reſtoration of King Charles the Second, which was in the Year 1660, and the 13th of his Reign, all the forementioned Money (called States, or Commonwealth Money) was called in, and other Money coined.

K. Charles II. his Money.

The Money coined by King Charles the Second, of Gold, were Pieces called Guineas, (as made of Gold from that Place) of 20 s. Half Guineas at 10 s. and ſome double Guineas of 40 s. Which ſoon after went, the Guinea for 21 s. 6 d. and the other in Proportion: Near which Value they now paſs current.

Of Silver alſo he coined, Crowns, Half-Crowns, Shillings, Sixpences, and ſo lower. All which Pieces, both of Gold and Silver, were not ſtamped as his Predeceſſors (Kings and Queens) Monies were, but done by an Engine called a Mill, and ſo called Milled Money; and to prevent Clipping, or other defacing, were jagged on the outward Rim: And beſides, Crowns and Half-Crown Pieces have Decus et Tutamen inſcribed round the Edges.

Milled Money.

Theſe Coins (both of Gold and Silver) have on one ſide the King's Effigies, with a Half Face looking to the dexter Hand; and about the Effigies, CAROLUS II. DEI GRATIA. And on the other ſide, Four Eſcotcheons placed in Form of a Croſs, whoſe baſe Points meet in the Centre of the Piece, and Four Sceptres from thence alſo iſſuing; in which Four Eſcotcheons are the Arms of the Four Kingdoms, viz. England, Scotland, France, and Ireland; and about them, MAGNÆ BRITANNIÆ FRA. ET HIBERNIÆ REX; and the Date of the Year.

K. James IId's Money.

King James the Second coined alſo the ſame Pieces both of Gold and Silver, bearing the like Inſcription, only the Name altered, and the Face looking towards the ſiniſter Hand.

K. William and Q. Mary's Money.

King William and Queen Mary coined the ſame Pieces both of Gold and Silver, with the like Inſcriptions, the Names only altered; the Faces (which are two) both looking towards the dexter Hand; with the Arms of England on the Reverſe.

In the Centre of the Arms, an In-Eſcotcheon of Pretence, Billette, a Lyon Rampant.

But after the Death of Queen Mary, the Coin had only the Effigies of the King.

Q. Ann's Coin.

Queen Anne ſucceeding, her Effigies in her Coin looked toward the Left Hand: All her Money likewiſe Milled; with the like Bearings on the Reverſe.

K. George's.

King George's Coin is alſo Milled. In the Reverſe, the Arms of the Kingdoms, as before; with an In-Eſcotcheon of the Arms of his moſt Illuſtrious and Ancient Family.

Only Gold and Silver current Coin.

All Coins current in England, as well Gold as Silver, are ſeveral, and of a different Value; but all reduced to Pounds, Shillings, and Pence: Only (in relation to the Neceſſity of the Poor, and Exchange of great Money) a ſmall Piece of Braſs, Copper, or Tin, called a Farthing, (being the fourth Part of a Penny) and a Halfpenny, (which is the Value of two Farthings) have been permitted to be coined; but no Man is compelled to receive them for Payment of Debt, or Rent; which cannot be ſaid of any Nation, or State in the World beſides.

No Money made of pure Gold or Silver.

No Money, in any Mint, is made of pure Gold or Silver, as being too flexible; and therefore allayed with Copper. The Standard of Crown Gold, is 22 Carrats of fine Gold, and 2 Carrats of Allay, in the Pound Weight Troy; which is divided into 44 Parts and a half; each Part is to paſs for 30 s. and the Half Part for 10 s.

The Allay.

The Allay of ſome Gold Coins is all Silver, as the Guinea Gold; which renders the Gold Coin, ſome more white, ſome more yellow.

The Standard.

The Standard for Sterling Silver, is 11 Ounces and 2 Penny weight of fine Silver, and 18 Penny weight Allay of Copper out of the Fire. So that 12 Ounces of pure Silver, without any Allay, is worth 3 l. 4 s. 6 d. and the Ounce is 5 s. 4 ½ d. But with Allay, it is worth but 3 l. and the Ounce 5 s.

Baſe Monies called in by Q. Elizabeth.

Anno 1560, Baſe Monies being called in by Queen Elizabeth's Proclamation, were received into the Mint, and fine Monies thereof made. And a Computation was given in from the Mint, of the baſe Monies received into the Mint ſince Michaelmas 1560, to Michaelmas 1561; and of the Charges of the Workmanſhip, or Coinage of the fine Monies thereof made; with a Note of the Proviſions, and other Charges incident to the ſame; the Waſte of Melting and Blanching being born.

|---|---|
| Total of the Maſs of baſe Monies was, | Six Hundred Thirty one Thouſand, Nine Hundred and fifty Pound Weight. |
| Which was current Money, according to the Rates of their ſeveral Standards, | Six Hundred Thirty eight Thouſand, an Hundred and thirteen Pounds, Sixteen Shillings and Sixpence. |
| Total of the Maſs of fine Monies, | Two Hundred Forty four Thouſand, Four Hundred and ſixteen Pound Weight. |
| Which is in Monies current, at 60 s. the Pound Weight, | Seven hundred eighty three Thouſand, Two hundred forty eight Pound. |

The Charges of Coinage of this baſe Money.

The Two Treaſurers of the Mint, Thomas Stanley, and Thomas Fleetwood, Eſqs; had for their Workmanſhip, or Coinage allowed 7 d. the Pound Weight. Which came to 7128 l. 16 s.

Moreover, the Proviſions, as Coal, Coining Irons, and Iron Work, Argal, Salt-petre, Trays, with divers other Neceſſaries; came to - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - 3848 l. 2 s, 8 d.

Moreover, Fees of Officers and Miniſters, with their Diet for one Year, - - - 2006 l. 5 s. 7 d.

Sum Total of the Charges aforeſaid, amounted to, Forty Thouſand Three Hundred and ſix Pounds, Fifteen Shillings and Three Pence.

Odd Pieces coined.

At this Time, odd Pieces were coined; of which we have now-a-days none current, and hardly any ſuch Monies to be ſeen; namely, Fourpence-halfpenny Pieces, Twopences, Farthing Pieces, and Penny-halfpenny Pieces.

Officers and their Fees.

At this Time, theſe were the Officers ſerving in the Mint, with their Fees according to Queen Elizabeth's Eſtabliſhment, dated December the 6th, for one Year ending at Michaelmas 1561, for the Upper Mint and the Nether.

Loniſon, Maſter Worker of the Monies.

Anno 1572, Regin. Elizabeth, 14. She granted a Patent to John Loniſon, during Life, to be Maſter Worker of the Monies in the Tower, and elſewhere through this Realm. And his Allowance was 14*d* ¼. upon every Pound of Silver coined. This Man coined Money, Six Pence Farthing in the Pound under the Standard, and ſhort of the Weight for divers Years; pretending that his Indenture bore him out, as it ſeemed indeed to do. Richard Martin, Warden of the Mint, was the chief Man that ſued him; his Office being to overſee Matters of the Mint. This Controverſy between Martin and Loniſon continued for ſome Years. For in the Year 1574, the Lord Treaſurer left the Matter to Peter Osborn, the Remembrancer, an able and honeſt Man. Martin and Loniſon had ſeveral Conferences before the ſaid Osborn, expounding the Articles of their Indentures. Osborn bad them draw out two Books each, concerning their own Minds. The Warden did ſo, and ſent his by Osborn to the Lord Treaſurer, concerning the Meaning of the ſaid Articles. Loniſon had Order to draw out his Book; and that he ſhould ſet down ſimply what he thought was the meaning of the Articles, for his Turn and Purpoſe. Theſe two Books ſaved the Lord Treaſurer abundance of Pains, and would ſerve to give Light to the Queen's learned Council and the Judges, the more ſkilfully to judge of, and underſtand the Matter, and to Artſmen alſo to find the Difference between them, which it ſeems was not ſo eaſily diſcoverable.

Richard Martin, Warden of the Mint, ſues Loniſon.

Commiſſioners for Loniſon's Buſineſs.

This held till the Year 1578, when the Queen appointed Commiſſioners to enquire into Loniſon's Doings; who pretended to them, that he did it becauſe 14*d.* was too little to bear out the Charges. In fine, the Commiſſioners were contented to allow him 15*d.* for every Pound Weight. And if he would not accept of that, to be diſcharged of what was paſt, and the Queen to make choice of another Officer in his Place, and to allow him a Penſion of 300 l. a Year, during his Life, to be paid out the Coinage. The Commiſſioners were Perſons of the higheſt Rank, Viz. Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper; William Lord Burghley, Lord Treaſurer; Thomas, Earl of Suſſex; Robert, Earl of Leiceſter; Sir Chriſtopher Hatton; Sir Francis Walſingham, and Sir Walter Mildmay; all Privy Counſellors.

Their Report and Opinion in the Matter.

And here I will ſubjoin the very Report and Opinion of the ſaid Lords, and other her Majeſties Commiſſioners touching this Controverſy in the Mint Cauſes, given May the 24th, 1578. And the rather, becauſe ſomewhat of the Nature of the Mint in thoſe Days may be known.

“ Firſt, they find, that the Standard for Silver Monies, appointed by her Majeſty, is 11 Ounces, 2 Penny weight fine Silver; and 18 Penny weight for Allay in every Pound Weight. Which is the ancient Standard of the Sterling of England.

“ Item, They find that every Perſon, bringing Bullion to be coined, muſt deliver the ſame Bullion at the Fineneſs of the Standard.

“ Whereupon they think, that no Bullion ought to be put to melting to make Sterling Monies, of leſs Fineneſs than the Standard aforeſaid.

“ And therefore do like beſt, (if it may ſo ſtand with her Majeſties good Pleaſure) that the ſaid Standard ſhould, by the Overſight and Advouchment of the Warden, be kept in the Commixture and Melting of the ſaid Bullion, being the firſt and principal Action of the whole Work. Which they think is agreeable with the Tenor of the Indentures; and is agreeable unto Juſtice, in yielding unto the Subjects as good Silver in their Monies, as they delivered to make the ſame; and is alſo moſt for the publick Utility of the Realm, in preſerving the Riches of the Coin, being the common Meaſure and Value of all Things, bought and ſold, both within the Realm, and without.

“ By which Reſtitution of the Coin to its Perfection, it will fall out, that her Majeſty then muſt forbear a Part of that Gain, which now ſhe hath; albeit in the Riches of her Treaſure it will be ſufficiently recompenſed.

“ That whereout of the 18*d.* which the Subject payeth for the Coinage, Waſte, and Workmanſhip of every Pound Weight, her Majeſty now hath 10*d*, and the Maſter 8*d.* there is taken from the Monies, as the Coinage is now in Weight and Fineneſs, 6*d* ¼. more, to make up 14*d* ¼. for the Maſters Allowance, without which he cannot perform the Work. And if the Standard ſhould be reſtored in perfection, then

" the ſame 14*d*. ¼. is to come out of the 18*d*. paid " by the Subjects, and not out of the Monies.

" And ſo will remain to her Majeſty upon " the Pound Weight 3*d* ¾. which nevertheleſs is " more than any of her Majeſties Progenitors had " in the like Caſe.

" And yet the Commiſſioners think, that the " Subjects, to have the Standard kept upright, " and to receive their Money coined by Weight, " as heretofore they have done, may be endured " to pay 21*d*. upon the Pound Weight for Coinage " and Waſte, which is 3*d*. more than they now " do.

" And then will remain to her Majeſty upon " every Pound Weight, 6*d*. ¾. and the Maſter to " have his 14*d*. ¼. being the Sum agreed on in the " Bargain with him, and the Money kept in " Perfection in Weight and Fineneſs.

" The like Conſideration is to be had in the " Standard of the Gold.

" But if her Majeſty ſhall not like to forbear " ſo much of her own Commodity, (which for " the Reſpects aforeſaid they wiſh it may pleaſe " her to do) then in a ſecond Degree they think " it fitteſt, that the Matter be thus ordered.

" That the Bullion being delivered by the " Subjects at the full Standard of 11 Ounces two " penny Weight fine, the ſame ſhould, by the " Overſight and Avouchment of the Warden, be " put to the Melting at 11 Ounces 1 penny " Weight fine, and be ſhorn at 3*l*. 3*d*. in the " Weight: Whereby will be gotten out of the " Monies in Fineneſs and Weight 6*d* ¼. in the " Pound Weight, as the half Remedy of the " Aſſay and Shere.

" Which Profit they think meet to be reſerved " wholly to her Majeſty, to be accompted, viz. " for the Fineneſs by the Leiger and Melting " Books; and for the Shere by the Tellers Book, " as the only true means to make the Accompt " by.

" Which 6*d* ¼. being added unto the 18*d*. paid by " the Subjects for Coinage and Waſte, will make " 2*s* ¼. upon the Pound Weight: Whereof deduct " 14*d* ¼. in Money by Tale for the Maſter's Allowance: And then will remain to her Majeſty " 10*d*. the Sum that now ſhe hath.

" But becauſe the Maſter doth alledge, that " 14*d* ¼ is too little to bear all his Charges; the " Commiſſioners in that Requeſt (to encourage " him the better to ſerve her Majeſty faithfully " in the Place) do think it convenient (if it may " ſo like her Majeſty) to make his Allowance " the Sum of 15*d*. upon the Pound Weight.

" And then ſhall remain to her Majeſty 9*d* ¼. " upon every Pound Weight, not much leſs than " the Sum ſhe now hath.

" The like is to be had in the Standard of Gold.

" And whereas John Loniſon, now Maſter " Worker of the Mint, hath been charged with " the Breach of the Standard; whereby it is alledged that he ſhould be in Arrerage to her " Majeſty; becauſe that in his Anſwer it ſeems " that he took it, that his Indenture gave him " power to proceed in the Courſe he hath done; " and that the Proſecution of the Suit in the ſame " hath been very chargeable unto him; the Commiſſioners think convenient, that it may pleaſe " her Majeſty, for the ending to the Controverſy, " to give him a Diſcharge for all thoſe Things " riſing in Queſtion heretofore; and that he may " paſs his Account to the Warden accordingly.

" And that it likewiſe pleaſe her Majeſty to " give a Diſcharge unto Richard Martin, now " Warden of the Mint, for to reckon and paſs the " ſaid Loniſon's Accompt in form afore-declared. " Which Martin they do not find to have done " any Thing in this Controverſy thereby to have " any particular Gain to himſelf; but the whole " Matters alledged by him to have tended to her " Majeſty's Service; and for diſcharging of his " Duty belonging to the Office.

" And this being by her Majeſty allowed, the " Indentures are to be renewed.

" Finally, if Loniſon will not accept of this " laſt Offer, to have 15*d*. upon the Pound Weight, " and to be diſcharged of that is paſt, then the " Commiſſioners think good, that her Majeſty " ſhould make choice of another Officer, that " will ſerve the Place in ſuch ſort as may be " moſt beneficial to her Majeſty.

" Nevertheleſs becauſe Loniſon ſhall not be diſmiſſed without ſufficient Recompence for his " Service and Intereſt, the Commiſſioners think " convenient, that he have a Penſion of 300*l*. " by the Year, during his Life, to be paid " out of the Coinage; or, that wanting, out of " her Majeſty's Receipt; and One Hundred " Pounds a Year after his Deceaſe unto his Wife, " during her Life out of the Coinage.

Loniſon's Debt to the Queen.

But Loniſon, not complying with the Commiſſioners, or dying before all was ended between the Queen and him, there was brought in to his Executors a Charge of his Debt to the Queen, for ſo much as in his Time he had impaired the Monies of Weight and Fineneſs under their juſt Standard. So that from Apr. 1572, to October 1578, there remained due to the Queen by him for the Remedies of the Aſſay, and Shere upon Gold, Molten and Coined 62*l*. 07*s*. 11*d*. and 8 Mites. And alſo remained due and owing to the Queen for the Remedies of the Aſſay, and Shere upon Silver Molten and Coined 1876*l*. 13*s*. 3*d*. and 8 Mites. Sum Total due to her Majeſty for Gold and Silver, according to the Leiger and Tellers Books, 1939*l*. 02*s*. 2*d*. ½. 4 Mites.

Concluſions for Coining Gold and Silver.

Upon the foreſaid Reſolution of the Commiſſioners for Loniſon's Buſineſs, theſe Matters following were concluded upon, or perhaps propounded, only (by the Lord Treaſurer's Device chiefly) for the Coining of Gold and Silver, and for Allowances to be made to the Warden and Maſter Worker.

Pence of what Value.

Beſides the four Manner of Monies of Silver, one Piece of a Penny ſhall be coined; ſo as 720 thereof make the Pound Weight.

The Bullion of Gold ſhall be coined at 23 Caracts, 3 Grains, Quarter of fine Gold, and three Quarters of a Grain of Alloy.

The Silver Standard at 11 Ounces one Penny Weight fine, and 19 Penny Weight of Alloy into the Melting Pot.

The Gold to be 36*l*. 01*s*. 10*d*. ½. Pound Weight.

The Silver at 60*s*. 3 d. the Pound Weight.

The Warden ſhall take up in every Pound Weight of Gold 5*s*. 10*d*. ½. out of the which he ſhall pay to the Maſter Worker 3*s*. 4*d*. ½.

And he ſhall take of every Pound Weight of Silver 2*d*. by Tale; out of which he ſhall pay to the Maſter Worker 12*d*. ¾.

Note, there ſhall be retained out of the Commixtion of Gold, one 18th Part of a Caract of Gold, of every Pound Weight of a Pound of Gold.

And one Penny Weight of Silver of every Pound of Silver; which the Maſter Worker ſhall have to his own Uſe, beſides the ſaid 3*s*. 4*d*. ½. aboveſaid for Gold; and 12*d*. ¾ for Silver, towards all manner of Charges.

Quantity of Money Coined, Gold and Silver.

From April 1572, to Octob. ult. 1573. Gold Monies Coined were Poiz 583 Pound Weight, 11 Ounces three Quarters. From the laſt of October,

October 1573. to the 12th of July 1578. Gold Money coined were poiz 629 Pound Weight, 8 Ounces, one Penny Weight and ſix Grains.

From April, as aforeſaid, to Octob. ult. 1573. Silver Monies coined were 55675 Pound Weight, ſix Ounces. From Octob. ult. as aforeſaid to July 1578. Silver Monies coined were 94238 Pound Weight, 10 Ounces, 16 Penny Weight.

A Trial-Piece made.

Anno 1577. There was a Trial-piece made: Which Trial-piece tried the Work-Maſter of the Mint his Monies. Which Mr. Martin the Warden brought into Goldſmith's Hall; being a juſt and good Standard in Fineneſs; as he divers Times reported it to be by Trial made thereof in France and Flanders. And by many other Trials of the ſame made, before the preferring of the ſame to the Goldſmiths. And another Trial-Piece was made, authorized by the Privy Council, to touch Plate.

Mint Aſhes.

In the Year 1570, and odd, one Nicholas Rykward, formerly a Dependant on Walter Pepperd, belonging to the Queen's Mines in Ireland, petitioned the Queen about the Mint Aſhes. The Rubbiſh and Aſhes of the Tower Mint were caſt out as of no Value, and laid rejected by the Space of four or five Years; and other ſome for 20, 40, 60, or 100 Years and upward, (as vain and of no Eſtimation) after the Silver and other Metals had been tried, waſhed, fined, and molten. This Man thought, that by further trying, good handling, and Huſbandry with Labour, theſe Heaps of Rubbiſh might be wrought, and reduced to ſome Commodity and Profit. In Conſideration whereof he humbly beſought the Queen to grant to him and his Aſſigns all that Rubbiſh and Aſhes of all her Mints, which had been ſo caſt out in the Tower, or ſuch Parts of them as ſhe ſhould pleaſe, with convenient Liberty to make, ſearch, dig, take and uſe the ſame; filling and making good the ſame Places and Grounds which he ſhall break, and leaving them in as good Caſe or better than he found them; during ſome reaſonable Term of Years, by her Majeſty to be limited: With Proviſo, that none other ſhould have, uſe, or occupy the trying of the ſame Aſhes nor Rubbiſh, nor the Earths wherewith the ſame were mingled: To be taken at ſome reaſonable Yearly Kent, or Part of the Gain or Profit that ſhould grow thereby.

Maſter of the Mint his Office.
Sir Richard Martin.

Richard Martin before mentioned, now Maſter of the Mint, Alderman of London (afterwards Sir Richard Martin, Knt. and Lord Maior) was a very able and honeſt Man, and long had ſerved in that Office. But he could not eſcape Enemies and Enviers. Theſe had ſet on a beggarly, bold Fellow to accuſe him (the Slander whereof ran abroad, and made a great Impreſſion upon him) as though he coined not good Standard. Whereupon to ſatisfy the Queen, the Lord Treaſurer, and all other, in his Truth and Faithfulneſs, he made an Offer in April 1586. to the ſaid Treaſurer, propounding Means, whereby Trial might be made of the Goodneſs and Fineneſs of her Majeſty's Money. Which was, that a Jury of honeſt and indifferent Perſons ſhould be ſworn to try, and preſent the Truth unto her Majeſty's Commiſſioners touching the Work-maſters Dealings in making the Queen's Monies. The Jury to be made up of Aldermen, Merchants, and Commoners of the beſt Rank and Quality. And that they repair to the Mint, and there ſee the weighing, aſſaying, commixing and melting of one Pot of Silver Ingots, and another Pot of Spaniſh Monies. And that after the juſt Standard of 11 Ounces 2 d. Weight fine of pure Silver of 12 Ounces fine, and 18 d. Weight of Alloy, according to her Majeſty's Indenture, and as always it hath been done from time to time.

And that theſe Pots ſhall be ſeverally molten, and caſt out into ſmall Ingots, as is uſed for making the Monies. That then for moſt Indifferency, there may be taken three of thoſe ſmall Ingots of either Pot, for making the Pot-Aſſay in manner as followeth, viz. One ſmall Ingot of the firſt Range, another ſmall Ingot of the midſt of the Pot, and another ſmall Ingot of the laſt Range of the ſame Pot. And that of every of theſe ſmall Ingots there be taken a juſt and equal Proportion to make the Pot-Aſſay, the Lib. ſubtil being of 15 Grains. To make the ſame, there is to be taken of every of thoſe three ſmall Ingots, five Grains. And that after the Monies ſhall be made hereof, this Jury may alſo ſee the Money-Aſſays made. And when this is done, the ſaid Jury, in Preſence, and by Survey of the ſaid Maſter-Worker, may collect one full Pound Weight of all the Monies made in the Time of the ſaid Maſter-Worker, as the ſame ſhall appear by their ſeveral Privy Marks, either out of her Majeſty's Receipt, or out of Mens Purſes, as they are to be found, as it ſhall pleaſe the ſaid Commiſſioners to appoint.

And when one full Pound Weight of every ſort of thoſe Monies ſhall be ſo collected, that then every Pound Weight thereof may be ſeverally molten, and juſt Eſſays thereof ſeverally made in Preſence of the ſaid Jury and Officers of the Mint. And that then the Premiſſes to be preſented before the ſaid Commiſſioners, as the ſame ſhall be truly found.

In the doing all which Things, the Accuſers themſelves, and others which they ſhall deſire, or as many of them as your Honours ſhall think meet, may be preſent to ſee how all things are done. So the whole Action and Circumſtances in and about the making of the ſaid Monies ſhall be plainly laid open, for plain Satisfaction of the Truth to her Majeſty, her honourable Council, and all others. Which Truth the ſaid Maſter-Worker deſireth to be made apparent; and nothing doubteth but that his true and faithful Dealing will alſo appear therewith, to the evident Confutation of thoſe ſlanderous Accuſations which have been raiſed againſt him.

Some complain againſt the Mint Maſter.

Anno 1597. ſome Goldſmiths and others made a Complaint again, and preferred a Petition againſt Miſdemeanors in the Mint; which were likely to cauſe great Decay of her Majeſty's Profit by Thouſands of Bullion that might and would come in; utterly diſcouraging her Subjects that would bring in Bullion into the Mint. The great Hindrance whereof they made to be; for that Sir Richard Martin did detain great Sums of their Money perforce, which had been long before coined, converting it to his own Uſe. But this ſeems to be only the Complaint of ſome few peeviſh Folk; there being but Seven Hands to the Petition, and the two firſt Women, viz. Mary Feek, and Suſannah Franknel. This Man laid long under the Spleen and Malice of ſome People, but as formerly, in a Letter to the Lord Treaſurer, he appealed to the Searcher of all Hearts, who beſt knew how unjuſtly he was accuſed, and earneſtly deſired an honeſt and indifferent Jury for Trial of his Cauſe; ſo it beſpake his faithful and good Service, that the Queen continued him thus long in her Service.

Laſtly, Let me add two or three Things more, and ſo conclude this Diſcourſe of the Mint.

The King's Seals to be engraven only in the Tower Mint.

Though the Kings of England had ſeveral Mints in other Places in the Realm, yet this was a Privilege peculiar to the Mint in the Tower, that the King's Seals throughout the Realm were to be engraven within the Tower only. For it appears on Record in the Exchequer by ſundry Writs there recorded, that when as any Seal of the Kings of this Realm in former Times were to be graven, then a Writ was directed to the Warden of the Mint, limiting him the Form of ſuch Seal, with a Commandment, "That he ſhould do ſuch a “ Seal, to be engraven by the King's Graver of the Mint within the Tower of London. And the ſame Seal, with a fair Pattern thereof, together with the ſame Writ, to return at a Day certain.” And then theſe Seals ſo made and returned were by the Lord Treaſurer and Barons delivered unto ſuch Officers as ſhould uſe the ſame. And the Purpoſe of having the Pattern, was for Judgment, if any Counterfeit Seals ſhould be uſed.

The Warden complained of ſome that uſed the Queen's Seal for their Offices.

When certain Cuſtomers and Alnagers in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and many other Officers uſed her Seal in their ſeveral Offices, and cauſed the ſame to be made at their Pleaſures; the Warden of the Mint complained of them to the Lord Treaſurer Burghleigh; ſhewing the aforeſaid ancient Cuſtom, and the Uſefulneſs of it; and how this making of Seals at the Officers Pleaſures tended to the deceiving and defrauding of the Queen and her People. And he required, that ſome ſpecial Commandment or Commiſſion ſhould be given out for defacing of all ſuch Seals as were counterfeit. And that the ancient Records might be ſearched for the Penalties due to ſuch Counterfeitures. And that it had been heretofore accuſtomed for the Warden, or Graver, by his Appointment, to make Search for ſuch counterfeit Seals; and he made Preſentment thereof before the Lord Treaſurer and Barons: And they, viz. the Mint Maſter and Graver, prayed his Lordſhip's Order in the Premiſſes to be had.

Farthings.

One Thing more which I ſhall mention in relation to the Mint, is concerning a Queſtion ſtarted in Queen Elizabeth's Reign about the coining of Farthings, Whether to make them of Silver, or Silver debaſed, or Copper. If they ſhould be made of the Standard of the other Money, the Piece would be only two Grains, of that Smallneſs as neither to be conveniently coined nor handled for Payment. If a baſe Standard be appointed therefore to increaſe the Weight, that every Farthing might weigh ſix Grains (which is the ſmalleſt that conveniently can be) then there would be eighty in every Ounce, and in every Pound Weight 960, and would be current for 20*s.* The Workmanſhip thereof, conſidering the Number of Pieces, the Difficulty of melting, and manner of Commixture, would coſt 2*s.* 6*d.* the Pound Weight; and for her Majeſty's Revenue, at leaſt 6*d.* So the Value in Silver cannot exceed 17*s.* that is 3 Ounces 3 Penny Weight of fine Silver, and 8 Ounces 17 Penny Weight of Allay. This ſmall Quantity of Silver will make no ſhew, and be but clearly loſt, and be as eaſy to counterfeit as if they were only Copper.

If they be only of Copper, the ſame might be faithfully made of One Penny Weight the Piece; and ſo in a Pound Weight there would be 240. and be current for 5*s.* and with a reaſonable Revenue thereof to her Majeſty, as of the other Monies; and Charges of Copper, Tools, and Workmanſhip will be worth their Value. They will be apt for Uſe, and of infinite Continuance: And in them there is no Precedent of embaſing. This was offered by Mr. Martin the Warden, and one Mr. Palmer, an Officer (as it ſeems) in the Mint.

The Mint farmed out by the Queen.

The Queen once farmed out the Mint to ſome private Subject, who ſeems to have been the before mentioned Martin, the Mint-Maſter. The Inconvenience and Danger whereof to her ſelf and the Nation, ſome Perſon unknown ſhewed in this deliberate Paper to the Lord Treaſurer, following.

THE MINT of this our Realm, with the Gain belonging to the ſame, is not a Thing fit to be converted to the Uſe of every private Subject in ſuch ſort as of late Time hath been, and as it doth yet continue; by reaſon of the Eſtate of the outward Doings of the whole Realm; as Things ſold and bought whatſoever, as well Foreign Commodities as our own, and our Traffick abroad, with the ordinary Means to maintain the Treaſure in competent Eſtate, and to defend the ſame from extraordinary Decay. All which Things depend upon thoſe Doings which of right ought to be put in Practice in the Mint. And theſe Things are of ſo much the more Importance, by reaſon they are daily and continually in Uſe, from Time to Time. And therefore as they are certainly or uncertainly dealt in, ſo will the Price of the ſaid Commodities, and the Quantity of the Treaſure follow accordingly, by ſome near Proportion to the more Profit or Prejudice of the Queen's Majeſty, and the whole Realm.

And although we have a Mint, yet we have no Mines; and therefore the Treaſure of this our Realm is rather to be maintained by Art than by Nature. And there is ſome Difference between other Countries and us in the Government of the Treaſure. And this Thing is to be obſerved, that the Occaſions of Loſs or Gain do continually fall out from time to time, and will ſo do ſo long as we have Traffick with other Countries; and many times in ſuch ſort, as a private Subject is neither able to prevent the Loſs, nor to procure the Gain. As of late Time there hath been Experience of both. And by the Ignorance of theſe Things, the Inconveniences and Loſſes which have happen'd to the Queen's Majeſty and the whole Realm, with the Gain which in the mean time hath been neglected, are not to be countervailed with the Sum of Ten hundred thouſand Pounds in one reſpect and other. And if every thing be duly conſidered, it will appear, that thoſe Doings which of Right ought to be put in Practice in the Mint, are Things of greater Charge than any private Subject is able to diſcharge. And if the Mint ſhall long continue in the Hands of a private Subject in ſuch ſort as of late Time it hath done, in ſhort Time it will neither be profitable to Prince nor Subject, without ſome general Loſs otherwiſe, as well to the Queen's Majeſty, as unto the whole Realm. And therefore of Neceſſity the Mint ought to be in the Queen's Majeſty's own Hands, whether the Gain be more or leſs: If not for Gain, yet to avoid the Danger of Loſs otherwiſe, if the like Occaſions ſhould hereafter happen, which heretofore have happened.

And this is moſt certain, that there is not any private Subject living, that will ſeek to have the Mint, but rather in reſpect of his own private Gain, than for her Majeſty's moſt Profit, and the Commodity of the whole Realm. And if a Mint-Maſter can make the Mint gainful unto himſelf, his Coin being reſtrained within the Limits of certain ordinary Allowances, then much more may the Queen's Majeſty make the ſame profitable; conſidering that her Majeſty may urge the ordinary Allowances further than is convenient for any Mint-Maſter to do; and alſo may increaſe ſome extraordinary Cauſes of Gain, far otherwiſe than any private Subject is able to do. And for my own Part, I am certainly perſuaded, that there is not any private Subject living, which knoweth what of right belongeth to the Mint, that with a ſafe Conſcience can either ſeek to have the Mint himſelf, or would be willing that any other ſhould have the ſame in uſe, but only the Queen's Majeſty, if by any convenient Means it lie in him to prevent the contray.

And although it may be thought, that ſuch certain and apparent Gain, as the Queen's Majeſty hath had by the letting out of the Mint to a private Subject, hath been much more profitable, than otherwiſe it would have been, if the ſame had remained in her Majeſty's own Hands; which notwithſtanding, if every Inconvenience be duly obſerved, it will appear, That the ſecret Loſs which ſince that Time hath happened to the Queen's Majeſty, and the whole Realm, hath far exceeded any ſuch Gain; and that in divers and ſundry reſpects, not here to be ſet down at large; but otherwiſe, if without Offence it may be thought convenient.

The late Officers of the Mint, Anno 1704, of chiefeſt Note, were theſe:

1. Sir John Stanley, Maſter Worker.
2. Dr. Newton, Warden of the Mint.
3. Mr. Ellis, Comptroller.
4. Mr. Beriſford, Deputy-Comptroller.
5. Mr. Harris, Graver.
6. Mr. Brattle, Say-Maſter.
7. Mr. Hains, Weigher and Teller.
8. John Brant, Eſq; Chief Engineer.

The Officers of the Mint, Anno 1716, were theſe:

Warden of the Mint, Sir Richard Sanford.
Maſter Worker, Sir Iſaac Newton, Kt.
Keeper of the Change and Coinage, Sir Richard Sanford, Bar.
Comptroller, Martin Bladen, Eſq;
Aſſay-Maſter, Mr. Charles Brattel.
Clerk of the Papers, Mr. Tho. Hall.
Deputy-Warden, Mr. Pinkney.
Weigher and Teller, Hopton Haines, Eſq;
Deputy Maſter-Worker, Dr. John Francis Fouquiere.
Deputy-Comptroller, Mr. Edward Hawke.
Clerk of the Irons, Major-General William Evans.

We now go on to another Office kept within the Tower, namely, that of the Ordnance.]

CHAP. XIX.

Of the Office of the Ordnance kept within the Tower. The ſeveral Officers. Matters tranſacted here.

Office of the Ordnance. R. B.

THis is an Office of great Account and Importance, it being the Standing and Grand Magazine for all the Utenſils, and Inſtruments, and Weapons of War, as well by Sea as by Land, for the Defence and Safety of the Kingdom; having the Superintendence, Ordering and Diſpoſing, as well of the Grand Magazine lodged in the Storehouſe in the Tower, as at Woolwich, Chatham, Portſmouth, Plimouth, Hull, Windſor, and elſewhere. In which Places, is Ammunition at all Times, for as many Land and Sea Forces, as may not only defend the Kingdom, but be ſerviceable to all our Neighbours in League and Friendſhip with us, and formidable to our Enemies.]

Old Officers of this Office. J. S.

In old Records, I meet with ſeveral Patent-Officers belonging to this Office, which are now either wholly antiquated, or of little Account.

Bowyers Office. Chart. de Turr. pen. me.

As, There was an Officer for keeping and making the Bows, called the Bowyers Office. This was granted by Patent to Robert Bridford, by King Richard II. in the Twenty ſecond Year of his Reign, together with certain Houſes belonging to the ſame Office. And Edward the IVth, in the Thirteenth Year of his Reign, granted to Thomas Maſburgh, the Office of keeping, making and providing Bows in the Tower; granting him a certain Manſion, ſituate between the Tower called Wakefield Tower, and the Tower called Weſt Smithfield, for exerciſing the foreſaid Office.

Attiliator Baliſtarum.

There was alſo another Officer belonging to the Croſs-Bows, who was called in the Records of the Tower, Attiliator Balliſtarum. He ſeemed to be one who provided Harneſs and Accoutrements for thoſe Bows. King Edward I. in the firſt of his Reign, granted this Office to T. S. And he had for his Wages, Seven pence halfpenny per Diem.

Galeator.

Another Officer was called Galeator, that perhaps provided and took care for the Helmets or Head-Pieces. This Place was once granted to Richard Glover, Armig. Anno 5. H. IV.

Armourer.

There was an Armourer within the Tower. This Office was once enjoyed by William Snell, granted to him 1 Richard II. And John Fleet was appointed by Edward the III. in his Twelfth Year, Keeper of his Armour; and likewiſe of his Jewels, and other Things in the Tower, during Pleaſure; with the Fee of 12 d. a Day.

Keeper of the Tents.

There was a Keeper of the Tents. This Place was granted by King Henry the VIth, in the Nineteenth Year of his Reign, to Richard Lound, for Term of Life: And he had a Meſs withal granted him, ſituate upon the Wharf, near S. Katharine's Hoſpital. Which Meſs is ſaid to belong to the Office, 14 H. VI.]

Officers now belonging to this Office. R. B.

The Principal Officer at this Time, is ſtiled the MASTER GENERAL of the ORDNANCE; who ought to be a Perſon of great Honour and Integrity.

Subordinate to this Great Officer, (unto whom the Management of this Office is committed) are other Principal Officers; viz. 1. The Lieutenant-General. 2. The Surveyor. 3. The Clerk of the Ordnance. 4. The Keeper of the Stores. 5. The Clerk of the Deliveries. 6. The Treaſurer and Paymaſter.

All which do hold their Places by Patent under the Great Seal of England; and have their Clerks, for the Management of their reſpective Offices. Their Duties are as followeth.

Lieutenant of the Ordnance.

The LIEUTENANT-GENERAL of the ORDNANCE, is to receive all Orders and Warrants from the Maſter, and the other principal Officers, and to ſee them duly executed; and to make Orders, as the King's Occaſions ſhall require. Alſo, to give Order for the diſcharging the Great Ordnance, when required; as upon Coronation-Days, Birth-Days of Kings and Princes, Feſtivals, Triumphs, Victories, and the like.

He is alſo to ſee the Train of Artillery, and all its Equipage fitted for Motion, upon any Occaſion, when it ſhall be ordered to be drawn into the Field.

urveyor.

The Charge of the SURVEYOR of the ORDNANCE, is, To ſurvey all his Majeſty's Ordnance, Stores and Proviſions of War, in the Cuſtody of the Storekeeper; which he is to ſee ſo diſtinguiſhed and placed, as ſhall be beſt for their Preſervation and Safety. He is to allow all Bills of Debt, and to keep a Check upon all Labourers and Artificers Work. Alſo to ſee, that all Proviſions received be good and ſerviceable, and duly proved: For which he muſt take the Aſſiſtance of the reſt of the Officers, and the Proof-Maſters, and be marked with the King's Mark, if they ought ſo to be.

lerk of the dnance.

The CLERK of the ORDNANCE, is, To record all Orders and Inſtructions, given for the Government of the Office; as likewiſe all Patents and Grants, and the Names of all Officers, Clerks, Artificers, Attendants, Gunners, Labourers and others, who enjoy the ſaid Grants, or any other Fees from the King for the ſame. He is alſo to draw all Eſtimates for Proviſions and Supplies to be made: Likewiſe all Letters, Inſtructions, Commiſſions, Deputations and Contracts, for his Majeſty's Service. Further, To make all Bills of Impreſt, and Debentures, for the Payment and Satisfaction of the reſpective Artificers and Creditors of this Office, for Work done, or Proviſions received: Alſo Quarter-Books, for the Salaries, Allowances and Wages, of all Officers, Clerks, and others belonging to the ſaid Office. He is alſo to keep Journals and Ledgers of the Receipts and Returns of his Majeſty's Stores, to ſerve as a Check between the two Accomptants of the Office; the one for Money, the other for Stores.

orekeeper.

The Duty of the STOREKEEPER, is, To take into his Charge and Cuſtody, all his Majeſty's Ordnance, Munitions, and Stores thereunto belonging; and to indent, and put in Legal Security, for the ſafe keeping thereof, and for making juſt and true Account from time to time. He is to receive no Proviſions whatſoever, that are manifeſtly unſerviceable, or before they have been ſurveyed by the Surveyor. He is not to iſſue any Proportion of Ordnance, Munition or Stores; except the ſame be agreed upon, and ſigned by the Officers, according to the Appointment of the Maſter of the Ordnance, granted upon Order of his Majeſty, or Six of the Privy Council, or the Lord Admiral, for Matters concerning the Navy. He is not to receive back any Stores formerly iſſued, until they have been reviewed by the Surveyor, and regiſtred by the Clerk of the Ordnance in the Book of Remains. He is to look, that all his Majeſty's Storehouſes be well repaired, and well accommodated; and that the Stores be kept in ſuch Order, as is fit for the Service and Honour of the King.

k of the veries.

The Duty of the CLERK of the DELIVERIES, is, To draw all Proportions or Orders for Deliveries of any Stores and Proviſions, and to ſee them duly executed; and by Indenture to charge the particular Receiver of his Majeſty's ſaid Stores, whether Captain, Gunner, or others; and to regiſter as well the Copies of all Warrants for the Deliveries, as the Proportions delivered, thereby to diſcharge the Storekeeper.

ſurer and aſter.

The Place of TREASURER, and PAYMASTER, was formerly an Appendix to that of the Lieutenant-General: But King Charles the Second ordered, That the Office of Treaſurer ſhould be no more executed by the Lieutenant, or any other Perſon, having other Charge or Employment in the Office of Ordnance: Since which Time, there is a particular Office erected, diſtinct from any of the aforeſaid Offices. [Thro' this Officer's Hands runs all the Money for the whole Office of the Ordnance; as well the Salaries, as the Debentures.]

There are other Subordinate Officers, who likewiſe hold their Places by Patent from the King: As, Maſter Gunner.

1. The MASTER GUNNER of England; who is to teach and inſtruct all ſuch as deſire to learn the Art of Gunnery; and to adminiſter to every Learner an Oath, obliging him not to ſerve any Foreign Prince, or State, without Leave; Nor to teach the Art of Gunnery to any, but ſuch as have taken the ſaid Oath: And to certify to the Maſter of the Ordnance the Sufficiency of any Perſon, recommended to be one of his Majeſty's Gunners, and his Ability to diſcharge the Duty of a Gunner.

Keeper of the ſmall Guns.

2. The KEEPER of the Small GUNS: And he hath the Charge and Cuſtody of his Majeſty's ſmall Guns, as Muſquets, Harquebuzes, Carbines and Piſtols, with their ſeveral Furnitures.

There are divers other Inferior Attendants and Artificers; as, the Clerks, Proof-Maſters, Meſſengers, Maſter Smith, Maſter Carpenter, Maſter Wheelwright, Maſter Gunſmith, Maſter Furbiſher, Blockmaker, and ſuch like.

Engineers.

There is yet a further Superintendency and Juriſdiction peculiar to the Maſter of the Ordnance, over all his Majeſty's Engineers, employed in the ſeveral Fortifications of this Kingdom; moſt of which have their Salaries, and Allowances payable in the ſaid Office, to which they are all accountable, and from whence they receive their particular Orders and Inſtructions, according to the Directions and Commands given by his Majeſty, and ſignified by the Maſter of the Ordnance.]

Late Officers.

J. S.

The late Officers of the Ordnance were as follows:

Maſter-General of the Ordnance, and Armory for the Body, the moſt Illuſtrious Duke of Marlborough.

Chief Bombardier, Col. Geo. Brown.

Chief Petardier, John Fawcet.

Aſtronomical Obſervator, John Flamſted. [ He hath a Hundred Pound yearly paid him out of this Office.

Beſides all theſe, there be Three other Offices very neceſſary and important, and in former Times ſettled and granted by Patent ; tho' not ſo now ; viz. thoſe of the Tower Smith, Carpenter and Maſon : Whereof I have read ſome Paſſages in the Records.

Maſter Smith.

Officium Magiſtri Fabri, cum duob. Meſſ. ſuper Wharfham ibidem, & quodam Parcell. Terr. infra Palac. Weſtmon. eid. Officio pertin. conceſſ. S. Clampard. 24 Hen. VI. i. e. The Office of Maſter Smith, with Two Meſſuages upon Wharfham there, (whether that Place were Tower Wharf, or ſome Place within the Tower, next the Wharf, I cannot tell) and a certain Parcel of Land within the Palace of Weſtminſter, belonging to the ſaid Office, granted to S. Clampard in the 24th Year of K. Henry VI.

His Fee.

King Edward I. in the firſt Year of his Reign, appointed the Tower Smith to have 4 ½ d. a Day for his Wages : And moreover, in a Schedule hanging to the Patent, de Gardinariis Regis capit 3 d. per Diem : i. e. 3 d. a Day more from the King's Gardiners, (ſhall we ſay ?) or rather, the King's Warders, or Guards, who were commonly ſtiled Gardeyns ; Officers belonging to the Tower.

Chief Smith, Maſon, and Carpenter of the Tower ; with their Fees.

You ſhall have the Chief Smith, the Maſon and Carpenter, all in one Patent of King Edward the IIId. Magiſter Wil. de Rameſey aſſignat. Capital. Cementarius Reg. ibidem, & Capital. Superviſor omnium Operum Reg. in omnibus Caſtris Reg. citra Trentam, percipiend. per annum unam Robam, & xij d. *per Diem ad Scaccarium. Theſe Offices and Officers in Q. Elizabeth's Reign.

But before we paſs hence, it will not be amiſs to make ſome Obſervation of theſe Offices and Officers, as they ſtood in Q. Elizabeth's Time ; and what Inſpections were made of them, and Orders given concerning them in that careful Government.

A Commiſſion, to ſurvey the Office of the Ordnance. Chart. D. Theſaur. Burghl.

About the Year 1584, (or perhaps ſomewhat later) Commiſſioners were appointed for the Surveying of the Office of the Ordnance. The Commiſſioners were, Lord Burghley, Lord Treaſurer ; the Earl of Warwick, Maſter of the Ordnance ; Sir Francis Knollys, Treaſurer of the Houſhold ; Sir Chriſtopher Hatton, Vicechamberlain ; Sir Walter Mildmay, Chancellor of the Exchequer ; Sir Owen Hopton, Lieutenant of the Tower ; John Hawkyns, Treaſurer of the Admiralty ; William Dodington, and John Conyers, Auditors of the Preſts ; William Borough, Clerk of the Ships.

The Subſtance of their Commiſſion.

The Subſtance of their Commiſſion was this : Auctoritie was given to them, or to any Three, (whereof one of the Two Auditors to be one) both to conſider of the Remain, that was left upon the laſt Survey, taken the 17th Day of February, in the Tenth Year of her Majeſty, as of the Proviſions ſince that Time made : And thereupon to conſider, how the ſame Proviſions, &c. have been delivered and expended, and by what Warrant or Order.

Item, To make a perfect Survey of all the Ordnance that are remaining in the Charge of the Officers of the Ordnance ; And the ſame to deliver in Charge to thoſe Officers to whom the Cuſtody thereof belongeth, by ſuch Book or Books, as to the ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall be thought meet : To the end they may yearly account as well for the Store preſently remaining, as hereafter to be provided.

Item, Auctoritie is given to any Four of the ſaid Commiſſioners, (whereof the Lord Treaſurer to be one) upon ſuch Survey taken, to make Allowance and Determination of all Accompts and Charges : Which ſhall be a good Exoneration and Diſcharge for the ſaid Officers, againſt her Majeſty, her Heirs, &c.

Item, To ſet down ſuch Orders in Writing, as they ſhall think meet, for the better ordering of the ſaid Office ; as well for the Receiving and Iſſuing of any Proviſions, as for the Abridging of any extraordinary and ſuperfluous Charges and Allowances, as to eſtabliſh any former or new Allowances for her Majeſty's better Service herein.

Item, To cauſe ſuch Things as have been lent out of the ſaid Office, (by Warrant or otherwiſe) to be reſtored, or Money to be anſwered to the Lieutenant to the Value of the ſame : And the ſame to be put in Charge with the ſaid Officers.

Item, To appoint ſuch Perſons as they ſhall think meet, to ſurvey, and take a Note of all her Majeſty's Ordnance, &c. remaining in any Caſtle or Blockhouſe ; and the broken and unſerviceable to exchange or repair, as they ſhall ſee Cauſe.

Item, Auctoritie is given to any of the ſaid Commiſſioners, (whereof the Lord Treaſurer to be one) by Bill ſubſcribed by their Hand, to gain Allowance for the Travel and Pains of any Perſon uſed in that Service, or any otherwiſe ; touching the Execution of this Commiſſion, to be paid by the Lieutenant of the Ordnance : Which Bills ſo ſubſcribed, ſhall be allowed him upon his Account.

The firſt Of- cers, and their ancient Fees.

Now let us look back as far as we can upon the firſt Officers, and the Fees then ſettled upon them ; and what Aſſiſtants they then had.

Maſter of the Ordnance.

In this great Truſt, the Maſter of the Ordnance was the Chief and Head : Who, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, was the High born Ambroſe, Earl of Warwick, a brave and true Nobleman, and right valiant. Under him were ſeveral other Officers, made by Letters Patents, and their Salaries payable out of the Exchequer : Viz.

Lieutenant.

The Lieutenant of the Ordnance. The firſt Lieutenant was Sir Chriſtopher Morrice ; who was made by King Henry the VIIIth, Anno Regni 36. The Fee then aſſigned to this Officer, was 56 l. 13 s. 4 d. Bromfield was in this Office in the Fifth of Queen Elizabeth : Sir Robert Conſtable, and Sir William Pelham, Anno 1588. Sir George Carew, Anno 1593.

Surveyor.

Next was the Surveyor of the Ordnance. The firſt Surveyor was Henry Johnſon, conſtituted by King Henry the VIIIth, in the 34th Year of his Reign. His Fee then aſſigned, was 36 l. 10 s. at 2 s. by the Day. Randolph was in this Place Anno Elizab. 8. Afterwards John Powel. Then William Parthridge.

Clerk of the Ordnance.

Then is the Clerk of the Ordnance general; ſometimes ſtiled alſo Clerk of the Armoury.

This Office is ancient. The Fee per Ann. was 12*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* that is, 8*d.* by the Day. William Painter was in this Office when Queen Elizabeth firſt took the Sceptre. Anthony Painter and John Bagnal enjoyed this afterward in Queen Elizabeth's Reign. And before them Mr. Pelham, Anno 13. Elizabeth.

Keeper of the Stores.

The next Officer is the Keeper of the Stores. The firſt Patent was to one Richard Bowland in the 14. Elizab. His Fee was 54*l.* 15*s.* per Ann. that is, 3*s.* by the Day. Before that Time, he had the Room of a Gunner at 12*d.* per Diem.; and he did this Service. Humphrey Bowland was in this Office Anno 1584. The Queen allowed 6000*l.* per Ann. for buying in Stores.

Keeper of the ſmall Guns.

The Keeper of the ſmall Guns was the next. The firſt that had a Patent for this Office was E. Patridge in the 2d and 3d of Queen Elizabeth, and next to him Nathaniel Patridge, his Son. And no Office before. His Fee by the Year was 15*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* that is, 10*d.* by the Day. Afterwards Richard Powel ſucceeded in this Office under Queen Elizabeth.

Clerk of the Deliveries.

Then came the Clerk of the Deliveries. Fleming and Anthony, Anno 7 Edward VI. were the firſt appointed to this Office; but not in Patent, till about the 16. Elizab. when Brian Hogg had a Patent for this Place. The Fee both under King Edward and Queen Elizabeth was per Ann. 18*l.* 5*s.* at 12*d.* by the Day. The next that ſucceeded in this Place was George Hogg.

So that the Sum Total of the Fees of theſe Officers amounted Yearly to 203*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

Other Allowances to the Officers.

But beſides theſe firſt and ancient Fees, they had theſe Fees and Allowances moreover granted them by the Queen, for their Diet, Riding Charges Boat-hire, Wood, Coals, Ink, Paper, Keeping of Books, Wages of Clerks, &c. that is to ſay; Tranſactions and Occurrences in this Office.

Now to take Notice of certain Tranſactions and Occurrences happening in or concerning this Office of the Ordnance in ſome Part of Queen Elizabeth's Reign.

Deceits diſcovered in the Surveyors Accounts, and of the Keeper of the Stores.

The Surveyor of the Ordnance, the Keeper of the Stores, and ſome others in Office, were ſomewhat tardy in their Doings; having, upon Occaſion, taken the Liberty to advance their own private Intereſts in the Queen's Wrong. But about the Year 1591. N. Rainberd, one belonging to that Office, as it ſeems, privately gave the Lord Treaſurer Information by a Letter; diſcovering their Shifts and Devices, in drawing of Books and Proportions for their own Gain and Commodity; overcharging her Majeſty with exceſſive Prices of Proviſions brought into the Store from Time to Time. He informed alſo of a Book of Debts preſently to be exhibited unto his Honour; wherein they purpoſed to demand Allowances for ſome Things already paid for by the Queen; as upon due Examinations thereof by the Officers, generally would appear. As divers Emptions for the Ships were demanded in the ſame Book; which the Keeper of the Stores would alledge to be due to him, albeit her Majeſty had already paid for the ſame. Alſo, a Quantity of Iron Shot, lately brought into the Store; which in Truth, upon due Examination would appear to be her Majeſty's, being an old Remain returned from the Seas at the Time of the Spaniards being here. There was a Bargain of 30000 Pound Weight of Copper Plate, and 20000 Pound Weight of Match. Of the Copper, there was brought into her Majeſty's Stores 13000 Pound Weight. And all at 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the Hundred Weight. But indeed the ſame was bought for betwixt 50*s.* and 3*l.* the Hundred. So the Queen loſt in every Hundred 33*s.* and 4*d.* at the leaſt. This Informer offered, when the Lord Treaſurer ſhould command him, to draw a Brief of the whole Deceit, he was ready to perform the ſame.

The Powder and Saltpetre of the Queen's Stores embezzled, and diſcovered.

In the Year 1578, there was another Diſcovery of embezzling the Queen's Gunpowder and Salt-Petre. Which Abuſe had been practiſed for ſome good while before. And one of the Clerks, or otherwiſe belonging to the Stores, privately ſignified it to the Lord Treaſurer. By which he went in danger of his Life, were it known: Deſiring therefore it might be taken Notice of ſome other way. In order to which he ſecretly delivered this Paper to the ſaid Treaſurer, which way the Queen might find out the Abuſes within the Office of the Ordnance, and no Suſpicion grow to the Revealer of the ſame. Which Courſe was accordingly taken by the Lord Treaſurer.

The Maſter of the Ordnance his Orders to the Gun-founders.

Anno 1587, About Michaelmas, the Earl of Warwick, Maſter of the Ordnance, ſent a Gentleman of his, one Mr. Blincoe, with a Commandment to all the Gunfounders in Suſſex, to repair up to the City on ſuch a Day, there to underſtand his Pleaſure concerning their further Continuance in that Trade. Whereupon appeared Henry Nevel, and the reſt of that Occupation; meeting at the Houſe of his Deputy, Mr. Hockenal. Who told them, that upon Complaint made to the Lords of the Council of the Abuſe of the Tranſportation of Ordnance into Foreign Countries, their Honours had referred it to the Earl of Warwick, to take Order for Redreſs of it. Whereupon he thought good to call them together; and had authorized him, the ſaid Hockenal, with Blincoe, to deal with them, and to take ſufficient Security againſt the like Abuſes for the Time to come. And becauſe it was thought convenient, that ſome Quantity of Ordnance ſhould Yearly be made for the neceſſary Proviſion of our own Navigation, they ſet down a general Rate yearly, which ſhould ſerve the whole Realm. And out of that they allotted to every Founder a certain Quantity: But requiring at their Hands, that they ſhould enter into Bonds, not to caſt any greater Quantity than ſhould be allotted them; nor to ſell any but in the City; nor to any Merchant but ſuch as my Lord or his Deputy ſhould name; with certain other Conditions of taking a Stamp for all Pieces out of the Office; and ſome other ſmall Points. But that Article of ſelling to none but ſuch as ſhould be appointed, cauſed ſome Diſturbance; becauſe they thought it tended rather to ſome private Benefit, than Publick.

Great Quantity of Iron Ordnance caſt and tranſported.

About the Year 1593, Notice having been before taken of great Quantities of Iron Ordnance, caſt by Founders, and tranſported abroad by Merchants, certain Perſons (whereof one Dickenſon was Chief) went about to obtain of the Queen a Patent for the Term of One and twenty Years, to have the only Nomination and Appointment of ſuch Founders as were to be allowed, and the ſole Government and Diſpoſition of caſting and ſelling of all Ordnance and Shot of Iron: On Condition to pay her Majeſty 40*s*. for every Ton of Ordnance that ſhould be caſt and ſold within this Realm; and to keep Fifty Tons of Ordnance in readineſs ever to be ſold to her Majeſty upon any ſudden Occaſion; and to give an Account to the Lieutenant of the Ordnance every Six Months of all the ſeveral Guns that ſhould be caſt and ſold: And to build new Furnaces without any Charge to her Majeſty, when any extraordinary Pieces were to be caſt, for the only Uſe of her Highneſs, upon any reaſonable Warning given.

Twenty five hundred Tons of Iron Ordnance caſt Yearly.

For the backing of which Suit, they ſhewed, That a Gunfounder had confeſſed, that of late he had known 2500 Ton of Iron Ordnance to be caſt in this Realm, or upward, in ſome one Year. Which might prove a Thing both dangerous to the State, and hurtful unto the Subjects. And that for theſe Two Reaſons:

Firſt, For that the more Ordnance is caſt, the greater is the Waſt of Woods, Timber and Ewre; and the leſs good Iron made for the Uſe of the Commonwealth. And,

Secondly, For that there is ever ſuch an exceeding Quantity of Ordnance ready made, and diſperſed into many Places, as did allure bad Perſons in the Night to convey the ſame by Stealth to the Waterſide; and ſo into Foreign Countries: Where there was uttered three times ſo much Ordnance as was occupied here by the Engliſh Subjects: And that heretofore without Licence or Payment of Cuſtom.

And theſe Diſorders chiefly grew by the Wilfulneſs and overgrown Numbers of Founders: Who notwithſtanding had often been expreſly forbidden to caſt any Guns by the Maſter of the Ordnance, and by the Lords of the Privy Council, in the Name of her Majeſty. And for Obſervation thereof, have been enforced to enter into Bonds; and yet to this Day no Mean hath been found ſufficient to rule or reſtrain them.

The Number of Founders reſtrained.

For which Cauſe, the late Maſter of the Ordnance, and the other Officers there, thought it beſt to abridge the Number of the Founders; and by Licenſe from her Majeſty to eſtabliſh ſome few of the meeteſt of that Company to continue thoſe Services, under and by ſome neceſſary Orders and Penalties. By which means there ſhould be no more Ordnance caſt than were needful, nor any tranſported without Intelligence, for full Licenſe and Payment of Cuſtom.

Carew, Lieutenant of the Ordnance, ſues for the Farm of caſting and tranſporting Great Guns.

Here Sir George Carew, the preſent Lieutenant of the Ordnance, (Anno 1593,) interpoſed in behalf of himſelf, as to whom of Right this Matter chiefly belonged; and that as well the caſting of Guns, as the Tranſportation of them (which the Queen had granted under the Great Seal to certain Farmers) was in time paſt ex Officio in the Power of the Maſter of the Ordnance, or of the Lieutenant; and that no longer ſithence than when Sir Robert Conſtable lived. Whereby in ſome ſort he held himſelf more intereſted in this Cauſe than a mere Stranger: And in that reſpect had good Hope the Queen would admit him to be her Farmer before any Man elſe. And the rather, for that herein ſhe ſhould advance her Benefit in a Thing which hitherto had been wholly unprofitable to her.

A Patent to the Surveyor to dig any where for Saltpetre

Near about this Time, the Queen granted to John Powel, Eſq; Surveyor of the Ordnance, a Patent by her Prerogative, to have Power and Authority to dig, open, and work for Saltpetre in or upon any the Ground or Grounds within the Realm of England and Ireland, where the ſaid Saltpetre without Fraud or Covin, ſhould be thought to be found: And the ſame to try out and make into Powder; as well within her own Grounds, Lands, and Poſſeſſions, as of any of her Subjects. So as the ſaid Surveyor, or his Deputy, did reaſonably agree, accord, and ſatisfy the Parties according to the Law; and with the Owner of any ſuch Stuff, or Neceſſaries, as might fortune to be taken for the Uſe of the ſaid Works.

The Surveyor appointed to review the Forts and Caſtles of the Cinque Ports.

In the Year 1595, William Partherick, Eſq; Surveyor of the Ordnance, was appointed to ride unto all the Forts, Caſtles, and Places of Defence within the Cinque Ports, and their Members; as well to view and ſurvey what Want of Ordnance, Powder, Shot, and other Munition of War, was in every of them; and alſo to ſee the Decays of their ſeveral Platforms within every of the ſaid Places of Defence: To the Intent further Order might be taken as well for the repairing and amending thereof, as for the neceſſary Supplies of ſuch other Furniture there needful. He was alſo to take Order for the ſending up from Dover to the Tower, thoſe Pieces of Braſs that were broken, and to deliver certain Powder remaining at Canterbury, left there ſince the Year 1588.]

CHAP. XX.

Of the Offices of keeping the RECORDS in the Tower; Of the REGALIA; And of the Lions, and other Wild Beaſts and Creatures there.

The Keeper of the Records. J. S.

THE Keepers of the Records have uſually been ſuch as have been ſkilled in the Law, and ſtudious of Antiquity, and addicted to the Peruſal of ancient Records and Inſtruments; and withal Perſons of great Faithfulneſs, ſuch an important Treaſure as theſe Writs and Muniments being committed to their Truſt. He that hath the Cuſtody of theſe Records, is nominated and appointed thereto by the Sovereign King or Queen; who granteth a Warrant to the Maſter of the Rolls to admit and ſwear him; and he is confirmed by Royal Letters Patents. His Salary is 500*l.* a Year. He hath a Deputy, who always attends at the Office, beſides ſeveral Clerks, as occaſion ſerves, under him. Before the taking away of the Courts of Wards and Liveries, of Requeſts, &c. it was an Office of conſiderable Profit; but afterward, and at preſent, the Benefit ariſeth not to much.

His Deputy.

Place where they are kept Wakefield Tower.

The Records are repoſited in Two Places chiefly; viz. in the Office, and in the Chapel, commonly called Julius Cæſar's Chapel in the White Tower. The Place where the Office is kept is called Wakefield's Tower, which joyns to the Bloody Tower, near Traitor's Gate. This hath been lately repaired and beautified by Queen Anne, the Charges whereof is reported to amount to 2000*l.* The Entrance into it is now very graceful and clean, through a ſmall Yard paved with Free Stone, and againſt the Stone Walls are planted Philereys. The Stairs and Stair-Caſe mended and whited, and made much more commodious and lightſome. The Windows, which before were but ſmall and darkſome, are now Saſhed, and do let in much more Light, ſo requiſite for the Inſpection of thoſe obſolete and ſometimes obſcure Writings. The Rooms, which are Three in Number, one above another, beſides the large round Room where the Rolls lye, are all beautifully wainſcotted and pannelled with right Wainſcot. This Wainſcot Work is framed into Preſſes round each Room; within which are Shelves and Repoſitories for the Reception of Records, as they ſhall be ſent hither from time to time.

In this Office, eſpecially in the round Room, partly in Preſſes in the middle of it, and partly againſt the Walls, are diſpoſed in good Order great Numbers of Rolls. There was lately depicted upon the Outſides of every Preſs what Rolls they contained, ranked under each King's Reign: But now ſince the admirable Reparation of this Place, each Year of every King's Reign is inſcribed within the Preſſes; according to which is the placing of the Rolls, whereby eaſier Application is made to any Roll that is ſought for.

Records in the White Tower.

Vaſt Quantities of other Records lye in the Chapel of the White Tower, confuſedly in Heaps. But by ſpecial Command from above, ſeveral Hands have been employ'd for divers Years in turning them over, ſearching, viewing, and digeſting them, and putting them in proper Place and Order for Uſe. For which Purpoſe, Preſſes, Boxes, Shelves, and Receptacles are made in the ſaid Chapel for them. They conſiſt chiefly of Bills and Anſwers, and Depoſitions in Chancery. But there are alſo many Original Letters of the Kings of this Realm, and Privy Seals found and brought into the Office, and laid up carefully there in their proper Places.

Mr. Prinn's Pains.

Here Mr. Prinn, ſometime Keeper of the Records, had gathered out of huge Heaps, covered with Duſt and Cobwebs, Popes Bulls, Parliament Writs and Returns, and Letters, which he Printed; but took leſs Care to ſort and digeſt them, and leave them in Order for the Uſe of others.

Popes Bulls.

Popes Bulls he reduced to Order, being in all 165, beginning at the Year 1256, to the Year 1406. Where are Bulls of Alexander the Fourth, Alexander the Fifth, &c. unto the Bulls of Gregory the Twelfth.

The Records there retrieved from Ruin, and Methodized.

But how the aforeſaid moſt worthy and uſeful Deſign firſt took place, and what Progreſs by this time is made therein, doth juſtly here require ſome Account to be given. Charles Lord Halifax was the firſt that moved this good Work. Whoſe Care for retrieving our ancient Hiſtories, and tranſacting this preſent Affair, the Right Reverend the Biſhop of Carliſle (now of Londonderry) hath taken Notice of in his Epiſtle Dedicatory to the ſame Lord, before his Engliſh Hiſtorical Library; viz.

Biſhop of Carliſle's Account thereof.

‘ That ſoon after ‘ Her Majeſty Queen Anne's Acceſſion to the ‘ Throne, he obſerving the deplorable Condition
‘ of our Publick Records, and how they wanted
‘ a ſpeedy Care and looking to, many whereof ‘ (through the ſupine and continued Negligence of ‘ ſome of the former reſpective Keepers thereof)
‘ were in confuſed and uſeleſs State, and many ‘ others expoſed to the laſt Injuries of Weather;
‘ moved the Matter to the Houſe of Lords. Who ‘ forthwith appointed a Committee (wherein his ‘ Lordſhip preſided) to inſpect theſe Grievances,
‘ and to report their Opinions, in what manner they ‘ might be moſt effectually redreſſed. That to this ‘ Committee, frequently revived, and for ſeveral
‘ Years under the Direction of the ſame Preſi-
‘ dent, we owe the Safety, and now regular Diſpoſi-
‘ tion of theſe venerable Remains, juſtly reckoned
‘ to excel in Age and Beauty whatever the choiceſt
‘ Archives abroad can produce of the like ſort.

The Order taken for digeſting and preſerving them.

But the Orders for the digeſting and preſerving the ſaid Records, the ſaid Right Reverend Author hath preſerved the more particular Knowledge thereof to Poſterity; relating, That in the Year 1703, their Lordſhips appointed a Committee to inſpect the Methods in keeping Records in Offices, and how they were kept; and to conſider of Ways to remedy what ſhould be found amiſs. For which purpoſe, the Lords Committees were empowered to ſend for ſuch Officers (and hear ſuch Perſons thereupon) as they ſhould think fit; being afterwards to report their Opinions to the Houſe. This Committee was Yearly renewed in ſeveral following Seſſions of Parliament; as Decemb. 15. 1705. Jan. 7. 1706. &c. And the Lord Halifax (then Lord in the Chair) duly reported the Progreſs made in the Execution of this Truſt. The firſt of theſe Reports ſet forth, That a great Number of Rolls in the Tower had no Calendars or Abſtracts made of them, viz. Rotuli Normanniæ, Franciæ, Vaſconiæ, Walliæ, Romæ, Scotiæ, Alemanniæ & Hiberniæ. That the making of theſe Calendars would require a careful Peruſal of all the Entries upon theſe Rolls, by the Clerks that are employed therein. That the Committee were humbly of Opinion, that it would be a publick Service to have this done. That in Cæſar's Chapel, pel, under the Leads in the White Tower, Multitudes of Records in ſeveral Reigns, (ſome relating to State Matters, and others to Proceedings in Courts of Juſtice) were laid in confuſed Heaps, and that if Care were not ſpeedily taken of them, would be in great Danger of utter periſhing. That it would be a publick Damage (as well as Diſhonour) to the Kingdom, to ſuffer ſuch Monuments of Antiquity to be loſt. That the preſerving of them would be too great Work to be undertaken by the Keeper of the Records, unleſs there were Allowances made to him for a ſufficient Number of Clerks, who underſtood the Languages and Hands wherein the Records were written, and were capable of making Abſtracts of them, under the Care and Direction of that Officer. Further, That it did appear by the Writs, De Calendariis faciendis, De Rotulis & Scriptis in recto ordine ponendis, & Expenſis Clericis miniſtrandis, that theſe Allowances had been anciently made to Clerks attending the Office of Records within the Tower. And laſtly, That if theſe Records were made clean, and reduced into Order, the ſame might be placed in the Room where the preſent Office is kept, at a ſmall Expence.

The Queen's Order.

This was the Subſtance of the Reports. Hereupon it was immediately ordered, March 30. 1704. That the Lord Treaſurer ſhould lay the ſaid Report before her Majeſty, humbly moving her to give Directions thereon.

The next Seſſion, the Lord Treaſurer gave the Houſe an Account, That her Majeſty had ſigned a Warrant, directed to Sir Chriſtopher Wren, Knight, Surveyor General of the Works, William Lowndes, Eſq; John Anſtis, Eſq; William Petyt, Eſq; Peter Le Neve, Eſq; and William Grymes, Gent. requiring them, or any Three of them, to repair to the Tower of London, and there to view and inſpect Cæſar's Chapel, and examine how and in what manner the Records there might be preſerved; as alſo the Place where the preſent Office is kept in the ſaid Tower, and what Works were neceſſary for the receiving, placing, and digeſting of the ſaid Records. Theſe Commiſſioners went accordingly, and made their Report: Upon which the Lord Treaſurer ordered 150 l. for providing Preſſes, Drawers and Shelves, for the Records in Cæſar's Chapel, [for the Office was too ſcanty to hold them:] And for the demoliſhing a Room, which (having been lately on fire) was thought to be dangerous. And William Petyt, Eſq; [Keeper of the Records] was appointed to ſuperviſe the digeſting, &c. of the Records, with Power to take in Three Clerks for that Service at 150 l. per Annum, from Michaelmas 1704, over and above a chief Clerk at 100 l. Who was Mr. George Holmes, [now Deputy Recorder.]

Clerks appointed.

The Lords Committees continued their Care for ſome Winters following, in the Progreſs of this Affair. And (after occaſional Enquiries in about Five Seſſions) the forenamed Noble Lord reported, (viz. April 20. 1709.) That a great Progreſs was made in this Affair. That the confuſed Heap (which lay before covered with Duſt) was now throughly cleanſed, and put into Cheſts, Baſkets and Shelves, in order to be ſorted. That the Rolls (from the firſt Year of King John, to the laſt of Edward IV.) and the Eſcheat Bundles, (from Henry III. to Richard III.) were placed under their proper Years; and a Catalogue made of them. That Abſtracts were made of the Norman, Scotch, Welſh and Iriſh Rolls; with Alphabetical Indexes of the Names of Perſons and Places. That Depoſitions in Chancery (of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and downwards) were bundled up Alphabetically. That ſeveral Things ſtill remained to be done, for putting all in right Order: As Abſtracts of ſome Foreign Rolls, Patent Rolls, Cloſe Rolls, Chartæ Antiquæ, &c. That the Clerks were ſtill employed in this Work; and when finiſhed, the Records would be in very exact and good Order. That the Shelves and Preſſes were ſo well made, and the Office fitted up in ſuch manner, that the Records were very dry. And laſtly, That there was Room made for a great Number of other Records, which might be tranſmitted hither. As ſince there hath been from the Rolls.

Theſe Clerks are ſtill (to this Year 1718) very diligently at Work daily in Cæſar's Chapel; and like ſo to be, the Records are ſo numerous.

Account of the Rolls.

The Records that lye in the Office do begin in the firſt Year of King John. For before that Time there were no Rolls, but only Chartæ Antiquæ, i. e. Ancient Charters or Tranſcripts, made and done, a few before, the reſt ſince the Conqueſt, until the Beginning of the ſaid K. John. Then follow the Rolls of his Son, King Henry the IIId; where the firſt Inquiſitions poſt Mortem begin. Then the Rolls of K. Edward I. K. Edward II. K. Edward III. Of K. Richard II. K. Henry IV. K. Henry V. K. Henry VI. K. Edward IV. But the Rolls of K. Richard III. are kept in the Chapel of the Rolls in Chancery-lane: Where be alſo the Rolls of the ſucceeding Kings.

Chapel of the Rolls.

And as the ſaid Chapel of the Rolls, and the Petty Bag Office, do fill with Records out of other Offices, they have been, and ſtill ought to be tranſmitted into the Tower after ſome Years. And there is at this Time a ſpecial Order in hand, to be had from the Crown, for the bringing the Records, that lye in the Chapel of the Rolls, or elſewhere, into the Tower; there being now very capacious and convenient Places made for their Reception.

What the Records contain.

Theſe Records in the Tower, among other Things, contain the Foundations of Abbies, and other Religious Houſes. And thoſe of later Date in the Chapel of the Rolls, contain the Diſſolution of them, and alſo the Donation of the Lands belonging to them; whereof many Families are now poſſeſſed.

Mr. Rymer's Pains.

Theſe Records conſiſt alſo of Leagues of Foreign Princes, and Treaties with them: (Whereof ſeveral Volumes have been of late tranſcribed and printed, by the Pains of Mr. Rymer, the late Queen's Hiſtoriographer:) All the Atchievements of this Nation in France, and other Foreign Parts: The Originals of all the Laws that have been enacted, or recorded, unto the Reign of Richard III. The Homage and Dependency of Scotland upon England: The Eſtabliſhment of Ireland, and its Laws and Dominions: The Dominion of the Britiſh Seas; totally excluding both French and Dutch from Fiſhing therein, without Licence from England; proved by ſeveral Preſcriptions, and Records before the Conqueſt: The Intereſt of the Iſles of Man, and of Jerſey, Guernſey, Sark and Alderney, being the only remaining Parts of the Norman Poſſeſſion left to this Crown of England: The Title to the Realm of France; and by what means obtained: And all that the Kings or Princes of this Realm, to the Time aforeſaid, have done abroad, or granted and confirmed unto their Subjects at Home or Abroad: Tenures of all the Lands in England; Extents, or Surveys of Manors or Lands: Inquiſitions poſt Mortem, of great Uſe upon Trials of Intereſt or Deſcent: Liberties and Privileges granted to Cities and Towns Corporate, or to private Men; as Court

Leets, Waiffs, Eſtrays, Markets, Fairs, Free Warren, Felons Goods, or what elſe could come to the Crown, or paſs out of it: Several Writs, Pleadings and Proceedings, as well in Chancery, as in all the Courts of Common Law and Exchequer: Inſpeximus's, and Enrolments of Charters and Deeds, made and done before the Conqueſt: Deeds and Contracts between Party and Party; and the juſt Eſtabliſhment of all the Offices in the Nation: The Metes and Bounds of all the Foreſts in England, with the ſeveral reſpective Rights of the Inhabitants therein to Common of Paſture, &c. Beſides many other Privileges and Evidences.

Dr. Chamberlain's Pains.

Theſe are the Contents of the Records, as Dr. Chamberlain hath ſummed them up in his Preſent State of England, to our hand: Which, I preſume, ſo exact a Man had received from ſome Clerk of that Office well verſed therein. But readily to find out any particular Matters ſought for in theſe Rolls, exact Kalendars or Repertories are very neceſſary. And theſe alſo are, or have been in the ſaid Office; as is mentioned in an old Book, called, The Repertory of Records: Wherein is contained and comprized, whatſoever may give Satisfaction to the Searcher for Tenures or Titles. Viz.

Repertory of Records.

Kalendars of theſe Records.

There is one Kalendar, called, The Book of Names, made by way of Alphabet, containing the Names of all Men, whoſe Offices or Inquiſitions (taken after their Deaths) are there to be found: In which you may ſee what Lands any ſuch died ſeized of, with the Tenure of the ſame: And in many of them, the laſt Wills and Teſtaments of ſuch Perſons recited in the ſame: Which Wills ſometimes are not to be found elſewhere.

Item, Divers Kalendars of Eſcheators Bundles: As one of each of theſe Kings; viz. Henry III. Edward I. Edward II. Edward III. Richard II. One of Henry IV. and Henry V. And laſtly, one of Edward IV.

Item, The Book of Heirs of Henry the IIId his Time; containing the Names of ſuch Perſons as had Offices found at that Time, declaring who were their Heirs, and their Age; and ſometimes mentioning their Wives, with the Counties wherein they had any Lands.

Item, The like ſeveral Books, ſeverally and reſpectively made up, of the Times of Edward I. II. and III. and of Richard II. Henry IV. and V.

Item, A little Kalendar, by way of Alphabet, containing ſuch Manors and Lands as were found in any the aforeſaid Offices or Inquiſitions, in the County of Eſſex; but not perfect.

Item, The like Book of the County of Lincoln. The like Books of the Counties of Bedford, of Berks, of Buckingham. And one great Book for the Counties of Somerſet, Dorſet, Devon and Cornwall: But not by way of Alphabet.

Item, A Kalendar and Collection out of the old Rolls, called Charta Antiqua, without Date.

Item, A like Kalendar of the Rolls of King John; and another of K. Henry the Third, unto the 11th of his Reign.

Item, A Kalendar and Collection of all Grants of Inheritance, granted by any of our Kings before Richard III. and as ancient as there are any Records here. This, with the like, was tranſmitted hither out of the Chancery.

Item, Certain Rolls of Edward I. for his whole Reign.

Item, Two Books, or Kalendars, of Free Warrens, Markets, Fairs, Leets and other Liberties; gathered out of the Charter-Roll of the Time of Edward I. and during his whole Reign.

Item, An old Kalendar of Charters of Corporations, and other Liberties granted, of Cities, Boroughs, Abbies, Colleges, and Cathedral-Churches, during the ſaid K. Edward's Reign.

Item, A Kalendar or Collection of the Parliament Rolls of Attainders, Reſtitutions, Reſumptions; from the 29th of Henry III. till the End of his Reign.

Item, Certain Paper Rolls for Confirmations of Charters, and Liberties of Colleges, Corporations and Religious Houſes: And for Licenſes of Lands to be given in Mortmain, from the firſt of Edward I. till the laſt of Edward IV. Done by way of Alphabet.

Item, One Book of Confirmations of Charters of Liberties of Colleges, Corporations and Religious Houſes; and for Licenſes of Lands to be given in Mortmain, as aforeſaid: Collected out of the Patent and Cloſe Rolls of all the Time of Edward II. except two or three of the laſt Years.

Item, Certain ſmall Bundles of looſe Papers, of like Nature, by way of Alphabet, of ſundry King's Times; confuſedly laid together.

Item, A Collection of the Patent Rolls gathered, of all Preſentations made by the King to any Church, Prebendary or Chapel; as well in the Right of the Crown, as in Right of any other; the ſame being for that Time in the Hands of the King; from the firſt of Edward I. till the Midſt of the Reign of Edward III.

Here be alſo Two Books; the one of the Taxation of all the Spiritual Livings in England, the other of the Temporalties.

Item, The Ancient Perambulations of the Foreſts.

Some Parliament Buſineſſes, &c.

Some Foreign Buſineſſes, as Treaties, &c.

Particular Rolls.

Here be, among the reſt, theſe particular Rolls; Viz. Compotus totius Reventionis Principis Walliæ; i. e. An Account of the whole Revenue of the Prince of Wales, in the Time of Edward the IIId. A Viſitation of the Hoſpital of Bethlem, Anno 4. Henry IV. Another de Superioritate Maris Angliæ, Anno 26. Edward I. Franchiſes of London, confirmed by Parliament in the Time of Edward III. Roll 15. The Proceſs of the Court Military, in the Cauſe of Arms between Richard Le Scroope, Knight, and Groſvenor, in the Time of Richard II.

Theſe, with divers Records of Statutes in the Beginning of Edward I. and ſo reaching to Edward IV. do now, or did ſometime lye in the Hole on the left ſide of the Study.

A Common-Prayer-Book among the Records.

Among the printed Books belonging to this Office of Records, is a Book of Common-Prayer under the Great Seal: Which was that which was printed, and authorized to be uſed in the Church of England, upon King Charles II. his coming in. To which is ſet the Names of ſeveral Divines of that firſt Convocation. To which Recourſe might be had, as the Authentick Common-Prayer then eſtabliſhed.

Number of the Rolls in the Tower. G. Holmes.

The Sum Total of all the Rolls now in the Office, reckoning ſeveral lately reſcued from the rude Heaps in the White Tower, and brought in thither, are as followeth:

| In the Reign of | Rolls |
|---|---|
| K. John - - - - - - - - - - - - | 68 |

Scotch Records brought to the Tower.

Theſe Engliſh Records preſerved here, were for ſome Time accompanied with the Treaſure of thoſe of Scotland. For Oliver Cromwell, after he had beaten the Scots in their own Nation, ſeized all the Publick Regiſters, Records and Rolls of that Kingdom, and ſent them up to the Tower: Where they lay for ſome Years, till King Charles his Reſtoration. And pity it was they continued not there longer, ſince being ſent back by that King's Order, to be laid up in the Caſtle of Edinburgh, they moſt unhappily periſhed, together with the Ship that carried them, being caſt away near Holy Iſland.

Attendance given at this Office.

This Office is kept open, and Attendance conſtantly given here, from the Hour of Seven a Clock to One, every Day in the Week; except in the Months of December, January, and February; and in them, from Eight till One: Saving on Sundays, Holidays, Publick Faſting and Thankſgiving Days, and Times of great Peſtilence.

The preſent Keeper of the Records.

W. Petyt, Eſq;

The Chief Officer, or Keeper of theſe Records now, is Richard Topham, Eſq; who ſucceeded William Petyt, of the Inner Temple, Eſq; and ſometime Treaſurer there: Who, as he was a very Learned Antiquary himſelf, ſo he encouraged and aſſiſted others ſtudious of Antiquity. And I muſt gratefully here remember, that he freely allowed me Acceſs to theſe Records. His Clerk, and Deputy in this Office, was Mr. George Holmes, my very good Friend, and very aſſiſtant to me in this Work, as well as in others; communicating to me divers Records for my Purpoſe: And is now alſo Deputy to the preſent Keeper, Mr. Topham.

Orders of this Office.

The good Orders made for this Office, (whereof there was a Table hanging up) were, 'That the Deputy and Clerks ſhould duly and diligently attend in the Office, during the Times aforeſaid; and give their beſt Attendance and Expedition, to all Perſons reſorting thither, in their Searches, in Copying and Examining Records. That they ſhould not procure or ſuffer any Books, Writs, Rolls, Memorandums, or Records to be embezzled, falſified, corrupted, razed, blotted, torn or defaced: Nor carry, or cauſe any of them to be carried out of the Office; unleſs by ſpecial Order of the Queen, or Lord Chancellor, or Maſter of the Rolls, or of her Majeſty's Judges, Barons of her Exchequer, or her Learned Council at Law, or ſome other great Officers of State, for her Majeſty's Service upon ſpecial Occaſions. Special Entry to be made in a Book for that Purpoſe, of any particular Book, Writ, Roll or Record ſent out; of the Perſon that ſent for it, and that carried it out of the Office; the Day of the Month when carried out, and when returned: To be ſubſcribed by the Clerk who carried and returned it; and to be brought back without Delay, when done with. Every Book, Writ, Roll, &c. removed out of its Claſſis, or Place, by reaſon of any Search, Examination or Tranſcript, to be returned to its proper Place immediately after made uſe of. That if any Membrana or Schedule be unſtitched or torn off, to be new ſtitched, or faſtened again by the Clerk. All Books, Bundles of Writs, Rolls and Records, to be diligently inſpected once every Quarter of the Year, to ſee if any be miſſing or miſplaced. No Perſon to be ſuffered to tipple, or take Tobacco in the Office. No Fee to be taken from any Perſon for a Search, who thro' Ignorance deſires to ſearch any Book or Record not kept in the Office. No Fee for Searches, Copies, or Examinations of Records, other than the ancient Fees of the Office. A particular Entry to be duly made of all Searches, Copies, and Examination of Records, and of Fees taken for the ſame. No clandeſtine Searches, and Examinations and Copies to be made, concealed, or not entred by the Deputy, or any Clerk. No Perſon to peruſe any Record in private, but only publickly in the Office. The firſt Comer to be firſt ſerved, and diſpatched without Delay, or Preference given to another that comes after. The Rooms in the Office to be kept clean, and ſwept once or more every Week; and the Writs and Records therein preſerved from Cobwebs, Duſt, Filth and Putrefaction; and the outward Doors duly locked every Night, for the Preſervation of the Records. The Deputy and Clerks to ſpend their vacant Time in the Office, in making exact Kalendars and Tables to the Records for Publick Good; and in reducing the looſe Records in the Office and White Tower Chapel, that are uſeful, into Order and Bundles, as the Maſter of the Office ſhall direct them. Every Deputy and Clerk of the Office, before his Admiſſion, voluntarily to make and ſubſcribe ſuch an Oath, before the Maſter of the Office, as is ſuitable to his Truſt.

K. Edward III. ſpeaks of this Office as ancient.

We ſhall now take ſome Review of this Office of the Records, kept in the Tower, with reſpect to the Antiquity thereof.

There is an Ancient Record of 34. Edward III. wherein mention is made by the ſaid King Edward III. de quadam Domo infra Turrim ſuam London, in qua Rotulos & alia memoranda Cancellariæ, tam de tempore Progenitorum noſtrorum, quondam Regum Angliæ, quàm noſtro, pro ſalva & ſecura Cuſtodia Rotulorum, & Memorand. prædictorum, reponi fecimus: i. e. "Of a certain Houſe within his Tower of London; wherein he cauſed to be laid up the Rolls, and other memorable Matters of the Chancery, as well from the Time of his Progenitors, heretofore Kings of England, as in his own, for the ſafe and ſecure Cuſtody of the ſaid Rolls and memorable Things.

33. Edw. I. Anno 1304.

K. Edward, in that Record, mentioned Rolls repoſited in the Tower in the Time of his Predeceſſors. We can go as far back as Edward I. In the Thirty third Year of whoſe Reign is a Roll, having theſe Words; Scrutentur Rotuli de Scotia, quæ ſunt in Cuſtodia apud Turrim London. Which Mr. Holmes ſhewed me.

The Place where the Records anciently were kept.

The Place then where theſe Records were kept, was a certain Houſe; which Houſe was afterwards called a Tower; that undoubtedly now is called Wakefield's Tower.

In the Record above ſpecified, it is ſaid to be in a certain Houſe.

An. 14. H. VI.

In another Record of King Henry VI. mention is made of a Little Houſe. Johannes Malpas habuit Officium Cuſtodis Armaturæ infra Turrim London. unà cum una parva Domo tunc vacant. infra dictam Turrim, juxta Turrim infra quam Rotuli Cancellariæ Regis continentur.

White Chamber.

White Hall.

An. 36. E. III.

In this Houſe, there was a Chamber called the White Chamber, contiguous to a Hall, called the White Hall: Where one Robert de Hoton, by a ſpecial Order from King Edward III. in the firſt Year of his Reign, arrayed and ſet in order the Charters, Writings and Muniments, in Two Cheſts. The ſame King gave Order to the Clerk of his Works within the Tower, to ſee to the Reparation of the Defects of this Houſe, as well to the Roof, as the Doors, Windows, &c. There were other Places where in Times paſt Rolls and Inſtruments were kept: As in the Keeper of the Rolls of Chancery his Inn, and in the ecords kept in St. Bartholo-mew's.

the Priory of St. Bartholomews. For ſo in a Record 39. Henry VI. Mention is made of divers great Cheſts containing Records of Pleas of the Common Bench, which were in the Priory of St. Bartholomew in Weſtſmithfield; to be removed to the Tower by a Command from the King. For the chief and laſt Repoſitory for theſe Records was the foreſaid Houſe in the Tower; whither they were often remanded by ſpecial Orders from the Kings ſucceſſively.

eepers of the Records in rmer Times. alter Regi-nald.

Now to retrieve ſome of the ancient Keepers of theſe Records. Sometimes the King's Treaſurers were Keepers of the Records. Thus Walter Reginald, the King's Treaſurer, ſeems to have had the Records in his Cuſtody. Who, as appears by a Record, was by King Edward II. enjoyned to deliver to one Benſted all the Writings and Inſtruments touching the Negociation of Peace between King Edward his Father, and the King of France, which were in his Cuſtody in the Tower.

Edward II.

bert Hoton, Edward III.

In the 1ſt of Edward III. Robert Hoton ſeems to have been Keeper of the Records. For in that Year a Writ was directed to him, that he ſhould bring to the Exchequer all the Writings, Muniments, &c. which belonged to Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, deceaſed, which remained in his Cuſtody. “Whereupon the Charters, Writings, and Muniments underwritten, which I ſaw and arrayed, (as the Record runs) I divided in two Cheſts, &c.” in alba Camera contigua albæ Aulæ infra magnum Turrim London, &c.

iam de Kil-by. 14. Ed-ard III.

In the 14th of Edward III. William de Kildeſby, Keeper of the Privy Seal, ſeems to be alſo Keeper of the Records of the Tower: For there is a Tower Record that runs thus; “All the Rolls, Bundles and Memoranda of Chancery, which were in the Houſe of John St. Paul [i. e. Powel] then Keeper of the Rolls of the ſaid Chancery, were ſent by the King's Command to the Tower; and there were delivered to Will. de Kildeſby, Keeper of the Privy Seal of the ſaid King, by William de Emeldon, Clerk of the ſaid John.

n Burton, . Richard II.

In the 10th of Richard II. one John Burton ſeems to have been Keeper of the Tower Records. For there is a Record extant in the ſaid Tower, beginning Mandatum eſt Johanni de Waltham, &c. that is, “It was commanded John de Waltham, Keeper of the Privy Seal of the King, that he deliver all Petitions, Warrants, Indentures, and other memorable Things, from the Time of Lord King Edward, late King, his Grandfather, howſoever pertaining to the Office of the Privy Seal, to his beloved Clerk John Burton, to keep in the Place appointed for the Rolls of Chancery within the Tower of London.

mas Smith, . Henry VI.

In the 11th of Henry VI. Thomas Smith, Clerk, was Keeper of the Records, as appears by a large Exemplification of a Proceſs in the Star Chamber, and a Judgment thereupon given; “At the Suit of Robert Davers againſt Tho. Smith, Clerk, who hath the Cuſtody of the Records of the Chancery of the King remaining in the Tower of London, &c. for the razing of a Record in the Time of Edward III.” Which Smith ſeemed upon this to be diſcharged of his Place. For

Malpas, Henry VI.

Soon after, viz. 14th of the ſame King, John Malpas, who was Keeper of the Armoury, had alſo this Place of Keeper of the Records. For a Record in that Office runs; “John Malpas, hath the Office of Keeper of the Armoury within the Tower of London, together with one little Houſe then vacant within the ſaid Tower; within which are contained the Rolls of the King's Chancery.

h Pexal, Hen. VIII.

About the 20th of Henry VIII. Ralph Pexal was Keeper of theſe Records. For in a Bill ſigned about that Year, the King commanded Ralph Pexal, termed Keeper of the Records within the Tower of London, that he raze, or cauſe to be razed certain Words negligently written long before in the Rolls of Chancery of 22. Edward IV. then being in the Tower, viz. In a Levy granted to Edmund Church.

Hales 3. E. VI.

Edward Hales was Keeper of the Records in King Edward VIth's Time. In the Time of his Cuſtody of them a great many Records lay in an old Houſe in the Tower unknown, undiſcovered, till Hoby that belonged to the Ordnance, looking for a convenient Place to lay Gunpowder in, found them there, and gave the ſaid Hales Notice of it, and to fetch ſome of them away. Many whereof had lain there ſo long by the Walls, that they were eaten and periſhed by the Lime.

Will. Bowyer, 9. Regin. Eliz.

In the beginning of Queen Elizabeth, one William Bowyer, a Gentleman bred up in the Study of the Law, by the Perſuaſion of Sir Tho. Parry, a great Man at Court, took on him this Truſt.

Digeſts and ſorts the Records.

When he came into the Place, he found theſe Records in no Order. So that they could be but little ſerviceable to any that ſhould conſult them; not knowing where to find what they looked for. He therefore drew up at firſt a Compendium of the Records from King John to the laſt Year of Edward IV. And at the Inſtigation of Secretary Cecil, and for his Service, at length writ out with his own Hand many Repertoria, neceſſary either for the Queen or her Subjects, viz. Of all the Rolls of Parliament; all the Patents and Rolls of Wales, of Gaſcoine, Scotland, Rome, France, Normandy, and Almain, from the firſt of King John to the laſt of Edward IV. And digeſted them all into Six great Volumes. Which ſpent him Eight Years, and above 1000*l.* of his own Eſtate, beſide all his Labour. This I take from his own Writing. But all theſe Repertories are now gone; and the preſent Deputy is now buſy in that needful Work.

G. Holmes.

A Motion for the ancient Records to be brought into the Tower, by Bowyer.

A Motion was made in Queen Elizabeth's Reign by the aforeſaid Bowyer, to have the ancient Records in the Chancery removed to the Tower; as being a Place anciently uſed for the ſafe keeping and laying up the richeſt and oldeſt Jewels of the Realm and Crown: And ſo had it been likewiſe uſed as the ſureſt and moſt convenient Place, wherein to beſtow and keep the ancient Records of the King, and of the Judicial Courts at Weſtminſter; and moſt eſpecially thoſe of the Chancery. The Rolls and Records of which Court, as many as remained ſince the Conqueſt until the End of the Reign of King Edward IV. being there at that Time the ſaid Motion was made; (and I ſuppoſe to this Day) as they had ever from time to time been brought from the Place of their firſt Birth and Original, (now called The Rolls) unto the Tower; namely, when by Length of Time the Number of them increaſed; and that the ſame, by reaſon of their Age, were come to be of leſs Uſe or Service to that Court. Which Things thorowly conſidered, gave Occaſion at that Time to require, that ſome Parts of the oldeſt of the ſaid Records remaining then in the Rolls, being above the Age of an Hundred Years, might, according to their ancient Order, be brought to the Tower; from which Place ſo many and ſo old Records of Chancery, as then remained in the Rolls, had not been ſo long with-held in any former Time ſince the Conqueſt. For Proof whereof it could be made manifeſt by Record, that about the Twentieth of King Henry VIII. there was remaining at the Rolls no Records of more ancient Time, than thoſe of the Time of Henry VII. except the few Years of King Richard III. All together were leſs than the Number of Fifty Years. And therefore that it was not unreaſonable, that the like ſhould be required at this Day. But notwithſtanding this Motion, nothing was done.

Prinn's Animadverſ. p. 51. Marg.

The Keepers of the Records ſucceeding Mr. Bowyer, were Thomas Heneage and William Heneage.

Then Roger Wilbraham, Eſq; 2. Jacob. Robert Bowyer, and Henry Elſing, Eſq; 10. Jacob. Then John Burroughs, afterwards Knight, and Nicholas Parker, Eſq; the one of Grays Inn, the other of the Middle Temple. The Two laſt deceaſed Keepers, viz. Prinn and Petyt were great and laborious Antiquarians. Of whom I ſhall take ſome Notice by and by.

The Fee of ſearching theſe Records.

The Fee of ſearching the Records in the Tower, was at firſt but a Noble for opening the Door; afterwards Ten Shillings in Queen Elizabeth's Reign. But then you might have a whole Day's Search from Morning to Night, with the Attendance of one or two Clerks, and the free Uſe of all the Records there, and of as many Kalendars as had been made thereof by the continual Labour of Twenty Years and more: Now the Cuſtom is to ſearch Four Terms more for the ſame Fee.

Theſe Records began to be ſearched in Queen Elizabeth's Reign.

Before Queen Elizabeth, there was but little ſearching of the Tower Records. But in and ſince her Reign, there was greater Reſort thither. The Reaſon whereof was, that ſuch as had the keeping of them, took Pains in ſorting and kalendring the ſaid Records; making thereby the Search more eaſy and readier by much, than it was wont to be.

Lord Henry Stafford one of the firſt Digeſters of the Records.

It was ſhewn before what a diligent and painful Digeſter of theſe old Writings Will. Bowyer was, and who ſeems to deſerve the chief Praiſe in that uſeful Work. Yet we muſt not ſuffer the Name of Henry Lord Stafford, a Learned Nobleman, to be buried in Forgetfulneſs, while we are mentioning this. He was one of the Chamberlains of the Exchequer in King Edward VIth's Time unto Queen Elizabeth's; and had a Key of theſe Records committed to him; and being a Man ſtudious of ſuch Antiquity, beſtowed much of his Time thereon: And was one of the firſt in later Memory that attempted the reducing them into Order. He made an Inventory of moſt of them, ſetting them in ſuch Order, that he could have found any notable Matter enquired for. Which nevertheleſs, after, by tumbling and toſſing were diſplaced again. He made alſo Repertories of every Matter from King John's Days till Richard III. And of Charters, Rolls, Patent-Rolls, Parliament-Rolls, from Edward III. to Richard III. This Lord is alſo to be remembred with Honour, for the Informations he gave to Secretary Cecil in the very beginning of Queen Elizabeth, of the Neglects and Embezzilments of theſe precious Records. Which had this Effect, that the Queen gave the Secretary, the Earl of Shrewsbury, and others, Commiſſions to view, ſee, and underſtand, how and where they were conveyed away; and to draw up Inſtructions for the better preſerving, and Order in keeping them hereafter. Whereupon they appointed two Keys unto the Office: One whereof they commited unto the ſaid Nobleman; and that a perfect Inventory ſhould be made of the Books that remained. And he for the more careful Preſervation of them, kept one Fitz his Servant to be always there ready with his Key, when as any Search ſhould be commanded to be made; and to keep a Book of Comptrolment, when any Records went out; and by what Warrant; and how they were brought in again. For Bowyer, the Keeper of the Records at this Time, did uſe for his own Eaſe to take home with him ſome Rolls, and return them at his Pleaſure again.

His Informations concerning theſe Records.

The Records kept ſometimes under Two Keys.

So that theſe Records have been kept ſometimes under two Keys; as above was ſeen when the Keeper had one, and the Chamberlain of the Exchequer another: And that for the more ſafe keeping of theſe moſt valuable and venerable Writings; and that the Safety of them might not depend upon one Man; whoſe Clerks or Servants might embezzle them. Upon this Account it was, that the above-mentioned Lord Stafford alledged, how dangerous a Thing it was for the Queen and Realm, that the ſame ſhould be under one Key; and ſhewed, that by ſundry Records remaining in the Treaſury of the Palace of Weſtminſter, there had been given Allowance unto the Clerks and Deputies of the Lord Treaſurer, and Chamberlains, for the arraying [i.e. Setting in Order] and removing of the Records of the Tower.

Records imperfect before King John.

Before the Time of King John are no Rolls perfect, but Fragments and Pieces. The Reaſon whereof might be, partly the defacing of many (namely, ſuch as were laid up in another Houſe) by reaſon of the Lime and Dampneſs of the Walls, againſt which they were careleſly piled up: And partly by the Neglect of former Keepers; who committed this Office to their Clerks and Servants; who in the Abſence of the Keeper, might do what they liſted with them, without any Man's Comptrollment.

Records anciently kept in Caſtles.

The laſt Note I ſhall make on this Subject is this, That ſtrong Towers and Caſtles were commonly the Places where the State-Records and other Rolls of Moment were wont to be preſerved: Of which Places there were divers in former Times, applied to this Uſe, both in England and France: But the Tower of London was always one. In the Reign of King Edward II. the chief Places appointed for the preſerving the Records, were the Caſtles of Pontefract, in Yorkſhire, Tutbury in Staffordſhire, and Tonnebrug [Turbridge] in Kent, and the Tower of London. Which Four Places are mentioned in an old Record. Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Know ye, that we have aſſigned our beloved Clerks Robert de Hoton and Thomas de Sibthorp, to ſearch, array, and put in right Order our Charters, Writings, and other our Muniments, being within our Caſtles of Pontefract, Tuttburie, and Tonnebrug, and thoſe were come lately, and are in the Cuſtody of the Keeper of our Tower of London*: And alſo all thoſe which are in the Houſe of the* Friars Preachers within the City of London; that is, The Black Friars; a Place of Strength where Parliaments uſed ſometimes to ſit, and where was a Tower.

1. Pat. de an. 16. Edw. II.

Records kept in France.

There were alſo in thoſe Times other Records kept in the King's Dominions in the Parts of France; to wit, at the Towers of Bourdeaux and Baion. Which Places are mentioned in a Record in the Time of Edward III. To which (it is to be remarked) the Tower of London is alſo added. Et ad ponend. omnia hujuſmodi jura & cetera predict. quæ per Inquiſitionem legitimam clara poterunt invenire in Regiſtra in Turribus, London. Burdigale and Bayone.

Remarks on the Two laſt Keepers.

The Two laſt Keepers of the Records deceaſed, deſerve to have ſome more particular Remark: Both learned in the Law, and who alſo by their inceſſant Pains, drew out vaſt Volumes of the uſefulleſt of theſe Records, for more Publick Service, and for the Illuſtration of the ancient Hiſtory and Liberty of this Land. The former was Prinn, whoſe Tranſcriptions are printed; the latter was Petyt, whoſe Tranſcriptions yet remain in Manuſcript.

William Prinn Keeper of the Records.

William Prinn of Lincolns Inn, Eſq; on whom King Charles II. conferred this Office during Life, ſoon after his Reſtoration, of his own mere Motion by Patent, ſent him, without Fees; and conferred on him withal an honourable annual Salary out of the General Receipt of his Exchequer; the better to enable him to peruſe, kalendar, and improve the Records for the Publick Good, and to reſcue them from Obſcurity and Oblivion. Which he performed by the Publication of many of them upon ſeveral Subjects and Occaſions, in Three great Tomes in Folio. Collecting them, (as he tells us in his Epiſtles and Prefaces to them) out of the Office where the Records and Rolls lay; and partly out of the looſe, rude Heaps of Inſtruments in the Chapel of the White Tower. The Contents of them ſo publiſhed by him, ſhewed the ancient ſupreme Juriſdiction of the Kings of this Land, whether Britiſh, Saxon, or Norman; but eſpecially under the Reigns of King John, Henry III. and Edward I. The laſt and Third Volume came out Anno 1670. he having been ſtopt ſome Time in his Searches in the Office by the Plague and the great Fire. Which Fire conſumed his Printer's Houſe, and all his Printing Preſſes, and moſt of his Caſes and Letters; and alſo of his printed Copies of the Firſt and Second Tome, with Forty Printed Sheets of his Third.

His Collections. Epiſt. Dedic. to the Third Tome.

His Collections conſiſted of Writs of Prohibitions iſſued out, and Attachments, Suits at the Proſecutions of our Kings, or their grieved Subjects, brought for Contempt of them, either againſt Popes, Nuncio's, their Collectors and Delegates; or againſt our own Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Archdeacons, Officials, or Eccleſiaſtical Judges; in vexing the Subjects by Excommunications, and Writs De Excommunicat. capiendo; of which he found Multitudes yet remaining; beſides thoſe that were putrified, torn, loſt, or periſhed; enough not only to ſatiate, but ſurfeit the Readers. The moſt whereof he abbreviated, and inſerted in his Third Tome.

s Third ome.

In which Tome he alſo preſented the World with a large Collection of Records, Writs, Epiſtles, Patents, Bulls, Procurations, Antiquities, not formerly Printed, relating principally to the Eccleſiaſtical, and ſome to Civil Affairs of greateſt Note in England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, and Rome, during the Reigns of ſeveral Kings. Many of which he reſcued from Duſt and Putrefaction, as well as Oblivion. Wherein all great Officers both in Church and State, Common Lawyers, Canoniſts, Members of Parliament, Hiſtorians, Heralds, Divines, may find ſome Antiquities and Rarities ſuiting them.

But the Multiplicity and Variety of the ſaid Records were ſuch, that he could only collect and digeſt them in a Chronological Order, as the Year Books and Repertories are independent on each other; and that alſo in a rude and unpoliſh'd Style, moſt ſuitable to old Motheaten, lacerated, muſty Records and Antiquities (as he expreſſed it) overſpread with Duſt and Cobwebs, as many of them were. And therefore to make ſome Amends for this, the ſame laborious Man added no leſs than Fourteen Tables to the Third Tome (which made a Volume of it ſelf) for the better finding out and knowing the multifarious Matters contained in the Body of his Book.

cords in Waite er.

Laſtly, By way of Appendix to his Third Tome, he added many more Writs of Prohibitions, Epiſtles, Bulls, and other Records, pertinent to his Deſign, which he had gathered from Bundles thrown by in a confuſed Heap, buried Time out of Mind in Duſt, lying in the White Tower Chapel; all happening in the Reign of King Edward I. And in his Epiſtle Dedicatory, and Epiſtle to the Reader before the ſaid Third Tome, he crowded in more Records ſtill, as they came to his Hand, in that King's Reign; as likewiſe others in the Reign of Henry I. and II. which he found in the ſeveral Treaſuries and Offices in the Court of Exchequer.

liam Pe- , Eſq;

William Petyt of the Inner Temple, Eſq; immediate Predeceſſor in this Office to the preſent Keeper. As he had long ſtudied, and was arrived to deep Knowledge in the ancient Hiſtory and Conſtitutions of this Kingdom, ſo he was very communicative of it to all that repaired to him for that Purpoſe; and was very aſſiſtant to ſuch as publiſhed any things of that Nature; whereof I my ſelf have had ample Experience. He was a ſtrong Aſſertor of the Liberties of England; and how well he acquitted himſelf therein, his Books printed againſt Dr. Brady do ſhew. He did for many Years employ his Clerks in making Extracts of ſuch Records and Rolls lying in the Office of which he was Keeper, as might be of Publick Uſe to be known and read in theſe Times, and let in Light into the Affairs either of the State, or the Church. Which at laſt amounted to a great Number of Volumes fairly written: Theſe, with a great many other valuable MSS. of Law, Hiſtory, Antiquity, Proceſſes, Acts of Parliament, Church Affairs, by his laſt Will he left to certain of his Friends, to be repoſited ſafely for Poſterity in ſome convenient Place, as they ſhould think moſt fit; and did bequeath 150*l.* for the building a Library to contain them and his other Books.

He ſpent his laſt Years at Chelſea; where at his own Charge, in his Life-time, he erected a Building, that contained a Veſtry for the Uſe of the Pariſhioners to meet in about Pariſh Buſineſs, and a School Room for the teaching of the Youth, and convenient Chambers for the Schoolmaſter. He was affable, pious, and charitable, and left a good Name behind him. He lived to a fair Age, being 72 Years old; dying Octob. 3. Anno 1707, and was buried in the Round of the Temple Church. Where his Brother, Sylveſter Petyt, of Bernard's Inn, Gent. hath ſet up againſt the South Wall a decent Monument to his Memory.

His Library, furniſhed with his Books and MSS. is finiſhed, and placed in a Court of the Inner Temple.

One Thing more in this ſtrong and Royal Fort comes next to be mentioned.

The Regalia kept in the Tower.

In the Tower of London are kept the Imperial Crown, the Mound, the Sceptre, the Jewels, and other Royal Treaſure, called, The Regalia, to be uſed at Coronations, &c. The Officer to whom theſe were committed, is called the Keeper of them, who muſt be a Perſon of great Integrity, ſo great a Truſt being repoſed in him. The Place where they are kept is at the Eaſt End of the New Armoury. Before one Blood by Name, boldly, and by an unparalleled Impudence and Craft, ſtole away the Crown (though he was taken ſoon after) it was cuſtomary for ſuch whoſe Curioſities induced them to ſee theſe Things, to be admitted into the Room where they were kept, and to take them in their Hands: But ſince that Time there is more Care, the Place being encloſed with Iron Grates. So that they may be ſeen, but none admitted into the Room.

Vid. Chap. 17.

The Jewels anciently kept here.

From ancient Times the Royal Jewels were here at the Tower carefully preſerved by ſome truſty and faithful Perſon, appointed by the King, who had a ſettled Fee for the ſame. And from hence upon great Triumphs and Days of Publick Splendor, they uſed to be brought to Weſtminſter: And when all was over, diligently ſent back again, and that under the King's own Hand.

Record. Turr.

So in the Records I find a Command to William Biſhop of Karlioll, 14. Hen. III. De quatuor Coffins cum Jocalibus Reg. ibid. reponendis; i. e. Concerning Four Coffins, or little Coffers, with the King's Jewels, to be laid up there [in the Tower] as formerly was uſed to be: And that King Edward III. in the 12th of his Reign, appointed one John Flete Cuſtodem Jocalium, &c. i. e. Keeper of the Jewels, and alſo of his Armour, and other Things in the Tower, during his Pleaſure. And to take for his Fee 12*d.* per Diem.

A Liſt Printed is wont to be given to thoſe who come daily to ſee theſe ineſtimable Curioſities in the Jewel-Houſe, briefly mentioning the chief of them: And it is this that followeth.

A Liſt of His Majeſty's Regalia, beſides Plate, and other Rich Things, at the Jewel-Houſe in the Tower of London.

1. The Imperial Crown, which all the Kings of England have been Crowned with ever ſince Edward the Confeſſor's Time.
2. The Orb or Globe, held in the King's Left Hand at the Coronation; on the Top of which is a Jewel near an Inch and half in Height.
3. The Royal Sceptre with the Croſs, which has another Jewel of great Value under it.
4. The Sceptre with the Dove, being the Emblem of Peace.
5. St. Edward's Staff, all beaten Gold; carried before the King at the Coronation.
6. A Rich Salt-Seller of State, the Figure of the Tower, uſed on the King's Table at the Coronation.
7. Curtana, or the Sword of Mercy; born between the two Swords of Juſtice, the Spiritual and Temporal, at the Coronation.
8. A Noble Silver Font, double gilt, that the Kings and Royal Family were Chriſtened in.
9. A Large Silver Fountain, preſented to King Charles the Second by the Town of Plymouth.
10. Queen Anne's Diadem, or Circlet, which her Majeſty wore in proceeding to her Coronation.
11. The Coronation Crown, made for the late Queen Mary.
12. The Rich Crown of State, that his Majeſty wears on his Throne in Parliament. In which is a large Emerald, Seven Inches round, a Pearl, the fineſt in the World, and a Ruby of ineſtimable Value.
13. A Globe and Sceptre, made for the late Queen Mary.
14. An Ivory Sceptre with a Dove, made for the late King James's Queen.
15. The Golden Spurs and the Armillas, that are wore at the Coronation.
16. The Ampulla, or Eagle of Gold, which holds the Holy Oyl that the Kings and Queens are anointed with, and the Golden Spoon that the Biſhop pours the Oyl into: Which are Pieces of great Antiquity.

Deſcription of the Regalia.

Mr. Edwards.

But theſe Regalia deſerve a larger and more exact Deſcription: Which I ſhall do by the Help of an Hiſtory in Writing, of the Coronation of the late King James II. and his Royal Conſort Queen Mary, by Francis Sandford, Eſq; late Lancaſter Herald; communicated to me by Mr. Edwards, Keeper of the Jewel-Houſe.

SWORDS.

Three Swords.

Firſt, There be Three Swords; that is, Two Swords called The Swords of Juſtice; and One, whoſe Place is in the Middle between them, called The Sword of Mercy. One Sword of Juſtice repreſents the Spiritual Sword, and is born on the right Hand: The Point of that Sword is pointed, but yet ſomewhat obtuſe. The other Sword of Juſtice, being the Temporal Sword, is born on the left Hand. This hath a very ſharp Point. Then there is the Sword called Curtana, or the Sword of MERCY, which hath the Point flat, and as it were broken off.

This Pointleſs Sword is the principal of the Three in Dignity: It is a broad, bright Sword; the Length of the Blade Thirty two Inches, the Breadth almoſt Two Inches. The Handle covered with a fine Gold Wire Four Inches, beſides the Pomel an Inch and Three Quarters; which, with the Croſs, is plain Steel gilt: The Length of the Croſs being almoſt Eight Inches. This is born naked before the King, at his Coronation.

The Second Sword, the Sword of Juſtice to the Spiritualty, hath the Length of the Blade forty Inches; the Breadth an Inch and an half: The Handle as before, covered with Gold Wire.

The Third Sword, the Sword of Juſtice to the Temporalty, is (both Blade and Hilt) in effect of the ſame Size with the former. The Scabbards of all the Three Swords alike; covered with a rich brocaded Cloth of Tiſſue, with a rich Ferule, Hook and Chape.

The Spurs.

The Spurs, called the great Golden Spurs, are curiouſly wrought.

The Ampull.

The Ampull, or Eaglet of Gold, contained the Holy Oyl. It is in the Form of an Eagle, with Wings expanded, ſtanding on a Pedeſtal; all of pure Gold, finely chaſed. The Head ſcrews off at the Middle of the Neck, for the Convenience of putting in the Oyl: And the Neck being hollow to the very Beak, the Holy Oyl is poured out into the Spoon, thro' the Point of the Beak. The Height of it, from Bottom to Top, including the Pedeſtal, is about Nine Inches: The Diameter of the Pedeſtal, about Three Inches and an half; and the Breadth between the furtheſt Point of the Wings, about Seven Inches. The Weight of the whole, about Eight or Ten Ounces.

The Spoon.

The Anointing Spoon is likewiſe of pure Gold, with Four Pearls in the broadeſt Place of the Handle; and the Bowl of the Spoon finely chaſed both within and without. By the extreme Thinneſs thereof, it appears to be very ancient.

CROWNS.

Crowns.

There be theſe ſeveral Crowns belonging to the Regalia; Viz.

K. Edward's Crown.

Firſt, King Edward's Crown; with which the Kings of this Land are crowned: So called, in Commemoration of the Ancient Crown in the Church of Weſtminſter, remaining till the Beginning of the Great Rebellion, when, with the reſt of the Regalia, it was moſt ſacrilegiouſly plundered away. It is a very Rich Imperial Crown of Gold, made againſt the Coronation of King Charles II. embelliſhed with Pearls and precious Stones of divers kinds; viz. Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds and Saphires, with a Mound of Gold on the Top of it, encircled with a Band or Fillet of Gold: embelliſhed alſo with precious Stones, and Three very large Oval Pearls; one at the Top of the Croſs, and the Two other pendant at the Ends of the Croſs. The ſaid Crown is compoſed (as all the Imperial Crowns of England are) of Four Croſſes, and as many Flowers de Liz of Gold, upon a Rim or Circlet of Gold; all embelliſhed with precious Stones. The Cap within the ſaid Crown is of Purple Velvet, lined with white Taffata, and turned up with Ermine, thick powdered in Three Rows.

The Crown of State.

Secondly, The Crown of State, ſo called becauſe it is worn by the King or Queen, at ſuch Times at they come in State to the Parliament Houſe. This was alſo new made at the Coronation of King Charles II. It is exceeding rich, being embelliſhed with divers large Roſe, or Faucet, or Table Diamonds, and other Stones; but moſt remarkable for a wonderful large Ruby, ſet in the Middle of one of the four Croſſes, eſteemed worth 10000 l. As alſo for that the Mound is one entire Stone of a Sea-water Green Colour, known by the Name of the Agmarine. This Crown was taken to pieces, being too weighty for the Queen, and made fit for her; as Mr. Edwards told me; and ſhe then wore it, when ſhe went to the Parliament.

Thirdly, The Queen's Circlet of Gold. Queen Mary, Conſort of the late King James, wore it in her Proceeding to her Coronation. It is a Rim or Circlet of Gold, very richly adorned with large Diamonds curiouſly ſet, with a String of Pearl round the upper Edge thereof. The Cap of Purple Velvet, lined with white Taffata, and turned up with Ermin richly powdered.

The Queen's Crown.

Fourthly, The Queen's Crown, wherewith the Queens are crowned; being a very Rich Imperial Crown of Gold, ſet with Diamonds of great Value, intermix'd with a few precious Stones of other kinds, and ſome Pearl. The Cap of Purple Velvet, lined with rich white Taffety, turned up with Ermin, or Minever pure, richly powdered.

Another Crown.

Fifthly, The Queen's Rich Crown, which is worn in her Return to Weſtminſter-Hall, [after the Coronation Ceremony ended.] It is of Gold, but ſo richly embelliſhed with Diamonds and Pearl, that little or none of the Gold appeareth. It is an Imperial Crown, compoſed of Croſſes and Flowers de Liz, with Arches and a Mound, as the other Crowns.

The Orb, or Mound.

The Orb, Mound or Globe, which is put into the King's right Hand immediately before his being crowned; born in his left Hand upon his Return into WeſtminſterHall. It is a Ball of Gold of ſix Inches Diameter, encompaſſed with a Band or Fillet of Gold, embelliſhed with Roſes of Diamonds, encircling other precious Stones, and edged about with Pearl. On the Top whereof is a very large Amethyſt, of a Violet or Purple Colour, near an Inch and half in Height, of an Oval Form: Which being encompaſſed with Four Silver Wires, becometh the Foot or Pedeſtal of a very rich Croſs of Gold, of three Inches and a quarter in Height, and three Inches in Breadth, ſet very thick with Diamonds; having in the Middle thereof a fair Saphire on one ſide, and a fair Emerald on the other; and embelliſhed with four large Pearls in the Angles of the Croſs near his Centre, and three large Pearls at the End of the ſaid Croſs. The whole Height of the Orb and Croſs being eleven Inches.

SCEPTRES.

Sceptres.

Firſt, S. Edward's Staff, in Length four Foot, ſeven Inches and an half, is a Staff or Sceptre of Gold, with a Pike or Foot of Steel, about four Inches and a quarter in Length; and a Mound and Croſs at the Top. The Garniſhings are alſo of Gold; and the Diameter is about three quarters of an Inch.

The King's Sceptre, with the Dove, is a Sceptre of Gold, in Length three Foot ſeven Inches, and three Inches in Circumference at the Handle, and two Inches and a quarter about the Top. The Pomel garniſhed with a Circle or Fillet of Table Diamonds, and in ſeveral places with precious Stones of all Sorts: And the Mound at the Top embelliſhed with a Band or Fillet of Roſe Diamonds. Upon the Mound is a ſmall Jeruſalem Croſs, whereon is fixed a Dove, with Wings expanded, as the Emblem of Mercy.

The King's Sceptre with the Croſs, or Sceptre Royal, likewiſe of Gold. The Handle plain, and the upper Part wreathed. In Length two Foot, nine Inches, and a quarter, and of the ſame Thickneſs as the former. The Pomel at the Bottom enriched with Rubies and Emeralds, and ſmall Diamonds. The Top riſeth into a Flower de Liz with ſix Leaves, whereof three are upright, and the other three hanging down; all enriched with precious Stones. Out of the ſame Flower de Liz iſſueth a Mound, made of an Amethyſt, garniſhed with Table Diamonds; and upon the Mound, a Croſs wholly covered with precious Stones, with a large Table Diamond in the Centre.

The Queen's Sceptre with the Croſs, alſo of Gold, adorned with Diamonds and other precious Stones; in Length two Foot ten Inches; with a Mound and Croſs at the Top, iſſuing out of a Flower de Liz: Very like the King's, in all the Embelliſhments thereof; only ſmaller, and not wreathed, nor altogether ſo thick.

The Ivory Rod.

The Queen's Ivory Rod, is a Rod or Sceptre of white Ivory; in Length, three Foot, one Inch and half; whereof the Pomel and Garniture is Gold, as is alſo the Mound and Croſs at the Top: Only the Dove at the Top of the Croſs is ennamelled with white: The Circumference at the Bottom about two Inches, and at the Top about an Inch and an half.

RINGS.

Rings.

The King's Coronation Ring, is a plain Gold Ring, with a large Table Ruby Violet; wherein a plain Croſs, or Croſs of S. George is curiouſly enchaſed.

The King's Coronation Ring likewiſe of Gold, with a large Table Ruby ſet therein, and Sixteen other ſmall Rubies round about the Ring; whereof thoſe next to the Collet are the largeſt, the reſt diminiſhing proportionably.

Other Regalia.

The other Regalia, as the open Pall, the Supertunica of Cloth of Gold, the Surcoat of Crimſon Sattin, the Colobium Syndonis, the Armilla, the Buskins, Sandals, K. Edward's Chair, &c. are kept at Weſtminſter-Abby.

Some of theſe Jewels carried to France, to be kept.

There was a Time when the Tower was not thought a Place ſafe enough for this Treaſure: But whatever the Reaſon was, (whether the King's Wars here at home) Henry III. ſent (if not all) a great many of them into France. What they were, and to whom ſent, and by whom, and where laid up, a Tower Record will relate.

Fædera, Convention. &c. p. 261.

Anno 46. Henry III. William de Latymer, and Mr. Henry de Gandavo, with others, brought the King's Jewels to Margaret Queen of France, in Two Coffers: And ſhe laid them up in the Temple at Paris, under her Seal. The Keys, the ſaid Latymer and Henry, the King's Meſſengers, brought back with them. They are named, viz. One Great Crown. One Firmaculum cum Rubectis, [Buckle with Rubies.] One Ring with a Ruby. Three Gold Crowns. Unum Capellum Imperatorium. Quatuor Ferra. Unum Alphabetum. Three Gold Pectina, [Combs.] Fifty two Fir- macula, [Buckles.] Ten Baculos, [Staves,] containing 208 Rings, cum Rubetis & Baleſiis. Two Staves containing 66 Rings, cum Maragdenibus. One Staff containing 20 Rings, with Saphires. One Staff containing 13 Rings, with Topazes. One Staff containing 17 Rings, with divers Stones. Sixty ſix Girdles. Alſo Two Golden Peacocks. One Buckle with Twelve Diamonds. Other Fourteen Buckles, with Five Gold Garlands.

Keeper of the Lions.

There is another Cuſtody in the Tower, which concerns the keeping and providing for the Lions there, and other wild Savage Creatures, in a ſtrong Apartment on the Weſt Part of the Tower. Theſe are now and then preſented to the Prince by Foreign Kings, or by Sea-Officers, who have brought them from other Parts of the World.

Stow hath ſearched into the Original of bringing theſe fierce Creatures here, and hath given us ſome Ancient Records concerning them. I ſhall add a few more.

The Fee. Tower Rec.

In the 16th Year of Henry VI. the Office of Keeping the Lions and Leopards of the Tower was granted to Robert Manſfield, Eſq; for Life, with a certain Place there anciently belonging to it; with the Fee of Sixpence a Day for every Lion, &c.

Again, in the 37th of the ſaid King's Reign, the ſaid Office was granted to the ſaid Robert Manſfield; and his Son Robert was put into the Patent.

Again, in the 39th of the ſaid King, the Office was granted to Thomas Rookes.

In the 4th of Edward IV. the Office of keeping the Lions and Leopards of the Tower, was granted to R. Haſtings, Eſq;

Such Grants alſo are extant in the Tower Records, in the Reigns before; as in Edward I. Edward II. and the ſucceeding Kings.

Lions and Leopards formerly kept in the Tower.

From whence we gather, that the wild Beaſts kept in the Tower were generally Lions and Leopards; (for ſeldom any other Creatures are mentioned in the Patents) That the Keeper was ſome Officer about the King, and of Quality; and appointed by the King's Letters Patents: That his Wages was 6 d. a Day allowed for himſelf, and 6 d. more a Day for every Lion and Leopard: And that that Place or Apartment where the Lions were kept, was alſo granted him; as by this Patent to the aforeſaid Robert Manſfield appears.

The Fee.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Dilecto Servitori noſtro, Roberto Mansfield Armigero, Mareſcallo Aulæ noſtræ - - - - - de Gratia noſtra ſpeciali, &c.

“The King to all to whom theſe Preſents ſhall come, &c. We, of our ſpecial Grace, have granted to our beloved Servant, Robert Manſfield, Eſq; Marſhal of our Hall, the Office of Keeper of the Lions, with a certain Place which hath been appointed anciently within our ſaid Tower for them; to have and to occupy the ſame, by himſelf, or by his ſufficient Deputy, for the Term of his Life; with the Wages of Sixpence per Day for himſelf, and with the Wages of Sixpence per Day for the Maintenance of every Lion or Leopard, now being in his Cuſtody, or that ſhall be in his Cuſtody hereafter; to be taken yearly from the 22d Day of September, during his Life, from the Iſſues and Profits of the Counties of Bedford and Buckingham, coming to the Hands of the Sheriff of the ſaid Counties for the Time being, &c.

A white Bear and an Elephant in the Tower.

But long before this King, Henry VI. namely, in the Reign of Henry III. there was a white Bear and an Elephant kept in the Tower. In which Creatures the King ſeemed to delight: For he iſſued out ſeveral Orders concerning providing for, and taking care of them; and that to the Sheriffs of London: As appears by theſe Liberates found lately in the White Tower.

Liberat. 36. H. III. m. 4. G. Holmes.

Rex Vicecomitibus, &c.

“The King to the Sheriffs of London, greeting. We command you, That for the Suſtenance of a white Bear, which we ſend to our Tower of London, there to be kept, and for his Keeper, ye cauſe to be allowed Four Pence every Day, as long as they ſhall be there. Witneſs the King at S. Edmund's, Sept. 13.

The like Order was ſent to the Sheriffs from the King, dated from Windſor, Sept. 29.

There was ſtill the next Year, (viz. An. 1253) concerning this white Bear, another Order iſſued from the King, to provide him a Muzzle, and a Chain, and a ſtrong Rope, to make Sport in the Thames.

Rex Vicecomitibus London, &c.

Record. Alb. Tur. 37. H. III. m. 15.

“The King to the Sheriffs of London, greeting. We command you, That for the Keeper of our white Bear, lately ſent us from Norway, and which is in our Tower of London, ye cauſe to be had one Muzzle, and one Iron Chain, to hold that Bear without the Water, and one long and ſtrong Cord, to hold the ſame Bear fiſhing [or waſhing himſelf] in the River of Thames. Witneſs the King at Windſor, October the 30th.

The King alſo, a Year or two after, had an Elephant, viz. An. 1255, which the Sheriffs were to build a Houſe for in the Tower, and provide for his Suſtenance, and his Keepers.

Rex Vicecomitibus London, Salutem, &c.

Liberat. 39. H. III. m. 11.

“The King to the Sheriffs of London, greeting. We command you, That of the Ferm of our City, ye cauſe (without Delay) to be built at our Tower of London, one Houſe of forty Foot long, and twenty Foot deep, for our Elephant: Providing, that it be ſo made, and ſo ſtrong, that when need be, it may be fit and neceſſary for other Uſes. And the Coſt ſhall be computed at the Exchequer. Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter, the 26th Day of February.

Again, the next Year;

“The King to the Sheriffs of London, greeting. We command you, That from the Feaſt of S. Michael laſt paſt, and as long as you ſhall be Sheriffs of London, and our Elephant ſhall be there, ye find for him and his Keeper Neceſſaries, as there ſhall reaſonably be need. Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter, Octob. 11.]

Now concerning the Nature of theſe impriſoned wild Beaſts.]

K. James goes to the Tower. R. Br.

Anno 1604, June 3. K. James, taking with him the Duke of Lenox, (with divers Earls and Lords) went to ſee the Lions at the Tower. And here he cauſed Two of them, a He Lion and a She, to be put forth. And then a live Cock was caſt to them: Which being their natural Enemy, they preſently killed it, and ſucked the Blood. Then the King cauſed a live Lamb to be put to them; which the Lions out of their Generoſity (as having reſpect to its Innocency) never offered to touch, altho' the Lamb was ſo bold as to go cloſe to them. Then the King cauſed the Lions to be taken away, and another Lion to be put forth, and two Maſtiffs to be turned to him. The Maſtiffs preſently flew upon the Lion, and turned him upon his Back; and tho' the Lion was ſuperior to them in Strength, yet it ſeems they were his Match in Courage.

There was a Spaniel Dog, for ſome Offence or other, caſt into the Lion's Den: But the Lion did not attempt to hurt him. And this Dog continued in the Den with the Lion ſeveral Years, and there died.]

A Trial of a Combat between a Lion and a Bear. J. S.

This Story may be ſubjoined. In the Month of June, 1609, a Reſolution was taken to make Trial of the Valour of the Lion: Which ſhould be, by turning him looſe to a Bear. Which Bear had killed a Child; for which it was thought convenient that he ſhould ſuffer Death. The Bear was brought, and turned looſe in an open Yard: Then a Lion was turned out of his Den to him; but he would not aſſault him, but fled from him. And ſo was it done with other Lions, one after another; and laſtly, Two together were turned to him. But none ſet upon him, but rather ſought to return to their Dens. A Stone Horſe ſoon after was put into the Yard with the firſt Lion and the Bear. The Horſe fell to grazing between them, after he had gazed a little upon them. Two Maſtiff Dogs were let in, who boldly fought with the Lion. Afterwards Six Dogs more were let in: Who flew upon the Horſe, moſt in ſight at their firſt Entrance; and would ſoon have worried him to Death, had not Three ſtout Bearwards entred in, and reſcued the Horſe, and brought away the Dogs, while the Lion and Bear ſtood ſtaring upon them. At this Sight were preſent, King James, the Queen and Prince, and divers great Lords. But tho' the Bear had ſo eſcaped this Bout, the King gave Command he ſhould be baited to Death with Dogs upon a Stage; and ſo he was. Abridgm. of Engl. Chronicle.

What Beaſts, &c. now in the Tower.

The wild Beaſts and other ſavage Animals in the Tower, June 1704, were theſe, in their ſeveral Dens and Apartments.

Lions.

Six LIONS. Firſt, a She Lion; which was preſented to King William by Admiral Ruſſel. Secondly, a He Lion, being about Six Years old; brought over by Captain Littleton. Sir Thomas Littleton preſented him to King William. Thirdly, Another Lion preſented to Queen Anne by the Lord Grandville: It came to the Tower on Eaſter-Monday, Anno 1703. Fourthly, Two young Lions, ſent to Queen Anne from the King of Barbary. They came in October, 1703. Fifthly, Yet another young Lion, brought over for the young Duke of Gloceſter.

In July, Anno 1708, The Emperor of Morocco's Ambaſſador came to London, and brought Five Lions, a Preſent from his Maſter to the Queen.

Leopards.

Two LEOPARDS, or Tygers. One ever ſince K. Charles the Second's Time; but now in Decay: The other very beautiful and lovely to look upon; lying and playing, and turning upon her Back wantonly, when I ſaw her.

Eagles.

Three EAGLES, in ſeveral Apartments. One had been there Fourteen or Fifteen Years; called a Bald Eagle, with a white Head and Neck.

Two Swediſh OWLS, of a great Bigneſs, called Hopkins. They were preſented to K. Charles.

Cats.

CATS of the Mountains, Two: Walking continually backwards and forwards. One of them was preſented to Queen Anne; of the Colour ſomewhat of a Hare: Much larger than our ordinary domeſtick Cats; and very cruel.

Jackalls.

A JACKALL. Much like a Fox, but bigger, and longer legged, and more griſled.

Theſe Creatures have a rank Smell; which hath ſo affected the Air of the Place, (tho' there is a Garden adjoining) that it hath much injured the Health of the Man that attends them, and ſo ſtuffed up his Head, that it affects his Speech. And yet their Dens are cleanſed every Day; and they have freſh Water ſet them Day and Night.

Here be alſo the Skins of Two dead Lions ſtuffed. One died two Days before K. Charles the Second. The other was the Queen Dowager's Lion.

On a Table hanging againſt the Wall of the Houſe where the Keeper of the Lions dwelleth, is thus writ:

'March the 29th, 1703. Then brought here
'a Lion, preſented to the Queen by the 'Right Honourable the Lord Granville.

'October the 1ſt, 1703. Brought Two young
'Lions, preſented to the Queen by the King
'of South Barbary.

Keeper of the King's Bears and Apes.

There were alſo other wild Creatures in former Times belonging to the Kings; and Keepers appointed for them.

Ledger. K. Rich. III.

King Richard III. appointed a Keeper for his Bears and Apes: But theſe were for his Game. The ſaid King's Letters ran, 'To all Maiors, 'Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Conſtables, &c. Signifying, 'That he had made and conſtituted John Brome, 'Maſter, Guider and Ruler of all our Bears and 'Apes, to us appertaining within the Realm 'of England and Wales. Charging them not to 'moleſt, trouble or vex, or inquiet him, or his 'Keepers of our ſaid Bears and Apes: But to 'ſhew to him, and his Keepers of our ſaid Game 'for our Pleaſure, all loving Benevolence and Fa'vour. Anno Primo.

Little Wardrobe in the Tower.

And perhaps, beſides theſe divers Cuſtodies in the Tower mentioned already, there are, or were others: As the Cuſtody of the Little Wardrobe there. And there was a Patent 36. Henry VI. wherein the Office of the Cuſtody of the Little Wardrobe in the Tower was regranted; becauſe it was not granted before by the Name of the Keeper of the King's Beds, and other Things within the Tower of London.

Keeper of the Tower Work.

There was alſo the Cuſtody of the Tower Work.

In the 25th of K. Henry III. when the Church of S. Peter's in the Tower, and the White Tower wanted Repair, that King directed his Command Cuſtodibus Operationis Turris, i. e. to the Keepers of the Work of the Tower, to ſee it done.]

The Uſe of the Tower to defend the City, &c.

And thus much concerning the Tower, and the various and ſundry Matters relating to it: And now to conclude thereof in Summary.

This Tower is a Citadel, to defend or command the City: A Royal Palace for Aſſemblies and Treaties: A Priſon of Eſtate, for the moſt dangerous Offenders: The only Place of Coinage for all England at this Time: The Armory for warlike Proviſion; The Treaſury of the Ornaments and Jewels of the Crown; and general Conſerver of the moſt [Ancient] Records of the King's Courts of Juſtice at Weſtminſter.

Of the Houſes for Students in the Law, called, The Inns of Court and Chancery.

J. S.

HAving ſaid thus much of the Towers and Caſtles of our ancient City, and more particularly and largely of the Royal Tower, we go on in our Perambulation to mark other very memorable and Publick Places; as namely, the Inns of Court and Chancery, the Schools, and Houſes of Learning, the Colleges and Hoſpitals.]

Inns of Court and Chancery.

There is in and about this City an whole Univerſity as it were of Students, Practiſers, or Pleaders, and Judges of the Laws of this Realm: Not living of common Stipends, as in other Univerſities it is for the moſt part done, but of their own private Maintenance: As being altogether fed either by their Places or Practice; or otherwiſe by their proper Revenues, or Exhibition of Parents and Friends. For that the younger Sort are either Gentlemen, or the Sons of Gentlemen, or of other moſt wealthy Perſons.

Conſiſting of Gentlemen, or wealthy Perſons.

Number of theſe Houſes.

Of theſe Houſes, there be at this Day Fourteen in all; whereof Nine do ſtand within the Liberties of this City, and Five in the Suburbs thereof.

Of every of theſe Inns, ye may read more in their ſeveral Places where they ſtand.

|---|---|---|---|
| VIZ. | Within the Liberties. | Serjeants Inn in Fleetſtreet,Serjeants Inn in Chancery Lane, | For Judges and Serjeants only. |

A Serjeants Inn in Holborn. Cheſter's Inn, or Strand Inn, in Place whereof ſtandeth Somerſet Houſe.

There was ſome time an Inn of Serjeants in Holborn; as ye may read of Scroop's Inn, over againſt St. Andrew's Church.

There was alſo one other Inn of Chancery, called Cheſter's Inn, for the Nearneſs to the Biſhop of Cheſter s Houſe; but more commonly termed Strand Inn, for that it ſtood in Strand Street, and near unto the Strand Bridge without Temple Bar, in the Liberty of the Dutchy Lancaſter. This Inn of Chancery, with other Houſes near adjoining, were pulled down in the Reign of Edward VI. by Edward Duke of Somerſet, and Protector of the Realm; who in Place thereof, raiſed that beautiful (but yet imperfect) Houſe, called Somerſet Houſe.

A Tenth Houſe of Chancery.

There was moreover, in the Reign of King Henry VI. a Tenth Houſe of Chancery, mentioned by Juſtice Forteſcue, in his Book of the Laws of England; but where it ſtood, or when it was abandoned, I cannot find: And therefore I will leave it, and return to the reſt.

Houſes of Inns of Court, what they be.

The Houſes of Court be repleniſhed, partly with young Students, and partly with Graduates and Practiſers of the Law. But the Inns of Chancery being as it were Provinces, ſeverally ſubjected to the Inns of Court, be chiefly furniſhed with Officers, Attorneys, Sollicitors and Clerks, that follow the Courts of the King's Bench, and Common Plaeas. And yet there want not ſome other, being young Students, that come thither ſometimes from one of the Univerſities, and ſometimes immediately from Grammar Schools. And theſe having ſpent ſome Time in ſtudying upon the Firſt Elements and Grounds of the Law, and having performed the Exerciſes of their own Houſes, called Boltas Moots, and Putting of Caſes; they proceed to be admitted, and become Students in ſome of theſe Four Houſes or Inns of Court. Where continuing by the Space of Seven Years, or thereabouts, they frequent Readings, Meetings, Boltings, and other learned Exerciſes. Whereby, growing ripe in the Knowledge of the Laws, and approved withal to be of honeſt Converſation, they are either by the general Conſent of the Benchers, or Readers, being the moſt ancient, grave and judicious Men of every Inn of the Court, or by the ſpecial Privilege of the preſent Reader there, ſelected and called to the Degree of Utter Barriſters; and ſo enabled to be Common Counſellors, and to practiſe the Law, both in their Chambers and at the Bars.

The Bench Readers.

Of theſe, after that they be called to a further Step of Preferrment, called, The Bench, there are Twain every Year choſen among the Benchers, of every Inn of Court, to be Readers there. Who do make their Readings at two Times in the Year alſo; that is, One in Lent, and the other at the Beginning of Auguſt.

Apprentices at the Law.

And for the Help of young Students in every of the Inns of Chancery, they do likewiſe chuſe out of every one Inn of Court a Reader there; being no Bencher, but an utter Barriſter there, of Ten or Twelve Years Continuance, and of good Profit in Study. Now from theſe of the ſaid Degree of Counſellors, or Utter Barriſters, having continued therein the Space of Fourteen or Fifteen Years at the leaſt, the chiefeſt and beſt Learned are by the Benchers elected to increaſe the Number (as I ſaid) of the Bench amongſt them. And ſo in their Time do become firſt ſingle, and then double Readers to the Students of thoſe Houſes of Court. After which laſt Reading, they became Apprentices of the Law. And in default of a ſufficient Number of Serjeants at Law, theſe are (at the Pleaſure of the Prince) to Serjeants. Judges.

to be advanced to the Places of Serjeants. Out of which Number of Serjeants alſo, the void Places of Judges are likewiſe ordinarily filled. Albeit now and then ſome be advanced by the ſpecial Favour of the Prince, to the Eſtate, Dignity and Place both of Serjeant and Judge, as it were in one Inſtant. But from thenceforth they hold not any Room in thoſe Inns of Court; being tranſlated to one of the ſaid two Inns, called Serjeants Inns; where none but the Serjeants and Judges do converſe.

Schools of Law ſet up in London; but forbid. J. S.

It hath not been allowed, that the Study of the Law ſhould be in any other Places, but at theſe Inns of Court. Once there were ſome Schools ſet up in the City, for Reading and Teaching the Laws: But the King thought fit to have them reſtrained by Proclamation; as appears by this Record about the 28th of Henry III. as it ſeems.

Rec. Turr. alb. G. Holmes.

Mandatum eſt Maiori, & Vicecomit. London, &c.

> ‘Commandment is given to the Maior and Sheriffs of London, That they cauſe Proclamation to be made thro' the whole City, and firmly to be forbid, That no one ſhould ſet up Schools of the Laws in the ſaid City, and teach the Laws there for the Time to come. And if any ſhall ſet up ſuch Schools there, they cauſe them to ceaſe without Delay. Witneſs the King at Baſing, Decemb. 11.]

Why called Inns. R. B.

Theſe Houſes are called Inns; being the old Engliſh word for Houſes of Noblemen, and which is of the ſame Signification with the French word Hoſtel at Paris.

Inns of Chancery, why ſo called.

The Inns of CHANCERY were probably ſo called, becauſe (for the moſt part) they conſiſted of ſuch Clerks as did chiefly ſtudy the forming of Writs, which belonged to the Curſitors, that are Officers of Chancery: and are now taken up by Attorneys, Sollicitors, and ſuch as belong to the Courts of Common-Pleas, and King's-Bench: But formerly were preparatory Houſes for younger Students, as well as for the forming of Writs as aforeſaid: And many were entred here, before they were admitted to the Inns of Court; as ſome are at this Day.

ns of Court, y ſo called.

The Inns of COURT were ſo named, as ſome ſay, becauſe the Students therein are to ſerve the Courts of Judicature; or elſe becauſe theſe Houſes anciently received the Sons of Noblemen, and the better Sort of Gentlemen: And this Forteſcue affirms.

o Corporations; but e Orders ong themſelves.

Theſe Societies are no Corporations, nor have any Judicial Power over their Members; but have certain Orders amongſt themſelves, which by Conſent have the Force of Laws. For ſlight Offences they are only excommoned, that is, put out of Commons; which is, not to eat with the reſt in their Halls: And for greater, they loſe their Chambers, and are expelled the Houſe. And being once expelled, they are not to be admitted by any of the other Three Societies.

ir Habit.

The Members, when they meet at Chapel, or at their Hall, or go to any of the Courts of Judicature, wear a grave black Robe or Gown, and a Cap; but at other Times, the Habit of the Gentry.

Revenues onging.

Theſe Societies have no Lands or Revenues, except their Houſe; nor have they any thing to defray the Charges of the Houſe, but what is paid at Admittances, and Quit Rents for their Chambers, with the Purchaſe Money for Chambers, when any fall to the Houſe.

Four Ranks.

The Gentlemen in theſe Societies may be divided into Four Ranks: 1. Benchers. 2. Utter Barriſters. 3. Inner Barriſters: And, 4. Students.

Benchers.

BENCHERS are the Seniors, to whom the Government of the Houſe, and Ordering the Matters thereof, is committed: And out of theſe a Treaſurer is yearly choſen; who receiveth, diſburſeth and accounteth for all Monies belonging to the Houſe.

Utter Barriſters. Moots. Readers.

UTTER BARRISTERS are ſuch, as from their Learning and Standing are called by the Benchers, to plead and argue in the Society doubtful Caſes and Queſtions; which are called Moots: And whilſt they argue the ſaid Caſes, they ſet uttermoſt on the Forms of the Benchers, which they call the Bar. Out of theſe Mootmen are choſen Readers for the Inns of Chancery, which belong to the Inns of Court, of which they are Members; where in Term Time, and Grand Vacations, they argue Caſes in the Preſence of Attorneys and Clerks.

Inner Barriſters.

All the reſt of the Society are accounted INNER BARRISTERS; who, for want of Learning or Time, are not to argue in theſe Moots: Yet, in a Moot before the Benchers, Two of theſe ſitting upon the ſame Form with the Utter Barriſters, do (for their Exerciſes) recite by heart the Pleading of the ſame Moot Caſe, in Law French; which Pleading is the Declaration of the ſaid Moot Caſe at large; the one taking the Part of the Plaintiff, and the other of the Defendant.

Times for Mooting.

For the Times of theſe Mootings, they divide the Year into Three Parts; viz. 1. The Learning Vacation. 2. The Term Times. And, 3. The Dead, or Mean Vacation.

They have Two Learning Vacations; viz. Lent Vacation, which begins the firſt Monday in Lent, and continues Three Weeks and Three Days; and Summer Vacation, which begins the Monday after Lammas Day, and continues alſo Three Weeks and Three Days. And in theſe Vacations are the greateſt Conferences, and Exerciſes of Study.

The Manner of theſe Readings.

Readings.

The Benchers appoint the eldeſt Utter-Barriſter to read amongſt them openly in the Hall; (of which he hath notice Half a Year before.) The firſt Day, he makes choice of ſome Act, or Statute, whereupon he grounds his whole Reading for that Vacation. He reciteth certain Doubts, and Queſtions which he hath deviſed upon the ſaid Statute, and declares his Judgment thereon. After which, one of the Utter-Barriſters repeateth one Queſtion propounded by the Reader, and (by way of Argument) doth labour to prove the Reader's Opinion to be againſt Law. And after him, the Senior Utter-Barriſter and Reader, one after another, do declare their Opinions and Judgments in the ſame. And then the Reader who did put the Caſe, endeavours to confute the Objections laid againſt him, and to confirm his own Opinion. After which, the Judges and Serjeants (if any be there) declare their Opinions. Then the youngeſt Utter-Barriſter again rehearſeth another Caſe, which is proſecuted as the former was. And this Exerciſe continueth daily three or four Hours.

The Manner of Reading, both in Lent and Summer Vacations, are performed after the ſame manner. And uſually, out of theſe Readers the Serjeants are choſen.

The Manner of Mooting in the INNS of COURT.

Mootings in the Inns of Court.

In theſe Vacations, after Supper in the Hall, the Reader (with one or two of the Benchers) comes in; to whom one of the Utter-Barriſters propounds ſome doubtful Caſe; which being argued by the Benchers, and laſtly by him that moved the Caſe; the Benchers ſit down on the Bench at the upper End of the Hall: And upon a Form in the Middle of the Hall ſit two Utter-Barriſters; and on both ſides of them, on the ſame Form, ſits one Inner-Barriſter, who in Law French doth declare to the Benchers ſome kind of Action; the one being (as it were) retained for the Plaintiff, and the other for the Defendant. Which ended, the two Utter-Barriſters argue ſuch Queſtions as are diſputable within the Caſe. After which, the Benchers do likewiſe declare their Opinions, as how they take the Law to be in theſe Queſtions.

The Manner of Mooting in the INNS of CHANCERY.

Mooting in the Inns of Chancery.

In the Learning Vacations, each Utter-Barriſter that is a Reader in the Inns of Chancery, goes with two Students of the ſame Inn of Court to the Inn of Chancery, where he is appointed to read: And there meet him commonly Two of each of the Inns of Court; who ſitting as the Benchers do in the Inns of Court at their Moots, they hear and argue the Caſe.

Exerciſes in Term Time.

In the Term Time, the only Exerciſes of Learning, is Arguing and Debating Caſes after Dinner, and Mooting after Supper, in the ſame manner as in the Vacations.

Mean Vacation.

The Time between the Learning Vacations and Terms, is called the Mean Vacation; during which Time, every Day after Dinner, Caſes are argued as at other Times: And after Supper, Moots are brought in, and pleaded by the Inner-Barriſters, in the Preſence of the Utter-Barriſters, which ſit there in the room of the Benchers, and argued by them, as the Benchers do in Term Time, and Learning Vacations.

Note, That in the Four Inns of Court before mentioned, there are reckoned to be about 300 Students, beſides the Utter-Barriſters and Inner-Barriſters.

The Reader keeps a conſtant Table.

During the Time of Reading, which heretofore continued three Weeks and three Days, the Reader keeps a conſtant and a ſplendid Table; feaſting the Nobility, Judges, Biſhops, principal Officers of State, the chief Gentry, and ſometimes the King himſelf: Inſomuch that it hath coſt a Reader above 1000 l.

Afterwards he that hath been Reader wears a long Robe, differing from other Barriſters; and is then in a Capacity to be made a Serjeant at Law.

How SERJEANTS at LAW are called thereunto, and elected.

Elections of Serjeants.

When the Number of Serjeants is ſmall, the Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, by the Advice and Conſent of the other Judges, makes choice of Six or Eight of the moſt Grave and Learned of the Inns of Court, and preſents their Names to the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper; who, by the King's Writ, ſends to each of them to appear on ſuch a Day before the King, to receive the State and Degree of a Serjeant at Law.

At the appointed Time, (being habited in Robes of two Colours; viz. Brown, and Violet Colour) they come; being accompanied with the Students of the Inns of Court, and attended by a Train of Servants and Retainers, in certain peculiar Cloth Liveries, into Weſtminſter-Hall; and there, in publick, take a ſolemn Oath, and are clothed with certain Robes and Coifs: Which Robes they appear in publick with.

After this, they feaſt the Great Perſons with a Magnificent Dinner; and give Gold Rings to ſeveral of the Nobility, to ſome of 40 s. Value, to others 20 s. beſides a great many more to their Friends.

Of Election of JUDGES.

Electing of Judges.

Out of theſe Serjeants, Judges are choſen; and therefore it is that they wear always the white Linnen Coif, which is the principal Badge of a Serjeant, and which he wears even in the Preſence of the King.

When any of the Judges are wanting, by Death, or otherwiſe; the King, by the Advice of his Council, makes choice of one of the Serjeants to ſupply his Place; and by Letters Patents ſealed by the Chancellor; who ſitting in the Midſt of the reſt of the Judges in open Court, declares to the Serjeant the King's Pleaſure, and to the People the King's Goodneſs, in providing or ſupplying the Bench with ſuch able and honeſt Men, as that Juſtice may be done impartially and expeditely to all his Subjects: And then cauſes the ſaid Letters Patents to be read. And being departed, the Chief Juſtice places the ſaid Serjeant on the Bench, Junior of all the reſt: And having taken the Oath, 'Well and Truly to 'ſerve the King, and his People, in the Office of 'Juſtice; to take no Reward; to do equal and 'ſpeedy Juſtice to all, &c. he ſets himſelf to the Execution of his Charge.

The Judge's Oath.

His Salary.

The Serjeant being thus advanced to a Judge, hath great Honour, and a very conſiderable Salary of 1500 l. per Annum, beſides great Perquiſites.

Judges how habited.

And now, in ſome Things, his former Habit of a Serjeant is altered. His long Robe and Cap, his Hood and Coif are the ſame: But there is beſides a Cloak put over him, which is cloſed on his right Shoulder; and his Caputium is lined with Minever, that is, divers ſmall Pieces of white rich Furr. But the Two Lord Chief-Juſtices, and the Lord Chief Baron, have their Hoods, Sleeves and Collars, turned up with Ermine.

The Honour redounding to the Nation from this Profeſſion.

Now all theſe Inns of Court and Chancery are not far diſtant from one another, and do make the moſt famous Profeſſion of the Law that is in the World: There being ſo many Eminent Perſons, of ſuch ſound Judgment in the Knowledge of the Law; and a conſiderable Number of them the Sons of Gentlemen, and Perſons of Quality.

Of the Manner of Keeping Chriſtmas in the INNS of COURT.

Keeping Chriſtmas.

If the Houſe (a little before Chriſtmas) is furniſhed with ſuch a Number of Students, and of ſuch Quality, as are fit to keep a Solemn Chriſtmas; then they meet together, and hold a Parliament, as they call it; and there chuſe and appoint certain Officers of their own Students, in Imitation of the King's Court; viz. a Comptroller, and a Treaſurer, with other great Officers. And theſe bear Rule in the Houſe during the whole Time of Chriſtmas; aud are to behave themſelves in that Port, Gravity and Authority, as if they were ſo in the King's Houſe.

The Diver-tiſements.

During the Time of Chriſtmas, they have ſeveral Divertiſements; as Feaſting every Day, Muſick, Singing and Dancing, with Dicing. To the Dicing all Comers are admitted; and it is ſo exceſſive, having ſuch abundance of Tables placed in the Hall, that what comes to the Box generally amounts to about 50 l. a Day and Night: So that by this, with a ſmall Contribution from each Student, the great Charge of the whole Chriſtmas is defrayed.

Dicing.

But theſe Revellings and Playings give Occaſion to ſo much Miſchief, by the People's loſing their Money, and Apprentices ſtealing from their Maſters, that it is but ſeldom allowed of; and it could be wiſhed it were to be no more.

They create a Prince.

Sometimes, when they have a young Gentleman that will be profuſe, they create him a Prince, with ſuch a Title as they pleaſe; and he hath all his Officers, and a Court ſuitable to a great Prince: And then moſt of the principal Nobility, publick Officers of State, with the chief of the Gentry, are ſplendidly treated and feaſted, with curious Muſick, Interludes, &c.

Revels.

From All-Saints Day to Candlemas, each Houſe uſually hath Revels on Holidays, with Muſick and Dancing: And then ſome young Student is choſen to be Maſter of the Revels.

The Advantages of all kinds of Learning in London.

There are, in and about this famous City, other Publick Schools, Colleges, and Places of Literature; all which ſhall be taken notice of in their proper Places in which they are ſeated, and partly in the following Chapters. Inſomuch that London may not unfitly be ſtiled an Univerſity, ſince that in it are taught all the Liberal Arts and Sciences; beſides the Profeſſion of the Common Laws of the Nation: A Thing that can ſcarcely be ſaid of any other City in Europe.

Moreover, all Languages: Alſo Geography, Hydrography, Aſtronomy, Navigation, Fortification; Geometry, Muſick, Logick, Rhetorick; Chymiſtry, Painting, Horſemanſhip, Fencing; and indeed, all other Things both Military and Civil, that may in any way contribute to the Accompliſhment of a Gentleman, are here taught.]

CHAP. XXII.

Of Schools, and other Houſes of Learning, as are, or have been in the City. Chirurgery Lecture. Hood's Mathematical and Military Lecture. Greſham College. Sir Thomas Greſham's Will. The Lectures there. The Settlement thereof.

Famous Schools of Philoſophy, by Privilege, in London.

I*N the Reign of King* Stephen, and of Henry the Second, (ſaith Fitzſtephen) there were in London Three principal Churches, which had famous Schools, either by Privilege and ancient Dignity, or by Favour of ſome particular Perſons, (as of Doctors) which were accounted notable and renowned for Knowledge in Philoſophy. And there were other inferior Schools alſo.

Solemn Meetings, and Diſputing of Scholars, Logically and Demonſtratively.

Upon Feſtival Days, the Maſters made ſolemn Meetings in the Churches, where their Scholars diſputed Logically and Demonſtratively; ſome bringing Enthymems, others, perfect Syllogiſms: Some diſputed for Shew; others, to trace out the Truth: And cunning Sophiſters were thought brave Scholars, when they flowed with Words. Others uſed Fallacies. Rhetoricians ſpake aptly to perſuade, obſerving the Precepts of Art, and omitting nothing that might ſerve their Purpoſe. The Boys of divers Schools did cap or pot Verſes, and contended of the Principles of Grammar.

Grammar Schools and Scholars, their Exerciſe.

There were ſome, which (on the other ſide) with Epigrams and Rhimes, nipping and quipping their Fellows, and the Faults of others, (tho' ſuppreſſing their Names) moved thereby much Laughter among their Auditors.

Hitherto Fitzſtephen, for Schools and Scholars, and for their Exerciſe in the City in his Days. Sithence the which Time, as to me it ſeemeth, by Increaſe of Colleges of Students in the Univerſities of Oxford and Cambridge, the Frequenting of Schools, and Exerciſes of Scholars in the City, (as had been accuſtomed) very much decreaſed.

Three Schools. The firſt. St. Paul's. Every Cathedral Church to have its School for poor Scholars.

The Three principal Churches, which had theſe famous Schools by Privileges, muſt needs be the Cathedral Church of S. Paul for one; ſeeing that by a General Council, holden in the Year of Chriſt 1176, at Rome, in the Patriarchy of Lateran, it was decreed, "That every Cathedral Church ſhould have its Schoolmaſter, to "teach poor Scholars, and others, as had been "accuſtomed; And that no Man ſhould take "any Reward for Licence to teach."

The Second. Free School at Weſtminſter in the Reign of Edward the Confeſſor.

The Second, as moſt ancient, may ſeem to have been the Monaſtery of St. Peter at Weſtminſter; whereof Ingulphus, Abbot of Crowland, in the Reign of William the Conqueror, writeth thus:

I Ingulphus, an humble Servant of God, born of Engliſh Parents in the moſt beautiful City of London, for to attain to Learning, was firſt put to Weſtminſter, and after to ſtudy at Oxford, &c.

And writing in Praiſe of Queen Edgitha, Wiſe to Edward the Confeſſor;

I have ſeen her (ſaith he) often, when being but a Boy, I came to ſee my Father, dwelling in the King's Court: And often coming from School, when I met the Queen, ſhe would oppoſe me, touching my Learning and Leſſon. And falling from Grammar to Logick, (wherein ſhe had ſome Knowledge) ſhe would ſubtilly conclude an Argument with me: And by her Handmaiden, give me three or four Pieces of Money, and ſend me unto the Palace, where I ſhould receive ſome Victuals, and then be diſmiſſed.

The Third.

The Third School ſeemeth to have been at the Monaſtery of St. Saviour, at Bermondſey in Southwark. For other Priories, as of St. John by Smithfield, St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, St. Mary Overy in Southwark, and that of the Holy Trinity by Aldgate, were all of later Foundation: And the Frieries, Colleges and Hoſpitals in this City, were raiſed ſince them, in the Reigns of Henry III. and Edward I. II. and III. &c. All which Houſes had their Schools, tho' not ſo famous as theſe firſt named.

Later Schools.

Priories Aliens.

But touching Schools more lately advanced in this City, I read, That King Henry the Fifth, having ſuppreſſed the Priories Aliens, whereof ſome were about London; namely, One Hoſpital called Our Lady of Rouncival, by Charing-Croſs; one other Hoſpital in Oldborn; one other without Creplegate, and the Fourth without Alderſgate; beſides other that are now worn out of Memory, and whereof there is no Monument remaining, more than Rouncival, (converted to a Brotherhood) which continued till the Reign of Henry the Eighth, or Edward the Sixth. This, I ſay, and other of their Schools being broken up and ceaſed; King Henry the Sixth, in the 24th Year of his Reign, by Patent appointed, That there ſhould be in London Grammar Schools, beſides St. Paul's, at St. Martin's Le Grand, St. Mary Le Bow in Cheap, St. Dunſtan's in the Weſt, and St. Anthony's. And in the next Year, to wit, 1394, the ſaid King ordained by Parliament, That Four other Grammar Schools ſhould be erected; to wit, in the Pariſhes of St. Andrew in Oldborn, Alhallows the Great in Thameſſtreet, St. Peter's upon Cornhill, and in the Hoſpital of St. Thomas of Acons in Weſt Cheap. Since the which Time, as divers Schools, by Suppreſſing of Religious Houſes (whereof they were Members in the Reign of Henry the Eighth) have been decayed; ſo again have ſome others been newly erected and founded for them. As namely, Paul's School, in place of an old ruined Houſe, was builded in moſt ample manner, and largely endowed in the Year 1512, by John Collet, Doctor of Divinity, and Dean of Paul's, for 153 poor Mens Children; for which there was ordained a Maſter, Surmaſter (or Uſher) and a Chaplain.

Henry VI. appointed Grammar Schools.

Grammar Schools appointed by Parliament.

Paul's School new builded.

Free School in Chriſt's Hoſpital.

Again, in the Year 1553, after the Erection of Chriſt's Hoſpital, (in the late diſſolved Houſe of the Grey Friars) a great Number of poor Children being taken in, a School was ordained there at the Citizens Charges.

Free School founded by the Merchant Taylors.

Alſo in the Year 1561, the Merchant-Taylors of London founded one notable Free Grammar-School, in the Pariſh of St. Lawrence Pountney, by Candlewick-Street; Richard Hills, late Maſter of that Company, having given 500 l. towards the Purchaſe of an Houſe called the Manor of the Roſe, ſometime the Duke of Buckingham's.

Of theſe Schools, more will be ſpoken in a proper Chapter.]

The School-boys diſputed.

As for the Meeting of Schoolmaſters on Feſtival Days, at Feſtival Churches, and the Diſputing of their Scholars Logically, &c. (whereof I have before ſpoken) the ſame was long ſince diſcontinued. But the Arguing of the School-boys about the Principles of Grammar, hath been continued even till our Time: For I my ſelf, in my Youth, have yearly ſeen (on the Eve of St. Bartholomew the Apoſtle) the Scholars of divers Grammar-Schools repair unto the Churchyard of St. Bartholomew, the Priory in Smithfield, where (upon a Bank boarded about under a Tree) ſome one Scholar hath ſtepped up, and there hath oppoſed and anſwered, till he were by ſome better Scholar overcome and put down: And then the Overcomer taking the Place, did like as the firſt; and in the end, the beſt Oppoſers and Anſwerers had Rewards; which I obſerved not. But it made both good Schoolmaſters, and alſo good Scholars, (diligently againſt ſuch Times) to prepare themſelves for the obtaining of this Garland.

Scholars diſputed in St. Bartholomew's Churchyard.

Rewarded.

I remember, there repaired to theſe Exerciſes (amongſt others) the Maſters and Scholars of the Free Schools of St. Paul's in London, of St. Peter's at Weſtminſter, of St. Thomas Acons Hoſpital, and of St. Anthony's Hoſpital; whereof the laſt named commonly preſented the beſt Scholars, and had the Prize in thoſe Days.

Diſputations of Scholars in Chriſt's Hoſpital.

This Priory of St. Bartholomew being ſurrendred to Henry the Eighth, thoſe Diſputations of Scholars in that Place ſurceaſed, and was again (only for a Year or twain) in the Reign of Edward the Sixth, revived in the Cloiſter of Chriſt's Hoſpital; where the beſt Scholars (then ſtill of St. Anthony's School, howſoever the ſame be now fallen, both in Number and Eſtimation) were rewarded with Bows and Arrows of Silver, given to them by Sir Martin Eowes, Goldſmith.

Paul's Scholars.

Anthony's Pigs.

Pigeons of Paul's.

Nevertheleſs, howſoever the Encouragement failed, the Scholars of Paul's meeting with them of St. Anthony's, would call them St. Anthony's Pigs; and they again would call the other, Pigeons of Paul's; becauſe many Pigeons were bred in Paul's Church, and St. Anthony was always figured with a Pig following him: And mindful of the former Uſage, did for a long Seaſon (diſorderly in the open Street) provoke one another with, Salve: Salve tu quoque. Placet tibi mecum diſputare? Placet. And ſo proceeding from this to Queſtions in Grammar, they uſually fell from Words to Blows, with their Satchels full of Books, many times in ſo great Heaps, that they troubled the Streets and Paſſengers; ſo that finally they were reſtrained, with the Decay of St. Anthony's School.

Perſons of Note educated in S. Antony's School.

Out of this School have ſprung divers famous Perſons. Whereof altho' Time hath buried the Names of many, yet in mine own Remembrance may be numbred theſe following; Viz. Sir Thomas Moore, Knight, Lord Chancellor of England: Dr. Nicholas Heath, ſometime Biſhop of Rocheſter, after of Worceſter, and laſtly, Archbiſhop of York, and Lord Chancellor of England: Dr. John Whitgift, Biſhop of Worceſter, and after Archbiſhop of Canterbury, &c.

A Challenge to write for the Golden Pen. MSS. Harlian.

J. S.

Let me add the Mention of a famous Combat of the Pen, Anno 1591, between Peter Bales and Daniel Johnſon, both Maſters in Writing, and both Teachers of Writing-Schools in London. Bales, who was Servant to Sir John Puckering, Knight, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, (and whoſe School was in Blackfriars) made a General Challenge againſt all Engliſhmen and Strangers, without Exception; 1. For the beſt and faireſt Writing of all kinds of Hands uſual: 2. For Secretary, and Clerklike Writing: And, 3. For the beſt Teaching. And the Reward to him that excelled the reſt, to be a Pen of Gold of 20 l. And if any accepted Peter Bales's Challenge, he required him to repair to the Old Baily, where he dwelt; and to lay down 10 l. in ready Money, or to put in ſufficient Sureties by Bond for the ſaid Sum, for to be delivered to a Goldſmith, together with Bales's 10 l. to be put into a Pen of Gold.

The Original Cauſe of this Challenge was this. The aboveſaid Johnſon had for an whole Year ſet up a Challenge in theſe Words: If any ſhall take Exception to this my Writing and Teaching; ſuch I Challenge, to Write and Teach with them for the Golden Pen, or whatſoever ſhall reſt in my Ability. By this Boaſt, Bales, who lived near him, was prejudiced in his School, and Johnſon got moſt Scholars. Whereupon at length Bales thinking as good of himſelf, and to bring his School in Reputation, ſet up his Challenge as aforeſaid. And Johnſon, within an Hour after, very arrogantly accepted thereof; and that in moſt deſpiteful and diſgraceful manner. So Perſons were choſen, as indifferent Judges between both; viz. William Seager, alias Somerſet, Herald at Arms, Anthony Dew and John Guilliams, Gentlemen, Clerks of the Office of the Petty Bag; George Chapman, Gent. and William Pank, Citizen and Writers of the Court-Letters of London. The Tryal of both their Skills was on Michaelmas Day; wherein Johnſon loſt the Day in all the three Challenges made by Bales. In regard of the Second, the ſaid Judges gave their Sentence in theſe Words; "We the Judges aforeſaid making Tryal "of the Parties in their Sufficiency for Secretary "and Clerklike Writing, by dictating unto them "both together, one while in Engliſh, another "while in Latin, did find, that the Challenger "performed the ſame moſt Secretary and Clerk-"like; for that he had moſt commonly ſo firſt "done, written ſtraiteſt without Lines, with "trueſt Orthography and beſt Writing in the "moſt uſual Hands: And for that the Defendant "himſelf confeſſed, that he for the moſt part "wanted the Latin Tongue, and was no Clerk. "Therefore we likewiſe adjudged the Superiority "of their ſecond Tryal clearly to the ſaid Chal-"lenger. And ſo upon Examination of the Scholars of the Challenger, they gave their Judgment that he had the Pre-eminency.

But this Matter gave Johnſon great Diſguſt; who ſet forth in Print ſlanderous Libels, and diſpers'd them in the City in great Numbers for Ten Days together, both againſt Peter Bales, and the Judges aforeſaid. To which he wrote an Anſwer, whether Printed I cannot tell; the MS. I have ſeen.]

Lecture in Chirurgery.

Of later Time, in the Year of Chriſt 1582, there was founded a Publick Lecture in Chirurgery, to be read in the College of Phyſicians in Knightridersſtreet; and to begin in the Year 1584, on the Sixth of May; and ſo to be continued for ever Twice in every Week, on Wedneſday and Friday, by the honourable Baron, John Lord Lomley, and the Learned Richard Caldwell, Doctor in Phyſick; the Reader whereof to be Richard Forſter, Doctor of Phyſick, during his Life.

Mathematical Lecture.

Tho. Hood, Reader.

Furthermore, about the ſame Time, there was alſo begun a Mathematical Lecture, to be read in a fair old Chapel, Builded by Simon Eayre, within the Leadenhall, whereof a learned Citizen born, named Thomas Hood, was the firſt Reader. But this Chapel, and other Parts of that Hall, being employed for Stowage of Goods, taken out of a great Spaniſh Carack, the ſaid Lecture ceaſed any more to be read, and was then in the Year 1588. read in the Houſe of Maſter Thomas Smith in Graſsſtreet, &c.

This Lecture was for the Inſtruction of the City in the Art Military. J. S.

This Lecture briefly touched by Stow, deſerveth to be more plainly declared; ſince the Intent of it tended ſo much to the Education of the Citizens of London, in the Skill of Arms, in caſe of Danger (threatned them by the Spaniard in theſe Days) to be able to defend themſelves, and their City, and Liberty. For the Scheme that was laid was not only to read Mathematicks, but other neceſſary Matters for Warlike Service both by Land and Sea, and for the better breeding up of Captains in the Art Military; which were then wanted. This Practice was ſo well allowed, that when Hood had applyed himſelf to the Privy Council, and laid open his Lecture to them, they very much eſpouſed it, and allowed and ratified under their Hands certain Articles for the better Managery of this Buſineſs, recommending withal both them and Hood to the Lord Maior, for the Settlement of a Salary upon him.

e Articles f the Le- ure.

The Sum of theſe Articles were, That Forty Captains ſhould be appointed and continued; and when any of them ſhould die, or be found unfit or unwilling, others ſhould be choſen in their Rooms by the ſaid Captains. That out of this Number, Thirteen of the Graveſt and Diſcreeteſt ſhould be choſen, who ſhould bear the Name of Governor, and twelve Aſſiſtants. That there ſhould be choſen Two Hundred and Forty able Men out of the ſeveral Wards; namely, out of each Captains Charge Six. And they to be made more fit to take upon them the Place of Captains, Lieutenants, and other Officers. All which ſhould be trained and taught by the ſaid Captains Monthly, Twice at the leaſt in the Artillery Garden, or elſewhere near the City of London. The Governor to have Authority to call together his Twelve Aſſiſtants, for the determining and ſetting down Orders and Rules, for the good Government of the whole Company. That if any of the ſaid Aſſiſtants ſhould fail to come at the appointed Time, he ſhould pay for his Abſence each Time 5*s.* without lawful Excuſe. But the Rules and Orders ſo agreed upon and ſet down, ſhould not be put in Execution before they had acquainted the Lord Maior with them, and obtained his Conſent. Each Captain to make choice of his Lieutenants, and other Officers, within the Ward, where his Charge lay. All Officers to be Freemen of the City, and of honeſt Reputation, and to be allowed of by the Governor, and Aſſiſtants, or the greater Number. That if any of the Forty Captains be abſent from the Training Place upon the uſual Day, he ſhould pay for each Times Abſence 5*s.* and every other of the ſaid Number of 240, that ſhould be abſent, or want Furniture, to pay 2*s.* 6*d.* Laſtly, the reading of the Mathematical Lecture and of the other neceſſary Matters, and the abovesaid Training, to be continued for two Years from Michaelmas, and ſo much longer as the Lord Maior and City would give the ſame Allowance that was at preſent granted, or more. This was ſigned by Sir Chriſtopher Hatton, Lord Chancellor; Burghley, Lord Treaſurer; C. Howard, Lord Admiral; Sir Francis Walſingham, Secretary; Sir James Croft, a Warlike Man, and an old Courtier, and divers others. The Salary depended upon the Promiſe of the Maior and City. The Thing was very taking both by the Queen's Council, who judged it to be convenient, and by the City which earneſtly requeſted it.

But this Lecture is now long ſince extinct, and almoſt the Memory of it.]

Sir Tho. Greſham's College in London.

Laſt of all, Sir Thomas Greſham, Knt. a Merchant of London, Agent to the Queen's Highneſs, and a Citizen of the Company of Mercers, by his laſt Will and Teſtament made in the Year 1575, gave the Royal Exchange, and all the Buildings thereunto appertaining, that is to ſay, the one Moiety to the Maior and Commonalty of London, and their Succeſſors, upon Truſt that they perform, as ſhall be declared; and the other Moiety to the Mercers, in like Confidence. The Maior and Commonalty, to find Four to read Lectures of Divinity, Aſtronomy, Muſick, and Geometry, within his Dwelling Houſe in Biſhopſgateſtreet, and to beſtow the Sum of 200*l.* to wit, 50*l.* a Piece, &c. The Mercers likewiſe, to find three Readers, that is, in Civil Law, Phyſick, and Rhetorick, within the ſame Dwelling Houſe; and to beſtow the Sum of 150*l.* that is, to every Reader 50*l.*

Four Readers to be found by the Maior and Commonalty.

Three Readers by the Mercers.

Salaries.

Theſe Salaries, and other Requeſts of Sir Thomas Greſham, amounting in all to 603*l.* odd Money, are payable out of the Rents of the Exchange, and other Rents of Houſes belonging thereto. But the exceſſive Charges in rebuilding the Exchange, by a Model which was ſhewn to, and liked by K. Charles II. (which ſome which know, ſay, coſt not leſs than 80000*l.*) hath put the Company in Debt, and ſomewhat poſtponed the Payment of the Salaries.

Committee for Greſham College.

There is a Grand Committee, for the Government and Management of the Affairs of Greſham College, and the Exchange, conſiſting of Four Aldermen, whereof the Maior is always to be one;

and Twelve of the Company for the Mercers, and Eight for the City. Their Names for the Year 1707, (as I then received them) were as follows:

Sir Tho. Greſham's Will concerning theſe Lectures. Communicated to me by Dr. J. W.

The Will of Sir Thomas Greſham, dated in July, 1575, the 17th Year of Elizabeth; for the Endowment of the Readers of theſe Lectures, was to this Tenor: "That one Moiety of the Buildings of the Royal Exchange, with all Pawns, Shops, Cellars, Vaults, Meſſuages, Tenements, &c. parcel of the ſaid Exchange, after the Expiration of an Indenture Quadripartite, ſhould remain unto the Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, and to their Succeſſors upon Truſt to perform certain Payments, and other Intents hereafter limited: And the other Moiety to remain to the Wardens and Commonalty of the Myſtery of the Mercers of London, and to their Succeſſors, upon Truſt and Confidence, and to the Intents hereafter mentioned. And when that one Moiety of the ſaid Exchange ſhould come to the ſaid Maior and Corporation of the ſaid City, they and their Succeſſors, ſhall every Year give and diſtribute, for the Suſtentation of Four Perſons, to be choſen by the ſaid Maior and Commonalty, meet to read the Lectures of Divinity, Aſtronomy, Muſick, and Geometry, within his own Dwelling Houſe, within the Pariſh of St. Hellens in Biſhopſgateſtreet, and in St. Peters the Poor, the Sum of 200*l.*; that is, to every of the ſaid Readers the Sum of 50*l.* Yearly, for their Salaries and Stipends; to be paid at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of St. Mary the Virgin, and St. Michael the Archangel, by even Portions. And further, to give and diſtribute the Sum of 53*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* Yearly, unto Eight Alms Folks, whom the ſaid Maior and Commonalty, or their Succeſſors appoint to inhabit his Eight Almshouſes in St. Peters the Poor; to every of them the ſaid Alms Folks the Sum of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to be paid at the four uſual Terms in the Year. And that the ſaid Maior and Commonalty ſhould give and diſtribute at the Terms aforeſaid, to the Relief of the poor Priſoners in the Priſons, known by the Names of Newgate, Ludgate, the King's Beuch, the Marſhalſea, and the Counter in Woodſtreet, 50*l.* in Money, or other Proviſions and Neceſſaries; Viz. to every of the ſame five Priſons 10*l.* at the Four uſual Feaſts, or Twenty Eight Days next after.

"And as concerning the other Moiety, diſpoſed to the Wardens and Commonalty of the Corporation of the Mercers, they and their Succeſſors Yearly ſhall give and pay, to and for the finding and ſuſtentation of three Perſons by them from time to time to be choſen, and meet to read the Lectures of Law, Phyſick, and Rhetorick, within his ſaid Dwelling Houſe the Sum of 150*l.* that is, to every of the ſaid Readers, for the time being, the Sum of 50*l.* for their Salaries and Stipends at the two uſual Terms of the Year, viz. the Annunciation of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary, and St. Michael, by equal Portions. And that the ſaid Wardens and Corporation of Mercers, and their Succeſſors, ſhall Yearly beſtow and expend 100*l.* at Four ſeveral Times in the Year, in and about the Expences and Charges of a Feaſt or Dinner for the whole Company, to be had and made in the Mercers Hall, in the End of every their Quarter Day, the Sum of Twenty five Pounds; and ſhall every Year give and diſtribute to the Relief of the poor Perſons and Priſoners in the Hoſpitals and Priſons, known by the Name of Chriſt or Chriſtchurch, lately Grey Fryars in London, the Hoſpital of St. Bartilmews near Smithfield, the Spittel and Bedlam near Biſhopſgateſtreet, the Hoſpital for the Poor in Southwark, and the Counter kept in the Poultry 50*l.* in Money, or other Proviſions and Neceſſaries for them; that is, to every the ſaid Hoſpitals and Priſons, 10*l.* at the Four moſt uſual Feaſts, or within 28 Days after, &c.

Manſion Houſe.

"And as concerning his ſaid Manſion Houſe, with the Gardens, Stables, and all and ſingular the other Appurtenances, &c. he willed and diſpoſed, that they ſhould remain, and the uſe thereof be, to the ſaid Maior and Commonalty, and to their Succeſſors: And alſo to the Wardens and Commonalty of the Mercers; to have and to hold in common; upon Truſt and Confidence, that the ſame Maior and Commonalty, and the ſaid Wardens and Commonalty of the Mercers, and their Succeſſors, ſhall permit, and ſuffer, Seven Perſons by them to be elected and appointed in Manner and Form aforeſaid, meet and ſufficiently learned to read the ſaid Seven Lectures, to have the Occupation of all the ſaid Manſion Houſe, Gardens, and all other the Appurtenances, &c. for them, and every of them there to inhabit, ſtudy, and daily to read the ſaid ſeveral Lectures.

"And his Will was, that none ſhould be choſen to read any of the ſaid Lectures, after that he ſhould be Married; neither ſhould receive any Fee or Stipend appointed for the reading of the ſaid Lecture.

It is to be noted, That all this was thus diſpoſed and given only during Fifty Years. Then after, the Will proceeds: "That moreover he willed and diſpoſed, that if the ſaid Maior and Commonalty, and the ſaid Wardens and Commonalty, before the End of the ſaid Fifty Years to them in Form aforeſaid limited, ſhould procure and obtain ſufficient and lawful Diſpenſations and Licenſes, Warrant and Authority had and obtained; ſhould have and enjoy the ſaid Royal Exchange, Meſſuages, Shops, Pawns, Vaults, Houſes, and all other the Premiſſes, &c. for ever ſeverally, by ſuch Moieties, Rates, and other Portions, and in ſuch manner and Form as before was limited, upon Truſt and Confidence, that they ſeverally for ever ſhould do, and perform the Payments, Charges, &c. before limited and expreſſed.

"And he required and charged the ſaid Corporations and chief Governors thereof, with circumſpect Diligence, and without long delay to procure, and ſo to be done and obtained, as they would anſwer for the ſame before Almighty God. For if they, or any of them, ſhould neglect the obtaining of ſuch Licenſe or Warrant (which he truſted could not be difficult, “ nor ſo chargeable, but that the Overplus of his Rents and Profits of the Premiſſes would ſoon recompenſe the ſame; becauſe to ſo good Purpoſe in the Commonwealth, no Prince or Council in any Age would deny or defeat the ſame. And that if conveniently by his Will, or other Conveyance, he might have aſſured it, he would not have left it to be done after his Death;) Then the ſame to revert to his right Heirs; whereas he meant the ſame to the Common Weal: And then the Default thereof ſhould be to the Reproach and Condemnation of the ſaid Corporations afore God.” The proving of this Will bore Date November 26. 1579.

This Noble Gift was afterwards confirmed by Act of Parliament in the 23d of the Queen, and was Intitled; An Act for the eſtabliſhing an Agreement between Sir Henry Nevyl, Kt. and Dame Anne Greſham, Widow, for the better performing of the laſt Will of Sir Thomas Greſham, Kt. deceaſed; and for the Payment of his Debts. The Clauſe ratifying and confirming the Donation of the Exchange for the foreſaid Lectures, was in theſe Words:

Confirmation thereof by Act of Parliament.

“ And the Buildings in London, called the Royal Exchange, and all Pawns, and Shops, Cellars, Vaults, Meſſuages, Tenements, and other whatſoever Hereditaments, Parcel of, or adjoyning to the ſaid Royal Exchange in London, ſometime the ſaid Sir Thomas Greſham's, ſhall be to the ſaid Dame Anne, during her Life; and after her Deceaſe, the one Moiety thereof to the Maior, Commonalty and Citizens of London, by whatever ſpecial Name or Addition the ſame Corporation is made or known, and to their Succeſſors for ever. And the other Moiety thereof to the Wardens and Commonalty of the Myſtery of Mercers of the City of London; that is to ſay, to the Body and Corporation of the Company of the Mercers of London, by whatſoever ſpecial Name or Addition the ſame Corporation is made or known, and to their Succeſſors, to the good Uſes and Intents in the ſaid Writing, laſt Will and Teſtament, limited or appointed.]

r the Fire College e Uſe of ublick , for the e Ne- y. R. B.

The Profeſſors of this College have been Men of excellent Parts, and well qualified for performing the ſame. But after the great Fire of London, (this College eſcaping in that Conflagration) the City made Uſe of it for their Court and Chamber, and for other publick Uſes: The Inner Court Yard for the meeting of the Merchants, until ſuch Time as the Royal Exchange might be rebuilt. Alſo the Galleries above the Court Yards without, and the Piazza's about the Inner Court, where the Merchants met, were all converted into Shops, for thoſe that had been burnt out in the Fire of the Exchange. This Alteration did for ſome Time impede the orderly Courſe of the Reading of the aforeſaid Lectures. But afterwards the ancient Practice was renewed.]

The City ſends to the Univerſities for fit Men for the Readers Places. J. S.

This Noble Foundation of Learning Mr. Stow hath given a brief Account of: I ſhall inſinuate a few other Things, whereof he is Silent. The Lady Greſham being dead, at whoſe Deceaſe the Salaries for the Lectures were to Commence from the Rents then growing out of the Royal Exchange; and the Manſion Houſe of Sir Thomas Greſham, (bequeathed by his laſt Will and Teſtament to thoſe and the like good and charitable Uſes) now in the Year 159$\frac{6}{7}$; the Lecturers being to be placed, and conſidering what a Truſt this was committed to them that were to Nominate and Appoint them, the Maior therefore, Aldermen, and Commons, thought fit to write their Letters to the Univerſity of Cambridge, importing, How “ that they might the better diſcharge the Truſt committed to them both in Conſcience, and in regard of their own Credit, as not doubting but the Eye of her Sovereign Majeſty, her Honourable Council, and all other of beſt Judgment throughout this Land, would obſerve their Doings, with what Care and good Diſcretion they performed this Duty, being Matter of ſo great Importance to the Church of God, and this Commonwealth. And that for themſelves for want of Judgment to diſcern of Men of moſt Sufficiency in the ſaid Faculties, they might make Default, and commit ſome Error in their Election: They thought good therefore to derive their Choice from the very Fountain, and in earneſt and hearty Manner to crave the Help and Aſſiſtance of their learned Judgments. And to intreat of them the Nomination of Two meet Perſons, being unmarried, according to the Will of the Teſtator, of beſt Knowledge in every Faculty of thoſe Four that were referred to the beſtowing of the City; being alſo furniſhed with good Utterance, and other meet and requiſite Parts for the publick Profeſſion of the ſaid Arts; whoſe ſeveral Names they prayed them to ſet down, and ſend unto them, under the Signature of the Univerſity, that they might make Choice of the fitteſt Perſons in every Faculty, being aſſiſted by ſo many grave and learned Judgments; wherein, as they ſhould perform a ſpecial Part of their own Duty, ſo they doubted not but that themſelves ſhould do a good and acceptable Work to Almighty God, and bind them and the whole City in mutual Reſpects, and good Correſpondence of like Deſire to procure the Good, wherein they might, of that Univerſity.” To the like Effect they had directed their Letters to the Univerſity of Oxford. This Letter bare Date January 20. 159$\frac{6}{7}$.

But ſome of the Heads in Cambridge were jealous, that theſe Lectures being to be read in London, might be prejudicial to that Univerſity, in hindring many from coming thither to ſtudy the Sciences, and drawing them to London. This occaſioned Dr. Jegon, the Vice-chancellor, to refrain for a little Time, to nominate any, before he had acquainted the Lord Burghley, their High-Chancellor, with it, and had his Allowance for the doing of it.

Two Things conſulted of for Greſham College.

There were Two Things, that thoſe that had the Care of this College, in order to the Settlement of it, were buſy about. The one was in concerting, whether the Lectures ſhould be read in Latin or in Engliſh: The other, for the Regulation of the College with good Rules and Orders.

Whether the Lectures ſhould be read in Latin or Engliſh.

Concerning the former it was much controverted, in which of the Two Languages the Lectures ſhould be read. And there were two Papers of Reaſons aſſigned, One why the Lectures in Divinity ſhould be read in Engliſh, All or Part: And the other, Why all the other Lectures ſhould be rather Read in Engliſh, All or Part. But the Judgment of Learned Men differing it ſeems in this Point; ſome being for the Reading in Latin, and ſome in Engliſh, the General Opinion was, That in the three Readings in the Week, the two former ſhould be in Latin, and the laſt in Engliſh.

But the Contents of the foreſaid Papers of Reaſons, why the Lectures were rather to be in Engliſh, may not be unworthy to be mentioned; which therefore follows:

Reaſons for the Reading in Engliſh.

I. Reaſons why the Lectures in Greſham College ought to be in Engliſh. Viz.

Becauſe the Good that would enſue would be more Publick.

And the Founder ſeemed to have a more ſpecial Reſpect to the Benefit of the Citizens; of whom few underſtand the Latin Tongue.

That there would be more Hope of Contribution from the Citizens for the perfecting this and other good Works, if they might be employed to the common Benefit of the People of the City.

That it would be leſs offenſive and damageable to the Univerſities, that this Reading be in Engliſh.

That the Maior, Aldermen, and Commonalty, to whom the ordering of theſe Lectures is committed by the Will of the Founder, thought themſelves bound in Conſcience to provide that they might be read to the greateſt Profit.

That if they be read in Latin, ſome of the Learned might probably reſort to them at firſt for Novelty's Sake; but in ſhort Time they would become Solitary, and void of Auditors. Whereby occaſion would be taken to convert the Revenue to ſome other Uſes, or elſe to transfer the Lectures to the Univerſities; both which were contrary to the Founder's Meaning.

That the Grecians taught all Parts of Learning in their own Tongue; Varro, Cicero, and Cæſar, and other of the Wiſeſt and Learnedeſt of the Romans, laboured to have the like done in the Latin. That the vulgar Tongues at this Time, eſpecially the Italian, French, and Spaniſh, both tranſlate out of Latin and Greek, and write in their Languages all Parts of Learning: Which hath much graced and benefited thoſe Countries.

And Laſtly, It will farther the Eſtimation of Learning among the People, and will give them ſuch a Taſte of Learning as not to deſpiſe it, as the ruder Sort do; and make them withal to find their own Wants, and how neceſſary it is to have Learned Men among them.

Eſpecially the Divinity Lecture.

II. Reaſons why the Divinity Lecture ſhould be in Engliſh. Viz.

That the former Reaſons make moſt for the Divinity Lecture.

That the Expoſition of the Texts of Scripture is fitter for none more than the common People; who may and do miſtake many Places of Scripture. And when Points of Doctrine, which they hear but ſhortly and ſlightly handled in Sermons and ordinary Lectures, ſhall be ſoundly and largely delivered in Engliſh, with plain Proofs of the Truth of our Doctrine, and Diſproof of the Sophiſtry of the adverſe Party; hereby Knowledge will come to be well ſettled in the Minds of the People, in whom there is a great and general Want of it.

That many able to underſtand Latin when they read it deliberately, will not be able to underſtand the Reader when he ſpeaketh it.

That it will be a good Means to beget a Reverence towards Learned Miniſters; when Divinity, and the Study thereof, ſhall appear to be a greater and harder Matter than is apprehended by many; ſince many ſimple Men and Women take themſelves to be great Divines upon meer Ignorance and vain Preſumption.

Recuſants, and other ſecret Papiſts, ſhall not be ſo eaſily able to ſhake the Faith, and diſquiet the Minds of unlearned People. Who for want of Grounds, are ſnared and confounded with ſubtil Arguments, as Papiſts furniſh themſelves withal.

That that falſe and dangerous Opinion, that the Difference between us and the Popiſh Church is about ſmall Trifles, and maintained by our Side for Contention rather than Conſcience ſake; may be found falſe and ſlanderous: And a true and grounded Deteſtation of Popery ſhall be bred in the Queen's Subjects Hearts.

That it may pleaſe God to make it a Means of the Converſion of ſome Papiſts, who though they refuſe to be preſent at Sermons, yet peradventure will not ſhun altogether Scholaſtical Lectures.

If it be objected, That it will not be fit to have all Controverſies, or the Reaſons of both Sides made known to the People; it may be anſwered, that the Practice of the Adverſaries, who have contrived the Controverſies, and framed their Reaſons in the Engliſh Tongue, with as much Subtilty as they can, ſhew the Neceſſity of Writing and Reading Scholaſtically, and Learnedly in Engliſh; that the People may be able to maintain the Truth profeſſed by Soundneſs of Reaſon. The reſt is referred to the Diſcretion of the Reader.

Rules or Orders for the College. See theſe Rules at Large, 2d Appendix, p. 2

And as to the other Affair, as by Sir Thomas Greſham's Will divers Things were omitted touching the Terms, Days, and Manner of Reading the ſaid Seven Lectures, and other Circumſtances, for the converſing of the Profeſſors as Collegiate Perſons, &c. I find a Collection of Rules prefaced in theſe Words, "It is thought good by the Maior "and Aldermen and Commons of the City, and "by the Maſter, Wardens, and Company of the "Mercers, to whom the Election of the ſaid "Profeſſors, and the good Government of their "ſaid College is wholly committed by the laſt "Will of the ſaid Founder, to deviſe and ſet "down certain Ordinances for the good Go"vernment of the ſaid College in Manner fol"lowing.]

But the Reader will obſerve by what follows in the Second Appendix to this Book, Page 18. or 19. where the Affairs of Greſham College are more particularly and fully ſpoken of, that the Profeſſors (ever looking on theſe Orders to be invalid, as having never been legally ratified, or duly confirmed,) never acted in Conformity to them from the Beginning; nor have the Truſtees ever called on them for their Obſervance of them, even when they mention them, giving them not the Title of Orders, but only Articles.]

J. S.

The firſt whereof was, for a Priority among the Profeſſors. This Priority to be in the Profeſſors of Divinity, Law, and Phyſick, ſucceſſively; ſo that theſe Three principal Readers be Preſidents in Succeſſion. The Divinity Reader to be next the Preſident. The other Readers, after the Divinity Profeſſor, to have their Place according to their Seniority within the College.

The Readers to lodge and common within the Houſe, as Collegiate Perſons.

Deputy Readers to be allowed by the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Wardens of the Mercers.

A common Table, or ordinary Diet, to be kept by the Profeſſors within the College by a common Charge.

No Stranger to be entertained at their common Diet above Three Meals within one Month.

The publick Reading to be performed at Five Terms; whereof the Firſt to begin the Monday before Trinity Term of the Common Law, and to continue for one whole Month, viz. the Space of Thirty Days next enſuing; after which Term, a greater Vacancy and Intermiſſion is granted to them for their private Study, and other Buſineſs, and for avoiding the Concourſe of People in the Heat of Summer. The Second Term to begin the firſt Monday in September, and to continue for a Fort-a Fortnight. The Third Term to begin the Monday before Michaelmas Term, and to end with the ſame Term. The Fourth Term to begin the Monday next after the Epiphany, and to continue for Two Months, viz. the ſpace of 60 Days. The Fifth Term to begin the Monday Sevennight after Eaſter Day, and to end with Eaſter Term.

Divinity Lecture.

The Divinity Lecture to be read thrice every Week; twice in Latin, and once in Engliſh; between the Hours of Eight and Nine in the Forenoon; a whole Hour at a Time. The Lecture to be read in Latin, for the Sake of Strangers, (whereby the Memory of the Founder may be divulged) on Mondays and Wedneſdays: To be read in Engliſh, for the common Benefit of the People of the City, on Fridays: Which Engliſh Lecture may be the Effect of the two former Latin Lectures.

That the Divinity Reader employ his Time in handling Controverſies that concern the chief Points of Chriſtian Faith; eſpecially thoſe with the common Adverſary, the Church of Rome: And to endeavour to confirm the true Doctrine eſtabliſhed in the Church of England: And to bolt out the true State of each Controverſy; eſpecially drawn from the Council of Trent, and the late Writers of refined Popery: And to overthrow their falſe Opinions, firſt by Scripture, then by Conſent of Antiquity, and laſtly, by Schoolmen, and chief Writers of their own Side: Not intermeddling with domeſtick Queſtions, or inteſtine Differences, touching the Rites and Manner of Government of the Church.

Law Lecture.

The Law Lecture to be read thrice every Week, for an Hour; the two former in Latin, and the third in Engliſh, as a brief Recapitulation of the two former. The Days to be Tueſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays.

This Law Lecture, conſidering the Hearers for the moſt part are like to be Merchants, or other Citizens, not to be read after the manner of the Univerſity, upon any Text of the Civil Courſe; but to cull out ſuch Titles, and Heads of Law, as beſt may ſerve to the good Liking and Capacity of the ſaid Auditory; and are more uſual in common Practice. Which may be handled after the Method of Waſerbekius, and certain others, by Definition, Diviſion, Cauſes, Effects, Contraries, &c. To which are added the Heads and Titles of ſuch Matters, as were fitted for this Place and Auditory.

yſick Le- ure.

The Phyſick Lecture to be thrice every Week; viz. Tueſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays, between the Hours of Ten and Eleven. The two firſt Lectures in the Latin Tongue, and the third in the Ergliſh, as a brief Collection and Recapitulation of the two former.

As for the Matter of the ſaid Lecture, it is to be wiſhed that the Reader follow Fernelius his Method, by reading Phyſiology, then Pathology, and laſt Therapeuticy; whereby the Body of the ſaid Art may be better imprinted by good Method, in the ſtudious Auditors; rather than be disjointed, and delivered out of Order, by Expoſition of ſome Part of Galen or Hippocrates.

The Aſtronomy and Geometry Lectures to be read likewiſe; viz. either of them thrice every Week.

metry ader.

The Geometrician to read every Trinity Term, Arithmetick: In Michaelmas and Hilary Term, Theorical Geometry; and every Eaſter Term, Practical Geometry.

nomy ader.

The Aſtronomy Reader to read, firſt the Principles of the Sphere, and Theories of the Planets, &c. Then to apply them to Uſe, by Reading Geography, and the Art of Navigation, in ſome one Term of every Year. The Days for the Aſtronomy Lecture to be, Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, between the Hours of Two and Three in the Afternoon. For Geometry, Tueſday, Thurſday, and Saturday, at the ſame Hour. The firſt Reading of the ſaid Lectures to be in Latin, the next in Engliſh; and ſo following in the ſame Order.

Rhetorick Lecture.

The Rhetorick Lecture to be read thrice every Week, viz. Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, for an whole Hour, in the Latin Tongue; with a brief Recapitulation for one Quarter of an Hour in the Engliſh, between the Hours of Ten and Eleven in the Forenoon.

Muſick Lecture.

The Muſick Lecture to be alſo read thrice every Week; viz. The Theorick Part, for Half an Hour in the Engliſh Tongue; and the Practick Part, by Conſort of Voices, or of Inſtruments, the other Half Hour. The Days appointed, to be Tueſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays, in the Afternoon, between the Hours of Three and Four.

For the more Order and Comlineſs, the Readers to read their Lectures as the Manner is in the Univerſities; viz. in ſuch Hoods and Habits as fit their Degree.

The Keeper of the Houſe, who is to keep the Place of Reading, Cloiſters, Garden, and other open and common Places; and to ſee the Gates be ſhut and opened in convenient Times; to be appointed by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, with the Conſent of the ſaid Lecturers. And to have his Lodgings within the ſaid Houſe.]

Readers Anno 1631.

The Readers of the Seven Liberal Sciences here, in the Year 1631, (when A. M. ſet forth his Second Edition of this Survey) were, Firſt, Mr. Richard Holdſworth, Reader of Divinity, on Monday; Dr. Eaton, Reader of Civil Law, on Tueſday; Dr. Winſton, Reader of Phyſick, on Saturday; Mr. John Taverner, Reader of Muſick, on Saturday: Mr. Henry Gellibrand, Reader of Aſtronomy, on Wedneſday: Mr. John Greaves, Reader of Geometry, on Thurſday; and Mr. Edward Wilkinſon, Reader of Rhetorick, on Friday.

A Deſign of building the College anew.

The Greſham Committee have lately endeavoured to get an Act of Parliament, for the taking down the old Buildings, and for the better Improvement thereof, to build thereon, and on the reſt of the Ground, a fair Court, and other good Houſes; and to make an handſome Paſſage through, that is, from Biſhopſgate Street to Broad Street: The Readers of the College to be aſſured of Lodgings as convenient altogether as they now enjoy, or more. But the Particulars hereof, and its Succeſs, ſee in the Second Appendix.

A Petition againſt the Profeſſors there.

Several Perſons, Anno 1706, repaired to hear the Lectures there appointed to be read; but when they came [out of Term, or on Holidays in Term,] no Lectures at all were read. Whereby they were ſo diſſatisfied, that at length they preferred a Petition to the Honourable Committee for managing the Affairs of the College, that the ſaid Grievance might be redreſſed, and the Founder's Will, which required the Lectures to be read Daily, (as they underſtood it, every Day in the Year) might be put in Execution. The ſaid Committee, conceiving the Honour and Welfare of the renowned City was concerned in this Affair, laid the Petition before the Maior and Aldermen, for their Concurrence and Approval. Who upon reading the Petition purporting, "That the Lectures founded by Sir Thomas Greſham, were by his Will to be read every Day in the Week, for the Inſtruction of Youth, and others in the City, in uſeful Knowledge; and that the preſent Profeſſors read only in Term Time, nor then on Holidays,* or in the broken Weeks, and alſo at ſuch uncertain Hours, that thoſe who would attend were prevented thereby: And praying that certain Hours might be fixed for ſuch Reading, that they might know when to be preſent at the ſaid College; deſired the Lord Maior to ſummon the ſaid Committee to meet, in order to conſider of and examine the ſaid Petition, Whether, by the Will of the Founder, the Fact be rightly ſtated. And did thereupon recommend it to the ſaid Committee to give ſuch Redreſs in the Premiſes, as might ſeem to them juſt, according to the Tenor, and true Intent and Meaning of the Will.]

* When the Term begins in the middle of a Week, the odd Days are called a broken Week.

The Progreſs thereof.
A. T.

The Complainants in the mean while Printed an Account in a Broad Sheet, called, The Caſe of Greſham-College, relating to the Lectures there: In which they ſet forth their good Intentions, namely, to encourage Learning, to fulfil the Will of the Dead, and other popular Pleas; and at the ſame Time inveighed againſt the Profeſſors, as ungrateful to their great Benefactor, and negligent and ſlothful in the Diſcharge of their Duty; and this they fixed up in the moſt publick Places of the City, and put into the Hands of the Lord Maior, the Aldermen, and of each Member of the Committee.

On the 7th of June, the Grand Committee met, to examine into thoſe Complaints, and the Petitioners and Profeſſors all appeared: The Petitioners had their Petition read, which was enlarged upon by a Councellor, whom they had retained for this Purpoſe: And the Profeſſors were alſo heard in their own Defence, which was to this Effect, “That they had regularly and duly diſcharged their Duties in the ſame Manner, and Order, and Times, as it had been ever executed by any of their Predeceſſors, from the firſt Inſtitution, to that very Time: That at their Election, they were by their Inſtructions, then given them, bound to perform their Duty, according to the Cuſtom and Practice of the Place: That this Cuſtom and Practice had been never to read, but in Term-Times, as they proved from the Accounts given of this Inſtitution by every Author, that from the firſt Founding theſe Lectures, till the preſent Time, had profeſſedly treated of them; all which Authorities they cited, and produced the Books themſelves, to juſtify the Fairneſs of their Citations: Whereas on the contrary, the Petitioners could give no one Inſtance, where the Profeſſors ever read out of the Term-Time, or produce any one Author that aſſerted it to be their Duty. That as to the Word Daily, in the Founder's Will, it was an Academick Word, and to be underſtood in the Senſe the Univerſities uſe the Word Weekly, when they ſpeak of ſuch publick Lectures, namely, each Week in the Terms, and not each Week in the Year; and for this they produced the Authority of the Univerſity Statutes, as well as Letters from the then Profeſſors in the Univerſities: But the Particulars of their Defence, ſhall be fully inſerted in the Appendix * to this Book.

* Vid. 2d Appendix, p. 18, 19, &c.

Reſult of this Complaint.

The Iſſue of the whole Matter was, that the Committee was divided; ſome of them underſtanding the Words of the Will in the Senſe of the Petitioners, but more in the Senſe of the Profeſſors; conceiving that what had been ever the Practice, ought not on any unreaſonable Clamour to be altered. However, to give ſome Content to the Petitioners, they made an Order, Dated October the 4th, enjoining, that the Profeſſors ſhould not only read in the broken Weeks, but begin their Readings ſome few Days before the Terms, and that they ſhould alter the Hour of Two in the Afternoon, to Three. The Profeſſors complied with this Order ſo far, as to read in the broken Weeks, and to alter their Hour, but were adviſed by Council not to read out of the Term-Time, which they therefore refuſed, and preſented to Sir Thomas Rawlinſon, the Chairman, their Reaſons for ſuch Refuſal. The Petitioners were not ſatiſfied with this Order, and therefore deſired, both of Sir Thomas Rawlinſon, and his Succeſſor, Sir Robert Bedingfield, a Rehearing, but never obtained one: For the Committee being either tired with what had already paſſed, or rather ſeeing no reaſon to alter what had been ever without any Interruption, the Practice and Cuſtom of the Place, and no ways repugnant to the Founder's Will, gave the Petitioners no farther Meetings, to their great Diſcontent and Diſappointment, but to the fair Juſtification of the then Profeſſors, whoſe Names were in 1707.

The COLLEGE of PHYSICIANS.

College of Phyſicians, and their Privileges.
R. B.

The College, or Corporation of Phyſicians, by their Charter (ſince confirmed by Act of Parliament) have certain Privileges granted unto them; by which no Man, tho' a Graduate in Phyſick in either of the Univerſities, can, without a Licenſe under the Seal of the College, practiſe Phyſick within the City, or within Seven Miles Circuit; Neither in any Part of the Kingdom, not having taken ſome Degree in either of the Univerſities of the Land.

By their Charter, likewiſe, they can adminiſter an Oath, impoſe a Fine or Impriſonment on the Offender, in that and ſome other Reſpects. They have Authority to ſearch and examine the Drugs and Compoſitions in any Apothecary's Shop, to ſee if they are good, and well made up. They can make By-Laws, for their Government. They can purchaſe Lands or Houſes for the Society. They may uſe a Common Seal, &c. And by their Charter may practiſe Surgery, if they pleaſe. Are exempt from ſerving on Juries, or bearing any Pariſh Office, or providing Arms or Ammunition.

Their ancient College in Knight-riders-ſtreet. Thence to Amen Corner.

This Society had in ancient Time their College in Knight-Riders-Street, being the Gift of Dr. Linacre, Phyſician to K. Henry the VIIIth. From which in ſucceeding Times they removed to Amen-Corner, where they had purchaſed an Houſe and Ground. Here Dr. Harvey (who found out the Circulation of the Blood) Anno 1652, built a Library and Publick Hall, which he granted for ever to the College, with his Library, and endowed it with his Eſtate, which he reſigned to them in his Life. Part of which he aſſigned for an Anniverſary Oration to commemorate all their Benefactors, and to exhort others to follow their good Examples; and for the providing a good Dinner for the Society.

The College of Phyſicians now in Warwick Lane.

The Conflagration of London, Anno 1666, conſuming this Houſe, and the Ground, being but a Leaſe, the Fellows of this College purchaſed with their own Money a large Piece of Ground in Warwick-Lane, whereon they Erected a curious Building, which goes by the Name of the College of Phyſicians; of which Building, more in the Ward of Farringdon within, where it is ſeated. The late Marqueſs of Dorcheſter, (who did them the Honour to be admitied of their Society) at his Death bequeathed his great and excellent Library unto them. For the keeping of which they have built a ſtately Room. At their firſt Inſtitution, there were but Thirty Fellows of their Society; but K. Charles II. upon their Requeſt augmented the Number to Forty; and K. James II. conſidering the large Increaſe of this City in Buildings and Inhabitants, was pleaſed in their new Charter to increaſe the Number to Eighty, and not to exceed.

The Number of Fellows increaſed from 30 to 80.

Who qualified to be Fellows.

Before this Charter none could be admitted a Fellow of the College, if he had not taken his Degree of Doctor in one of the Univerſities; but now all thoſe that have taken their Degree in any Foreign Univerſity are qualified to become Fellows.

But although their Power is great to obſtruct the Practice in any one that is not of the College; yet whether by Connivance or Favour, others practiſe Phyſick, viz. Empiricks, Mountebanks, pretended Chymiſts, Apothecaries, Surgeons, and even Women, which oft proves the Ruin of many Perſons. And yet by the Law of the Land, if any one that is not ſo qualified ſhall undertake a Cure, and his Patient die under his Hand it is deemed Felony in him.

Preſident.

To this College belongs a Preſident, Four Cenſors, and Twelve Electors.

The Preſident is the principal Member, and is annually choſen out of the Society.

Cenſors.

The Four Cenſors, have by their Charter Authority to Survey, Correct, and Govern, all Phyſicians, or others, that ſhall practice within their Juriſdiction, viz. this City, and Seven Miles round, and to Fine or Impriſon for Offences, as they ſhall ſee cauſe.]

The Preſident, Anno 1716, was Dr. John Bateman. But for a Catalogue of all the Fellows, Candidates, Honorary Fellows, and Licentiates of this College, for the Year 1716, I refer the Reader to the Preſent State of Great Britain, printed the ſame Year.

The Uſefulneſs of this College.

J. S.

Such a College ſeemed very neceſſary to be Erected, for the better Encouragement of Learning and Study, in thoſe that ſet apart themſelves for the Preſeſſion and Practice of Phyſick. In whoſe Hands the Lives of the Greateſt and Nobleſt, as well as the Meaneſt, are put. And as by their Ignorance many Lives may be loſt, and ſome to the irreparable Damage of the Commonwealth, ſo by their Skill and Knowledge of the Things of Nature, the Diſeaſes and Maladies, to which Mankind is ſo ſubject, may be ſtopt and cured; to the redreſs of grievous Pains, and the Preſervation of the Lives of uſeful Men. Therefore in former Times, before ſuch a Corporation was eſtabliſhed, choice was wont to be made (when Princes lay ill) by their Privy Council, among the Plenty of Pretenders to this Art, of ſome of the Learneder and better Sort, whether of Phyſicians or Chirurgeons: ſuch a tender Thing as Life (and ſometimes of ſuch Concern to the Publick) lying at Stake.

Phyſicians appointed by the Council for K. Hen. 6.

This was practiſed in the 32. of Hen. 6. when that King lay ſick, which the King's Council thought a Matter fit to be taken into their Conſideration; and aſſigned him three Phyſicians, named John Arundel, John Saleby, and William Hatcliff; and two Surgeons, named Marſhal and Warren, to adminiſter freely about his Perſon. And there is a Roll of that Tenor, mentioned by the Lord Coke in his Inſtitutes.

Inſtitut. Part IV. P. 251.

Practice of Phyſick when firſt reſtrained by a Law.

There was no Reſtraint by Law for the Practice of Phyſick, till the Third Year of K. Henry VIII. when a Law was Enacted that none ſhould exerciſe the Faculty of Phyſick or Surgery within the City of London, or within Seven Miles of the ſame, unleſs firſt he were examined, approved and admitted by the Biſhop of London, or the Dean of St. Paul's, calling to him or them Four Doctors of Phyſick, and for Surgery other expert Perſons in that Faculty, upon pain of Forfeiture of 5*l.* for every Month they ſhould occupy Phyſick or Surgery, not thus admitted and allowed.

The Reaſon of the ſaid Law.

And for this Cauſe, as is mentioned in the Preamble of the ſaid Law, becauſe the Science and Cunning of Phyſick and Surgery, (to the perfect Knowledge whereof be requiſite both great Learning and ripe Experience) was daily within this Realm exerciſed by a great Multitude of ignorant Perſons; of whom the greater Part had no manner of Inſight in the ſame, nor in any other kind of Learning. Some alſo can read no Letters on the Book. So far forth that common Artificers, as Smiths, Weavers, and Women, boldly and accuſtomably took upon them great Cures, and Things of great Difficulty, in the which they partly uſed Sorceries and Witchcraft, and partly applyed ſuch Medicines unto the Diſeaſed, as were very noyous, and nothing meet therefore; to the high Diſpleaſure of God, &c. and Deſtruction of many of the King's Liege People.

The firſt Charter granted to the Phyſicians by K. Hen. 8.

Yet was there no Society or College of ſuch Men, directed by, and circumſcribed within Laws and Orders, and formed into a Corporation, till the 10th of Henry VIII. when that King granted a Charter, Dated the 23. of Sept. at Weſtminſter, to incorporate certain Phyſicians in one Body, and perpetual Commonalty or Fellowſhip of the Faculty of Phyſick; and to have a perpetual Succeſſion, and a common Seal, and to chuſe Yearly a Preſident, to Overſee, Rule, and Govern the ſaid Fellowſhip in all Men of the ſame Faculty. By Vertue whereof, they were enabled to purchaſe and poſſeſs in Fee, and Perpetuity, Lands, Tenements, and Rents, and any other Poſſeſſion; that they might implead and be impleaded; that they might make Statutes and Ordinances for the wholſome Government and Correction of the College, and of all Perſons practiſing Phyſick within Seven Miles of the City. And within that Compaſs, none to practiſe, as well as in the City, unleſs firſt allowed by the Preſident and Fellowſhip, upon pain of Forfeiture of an 100 Shillings for every Month; that Four be choſen Yearly by the Preſident and College, who ſhould have the Superviſing, Search, Examination, and Government of all the Phyſicians of the City, and Suburbs within Seven Miles; and to puniſh them for their Offences, in not performing, making, and neglecting their Medicines and Receipts; and that by Fines, Amerciaments, and Impriſonments: That neither the Preſident, nor any of the Members of this College be ſummoned, or put in any Aſſizes, Juries, Inqueſts, &c.

The Procurers and Cauſe of this Chart.

And that the firſt Movers and Procurers of ſo good a Fellowſhip, for the Safety of the Lives of Men, may be preſerved; and the Cauſes that moved the King to grant it may be known, they are both ſignified to us in the ſaid Kings Letters Patents; where it appeareth, that the Suit was made by John Chambre, Thomas Linacre, and Fernandes de Victoria, all the King's Phyſicians, and three other Phyſicians, namely, Nic. Halliwel, John Francis, and Robert Yarly; and chiefly by the Interceſſion of Cardinal Wolſey, Lord Chancellor. And the Cauſes that inclined the King appeared in the Preamble to the ſaid Letters Patents; beginning thus,

Cum Regii Officiis noſtri munus arbitremur, Ditionis noſtræ Hominum felicitati omni ratione conſulere, id autem vel imprimis fore, ſi improborum Conatibus tempeſtivè occurramus, &c. That is, "Since "we eſteem it a Part of our Royal Office, by all "Means to conſult the Happineſs of ſuch as "are under our Juriſdiction, and that the Way "to do it will eſpecially be, if we ſeaſonably "put a Stop to the Endeavours of evil Men; "We have thought it highly neceſſary to reſtrain "the Boldneſs of ſome wicked People, who ſhall "profeſs Phyſick more for their own Covetouſneſs, than out of any good Conſcience; whence "many Inconveniences may ariſe to the ignorant and credulous common Sort: Therefore "partly imitating the Example of well inſtituted Cities in Italy, and in many other Nations; partly moved by the Requeſt of certain "grave Men, &c.

Confirmed by Act of Parliament.

This Charter, they who were the chief Procurers, got confirmed and ratified by Act of Parliament, Anno 14. Hen. 8. upon this Conſideration, as the Act ran; "For the making the ſaid Corporation "meritorious, and very good for the Commonwealth of this Realm, it was neceſſary to provide, that no Perſon of the ſaid Politick Body "and Commonalty, be ſuffered to exerciſe Phyſick, but only thoſe Perſons that be Profound, "Sad, and Diſcreet, groundly Learned, and deeply Studied in Phyſick; and for the enlarging "of further Articles for the ſaid Commonwealth "to be had and made.

An Act for the Phyſicians, 32. H. 8.

In the 32. of Hen. 8. by another Act of Parliament, they were exempted from keeping Watch and Ward, and from being choſen Conſtables, or into other Offices within the City and Suburbs, as they had many times before been compelled to their great Fatigation and Unquieting, and to the Peril of their Patients. By the ſame Act, Four Phyſicians were to be choſen Yearly to ſearch the Apothecaries Wares, Drugs, and Stuff.

1 Ma. 1.

Q. Mary, Anno 1. confirmed the College's Charter.

Eliz. 7.

Q. Elizabeth gave them a Charter, Dated at Weſtminſter, Feb. 4. Anno Regni 7. to take Yearly for ever, One, Two, Three, or Four Human Bodies, to Diſſect or Anatomize, having been condemned and dead.

Disorders in the College about this time.

The College consisted for the most Part about this time, and before, of such as were Favourers of Popery, and were guilty of divers Disorders. This Account whereof was sent up, viz.

Presidents. Caius often, Synings, Cawdwell, Atslow, who was chosen also the second time after his Troubles.

That the Presidents, Censors, Electors, and other their Officers, were not sworn to the Queen's Majesty at their Admission, as in other Corporations they were. Whereby it came to pass, that Papists continually had occupied the chief Rooms.

That Men expelled * their Universities for Religion, by this means had from time to time been received into the College, and thereby advanced in their Credit.

That either they did wholly repel,† or not without much Importunity admit any, whom they thought to be well affected towards the true Religion now received.

That such as had gone beyond the Seas || to take the Degree of a Doctor, because they would avoid the Oath of the Supremacy (ministred according to the Statute in our Universities) had shortly upon their Return been admitted without any Oath ministred unto them.

* Atslow Gyfford from Mertyn College.

† Fryer of Godmanchester, Coldwel, Peny, Turner, & alii.

|| Smith, Oxon. Hal. Fryer, Oxon.

That such as had been imprisoned for Religion and other great Matters, had kept themselves in Office at their own Pleasures, contrary to the College Statutes and their Oaths; and detained in their Hands the College Goods, disdaining to make any Account of the same.

Clement.

That some of the Electors, who had fled for Religion out of the Realm, had been kept in their Offices, and stoutly defended as chief Members of the College (being at Louvain) until they dyed; that other honest, true Subjects might be kept out of the same Rooms.

The last Election stolen by Atslow, Synings, Cawdwell, Good, and Smith.

That they made private Conventicles of a few to bring to pass their Purposes aud Elections, which ought by the College Statutes to be done on Quarter Days only, and the whole Company being thereunto called.

That the College Statutes were generally unperfect, and partly Popish.

These Things being declared and complained of to the Council, by some well affected in the Year 1575, Reformation of them was earnestly desired.

Their Priviledges infringed by the City.

The City would now and then (not taking notice of their Customs and Priviledges, lay common Burthens and Duties upon them, as upon other Inhabitants of the City. This made the College once to Petition the Queen's Council, that according to their ancient Customs and Privileges, they might be relieved of what was laid upon them. And upon their humble Petition, it was then signified to the Lord Maior and his Company, that the College should be no more molested in the Premisses. Yet in the Year 1696, the like Molestation towards them was attempted again. And now they applyed to the Privy Council again; that by their honourable Favours they might be protected, and that it might stand with their good Pleasures, that it might be signified to the Lord Maior and Bench of Aldermen, that as ever heretofore they had been discharged, so now at this present likwise, they, and the Society of the College of Physicians might be forborn. This was Dated Feb. 4. 1596. Signed, The President and Society of the College of Physicians of London.

K. James, and K. Charles's, Charters.

K. James I. granted the College his Charter, Dated Octob. 8. Ann. Regni 15.

And K. Charles II. granted them a Royal Charter, Mar. 26. Anno Regni 15.

Practisers punished by them.

This College, according to the Power granted them by these and other their Charters, have called before them, that is, the President, or in his Absence the Vice President and the Censors, the Surgeons, Apothecaries, and other Persons, that have practised Physick without their Allowance; and have sometimes warned them to forbear, and sometimes imposed pecuniary Penalties, or Imprisonment upon them. For they may convent any Physician or Practiser before them, and examine them concerning their Skill in the Faculty of Physick. And if they shall not appear to their Summons; or appearing refuse to answer, or to be examined, the College may assess a Penalty or Fine upon them, for every Default of Appearance, or Refusal to answer; the Fine for one Default not exceeding 40*s.* or if any Administer unwholsome or noysome Medicines, he may be fined according to their Discretions, not exceeding 10*l.* or Imprisonment, not exceeding 14 Days, unless for Non-payment of fine, when it shall be lawful to detain them in Prison, till it be paid.

Suits between the College and other Practisers.

And there have been divers notable Suits commenced, between the College and other unlicensed Practisers of Physick; and some of them, such as have been made Doctors of Physick in the Universities. As by Edmund Gardiner, Dr. Bonham, one Butler, one Huybert, and others. The Pleadings whereof are set down in a Book intitled, The Royal College of Physicians; and an Historical Account of the Colleges Proceedings, &c. set forth by Dr. Charles Goodal, Fellow of the said College, Anno 1684.

The Powers and Privileges of the College.

Upon a Complaint made about the latter End of Q. Elizabeth's Reign, by Jenkins and Read against the College, which had used some Punishment towards them for evil Practice of Physick, and exercising that Art without their License, after a long and careful Hearing on both Parts, Popham, Lord Chief Justice, in the Year 1602, gave his Judgment; the Sum of which was in these Particulars. I. That there was no sufficient License without the College Seal. II. That no Surgeon, as a Surgeon, might practise Physick; no, not for any Disease, tho' it were the great Pox. III. That the Authority of the College was strong and sufficient to commit to Prison. IV. That the Censure of the College, rising from lesser Mulcts to greater, was equal and reasonable. V. That it were fit to set to Physicians Bills the Day of the Month, and the Patient's Name. VI. That the Lord Chief Justice could not Bail, or Deliver, the Colleges Prisoner, but was obliged by Law to deliver him up to the Colleges Censure.

VII. That a Freeman of London might lawfully be impriſoned by the College. VIII. That no Man, tho' never ſo learned a Phyſician, or Doctor, might Practiſe in London, or within Seven Miles without the Colleges Licenſe.

Diſpenſaries ſet up by the Phyſicians.

Of late Years many learned and careful Members of this College, for the better help of the poorer ſort that fall ſick; and that their Medicines might be better, and more correctly made up for their own Credit, have ſet up three Shops, or Warehouſes for Phyſick, in and about the City of London; the One at the College; another in St. Peter's Cornhill; and a Third at Weſtminſter; which they call Diſpenſaries, becauſe thence are Medicines diſpenſed to ſeveral Hundreds of Patients Weekly; beſides the making up of all the Shops Preparations of Retailing Apothecaries.

The Apothecaries Complaint upon this.
The Phyſicians Anſwer thereunto.

The Apothecaries complained much againſt this, as an unjuſt Invaſion upon them. But the Phyſicians ſay, firſt, That they have a Right to give Medicines to all their Patients, if they pleaſe, by Vertue of the Statute, 32. Hen. 8. that empowereth Phyſicians to practiſe Phyſick in all its Parts. And the Apothecaries Charter, granted by King James, reſerved that Power to them. They ſay likewiſe, that the Apothecaries, enhaunce the Prices of their Commodities, which they attribute in part to their Trades being overſtocked by great Numbers. And as their Numbers increaſe ſo muſt their Prices, or elſe they muſt ſtarve.

Apothecaries Bills.

And that the Apothecaries Bills riſe ſo high, half thereof was in conſideration of their Advice and Attendance; and the remaining half brought them in greater Profit for their Medicines, than what any other Tradeſmen would reckon to be a moderate Gain. And that this was true, the Subſcribers to the ſaid Diſpenſary undertook to demonſtrate, either in any Court of Juſtice, or before a Committee of Parliament, by comparing the Bills of Charges given into Patients, with the Bills of Preſcription.

The Phyſicians Account of their Diſpenſary.
Preſent State of the Practice of Phyſick by Dr. Pitt.

The Phyſicians ſay moreover in behalf of their Diſpenſaries, that they were firſt ſet up by divers charitable Members of the College, for the Uſe and Benefit of the ſick Poor, after the Apothecaries had been ſolicited in vain to do the ſame Thing. And that they were moved hereunto, not only from a Principle of Charity, but by the Intreaty of a Committee of the Common Council of London; and to juſtify themſelves from a Slander caſt upon them by the Apothecaries, that they took no care of the Poor. For when the Apothecaries were found fault with for practiſing, they uſed to alledge in their Juſtification, that the Poor having no more to give to a Phyſician, they would periſh for want of being taken care of, if they [the Apothecaries] did not look after them. This gave Occaſion to the Phyſicians to ſet their Care of the Poor in the View of the World, not only in theſe Diſpenſaries giving them their Advice gratis, but alſo by helping them to Phyſick at a very low Value.

The Uſefulneſs thereof ſhewed.

At theſe Diſpenſaries, not a Dram of Phyſick is given out but by Bill from one or other of the Subſcribers to theſe Diſpenſaries. Which ſtill is kept upon the File, and alſo tranſcribed into a Book. So that all the reſt of the Subſcribers, the Patient, or whoſoever elſe that is concerned, may at any time be fully ſatisfied what was given. And here the Phyſician having no other Intereſt or Deſign but to cure and oblige his Patient, preſcribes but a few Things, and thoſe the moſt effectual he can invent. For ſeeing he hath no Profit by the Medicines, he hath no Temptation to multiply them, nor to diſguize ordinary cheap Things, to obtain great Prizes for them. He ordinarily divides his Preſcriptions, between the Diſpenſary and the Patients Family, directing the latter to prepare what is eaſy to make, and the former what requires more Art. Nor do the Apothecaries that are employed here ever take the Liberty to put one Thing for another, a Cheap for a Dear, becauſe they would get nothing by it, if they did, as having a certain Salary, which neither Profit nor Loſs affects.

Drugs and Preparations here always good.

Further, at theſe Repoſitories there is the greateſt Aſſurance poſſible, that all the Drugs and Preparations are good. The Subſcribers by two and two in their Turns take care to buy in, the choiceſt Drugs they can meet withal. That they do ſo, the Druggiſts they deal with will bear them witneſs; and their Stock in the Repoſitory may bear them Witneſs. And as to the ſimple or compound Preparations of them, the Head Apothecary at the College perfectly underſtands them all, as well Chymical as Galenical. And he with his Aſſiſtant prepares all the Store of Medicines, not only for the Diſpenſary there, but for the two others alſo. They are conſtantly every Day from Morning till Night in this Buſineſs, and ſo are always at Hand to make up the Subſcribers Bills as they come in. They neither fetch in the Bills, nor carry out the Medicines, that is the Work of Servants or Porters; ſo that all the preſcribed Phyſick is diſpenſed with the uttermoſt Diſpatch and Exactneſs. The Apothecaries being ſtill upon the Spot, no Patient runs the Riſque of a Boys Careleſsneſs or Ignorance. And Laſtly, hence Medicines are diſpenſed at a cheaper Rate, than any Phyſician, that ſhould make and give out his own Phyſick apart, could poſſibly afford them. For every one muſt keep one Servant at leaſt, and employ two Rooms, for preparing and diſpenſing his Medicines; whereas four Apothecaries, and three Diſpenſaries ſerve all the Subſcribers, which doth conſiderably contract the Charge. And this good Husbandry is wholly for the Benefit of the Patients. For the Subſcribers have not a Farthing profit; the Price of the Phyſick being calculated merely to defray the Servants Salaries and Houſe Rent.

But (notwithſtanding theſe charitable Ends ſhewed) there are many of the College that come not into this Combination; nor ſubſcribe to the foreſaid Diſpenſary.]

The COLLEGE of HERALDS.

The Office of Arms and their Buſineſs.
R. B.

This College, or Corporation, conſiſts of a certain Number of Perſons skilled in Coat Armour. This Buſineſs being for the granting of Arms to Perſons of Wealth and Merit; for the Regiſtring of Deſcents and Pedigrees at their Viſitations or otherwiſe; for the regulating of Abuſes in ſuch as bear Arms, not belonging unto them, but perhaps to others. And they are made uſe of in publick Affairs of State for the proclaiming of Peace or War. They are to attend at Feaſts of Kings or Princes, at Cavalcades, Coronations, Funerals, &c. of Kings, Queens, and Perſons of Quality. And at theſe Times they are to be in their Heralds Coats. And generally what concerns Honour is their Care and Study.

The Houſe firſt given by the Earl of Derby.

This College is ſeated near Doctors Commons, betwixt St. Benet's Hill and St. Peter's Hill; and was the ancient Houſe of Thomas Stanley, an Earl of Derby: given to their Society by Queen Mary; to the end they might reſide together, for the better conſulting the Affairs of the Office, and for the keeping their Books of Arms, Deſcents, &c. in an Office together. Since the Fire of London, Anno 1666, which conſumed the whole Houſe, it is fairly and conveniently rebuilt, with a large Room for keeping the Court of Honour; together with a Library, and Houſes and Apartments for the Kings, Heralds and Purſuivants.

Their Privileges.

By their Charter, firſt granted them by King Richard III. and after by ſucceeding Kings, they have ſeveral Privileges allowed them, and are freed from all Tolls, Subſidies, and Offices of Trouble in the Kingdom.

Their Society conſiſts of Three Kings at Arms, Six Heralds, and Four Purſuivants at Arms; which are as followeth.

Garter King at Arms.

Firſt, GARTER King at Arms, inſtituted by K. Henry the Fifth. Whoſe Office is to attend at the Solemnities of the Knights of the Garter, and to cauſe their Arms to be hung up upon their Seats or Stalls after their Inſtalment: To carry, or cauſe to be carried, the Garter to Kings and Princes beyond Sea, that are elected of this Order: To take Cognizance of the Arms of the Nobility; To make Supporters to thoſe new created to any Degree of Peerage; And to marſhal the Solemnities at the Funerals of the Nobility.

His Creation, and Crowning.

Anciently this, as alſo the other Two Kings at Arms, were created and crowned by the Kings themſelves; and the Heralds and Purſuivants had their Creation from the King's Hand: But of late days, the Earl Marſhal (who, as I have elſewhere taken notice of, is the Head of this College) hath a Special Commiſſion for every particular Creation, and to perform the ſame as the Kings formerly did.

The Manner thereof.

The Ceremony uſed at his Creation and Crowning, is this: There is a Sword and a Book provided; whereon he takes an Oath to obey, firſt, the Supreme Head of the Order of the Garter, which is the King; and then the Knights of the ſaid Order, in ſuch Things that belong to his Office. To give notice to the King, upon the Death of any of the ſaid Order; and to inſtruct the Heralds and Purſuivants in Doubts relating to the Office. Which ſaid Oath is thus adminiſtred: He kneels down before the Earl Marſhal; and laying his Hand on the Book and Sword, he takes the aforeſaid Oath, which is read to him by one of the other Kings at Arms. Then the Letters Patents are read; during which Time, the Earl Marſhal pours Wine out of a Bowl on his Head, and gives him the Name of Garter; and then he is inveſted with his Coat, which is of Velvet, richly embroidered with the Arms of England, &c. Alſo with a Collar of SS, and a gilt Crown on his Head.

His Salary is double to what the other two Kings have: And he hath Fees at the Inſtalments; with a yearly Allowance, given by the Knights of the Garter: And hath their uppermoſt Garment at their Inſtalment.

Clarencieux King at Arms

CLARENCIEUX is the next of the Three Kings; ſo called from the Duke of Clarence, to whom he firſt belonged. For Lionel, Third Son to King Edward III. married the Daughter and Heir of the Earl of Ulſter in Ireland, and had with her the Honour of Clare, in the County of Thomond. Whereupon he was afterwards Duke of Clarence; which Dukedom eſcheating to K. Edward IV. he made this Herald a King at Arms, and ſtiled him Clarencieux. His Office is to marſhal and diſpoſe of the Funerals of the Gentry under the Degree of a Baron, on the South ſide of the River Trent, that ſhall have any publick Ceremony made at their Interments. He is alſo to keep his Viſitations within his Limits, for the Regiſtring of Families, taking Account of Coat Armour, &c.

Norroy King at Arms.

NORROY is the other King. His Office is the ſame as that of Clarencieux, for the Gentry on the North ſide of the ſaid River of Trent: And theſe Two are called Provincial Heralds; the whole Kingdom being divided into Two Provinces betwixt them.

The Six Heralds, and their Office.

The Six HERALDS are, 1. Windſor. 2. Richmond. 3. Cheſter. 4. Somerſet. 5. York. And, 6. Lancaſter. And the Office of theſe Heralds, is, To wait at Court; to proclaim Peace and War: On the Death of the King or Queen, to proclaim the next to the Crown; and to attend at Publick Solemnities, &c.

The Purſuivants.

The Four PURSUIVANTS are, Rouge Croſs, Rouge Dragon, Portcullis, and Blue Mantle. Theſe give their Attendance likewiſe in the Office for the Affairs aforeſaid.

Duty of the Heralds.

A Herald at Arms is created with the like Ceremonies as the Kings, except a Coronet; and his Coat muſt be of Sattin, embroidered with the King's Arms, as aforeſaid. He is brought before the Earl Marſhal, betwixt two other Heralds: Their Oath is, To be true to the King; ſerviceable to Gentlemen: To keep Secrets; to aſſiſt the diſtreſſed Gentlemen, Gentlewomen, Widows and Virgins; to avoid Taverns, Bawdy-Houſes, and Dice.

Duty of the Purſuivants.

The Purſuivants are alſo created by Letters Patents: Their Coat is to be of Damask, with the King's Arms embroidered. He is to be introduced by two other Purſuivants. Their Oath is to be true to the King; ſerviceable to all Chriſtians: To keep Secrets; to be ſober, lowly and humble.]

The Kings and Heralds.

J. S.

The Perſons officiating in this Office, Anno 1707, were,

The Earl of Carliſle, Earl Marſhal, during the Minority of the Duke of Norfolk.

Sir Henry St. George, Knight, Garter King at Arms.

John Vanbrugh, Eſq; Clarencieux King at Arms.

Robert Deveniſh, Eſq; Norroy King at Arms; late York Herald: Advanced hither by the late Duke of Norfolk, in the Room of Sir John Dugdale, deceaſed.

This Gentleman being lately deceaſed, Peter Le Neve, Eſq; is now Norroy. A very learned, ſtudious Antiquarian; to whom I am much obliged.

Late HERALDS.

Henry Dethick, Eſq; Richmond.
Gregory King, Eſq; Lancaſter.
Charles Mawſon, Eſq; Cheſter.
Peirſe Mauduit, Eſq; Windſor.
Samuel Stebbing, Eſq; Somerſet.
Laurence Crump, Eſq; York.
Rowland Fryth, Eſq; Mowbray.

Late PURSUIVANTS.

John Gybbon, Gent. Blue Mantle.
John Hare, Eſq; Rouge Dragon.
John Heſket, Gent. Portcullis.
Robert Dale, Gent. Blanch Lion.
Thomas Coot, Eſq; Rouge Roſe.

But ſome of theſe deceaſed.

Their Fees.

Theſe being all the King's Servants in Ordinary, have yearly Salaries. To the Heralds, 26 l. 13 s. 4 d. each; And to the Purſuivants, each 20 l. if the Author of the Notitia Angliæ ſets it right. That of the Kings at Arms he hath omitted; only Garter's Salary is double to that of the Two other Kings. But by King Edward IV. his Patent to John Wrythe, Garter, it appears, that he had aſſigned the Sum of 40 l. to be paid him yearly, according as other Garter Kings had uſually received.

Heralds, and their Fees, in K. Richard the IIId's Time. Ledg. Book of K. Rich. III.

I find theſe Kings and Heralds in King Richard the Third's Reign; and their Fees granted them by that King in the firſt Year of his Reign. Beginning with John More, King of Arms in the North Parts, xx l. for Term of Life. To John Water, alias York Herald, the Lordſhip of Baybal, to the Value of C Shillings, and an Annuity of 8 l. 6 s. 8 d. of the Revenue of the Lordſhip of Huntingfield, in the County of Kent. To Thomas Holme, alias Clarencieux King of Arms in the South Parts, xx l. of the Cuſtoms and Subſidy of Exeter and Dartmouth; and xx l. more, of the Annuity of the Lordſhip of Walden, in the County of Eſſex; for Term of Life. Glouceſter Herald; To him, his Heirs and Aſſigns for ever, the Manor of Oven in Kent, with all the Lands, Tenements, &c. late Sir John Fogg's.

K. Edward VI. in a Progreſs takes the Heralds along with him.

Beſides theſe Salaries, when the Kings of England went their Progreſſes, they commonly took their Heralds along with them; and theſe then had their daily Allowances. Thus in the Year 1552, in a Progreſs of King Edward VI. he took along with him in his Retinue the Four Kings at Arms; reckoning in Ulſter for the Fourth; Somerſet Herald, Rouge Dragon, and Blue Mantle, Purſuivants; and appointed Allowances to them for their Diet, from July the 5th, to the 7th of October; (which was the Time of the King's Progreſs) Viz. To Garter, 10 s. by the Day: To the Three other Kings, 6 s. 8 d. per diem: To Somerſet, 4 s. And to the Two Purſuivants, 2 s. each.]

Several remarkable Matters concerning this Office.

There are divers Things remain, that ſeem worthy to be added to what is already ſaid concerning this College of Honour: As, Concerning the Uſefulneſs of it; The Qualifications of thoſe that are to be admitted into it: Its Antiquity, Settlement, Order, and other private Matters relating to the Heralds.

It is placed within Caſtle Baynard Ward, near Paul's Wharf, in the Pariſh of St. Benet's.

The Uſefulneſs of it.

The Uſefulneſs of it appears, in that it is an Office Conſervatory of Ancient Honour, and of the Memory of Perſons of Nobility, Quality, and Merit, either for their Learning, Eccleſiaſtical Preferments, Exploits in War, Serviceableneſs in the Commonwealth, Wiſdom in Government, Favour with their Princes, or the like; Together with their Pedigrees and Poſterities, in whatſoever County in England they have lived. It is alſo highly uſeful, for the aſcertaining many Doubts relating to Names and Families, and putting a Concluſion to Contentions in Law about Right Heirs, Legitimacy, Primogeniture, &c.

Thoſe admitted to this Office, how to be qualified.

And as the Office is Honourable, and of great Import; ſo none are to be admitted to it, but Perſons learned, and of ingenuous Education, and ſtudious of Heraldry, and able to trick Coats of Arms, and to paint. As may appear by the Suit of Anthony Hall, Anno 1593, to the Lord Treaſurer, who acted then in the Earl Marſhal's Office, by a Special Commiſſion from the Queen; That his Son Anthony Hall might be admitted a Purſuivant at Arms; being a Scholar bred up at Cambridge in Immanuel College, and ſince profeſſing the Law at Bernard's Inn; and by the Lord Anderſon's Gift, Clerk in the Prothonotary's Office in the Common Pleas: And his Inclination apt to gather Gentlemens Coats, as well on Church Windows, Stone Walls, as on Noblemens Tombs; whereby he had collected ſome 30000, or more Coats, of his own tricking and writing; beſides a pretty Skill in counterfeiting Pictures after the Life, or otherwiſe.

K. Edward gave the Earl of Derby's Place to the Heralds.

Sir Gilbert Dethick, Garter, Principal King of Arms under King Edward VI. was inſtrumental in procuring the Houſe, College and Corporation of the Heralds, with their Privileges. For tho' Queen Mary vulgarly, and according to Stow, hath the Praiſe of this Gift; yet indeed, it more truly belonged to that King. For, (as appears in a Volume of the Cotton Library) in the Year 1552, the Earl of Derby's Place was then in the Tenure of Sir Richard Sackvile, Kt. when the ſaid Place, with divers other Meſſuages and Hereditaments, were ſold to King Edward, by an Indenture bearing Date November the 24th, Anno Regni 6. For which the King, in Exchange, made over to the Earl certain Lands, called Leonard's Lands, joining to the Earl's Park, called Knowſley Park, in the County of Lancaſter, and lately belonging to the Monaſtery of Briſcow; of the yearly Value of 20 s. with other Lands, &c. to the yearly Value of 4 l. 10 s. and ---. And a Meſe and a Grange, called Badley Grange, of the Value of 42 s. per Ann. in Cheſhire. All which amounted to the Value of 7 l. 12 s. The Date hereof was January the 24th. This Gift, I ſuppoſe, might be confirmed by Q. Mary, K. Edward's Succeſſor.

No Habitations for the Heralds in the College.

But tho' the Heralds had now a College, or General Office, yet for ſome Time after they had not the Conveniences of Habitations here, to dwell together; but lived at their own private Houſes, where they could provide themſelves; whereby they kept their Viſitation-Books at Home: For ſo Leigh's Words import, in his Accidents of Armory; ſpeaking how far the Heralds were ſometimes to ſeek, when the Gentleman of ancient Blood came to ſee his Pedigree; becauſe they had no ſeveral Houſe where they might plant their Offices, and in that Place to make their Libraries for their Provinces. For as they were all now here, now there; ſo when they died, their Wives ſold for a little Money their Books of Viſitation, which coſt them much Travail.

Accidents of Armory, f. 79. b. printed Anno 1568.

The Antiquity of this Office.

This Office for preſerving of Honour was ancient. For when in the 28th of Henry III. Gerald Fitz Maurice (who was Juſtice of Ireland) died, as it ſeems, at Canterbury; King Henry III. Four or Five Hundred Years ago, (viz. An. 1244) iſſued out his Command to the Keepers of that Archbiſhoprick, Quod emi faciant unum pulchrum Lapidem, ponend. ſuper Corpus Geraldi Fil. Mauric. Juſticiar. Hibern. In quo fieri faciant Scutum ipſius Geraldi, cum Armis ſuis. Teſte Rege apud Roff. 20. Die Novembr. i. e. That they cauſe to be bought a fair Stone, to be laid upon the Body of Gerald Fitz Maurice, Juſtice of Ireland: Whereon to be ſet his Shield with his Arms.

Leigh's Acc. of Armory.

And in the Time of Edward I. Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, Leiceſter and Derby, and Conſtable of England, ordained by Special Reformation, That no Man ſhould wear any Hood on his Shoulder in Time of Mourning, except he were a Gentleman; but only a Tippet of three Nails Breadth. Alſo, That no Parſon, Curate, Churchwarden, or others, ſhould put down any Atchievement, Coat of Arms, or Pinion, or eraſe any Tomb out of Churches or Churchyards. And that no Goldſmith, Copperſmith, Glazier, Painter, or Marbler, ſhould have to do with Arms, without the Conſent of the King of Arms of that Province. And that they ſhould not ſet a Merchant's Mark within a Scutcheon. And that this ſhould be the more diligently look'd to, he ordained, That all the Kings of Arms ſhould keep their Chapters once every Quarter of the Year at leaſt. And that they ſhould make their Viſitation in their Provinces, or their Marſhals for them, every Seventh Year. To conclude; He ordained, That the Herehaughts, [i. e. Heralds] at the Interment of every Gentleman, (where they were called to that Service) ſhould take the Pedigree, with diligent Examination of old Folks then living, and to record the ſame.

The unſettled State of this Office in Times paſt.

In former Times, the Number of the Officers that belonged to this Corporation was not fixed, the Precedency uncertain; and Contentions and Differences ſprang up among them, concerning their Rights and Privileges.

Ulſter a 4th King.

Beſides the Three Kings of Arms, there was a Fourth, who was called Ulſter; firſt created by King Edward VI. chiefly for the Uſe of Ireland. And the firſt that enjoyed it, was Bartholomew Butler, (Anno 6. Edward VI.) York Herald. Then was made alſo Philip Butler, alias Athlone, Purſuivant of Arms there. And upon their Creation, a Warrant was iſſued to Sir Raſe Sadler, Knight, of the King's Wardrobe, to deliver to Bar. Butler, alias Ulſter King at Arms of Ireland, one Coat of Blue and Crimſon Velvet, embroidered with Gold and Silver upon the ſame with the King's Arms: And to Philip Butler, alias Athlone Purſuivant at Arms there, one Coat of Sarſnet of the King's Colours, with the Arms laid on with Gold and Purple.

E Theier. Biblioth. MSS.

This Place was poſſeſſed in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth by one Nicholas Narboon, who was raiſed from being Richmond Herald, to be Ulſter King.

Heralds.

And beſides the Six Heralds, there were formerly Exeter, Leopard, Faulcon, Carliſle, &c.

Purſuivants Ordinary and Extraordinary.

The Purſuivants formerly were of Two Ranks; Ordinary, and Extraordinary. The Ordinary were the Six before mentioned. The Extraordinary were theſe: Faulcon, (afterwards made an Herald) Antelope, Cadran, Guiſnes, Hammes, Berwick, Comfort, Roſeblanch, Callis, Ricebank, Wallingford, Mountorguile, Nottingham, Barnes, Boloign. But theſe Extraordinary Purſuivants in the Beginning of Q. Elizabeth's Reign ceaſed.

Quarrels among the Heralds.

In Queen Elizabeth's Reign, were great Diſſenſions and Animoſities among the Heralds, concerning their Rights, Fees and Precedencies: Inſomuch that they preſented Petitions and Informations one againſt another unto the Lord Treaſurer Burghley, and the Lord Admiral, who executed then the Office of Earl Marſhal. Which occaſioned the ſaid Lords to make an Order, dated Octob. 22. 1597, entitled,

Order for their Placing.

The Order of the Placing of the Kings, Heralds, and Purſuivants at Arms, by the Lord Burghley, Lord High Treaſurer of England, and the Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord High Admiral of England; Exerciſing the Place of Earl Marſhal of England, by Force of Her Majeſties Commiſſion under the Great Seal of England, to Us directed in that behalf.

To this Order were ſubſcribed the Names of William Burghley and C. Howard, confirming the ſame.

But it may not be amiſs to take ſome Cognizance of the Controverſies of theſe Gentlemen.

The Caſe between Garter and Clarencieux.

It was the proper Office and Benefit of Clarencieux King of Arms, to give Arms, and go in Viſitations. But Dethick (who was made Garter in the 29th Year of Q. Elizabeth) claimed the ſame Privileges, as additional to his Office: And that by virtue of Two Commiſſions; one of Henry VII. and another of Henry VIII. to his Predeceſſors, to be joined in Commiſſion with Clarencieux. And accordingly had procured of Q. Elizabeth her Letters Patents under her Great Seal for the Office of Garter, with Words expreſſive of more Power than ever were in any Garter's Patents before; Viz. To Viſit, Correct, and give Arms, abſolutely of himſelf: Whereas Clarencieux and Norroy being Provincial Kings of Arms, could not give Arms without Conſent of the Earl Marſhal: Which was an Abuſe.

But Cook, Clarencieux, in a Paper to the Commiſſioners of the Office of the Earl Marſhal, ſhewed the true Reaſon of thoſe Commiſſions. Namely, That Roger Macado, a Britain born, was Clarencieux 1. Henry VII. [and ſo continued all that Reign:] Who being an old and impotent Man, and not well underſtanding our Language, did agree with Garter that then was, (viz. Sir John Wrythe, or Wriotheſley) to take the Office upon him, and to give Arms, and go in Viſitations. For which Garter paid to Clarencieux 40 Marks per Annum: Which was to be paid out of the ſaid Garter's Fee. And this appeared by the ſaid Garter's Letters Patents. And becauſe Garter would have ſome Authority of himſelf to ſhew; and alſo for that he thought it not for his Credit to be Deputy to Clarencieux; he procured a Bill, ſigned by Henry VII. wherein Garter was joined with Clarencieux.

There was alſo a Second Commiſſion obtained by the ſame Garter of King Henry VIII. to the ſame Import with the former; empowering him to give Arms, and go in Viſitation with Clarencieux that then was; viz. Thomas Benolt, who was for the moſt part employed beyond the Seas, and had no Books to execute his Office. For that at that Time Garter had gotten all the Books of Office into his own Cuſtody, by reaſon of his former Dealings with Macado. So that in truth he was driven of Neceſſity to agree with Garter, in like Order to execute his Office as Macado had done. And thereupon Garter ſhewing to the King the Agreement and Conſent of Clarencieux, obtained of the King the ſaid Commiſſion; Clarencieux being then beyond the Seas. At whoſe Return finding himſelf not well uſed by Garter, and that the Credit of his Office [of Clarencieux] was greatly diminiſhed by the ſaid Garter; would have broken off with him for dealing any further with him. Which Thing Garter would not by any means conſent unto, but ſtood upon the Authority of the King's Bill aſſigned. Benolt then was forced to acquaint the King with ſome of the Abuſes of Garter; and among others, how he had given Arms to a Bondman. Hereupon the King examining the Cauſe of Clarencieux's Grief and Complaint, and finding that Garter had wronged him, deviſed and granted to him a Commiſſion under the Great Seal of England, bearing Date the 21ſt of Henry VIII. Wherein he did inhibit the ſaid Garter, and all others, to deal or meddle either in giving of Arms, or going in Viſitations, in the ſaid Clarencieux's Province. Since which Time, all the Clarencieux's have had their Commiſſions ſucceſſively one after another; and have ever ſince gone in Viſitation, and given Arms; as by the Books of Viſitation, and Grants of Patents, may appear.

Add, That long before thoſe Two Bills ſigned by thoſe Two Kings, Clarencieux did give Arms, and go in Viſitations, without Garter, by virtue of his Office, and without any Commiſſion; as appeared by divers Viſitations and Gifts of Arms. And for theſe Reaſons, he earneſtly petitioned the Lord Burghley and Lord Howard, to obtain of the Queen a Redreſs of Garter's Patent.

Informations againſt Clarencieux, by Garter.

The Library.

Theſe, and the like Matters, gave great Offence to Garter; and, to be even with Cook, Clarencieux, ſpared not to impeach him, in another Addreſs to the ſaid Noblemen: As, Concerning his Birth, being ſprung of a Tanner; His Ignorance of Languages, not being able to ſpeak French: Of his diſſolute Life; being guilty of haunting Taverns, marrying another Man's Wife, Prodigality, and running into Debt: Injuring the Office; in that He and Cheſter had ſpoiled the Library in the Office of Arms of more than Forty or Fifty Books at one Time. That he made Multitude of Gentlemen by himſelf, under the Name of Principal King of Arms; [being but Clarencieux.] That his Deputy ranged over all the Realm, giving, altering, and changing Shields of Arms, and Cognizances of Honour, to all Sorts of Men, and of all Faculties; obtruding Arms to ſome, and exacting Fees exceeding the Queen's Fifteens: And many Pedigrees were unregiſtred. And as his Deputy went about in ſundry Shires of England, ſo he went about in London, into all Companies and Societies, and in every Street; commanding Merchants, Mechanical Men, and Artificers before him, at ſundry Taverns; and gave and allowed Arms to all manner of Perſons, at all Prizes, and for good Chear, contrary to all Honour. And yet waſted all. That he had a Grant of the Queen, worth a Thouſand Pounds; but conſumed it. He was charged alſo for giving the Earl of Deſmond's Arms to one Captain Cheſton.

Clarencieux reſtrained for a Time, upon Garter's Complaint.

Of theſe Matters Garter complained; and by Authority granted of the Queen, reſtrained and reformed them. But Secretary Walſingham took, and detained the Queen's Letters Patents of the ſame; permitting this Man, and others, Garter's Enemies, to proceed in that Abuſe. He petitioned then Her Majeſty, That a Commiſſion might be given to examine this, to the Lord Hunſdon, Lord Chamberlain, the Lord Treaſurer, Lord Howard, Lord Admiral, the Earl of Ormond, Sir Chriſtopher Hatton, Lord Chancellor of England, Baron Buckhurſt, and Sir John Wolley, Chancellor of the Garter.

His Crime about painting Arms.

It was charged alſo upon this Officer, [which after ſo many Years might better methinks have been forgotten] That in the Year 1571, he contrived and ſet out a great Pedigree, painted on Vellom, for the Duke of Norfolk, ſince his firſt Impriſonment in the Tower, for his Deſign of Marrying with Mary Queen of Scots: Which was finiſhed, with his Arms on the right Hand, and the Arms of that Queen on the left, largely painted. He alſo ſet out and marſhalled the Duke's Pedigree in Glaſs, in the Windows of the great Chamber at the Charterhouſe, quartered with the Arms of the Daughter of Edward Duke of Bucks attainted.

Garter a Man of Deſert, but paſſionate.

How much there was of Truth in theſe Things, I cannot determine. For Dethick was a Man of great Pride and Paſſion, (whereby he procured to himſelf many Enemies) otherwiſe a Man of Worth and Learning. His Father, Sir Gilbert Dethick, Garter, had been in the Office of Arms Sixty two Years: And he himſelf had been ſent in Her Majeſties Service of the Garter, with the Right Honourable the Lord Hunſdon, to Lions in France; and with the Earl of Suſſex to the Emperor at Vienna; and with the Lord Buckhurſt, to the French King, Charles.

Endeavours to redreſs Things amiſs in the Office.

And as theſe Publick Employments were for his Honour, ſo it muſt be recorded for his Commendation, That he endeavoured to redreſs many Things amiſs in the Office and Officers, reducible to theſe Articles following.

I. The Contents of their Corporation in all Points, for the Aſſembly, Government, Erudition, &c. in the Office of Arms, to be kept and obſerved.

II. Chapters General and Particular to be had and ſummoned.

III. The Order and Attendance for waiting at the Court in high Feaſts, to be dutifully performed.

IV. The Houſe and College of the Office of Arms to be in good Order, inhabited, and repaired.

V. The General Library in the Office and Records there, to be preſerved, ratified, and augmented.

VI. The Kings, Heralds, and Purſuivants of Arms, to be there at convenient Times attendant, upon Pain.

VII. The Viſitations made by Garter, Clarencieux, and Norroy, to be limited or appointed to the Heralds, or Purſuivants, and no other.

VIII. The Burials, or Funerals, to be orderly and duly ſerved, and Certificates entred.

IX. All Painters, Glaziers, Goldſmiths, &c. for dealing in Arms and Pedigrees, to be inhibited.

X. Arms, Creſts, Pedigrees, Searches, and all Precedents and Acts of Honour and Gentility, and all other Things, with the Conſents of the Three Kings of Arms, in the General Office, to be ſet out and regiſtred.

XI. The Profits and Commodities faithfully collected, and generally to ſuch as deſerve well duly parted.

Propounds the ſetting up a Court, for enrolling the Deſcents of the Wards.

Moreover this Dethick, Anno 1584, being then York Herald, propounded the ſetting up of an Office in the Court of Wards, for the Enrolling of Deſcents and Pedigrees of every one that was Ward, or ſued Livery; for the politick Preſervation of the Remembrance of Parents and Progenitors, and of the Conjunction of Blood and Kindred with good Proportion; to preſerve that Law in Magna Charta, Cap. V. and the Statutes at Marton, Capitul. VI. and VII. wherein the Diſparagements for Marriages are eſpecially forbidden. The Wards did not enjoy the Benefit of Law in that Point. So that ſome Preſervation in Blood in the Courſe of that Court, might go jointly together with the Preſervation of the Inheritances.

His Reaſons for it, uſed to the Maſter of this Court.

The eſtabliſhing of ſuch an Office in the ſaid Court of Wards, as he ſhewed to the Lord Treaſurer Burghley, Maſter of that Court, would firſt tend to the adorning of it, for the Honour and Renown of the Queen, tending to a more perfect Preſervation of the Genealogies and Deſcents of her Wards, and to perpetuate the ſame; and moſt convenient for the Nobility and Gentry of her Realm. And Secondly, it would be a good and direct means to try and keep the Records of the Truth, againſt ſundry Occurrences and Subtilties, contrived in prejudice of the Minors and Heirs in the ſaid Court.

And whereas it might be objected, that ſuch an Office ſeemed to be needleſs, ſince the Heralds in their own Office were diligent to ſearch and regiſter all Pedigrees: To this he anſwered, that the Heralds of Arms had been long time paſt, Meſſengers of Princes, allowed for their Languages, guages, Travel, and Experience: But as for their Dealings in Pedigrees of Nobility, they did but privately collect and obſerve the Marriages and Iſſues of Princes, Nobles, and Gentlemen, for their better Knowledge and Remembrance; whereof they took notice upon Sight, Relation, or ſlender Surmiſes. But this Action was intended to be committed to the Cuſtody of one private, ſecret, and ſworn Officer, a Herald. And the Pedigrees, and Conſanguinities to be regiſtred in this Court, ſhould be grounded upon Matter of Record and Warrant, provided by Offices, Traverſes, and Inqueſts, containing the Names of the Perſons, Times, and Ages. Secondly, The Form and Manner of the Pedigrees in this Court, ſhould contain in the Roundel or Circle of each Deſcent, a certain Notice of the Age, Time, Liveries, and Obijt of each Perſon, convenient only for this Court. Thirdly, This would be very grateful to the Ward in his Minority, for ſo careful a Remembrance of his Pedegree. And it would carry with it a Proof of the Deſerts of the Anceſtors towards their Poſterity. For herein ſome Note ſhould be made of the Tenure of the Lands and Manors, (if it ſeemed good) with this Addition, primus Acquiſitor. Which might affect Children with a grateful and reſpectful ſenſe of thoſe from whom they are ſprung, and from whom they derived their Eſtates and Honours. This was an ingenious Project of Mr. Dethick, and might, had it taken, have redounded conſiderably to his Advantage, who had now been an Attendant Officer of Arms Twenty Years, and complained of the mean Profits thereof to be very ſmall and uncertain; tho' with Patience he at length got Advancement.

Garter gives Rotheram the Lord Grey of Ruthyns Coat.

This Garter, in the Year 1595, fell into new Troubles, being cited by Earl Marſhal-Commiſſioners, for giving George Rotheram, Eſq; the Lord Grey of Ruthyn his Coat of Arms, belonging to Henry, then Earl of Kent. To which by a Letter to Sir John Pickering, Lord Keeper, he anſwered, that the ſaid Rotheram a Year ago had requeſted him to take notice, according to the Cuſtom of his Office, of crtain Records; one out of the Tower, and other Evidences; and by an antient Book, and a Monument or Tomb Stone, with Arms in the Church of Luyton, to ſet down his Pedigree, pretended from Anthony Lord Grey of Ruthyn. Which Pedigree he did exemplify for him, without any further Approbation or Confirmation to the ſame, to be true: but only according to his Proofs ſhewn him, which he, the ſaid Rotheram was to produce or defend by Laws, and not by his Office. And ſo he, the ſaid Garter, reckoned himſelf to ſtand diſcharged.

Sentence againſt Garter in favour of the Earl of Kent.

But the Complaint made by the Earl of Kent to the Court of Earl Marſhal ran againſt both, as well Garter as Rotheram. And the Sentence alſo was againſt both, which was given in favour of the Earl in June, Anno 1597, after long hearing on both Parts at ſundry Times, whereby it was judged, "That the ſaid Dethick Garter, and Rotheram had manifeſtly done wrong to the Complainant, (for ſo are the Words of the Sentence) in making and publiſhing that Pedigree, in a Caſe ſo long ſuſpended without Claim, to make a Shew that the ſaid Rotheram was deſcended Lineally of Katharine, a Daughter of Anthony, Lord Grey of Ruthyn, who was proved before them by divers Means of good Credit to have dyed without Iſſue. And they, the Commiſſioners of the Office of Earl Marſhal, (Judges in this Cauſe) did Revoke and Annul the bearing of the ſaid Arms of the Earl of Kent Quarterly by Rotheram, and judged them to be unlawfully born; and determined that Part of the Pedigree made by Garter to be unlawful, by which the ſaid Rotheram was made the Couſin and Heir general of Edmund Earl of Kent, by Anthony Eldeſt Son of the ſaid Earl; reſerving to themſelves Power to tax the Coſts and Expences of the Complainant againſt the Defendants.

Garter Depoſed.
Wev. Mon.

How Garter got off from this troubleſome Buſineſs I cannot tell, but I find he was Knighted, and after ſome time Depoſed in the firſt Year of King James. For indeed his rough Carriage had procured him many Enemies in this Office. He was Buried, Anno 1612, in St. Paul's near Sir Pain Roet, King of Arms, named Guyon, that lived in the Reign of Edward III.

A Motion of uniting the Offices of Garter and Clarentieux.

The Quarrel in theſe Times between the two Kings, Garter and Clarentieux, in regard of their Rights and Encroachments upon each other, made the Lord Treaſurer Burghley bethink himſelf of joyning them both into one, that the Office might hereafter be enjoyed by one Perſon, Cook Clarentieux being now Dead. But the Eſtabliſhment of the Corporation by Parliament, whereby theſe two Kings were appointed, obſtructed this Deſign, and other Conſiderations made it inconvenient: wherefore ſome other Expedient was propounded for the begetting and continuing of better Agreement between theſe Kings. And particularly, that the Earl Marſhal, in preferring Clarentieux to the room of Garter, would take Order, that his Succeſſor in the Office of Clarentieux, might remit ſome part of his Intereſt in Matters of Profit. Then Garter might be well provided for, and the Corporation no whit altered.

Clarentieux dyes.
His Books.

Robert Cook Clarentieux, Dyed in the 37th Year of Queen Elizabeth, that is about the Year 1593. Then the Lord Burghley, acting as Earl Marſhal, knowing he had many Books of Heraldry (ſome whereof he had taken out of the Office violently) ſent to the Lord Maior and Sheriffs to take an Inventory of his Books; which they did, and returned a Catalogue of them. Then Dethick, Garter, propounded to the ſaid Lord, that they might have them at a reaſonable Price to the Office, being ſorry, as he ſaid, that the Maior and Merchants of London ſhould have the Peruſal of the honourable Secrets of the Office of Arms, and have the Cuſtody thereof; who might not Arreſt their Bodies, and yet kept their Records. By this Catalogue, Cook ſeems to have been a very diligent Man in his Science, conſiſting of a vaſt Collection of Deſcents and Pedigrees of Engliſh Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Strangers, Statutes of the Order of the Garter, antient Patents, Evidences, Certificates, Viſitations of the Counties of Leiceſter, Warwick, Lincoln, the City of London, Surrey, Kent, Hampſhire, Suſſex, Cornwal, Cambridge, Hertford, Eſſex, Suffolk, Norfolk, Juſts, Proceedings to Coronations and Combats, divers Books of Tricks of Arms, Eſcripts, Writings, Muniments with Seals to the ſame; Notes of the Wars of K. Edward III. and many other old Papers and Offices from Henry III. to Henry VI.

Lee Clarentieux.

Richard Lee, Richmond Herald, ſucceeded Cook in the Office of Clareutieux. Againſt him alſo Garter took great Offence, accuſing him to have invaded his Office for the Burial of Biſhops, and the Lord Maior of London. He accuſed him alſo to the Commiſſioners of the Earl Marſhal's Office, for uſing an Hearſe in the Funeral of a Knight Batchelor, viz. Sir Richard Baker. To which he anſwered for himſelf, That Knights Funerals had according to Cuſtom, Hearſes, as well as Barons. Nor did Hearſes make Difference or Diſtinction between thoſe two Degrees; and that the uſing thereof was left to the Diſcretion of the Officers at Arms, as more indifferent. And that the ſaid Hearſe of that Knight wanted Ornaments, wherewith properly the Hearſes of Barons were garniſhed. Garter alſo accuſed the ſaid Lee, that he had allowed and ſet out the Arms and Funerals of one Bucher, a Mercer of London, a Man of ſmall Parentage, with Helmet, Creſt, Coat of Arms, Penon, and a Pall, and himſelf attendant in his rich Coat.

Brokeſmouth York, Herald.

There was another Herald belonging to this College at this Time, and a Man of Note (I do not ſay, for his Vertues.) His Name was Brookes, or Brookeſmouth, York Herald, being preferred thither from being Rougecroſs Purſivant, about the Year 1592. He underſtood neither Latin nor French, to qualify him for his Place, but having been once a Painter, he had an excellent Hand in tricking Coats of Arms, hardly to be equalled by any of the reſt, as appears by a Book ſtill remaining in the Office of his own doing, containing the Arms of the Nobility, if I rightly remember. Which curious Skill of his was, I ſuppoſe, the Reaſon that the Lord Burghley bare a Favour to him, and once gave his Hand for him to be preferred to be Norroy againſt Camden, namely, Anno 1593, when Edmund Knight, Norroy, was very ſick, and Camden was nominated to the Place.

Camden's Antagoniſt.

This Brokeſmouth is beſt known for his preſumptuous Attempt, to confute ſeveral of the Learned Camden's Genealogies of the Nobility in his Britannia. Againſt whom that excellent Man (an unequal Match for him) vindicated himſelf ſo fully; and ſhewed ſo plainly the Ignorance and Malice of his Antagoniſt, (and yet with much Gentleneſs and Modeſty) that he was thenceforth eſteemed a very ignorant Man in Heraldry, and a notorious Calumniator to all Poſterity. Beſides this, he was of a very ſcandalous and evil Life. He once brake open the Office, and took away all the Books belonging to it, and an Iron Cheſt, and took thence the Order and other Muniments. He was once condemned at Newgate for two Felonies, and burnt in the Hand. He was alſo guilty of Whoredom and Uncleanneſs. He was ſuppoſed to be a Procurer of perjured Perſons in the Star-Chamber, detected in the Court of Requeſts; twice degraded; and the Queen's Coat of Arms which he wore was pulled over his Ears. And for his Ignorance of Languages and Learning, and other Miſdemeanors, by the Judgment of the Earl of Leiceſter, and all wiſe Men, thought to be unfit to be an Officer of Arms, or to be permitted to come to her Majeſties Preſence, being a Vagabond, and not worth 3*l.* But after Leiceſter's Death he began to ſhew himſelf again; and afterwards got ſuch Friends and Credit that he dared to oppoſe himſelf againſt Garter; and vexed him both in the Exchequer and Star Chamber, by ſlanderous Acts and Suits commenced againſt him, and a great many vexatious Interrogatories, chiefly taken out of Informations the ſaid Garter had, in Conſcience and Care of the Office given the Lord Treaſurer concerning him. So that he was fain Ann. 1594, to beſeech the ſaid Lord to conſider of his Credit and Service to the Queen for Thirty Years, truſting that he would have reſpect to him for his Office, Place, and Parents; and how Brookeſmouth ſpared not Time, Means, Place or Perſons to diſcredit him. In ſhort, he rendred himſelf uneaſy to all the Society, ſo turbulent was he in the Office, impugning all their honeſt Proceedings in Matters of Funerals, and other Caſes of Office. Inſomuch, that Sir Edward Hoby, Knt. deputed by the Lords in Commiſſion for the Office of Earl Marſhal, writ to them in this manner; "There is one Brokeſmoth, now York, a "wonderful lewd Fellow, untemperate, quarrel-"ſome, and all the Office weary of him. Yet he endeavoured afterwards to obtain that Place of Norroy, with much Aſſurance of his own Qualifications, tho' he miſs'd it.

Brookeſmouth's Qualities.

In the Years 1593, 1594, 1595, 1596, the Office was much neglected by reaſon of the great Quarrels of the Kings and Heralds among themſelves as we have heard in part. The College went into ruin for want of Reparation, the Office was diſcontinued, and the Books of the Office embezzelled. Some of theſe Officers, (however Learned) were haſty and paſſionate, others of them debauched in their Lives, or ignorant in Languages and Heraldry. The Lord Treaſurer Burghley, and Lord Howard, Lord Admiral, were commiſſioned by the Queen to act in the Office of Earl Marſhal of England; being authorized with full Power from time to time to call before them all Officers of Arms, both Kings of Arms, Heralds, and Purſuivants; and to cauſe due Inquiſition to be made of all manner of Arms by them given to any Perſon without good Warrant; or uſurped and taken by any Perſon without the like Warrant; and upon due Examination and Tryal thereof, to revoke and diſannul all ſuch as ſhould be ſo tried, unlawfully aſſigned or uſurped. By vertue of this Commiſſion and Authority in this decayed Eſtate of the Heralds College, they deputed Sir Edward Hoby, and Sir George Carew, Kts, to view the preſent State of the Office, and to make Statutes and Orders for the better Regulation of it for the future: Which they did, laying before them the true Intent of their firſt Charter, and drew up a Book for the Reformation of the Office. And September, 1596, preſented it to the ſaid two Peers, deſiring them to ſubſcribe it, that ſo it might be of force; which whether it was ſo ſubſcribed or no by them I cannot tell. But the Exemplification of this Book would be too large here to inſert.

The Commiſſioners for Earl Marſhal; their Power.

Depute Perſons to view the preſent State of the Office.

The Book bore this Title, "ORDERS to "be obſerved and kept by the Kings, He-"ralds, and Purſuivants of Arms that now are, "or hereafter ſhall be, and eſtabliſhed by us, "the Right Honourable Lord Burghley, Lord "High Treaſurer of England; Charles Lord "Howard of Effingham, Lord High Admiral of "England; and Henry, Baron of Hunſdon, Lord "Chamberlain of her Majeſties Houſhold, Knights "of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, and "deputed by Commiſſion for the Office of Earl "Marſhal of England.

Orders made for the Officers.

The Dedication of theſe Orders (which was made to the Lord Treaſurer, and the Lord Howard of Effingham) giving an Account of the Reaſon and Occaſion of making them, I ſhall inſert, being to this Tenor: 'That whereas it had plea-'ſed their Lordſhips by Vertue of her Majeſties 'Commiſſion to their Lordſhips, granted for the 'Exerciſe of the Earl Marſhals Office of Eng-'land, to Authoriſe, Ordain, and Depute them, 'Sir Edward Hobbye, and Sir George Carewe, Kts. 'for the View of the preſent State of the Office 'of Arms, commonly called Darby Houſe in 'London. Theſe were to ſignify unto their Lord-'ſhips, that according to the Inſtructions and 'Charge given in that Behalf unto them, they 'had oftentimes made their Repair unto the 'ſaid Office; and as far forth as they might, had 'accompliſhed the ſame in all Points.

The Dedication of them.

'And foraſmuch as they found the Howſe it-'ſelf to be fawlen into great Ruine, through want 'of due Reparations, and habitable Uſe, the Of-'fice diſcontinued, and in as great Decay for 'lack of Books, and general Exerciſe therein, 'Garter and Clarentieux, at open Wars for their 'Livings and Profits; and the Heraults and Pur-'ſuyvants (Factions between them) daily Arreſt-'ing, Suing, and Undoing one another: Their 'Opinions therefore were, that there could be no 'ſpeedier Reformation of all their Errors and 'Abuſes, than the re-eſtabliſhment of the gene-'ral Office, according to the true Extent of their 'Charter and Corporation, which appointed one 'Place, one common Seal, and mutual Conſent

‘ for all their Doings; and to be governed by the Earl Marſhal, or Marſhals for the time being, as had been accuſtomed. Out of whoſe Ordinances, Statutes and Decrees heretofore made, they [Sir Edmund Hobby, and Sir George Carew] had alſo gathered a Method, or Form of Government which they held very expedient and neceſſary.

‘ All which, (ſtanding with their Lordſhips good Likings) they humbly preſented to be ratified by their preſent Authorities under their Hands and Seals. So that from henceforth the ſame might not be altered, nor fruſtrated. But to be recorded into the Chancery, until by Parliament it might be made an Act irrevocable, to their Lordſhips perpetual Memory. It was Dated Sept. 28. 1596.

The Exordium of the Book ſhewed ſome Antiquities of this Office, viz.

‘ Firſt, That it appeared unto them, the Commiſſioners, that ſundry antient Ordinances, Statutes, and Decrees had been made and eſtabliſhed (as well by the moſt High and Mighty Prince Thomas of Lancaſter, Duke of Clarence, &c. as by divers other Conſtables and Earl Marſhals of England ſucceeding, until the time of Thomas late Duke of Norfolk) for the good Eſtate, Rule, and Government of the Office and Officers of Arms.

‘ That it was manifeſt alſo by a memorable Chapter, houlden by the Kings, Heraulds, and Purſuivants at Roan in Normandy, tempore HEN. 5. what neceſſary Orders were to be had and obſerved amongſt themſelves, and their Succeſſors for ever.

‘ Further, That in the time of Rich. 3. the Kings, Heraulds, Purſuyvants of Arms, were by ſpecial Charter, under the Great Seal of England, made one Body Politique in Name and Fact, and Collegiate at Colebarbor in the City of London; confirming therein Garter, principal King of Armes of Engliſh Men, and Clarencieulx, and Norroy, provincial Kings, by the Name of King of the South, and King of the North, to be continued in Succeſſion.

‘ Henry VII. and Henry VIII. confirmed and allowed their Letters Patents, and by Signatures licenſed their Authorities.

‘ Edward 6. amplified their Liberties and Privileges, under his Great Seal.

‘ And Q. Mary re-eſtabliſhed their Corporation in Derby Houſe in London, as a College wherein the Kings, Heralds, and Purſuyvants ſhould inhabit, aſſemble, communicate, exerciſe, and keep all their Books, Rolls, and Muniments, for their better Erudition, and good Eſtate of her Majeſties Office of Armes.

‘ All which being for many Years diſcontinued thorough great Diſorders amongſt themſelves, and the Non-reſidence of late Earl Marſhals, whereby many groſs Abſurdities and Abuſes had been ingendred and committed; It was now her Majeſties high Will and Pleaſure, that they the ſaid Commiſſioners ſhould enquire, ſee into and reform all ſuch Errors and Abuſes as they found in the ſaid Office, and Officers of Armes. And therefore had eſtabliſhed ſuch good Orders and Decrees, as might from henceforth by no Remove, Change or Election of any Earl Marſhal, or Marſhals, be revoked, altered or made void, any Ordinance, Statute, Act of Office, Charter, or Decree heretofore made to the contrary hereof notwithſtanding.

And then follows the Orders. The Titles whereof are, I. The Site of the Houſe appropriated to the College of Heralds. II. Records to be ſafely kept. III. Daily Attendance in the Office. IV. Prerogative and Office of Garter. V. Burials, &c. for Garter. VI. Office of Provincial Kings. VII. Burials, &c. for the provincial Kings. VIII. Arms to be given with Conſent of the Earl Marſhal. IX. None to trick or publiſh Armes to Poſteritie, without privity of the Office. X. Chapters to be holden for Learning, Knowledge, and Doubts. XI. Allowance of Purſuivants. XII. Avoiding of Controverſies, the Gall hitherto among them. XIII. How far Authority is yielded to the Kings Chapter. XIV. Power in Viſitations. XV. Oath for Performance, and due keeping of theſe Statutes.

Preferments in this Office obtained gradually.

The common practice of attaining to Preferment in this Office is gradual: Firſt a Purſuivant, then a Herald, before any arrive to the Profit and Honour of a King at Arms. A very proper and reaſonable Method, that the Heralds ſhould be taken from the Purſuivants, and the Kings out of the Number of the Heralds; and that generally by Antiquity of Standing; whereby the Hope of future Advancement might be a Spur to their Diligence in the Study of Arms; and that Kings, by long training up in that Science, might be ſubſtantially Learned, and Exerciſed in the Hiſtory of Honour and Arms, of whom the greateſt Knowledge in ſuch Points was reaſonably look'd for, ſo as to be the Arbitrators of thoſe Matters, and to whom the Reſt were to apply themſelves for Reſolution in any Difficulties or Queſtions thereof.

The Heralds Petition againſt St. George; and why?

And therefore when Mr. St. George (afterward Sir Richard St. George) a Learned Man, and of great acquired Knowledge, particularly in Heraldry, was recommended to the Lords Commiſſioners, and petitioned for the Place of Norroy, the Heralds and Purſuivants petitioned the ſame Lords; ſhewing, ‘ That it was contrary to all Order of the Office, nor Precedent of the like, ſince their firſt Corporation; and a great Wrong and Diſgrace to them, that a Man who had never been employed in her Majeſties Service one Day, ſhould overgo ſo many that had ſpent both their Youth and Wealth in her Service, and overthrown their better Fortunes by the Hopes and Expectations of Preferment here, when it fell.

A Series of the Heralds from 1460. ab initio R. Edw. 4.

And that this was for a long Series of Time the conſtant Practice, may appear to the Eye in a Table drawn out by Lant, Portcullis in the Year 1595, when himſelf ſtood for Advancement to a Heralds Place upon a Vacation, in a Petition to the Lords in Commiſſion. By which Table may be ſeen the Names of all this College, from the Times of K. Edward IV. and their gradual Preferments, unto the latter End of Q. Elizabeth. It is intitled, A Catalogue of all the Officers of Arms, ſhowing how they have riſen by Degrees; ‘ Firſt, to be a Purſuivant Extraordinary, then a Purſuivant in Ordinary; after that an Herald; and Laſtly, a King of Arms. Which Order hath been obſerved, as herein appeareth, ſince K. Edward IV. and long before, unto this Year; confirmed by many Precedents, gathered and collected by Thomas Lant, now Purſuivant of Arms, by the Name of Portcullis, who humbly beſeecheth your Honour to afford him ſuch Favour, as ſo many have obtained for a Heralds Room, that is, or ſhall be next void, who hath left all other his Hopes of Preferment, to ſerve her moſt excellent Majeſty. And he ſhall ever be bound to pray that you may long live in Happineſs of great Honour.

The Heralds honourable for Nobility and Learning.

It may be mentioned for the Honour of the Heralds, that from ſome of them have ſprung very Noble Families; and others have been adorned with Excellent Learning. The Right Noble Family of the Wriotheſleys, Earls of Southampton, was derived from John Wrythe, or Wrythe or Wriotheſly, Herald; his Advancement.

Dugdale's Baronage, Vol. II. p. 383.

Wriotheſley, in the Reign of Edward IV. who was firſt Antelope Purſuivant, or Faulcon, according to Dugdale's Baronage; and after by degrees came to be Garter, and received Knighthood. He had Iſſue Thomas, Garter, and William Wriotheſley, York Herald; whoſe Son, Sir Thomas, was firſt a Clerk of the Signet in the Reign of King Henry VIII. Then made Coroner and Attorney in the Court of Common-Pleas: Soon after Principal Secretary of State: And in the 30th of Henry VIII. was ſent Ambaſſador to the Lady Regent in the Netherlands, to treat of a Marriage between King Henry and Chriſtiana Dutcheſs of Milan, a beautiful Lady then in thoſe Parts. Two Years after he was made Conſtable of the Caſtle of Southampton: And two Years after that, had the like Command for the Caſtle of Portcheſter; And was made one of the Chamberlains of the Exchequer. A Year after that, viz. 35. Hen. VIII. upon the League made by King Henry and the Emperor Charles, he was appointed one of the Commiſſioners for Managing the Treaty conducing thereunto. And the firſt Day of January, the ſame Year, he was advanced to be a Baron, by the Title of Lord Wriotheſley, of Tichfield in the County of Southampton. Which Tichfield was a Monaſtery newly diſſolved, which he had obtained. In the 36th of this King, he was made Lord Chancellor of England. At the End of this Year, he was inſtalled Knight of the Garter. And the King, on his Death-bed, conſtituted him one of his Executors, and appointed him of Council to Edward the Prince, his Son that was to ſucceed him. And Three Days before the ſaid Edward's Coronation, he had the Title and Honour of Earl of Southampton; as appears by Patents bearing Date the 16th of February, in the 1ſt Year of Edward VI. But by reaſon of the great Factions in this Reign, he was diveſted of his Office of Lord Chancellor, and put from the Council, and afterwards confined. And the Honour continued in his Family for Three or Four Generations, till within our Memory.

Sir Pain Roet, Guienne King. Wev. Monum. p. 661.

Yet higher Honour did the Poſterity of another Herald arrive to; viz. Pain Roet, Knight, Guienne King of Arms. Who had Two Daughters: Anne the younger, whom Geofrey Chaucer (our ancient famous Poet) married. By whom he had Sir Thomas Chaucer, Knight. Whoſe Daughter Alice was matched with Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, (by whom ſhe had no Iſſue) and afterward with William De La Pole, Earl of Suffolk; Who had by her John Duke of Suffolk, and others. Roet's other Daughter, Katharine, who was the Elder, married to Sir Otes Swinford, and afterwards to John of Gaunt, the Great Duke of Lancaſter: Of whoſe Iſſue by her came a moſt Royal and Illuſtrious Offspring. Viz. Eight Kings, Four Queens, and Five Princes of England; Six Kings, and Three Queens of Scotland; Two Cardinals, above Twenty Dukes, and almoſt as many Dutcheſſes, of the Kingdom of England; divers Dukes of Scotland, and moſt of all the now Ancient Nobility of both theſe Kingdoms: Many other Potent Princes, and Eminent Nobility of Foreign Parts.

Men of Learning in this Office.

Thoſe that brought Honour to this Office, for their Learning or Writings, were divers in the latter Days of Queen Elizabeth. Of theſe I ſhall mention ſome.

Glover Somerſet.

Robert Glover, Somerſet Herald; A Man, as of a good Wit and great Reading, ſo of infinite Induſtry and Pains. He began the Book, called The Catalogue of Honour, in Latin; but finiſhed by Mills, his Kinſman: Wherein he undertook to clear the Deſcents from Royal Pedigrees of our Kings and Queens. He had Abundance of Rolls and Pedigrees, and ancient Writings of Heraldry, which he had gathered together for his Uſe; beſides vaſt Collections made by his own Hands, and Travail, touching Arms; Books of Viſitation of XXIV Shires; and Miſcellanea, wrote by himſelf. Camden mentions him oft with Honour, and acknowledged he made much Uſe of him in Genealogies. Glover alſo communicated to Dr. David Powell a Copy of the Hiſtory of Cambria, tranſlated by H. Lloyd. He was thus uſeful in promoting the Knowledge of the Ancient Hiſtory of Britain; and would doubtleſs have been much more, had he not been taken away ſo early; being at his Death but Forty five Years old. In the Pariſh-Church of Cripplegate (where he was interred) is a decent Monument ſet up to his Memory, with an Inſcription in Latin.

Francis Thynne.

Francis Thynne, Lancaſter Herald, was well verſed in our Engliſh Hiſtory, and thoroughly ſtudied in Heraldry, before he ſued (Anno 1593) to be admitted into this Office: When he offered himſelf to the Lord Burghley, for his Skill in that Learning, to be examined even in the deepeſt Points of Armoury, which he thought could not be attained to withont Knowledge of Philoſophy and Hiſtory. He ſignified then, that he had drawn out a Series of the Lord Treaſurer's, and compoſed a certain Circulary Pedigree of the Earls and Viſcounts of England. In Behalf of himſelf, thus he wrote to the aforeſaid Lord:

His Application to the L. Treaſurer.

> “How worthy I may be thereof, [the Place of an Herald] it beſeemeth not me to ſpeak: Becauſe to praiſe my ſelf, were Vanity; to diſpraiſe my ſelf, were Folly; and to compare with any of the Office, were odious. Yet this much without Offence I may ſay, That I beſeech your Lordſhip to put me to Tryal, whether I may not in Skill of Learning, even in the deepeſt Points of Armory, (which cannot be known without the Myſteries of Philoſophy, and the Judgment of Hiſtories) deſerve that Place as well as ſome others. Many, I know, have, and do labour for the Offices of Clarencieux and Norroy; of whom I am not to ſpeak, altho' I know who they are; what they can do; how learned they be; how meet for thoſe Places; how able to ſerve their Prince and Country; and of how great Continuance in Heraldry. But yet, if it like your Lordſhip to caſt a favourable Liking to him, who hath wholly tied himſelf to you and to your Houſe; it may be that he which cometh laſt, may be preferred before the firſt.

Writings of Thynne. Ath. Oxon.

Hollingſh Hiſt. p. 1165.

A late Author mentioneth ſeveral other of his Works, ſome printed, and ſome in MS. Of the former ſort are the Annals of Scotland, continued where Hollingſhed left off, viz. to the Year 1586. He was a great Catalogiſt: For beſides the Catalogue of the Lord Treaſurers of England, before mentioned, he drew up a Catalogue of the Engliſh Cardinals, which is printed in Hollingſhed, at the End of Queen Mary. Likewiſe a Catalogue of the Lord Chancellors in MS. A Catalogue alſo (alphabetically diſpoſed) of ſuch as had wrote purpoſely of the Engliſh Hiſtory, whether Engliſhmen, or Foreigners: Which is printed at the End of Hollingſhed's Hiſtory. There be alſo remaining in MS. Thynne's Diſcourſes of Arms; Collections of Antiquities; Sepulchral Inſcriptions, collected by him as well in the Churches of England, as other Parts; Notes on Chaucer's Works, with which he intended to put out that Author with a Comment, tho' he performed it not. But he aſſiſted Speght with his Notes and Directions, and with conſiderable Materials for writing Chaucer's Life.

Sir W. Segar.

Sir William Segar, Garter, wrote a Book entitled, Honour Military and Civil.

Sir Rich. St. George.

Sir Richard St. George, Clarencieux, another Learned Man of this Office. This Gentleman was Conſort with the great Antiquarians of thoſe Times, Sir Robert Cotton, Camden, Spelman, and others; and was one of thoſe that endeavoured to revive the College or Society of the ſtudious of Antiquity, and their learned Meetings, that had been for ſome Time omitted. Of him Weaver makes mention with Honour; and particularly, that he was ready to give him his Aſſiſtance, in his Book of Ancient Funeral Monuments that he was writing.

John Hart, Cheſter Herald, wrote a Book of the Engliſh Orthography.

To theſe may be added, Vincent, Brook, Lant, Sandford, and the elaborate Antiquarian, Sir William Dugdale; and laſtly, Elias Aſhmole, Eſq; Windſor Herald.

Camden Clarencieux.

But inſtead of all, Camden, Clarencieux, ſurnamed The Learned, is an eternal Monument of Honour to this Society. Who, beſides his Modeſty, and Simplicity of Manners that adorned his great Learning, left Two moſt incomparable Books to Poſterity; his Britannia, and his Annals of Queen Elizabeth. To which his Remains may be added, ſet forth after his Death by John Philpot, Somerſet Herald. Who alſo may be reckoned among the Learned of this College; being the Author of an Hiſtory of the County and Families of Kent, called Villare Cantianum.

Gybbon's Heraldo-Memoriale.

Mr. Gybbon, a learned Purſuivant, (lately deceaſed) hath diligently collected out of the Engliſh and Scotch Authors, and other foreign Writers, a large Account of the great and important Services of the Heralds in former Times. Which Collections (communicated by himſelf to me) he entitled Heraldo-Memoriale; which had been worthy to have been here inſerted, had it not been too large. Yet the Sum I ſhall digeſt as briefly as I can; by ſhewing thence, How ancient Heraldry hath been; Their Retaining to Princes; Their Employments in War and Peace, and in Proclaiming and Publiſhing weighty Things: The great Eſteem of them, with their Rewards; and other Accidents that have happened to them.

eralds an-

And firſt, as for their Antiquity; They were in Requeſt among the Ancient Græcians. Homer, in his Second Book, ſpeaks of Nine Heralds in the Græcian Army. And the Romans made great Uſe of them: And as in Meſſages of War, and the like, ſo in Funerals, it was a Cuſtom among them, That the Heralds diſmiſſed the Mourners with the word Ilicet, or Ire licet; i. e. You may withdraw. And this Ceremony is taken notice of by the Deſcriber of the Funeral Solemnity of the Lord Henry de la Tour, Marſhal General of the Field and Armies of LEWIS the XIVth of France.

ings, and Nobles.

They have immediately retained to Kings and Princes; and have gone abroad with them to their Wars, and in their Progreſſes; and have been diſpatched by them to other Princes upon important Meſſages, and eſpecially upon warlike Occaſions. The chiefeſt Nobility alſo have had their Heralds. The Earl of Northumberland ſent an Herald, named Northumberland, to King Richard II. (ultimo Reg.) for a ſafe Conduct, to come and commune with him. The Duke of Bedford had his Herald, named Bedford; whom he ſent after the Crowning of Charles VII. of France, to defy him. The ſame ſent the ſame Herald, Anno 1433, from Laigny, to the Lord Gaucourt, to offer him Battel; which was warily refuſed. The Duke of Glouceſter and Earl of Pembroke had his Herald, named Pembroke; whom he ſent Anno 1436, to defy the Duke of Burgundy. Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, had Suffolk Herald, and Marteon Purſuivant. The Marquis of Dorſet kept Grooby Herald. Arthur Plantagenet, Viſcount Liſle, had Liſle Purſuivant. Baron Haſtings had Haſtings Purſuivant. And Sir John Chandois and Sir John Falſtolph had their Heralds; and ſo had Cardinal Woolſey, according to Stow.

lingſhed.

Wever, p. 683.

The French King contemporary with our King Henry V. had his King at Arms, named Montjoy. The Duke of Burgundy, about that Time, had Toiſon d'Or, his King at Arms. And the Scotch King hath his King of Arms, ſtiled Lion. And they have commonly been about Princes in their Courts: And it is noted by the Hiſtorian, as a ſtrange Piece of Negligence in King Lewis XI. of France, That he had oftentimes neither Officers of Arms, nor Trumpeters in his Court: And therefore (when he had Occaſion for an Herald) ſent a Varlet, or Yeoman in a Coat of Arms, made of a Trumpet Banner, to K. Edward IV.

Stow's Chron.

Employed in War.

They have been chiefly made uſe of in great Wars, between Princes in Hoſtility, for carrying Meſſages, Defiances, &c. Henry King of Caſtile ſends an Herald to the Black Prince, to know why he invaded his Kingdom.

Montjoy, King of Arms, ſent from Roan from the French King, and Thirty five of his Council, to aſſure K. Henry V. he ſhould have Battel given him. And King Henry gave him a great Reward, as well as a gallant Anſwer.

Again, they ſent an Herald to the ſaid King, in a ſcoffing way, to demand what Ranſom he was willing to give. To which he returned a ſtay'd and ſober Anſwer. This was before the Battel of Agincourt, Anno 1403.

After they were broken and defeated, K. Henry perceiving they began to rally, ſent an Herald to them; aſſuring them, That if they perſiſted, he would not only ſlay all the Priſoners already taken, but all ſuch as he ſhould take hereafter.

After the Battel, Montjoy, and Four other Heralds, came to know the Number of the Priſoners, and to deſire Burial of the Dead. And the King granted their Requeſt, and feaſted them.

Meſſages previous to War, and Defiances, were uſed to be done by Heralds.

Denounce War.

Denunciation of War between Princes, was by Heralds.

The French King's Marſhal, Bonciquaut, by an Herald, denounced War againſt Pope Benedict the XIIIth, upon his Refuſal to ſurrender the Popedom.

Howel's Ep. p. 204.

A French Herald at Arms, Anno 1635, ſent from Paris to Flanders, by Sound of Trumpet denounced and proclaimed War againſt the King of Spain, and all his Dominions. This Herald fixed up, and left the Defiance in all the Towns as he paſſed.

Henry V. in the Third of his Reign, ſent Antelope Purſuivant at Arms from Southampton, to the French King; to demand Reſtitution of what he detained wrongfully from him.

Windſor Herald was ſent, Anno 1418, to ſummon Roan.

Edward IV. ſent an Officer at Arms, a Norman born, to defy the French King, Lewis the XIth, Anno 1474.

The Duke of Bedford ſends Bedford his Herald to defy Charles VII. the French King. And Humphry Duke of Glouceſter, by his Herald, defies the Duke of Burgundy.

Heyl. Geogr. p. 104.

The Emperor's Herald defies Francis, the firſt King of France: And giving his Maſter all his Titles, of Caſtile, Leon, Arragon, Naples, &c. in a long Roll, K. Francis commanded his Heralds to receive the Challenge, and repeat France as many times, as the other had Kingdoms and petty Titles.

The Earl of Surrey, 13. Henry VII. ſent Norroy King of Arms to the Captain of Hayton Caſtle, (which was one of the ſtrongeſt Places between Berwick and Edinburgh) to deliver him the ſaid Caſtle; which he refuſed, affirming, He was aſſured of ready Succours.

Whilſt the ſaid Earl lay at Hayton, the King of Scotland ſent to him Marchamont and another Herald, with a Challenge either to fight Army to Army, or Perſon to Perſon, upon certain Conditions. Which Conditions were refuſed upon diſcreet Conſiderations. And the Earl ſent back the Herald well rewarded.

The Duke of Bedford, primo. H. 7. marching againſt the Rebels, headed by the L. Lovel, commanded the Heralds to make Proclamation, that if they would lay down their Arms, they ſhould have Pardon.

Heralds in and after Battels.

Heralds alſo have been employed in and after Battels fought; as in ſome Inſtances before. The Battel of Veruoil, Anno 1424. in the Reign of Henry VI. was ſo uncertain for a while, that no Herald could tell to which Party Fortune would be favourable. Afterwards, by Report of Montjoy, King of Arms for France, and the Engliſh Heralds, there preſent, were ſlain of the French and Scots 9700, and of the Engliſh 2100.

Hollingſhed.

And in Combats;

As in publick Wars, ſo they have been concern'd about private Combats and Challenges. In the Year 1380, was a Combat between Sir John Anneſly and Thomas Katrington; who was accuſed by the ſaid Knight for betraying the Fortreſs of S. Saviour, in the Iſle of Conſtantine in Normandy. The Heralds in this Combat did their Duty, in Calling the Combatants to the Performance thereof.

Hollingſhed.

The Heralds did the ſame likewiſe in the famous Combat intended between the Dukes of of Hereford and Norfolk; which the King took up. The Ceremonial Circumſtances and Proceedings are well worthy the Reading.

In a Combat Anno 1467, between the Baſtard of Burgoine and the L. Scales, the Advice of the Officers of Arms, as well as of the Conſtable and Marſhal, was asked and followed.

In Juſts:

They have likewiſe been employ'd in Juſts and Turnaments.

Employed in Peace.

Nor have they only been uſed in War, but in Peace alſo; as in Proclamations and Cavalcades, in attending Funerals, in giving Coats of Arms, and ſuch like.

Britanniæ.

When Knights have been created, they have been proclaimed by the Voice of Heralds. So Camden ſhews in his learned Book, that Knights made in Scotland are proclaimed by the publick Voice of an Herald.

Paradine.

At Chriſtenings of Princes.

At the Baptiſm of Madame Iſabelle de France, to whom our King Henry VIII. was Godfather, the Infant's Name was proclaimed by the Kings and Heralds of Arms, both of France and England; having their Coats of Arms adorned with the Arms of both Kings.

Heralds attended at the Chriſtning of Queen Elizabeth and King Edward.

The Proclamation of the Truce between King Henry II. of France, and Charles V. Emperor, with his Son Philip King of England, was performed by Four Heralds.

When Pope Clement VII. was received at Marſeilles, Three Heralds at Arms marched juſt after Fifty Swiſſers bravely apparrelled; the Heralds having their Coats of Arms blue, with Flowers de Lys of Gold.

Paradine.

And when Ferdinand, Anno 1527, was to be made King of the Romans, before him went Ten Troops, and an Herald at Arms, whom followed the Maſter of the Ceremonies with the Royal Banner.

But lately, when Frederick Duke of Pruſſia was to be proclaimed King of that Country, the Grand Marſhal of the Court, and the Grand Marſhal of Pruſſia, went at the Head of a great Number of Gentlemen, richly clad and well mounted. Then followed Twelve Heralds at Arms, preceded by Four and twenty Trumpets and two Kettle Drums, and followed by a Squadron of Dragoons. The Cavalcade having ſhewed it ſelf in the principal Streets of the City of Coningsbergh; the Heralds made the Proclamation. A great deal of Difference as to Heralds, between King Ferdinand and King Frederick.

Foxes Martyrol.

The King of the Heralds and his Fellows proclaimed the Kings new Style of DEFENDER of the Faith.

Marſhal Funerals.

They are honourably employed alſo in attending at, and marſhalling Funerals of the Nobility and Gentry, tho' that conſiderable Part of their Office is now a-days unjuſtly invaded by Tradeſmen and Shopkeepers.

Atlas.

Mercator in Loreine, ſhews how the Body of Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, was by Boiſet, Herald of the Golden Fleece (at the Command of Charles V.) tranſported from Nancy to Bruges.

Give, and chang and abate Coats.

And as they give, ſo they ſometimes take away Coats of Arms.

Mackenzy, p. 12.

Non ſolum poteſtas conferendi nova Inſignia ſed poteſtas augendi, mutandi, diminuendi inſignia vetera, eſt penes principem, & ejus Heraldos, i. e. It is in the Power of Princes and their Heralds not only to give new Arms, but to increaſe, change, abate ancient Coats. And ſo Leigh in his Accidence of Armoury.

Fol. 16. 115.

Mackenzy ſaith from Caſſanæus, that Heralds deviſed Godfrey of Boloins Coat.

When any Perſon is forfeited in Parliament in Scotland, Lion and his Brethren, Heralds, come in with their Coats and Formalities; and Lion doth publickly tear the Arms of the Party forfeited. And if he be a Cadet of a Family, he ſaith openly, The tearing of theſe Arms ſhall be without Prejudice to the Nobleman or Chief, whoſe Arms theſe are. After which, he and his Brethren go to the Croſs, and there hang up the Shield reverſed, the Baſe or loweſt Point upward.

Princes Value of their Heralds.

The Eſteem and Value Princes have had for their Heralds, appears from hence; namely, How they have reſented Violences and Affronts uſed towards them. An Inſtance of this happened in the Seventh of Richard II. Henry Spencer, the Warlike Biſhop of Norwich, undertaking Pope Urban's Quarrel againſt Pope Clement, raiſed 2000 Horſes and 15000 Foot, and landed at Calais; and performed great Feats of Arms in Flanders. At length a Flemiſh Army approaching, he ſent an Herald to know what Pope they adher'd to: But the Army being of Weſt Flanders (raiſed by themſelves) and not underſtanding the Law of Arms, ſlew the Herald. At which the Engliſh were ſo enraged, that joining Battel, 9000 Flemings were ſlain, as ſaith Thomas Walſingham.

Hollingſhed.

Honourably preſented.

They have uſually had high Reſpects and honorary Preſents from thoſe Princes to whom they have been ſent, whatever their Meſſages have been.

The King of Scots ſent an Herald to King Henry IV. to deliver up George of Dunbarre, Earl of March, that was fled into England. The Herald had an honeſt, honourable and diſcreet Anſwer; but Negative.

When Montjoy the French King's Herald brought King Henry V. word from his Maſter, that he ſhould have Battel given him, the King gave him a great Reward.

When the Duke of Glouceſter ſent his Herald Pembroke to the Duke of Burgundy, though it were to defy him, he was rewarded with a Cup, and an hundred Guldens.

King Henry VIII. Anno 1513. being at Tours, a King of Arms of Scotland, called Lion, with his Coat of Arms on, was by Garter King of Arms brought to the King's Preſence, and delivered a Letter to him from the Scotch King. And notwithſtanding the King was angry at ſome Words of the Herald, yet he commanded Garter to take him to his Tent, and make him good Cheer. After this, were the Letters read and anſwered, and an hundred Angels given to Lion at his Departure.

Rouge-Croix, a Purſuivant at Arms in the Reign of King Henry VIII. was ſent to the Scotch King invading England. Who detained him, and ſent one Hay, an Herald at Arms, to the Earl of Surrey; who, hearing of his coming, ſent York Herald to accompany him. And the conſequent Diſcourſe is very remarkable; ſhewing what Reſpect in thoſe Days was uſed to Heralds.

To all this may be added ſome memorable Things that have happened to this honourable and uſeful Rank of Men.

They have been ſent upon Meſſages ſo unwelcome to them to whom they came, that they have ſometimes been ſlain, and ſometimes illy treated; as the Flemings ſerved Henry Spencer's Herald, before ſpoken of; whom they ſlew.

Sabellicus, in his Hiſtory of the Venetians, mentioneth an Herald of theirs ſent to Francis Carrera; who cut off his Noſe and Ears.

Hiſtory of King Ferdin. of Arag. Fifth Book.

Laurentius Valentius mentioneth an Herald belonging to the Earl of Urgelles; who carrying a Defiance to the Earl of Cordouna, was ill treated by the ſaid King.

In Kett's Rebellion under King Edward VI. an Herald was ſent to proclaim a Pardon, if they would lay down their Arms. To which was return'd a ſawcy Anſwer by Kett; maintaining himſelf a true Subject, and that he needed no Pardon; being no Offender.

After three Hours Fight, and a ſturdy one, Norroy King at Arms was ſent with a Trumpeter to 4000 or 5000, which were at Parkthorpe Gate, to proclaim Pardon, if they would lay down their Arms. To which one Floteman, a bold Knave, gave as baſe an Anſwer, as was given by Kett before.

After the Earl of Warwick was come with a Reinforcement to the Army, Norroy was ſent to ſummon the Rebels to ſurrender the City. Which was refuſed; and ſome told him, he was a counterfeit Herald, ſent to deceive them. This Norroy was employed often in this Rebellion; who was Gilbert Dethick, afterwards Garter, and Knighted, and was Great Grandfather to H. Dethick, Richmond now or late Herald at Arms. When ſome had told Norroy (as was ſaid before) that he was a Counterfeit, others of Kett's Crew knew him, and averred they had ſeen him in Scotland and Bologne; which ſomewhat pacify'd the reſt, and preſerved him from Outrage.

wood.

The Scotch Rebels ſpoiled the King's Herald of his Coat and the Letters, when he was about to proclaim them Traitors.

h Brook, 24.

Lancaſter ald.

John Cook, Lancaſter Herald, ſometime Servant to John Dudley Duke of Northumberland, (beheaded primo Mariæ) took upon him to beg the Head of his old Maſter, to be buried in the Tower of London: Which was granted with the whole Body, and performed accordingly. In remembrance whereof the ſaid Cook did bear for his Creſt a Bears-Head Silver, crowned Gold, in Alluſion to the ſaid Duke's Badge, which was the Bear and ragged Staff.

Re- p. 148.

A Purſuivant that brought News to Edward III. at Dover, of a Victory gained by Sir John Chandois againſt Charles de Blois, that invaded Britain, was made an Herald by the Name of Windſor.

Aſhmole Hiſt. of the Gart.

A Purſuivant was permitted to wear a King of Arms Coat. John Cook, Lancaſter Herald, ſhould have worn it; but he died before the Solemnity.

Caſper Sturme, the Emperor's Herald, was ſent to conduct Martin Luther from Wittenbergh to Wormes.

Fox's Martyrol.

Clarencieux and Guienne, Kings of Arms, appearing before the Emperor from K. Henry VIII. Anno 1527. the firſt made a Speech, and the ſecond read a Writing, ending in a Defiance. To which the Emperor made an Anſwer. And ſo between the Emperor and the two Kings was a long Diſcourſe, recited at large by my Author, and very much worth the reading. This Clarencieux was Thomas Benolt; whoſe Monument remains at this Day, May 1. 1703. in St. Helen's Church in Biſhopſgate Street.

Hollingſhed.

King Richard III. his Corps, after he was ſlain in Boſworth Field, was ſtark naked, truſſed behind a Purſuivant at Arms, called Blanch Sanglier, (that is, White Bear) and carried to Leiceſter, and there buried.

I will conclude (ſaith the diligent Collector of the foreſaid Hiſtorical Paſſages) with the Paſſage following, 'Anno 1674. in the Month 'of February, at the Counteſs of Devonſhire's famous 'Funeral, I ſerved for Elias Aſhmole, Eſq; Windſor Herald; and lying at Leiceſter, in our way 'to Darby, I had the Curioſity to go to an Inn, 'and ſee the Stone Coffin, wherein once lay the 'Body of the ſaid King Richard: Which at the 'Suppreſſion and Demolition of the Gray Friars 'in the ſaid Town of Leiceſter, was digged up, 'and after turned to an Horſe-trough. At which 'Spectacle I could not but be ſmitten with a melancholy Reflection; and call to mind the laſt 'Part of that known Hexameter, mentioned by 'Wever, with a little Variation to his Purpoſe,

An Order of Bindon, Deputy Earl Marſhal.

In favour of the College, as alſo to preſerve the Honour of the Nobility and Gentry from Perſons of meaner Rank intruding into their Families, and unjuſtly aſſuming their Arms, and for preventing falſe Blazonry, the Queen iſſued out her Command and Pleaſure in June, An. Dom. 1707, confirming the Deputy Earl Marſhal's Order following.

'Whereas the ordering, judging, and determining all Matters concerning Arms, Creſts, Supporters, Cognizances, Pedigrees, Devices and 'Enſigns Armorial; the making and preſcribing 'Rules, Ordinances and Decrees, for the granting, 'controlling and Regulation thereof; and the putting in Execution the Laws and Ordinances 'relating thereunto; are, among other Powers 'and Authorities, with her Majeſty's Approbation, inveſted in me, Henry Earl of Bindon, 'Deputy to his Grace Thomas Duke of Norfolk, 'Earl Marſhal and Hereditary Marſhal of England: And whereas divers Abuſes, Diſorders, 'and Irregularities, have been committed and 'done by Painters, Funeral-Undertakers, Glaziers, Goldſmiths, Engravers, Carvers, Chacers, Stonecutters, Coachmakers, and others, 'in the Premiſſes: For Remedy whereof, for the 'Time coming, theſe are to warn, charge and 'require all and every the ſaid Artificers, and 'others concerned, that they forbear to deſign 'and appoint, to, or for any Perſons, any Arms 'or Enſigns Armorial, by making any Arms, 'Creſts, Supporters, Cognizances, Pedigrees and 'Devices in Coat-Armour, Helm, Banners, Standards, Penons and Hatchments, Tents and Pa-

Sion College. J. S.

NEXT we proceed to ſhew another fair College for Divines and Miniſters, namely, ſuch as are beneficed in the City; founded and ſet apart for their Meetings, and for the Improvement of their Studies; and likewiſe for the more convenient Lodging of ſuch as are diſpos'd to be the nearer to make uſe of an excellent, well repleniſhed Library there.]

A College for the Clergy of London. R. B.

This College is ſeated over againſt London Wall, near Cripplegate, and adjoining to St. Alphage Church, ſituate upon part of the Place where Elſing Spittle and Priory did formerly ſtand. It is a fair Building of ſmoothed Brick, with a large Library of the ſame, well furniſhed with Books; erected for the Benefit of the Clergy of London, and Liberties thereof, and called by the Name of Sion College. There are Alms Houſes for twenty poor People, viz. ten Men, and ten Women.]

Alms Houſes for 20 poor People.

Erected by Mr. John Simſon, but the Gift of Dr. Tho. White. A. M.

This worthy Gift was managed by the pious Care of Mr. John Simſon, Rector of St. Olave's Hart Street in London, one of the Executors of Dr. Thomas White, Vicar of St. Dunſtan's in the Weſt, and one of the Reſidentiary Canons of St. Paul's Church. Which ſaid Dr. White (beſides ſundry Sums of Money, and great yearly Revenues given by him to pious and charitable Uſes in divers Places) gave 3000 l. to purchaſe and build the ſaid College for the Uſe of the Clergy, and Alms Houſes for twenty poor People, as aforeſaid.

He alſo gave to the ſaid College and Alms Houſes 160 l. per Ann. for ever; of which 120 l. per Ann. is for the Maintenance of the Alms People, and 40 l. per Ann. to bear the Charges of the Foundation; and for four Dinners for the Clergy, who are to have four Latin Sermons in the Year, one every Quarter; and upon theſe Days are to dine together in the College.

The Library.

In the ſaid College the ſaid Mr. John Simſon did in his Life-time, at his own proper Coſt and Charges, build the Library, which is a ſpacious Room, being in Length 121 Foot, and 25 Foot broad; and furniſhed it with Wainſcot Stalls, Deſks, Seats, and other neceſſary and uſeful Ornaments, befitting the Place. He likewiſe, at his Coſt and Charges, erected the new Building adjoining to the Library all along the South ſide of the College Court, for Lodgings for the Governors, or others at their Appointment.

Benefactors to it.

To this Library there have been divers bountiful and well diſpoſed Benefactors, who have given large Sums of Money towards the furniſhing of it: There being now a very good Collection of Books of Divinity, and other Parts of Learning.

The Right honourable Sir Paul Bayning, Viſcount Sudbury gave 50 l. The Right honourable Anne his Lady, after his Deceaſe, gave 50 l. for Books.

Sir George Crooks, Knt. one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of his Pleas, gave 100 l.

Rebecca Lady Romney, Widow to Sir William Romney, late Alderman of London, gave 100 l.

Further Account of this College. J. S.

But to give ſome further Account of this College, both of the firſt and more modern State of it. Which I am the better enabled to do by the help of a MS. kept in the College, intitled, The Hiſtory and State of Sion College, London, &c. written by John Williams, D. D. Rector of St. Mildred's Poultry, and Preſident of the ſame College, 1693. late the Right Reverend and truly pious and learned Biſhop of Chicheſter.

The FOUNDATION.

White's Executors.

The Will of Dr. Thomas White, the Founder, bore Date, Anno 1623. He made two Executors, John Simſon, before mentioned, who died 1633. and John Keeling of the Inner Temple. It was ſeveral Years before all Things were adjuſted, and a Place found out and appointed for the Situation of this intended College.

The Purchaſe of the Place.

Anno 1627, the Place on which the College now ſtands was purchaſed. It was a Religious Houſe, called the Priory of Elſyng Spittle, founded by Will. de Elſyng, Mercer, to the Honour of the Virgin Mary at firſt, for one Maſter and four Secular Prieſts. Afterwards he ſettled it on Auguſtin Friars, Anno 1340. Upon the Diſſolution, 31. Hen. VIII. it was granted to John Williams, Eſq; (afterwards Lord Thame) reſerving a Quit Rent to the Crown of 1 l. 17 s. 2 d. per Ann. His only Daughter Margery was married to Henry Norris, who in the Fifth of Q. Elizabeth conveyed it to Sir Rowland Hayward, Alderman of London, for 700*l.* And afterward, Sir John Hayward, Son of Sir Rowland, ſold it to Robert Parkhurſt, except the aboveſaid Quitrent, and 4*l. per Annum* for ever, left by his Father to the Poor of St. Alphage, to be diſtributed in Bread. Parkhurſt, 3. Car. I. ſold it to the Executors of Dr. White. Who, in purſuance of their Truſt conveyed it to the Preſident and Fellows of Sion College.

Incorporated.

In Proſecution of the ſaid Dr. White's Will, a Charter was procured the 3. July, 6. Car. I. under the great Seal of England, for incorporating the Clergy of London: By which all the Rectors, Vicars, Lecturers, and Curates, are conſtituted Fellows of the College. And out of the Incumbents, are Annually to be Elected on Tueſday three Weeks after Eaſter, as Governors, a Preſident, two Deans, and four Aſſiſtants, who are to meet Quarterly, to hear a Sermon Ad Clerum; and afterwards to be entertained at a Dinner in the College Hall at the Charge of the Foundation.

Biſhop of London, Viſitor.

The Biſhop of London is Viſitor. But no Biſhop of London ever viſited till July 16, 1695, when the late Biſhop Henry Lord Biſhop of London viſited.

The Common Seal.

Anno 1632, The Governors and Clergy being ſummoned, agreed upon a Common Seal, which had round it Sigillum Collegij de Sion Londini; and upon it the good Samaritan with this Inſcription, Vade & fac ſimiliter, S. Luc. 10. 37. This for the Foundation.

The ALMS HOUSE,

The Alms-Houſe.

Conſiſts of twenty diſtinct Rooms, for Ten Men within the College, and Ten Women without it. They are to be nominated; Four by the City of Briſtol, where Dr. White was born; Eight by the Merchant Taylors Company; Six by the Pariſh of St. Dunſtans, where he was Miniſter 49 Years; and two by St. Gregories Pariſh, where he had lived about Twenty Years; except any of the Kindred of either of his Wives appeared, who were firſt to be conſidered, not exceeding Four at a time. All which are to give Security at their Admiſſion, that they be no charge to the College nor Pariſh of St. Alphage. The College appoints one to take care of them; ſee to the diſtribution of the Charity, and eject in caſe of Delinquency.

The Poor's Allowances.

Beſides the Benevolence of the Founder, one Mr. Brewer, by his laſt Will, made in the Year 1684, gave them a Farm in Hertfordſhire. They are paid Quarterly by the College. Formerly it amounted to 6*l. per Annum* each; but now by reaſon of the falling of the Rents conſiderably (as one Manor in the Hundreds of Eſſex from 120*l. per Annum* is fallen to 70*l. per Annum*) their Allowances are ſomewhat abated.

The LIBRARY.

Library ded by

This was not appointed by the Founder, but what Mr. Simpſon, one of the Executors did Erect at the Motion of Mr. Wood, Miniſter of St. Michael Crooked Lane; who being by at the building of the Alms Horſe, told Mr. Simpſon, that he might raiſe over that a convenient Library, which Mr. Simpſon hearkned to; and it coſt him above 200*l.* as Mr. Spenſer the firſt Library Keeper reported. And therefore, in the Charter of K. Charles I. it is ſaid that John Simpſon was at great Charge in Erecting the Library, and in Truth might juſtly be eſteemed a Founder, in regard of the Pains and Charge he was at, in recovering, ſettling, and perfecting the Whole.

The Books, and Benefactors.

The Books in the Library were given by ſeveral Benefactors. Some gave Money, and ſome gave Books. The Chief of thoſe that gave Money to purchaſe Books, were in the Year 1629, Sir Paul Bayning, Knt. and Bar. Baron of Horkeſly, and Viſcount Sudbury. The Lady Bayning his Wiſe; Judge Croke; George Walker, B. D. Rector of St. John Evangeliſt, who gave and procured 110*l.* And the Lady Romeney. In the Year 1630. John Grenough, William Gouvel. Anno 1631. Richard Watſon, D. D. of St. Mary Aldermary. Anno 1632. John Harper, Treaſurer of Chriſt's Hoſpital, and Robert Parkhurſt. Anno 1633. Sir Paul Pinder, Sir John Wolſtenholm; Sir Abraham Dawes; Sir John Jacob, Knts. and John Harriſon, Eſq; chief Farmers of his Majeſties General Cuſtoms, gave 100*l.* Anno 1635. Daniel Romeney, Eſq: Son to Sir William Romeney, Knt. Anno 1636. Mrs. Joan Newton, &c. Thoſe that gave Books were Sir Paul Pinder, who gave divers MSS. Henry Fetherſton, Michael Spark, John Day, Stationers; and divers City Miniſters, and other Learned Men, or Citizens, whoſe Names are gratefully preſerved in a large Vellum Book in the College, given by the foreſaid Mr. Simpſon, where the Names of the Benefactors with their ſeveral Gifts are recorded.

This Library was alſo much augmented by the Library of the Cathedral of St. Pauls; which was carried firſt to Camden Houſe, and thence brought to the College, Anno 1647.

The Library and College conſumed, Anno 1666.

But in the Year 1666, the diſmal Fire which conſumed this famous City, burnt alſo this College with the Library, and a third part of the Books; as alſo the Hoſpital for 20 poor People; many convenient Chambers for Students, beſides thoſe that were reſerved for the meeting of the Governors and Fellows, and for the Clerk and Library-keeper to dwell in; the whole Fabrick at a moderate Eſtimate being worth 4000*l.* There were alſo loſt the Rents of ſeveral Chambers within, and certain Tenements without the College, to the Value of 106*l.* 6*s. per Annum.*

Benefactors to the Library after the Fire.

Benefactors ſince the Fire were, in the Year 1667, Sir John Shaw, Sir John Wolſtenholm, Sir Robert Vyner, Sir Edmond Turner, Knights, Aldermen; Edward Backwel, and Francis Millington, Eſquires, chief Farmers of his Majeſties General Cuſtoms gave 300*l.* Griffith Owen, Citizen and Brewer 100*l.* Edward, Lord Biſhop of Norwich. Dr. William Sancroft, Dean of St. Pauls, afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Dr. Robert Pory, Reſidentiary of St. Pauls. Dr. Edward Stillingfleet, Reſidentiary of St. Pauls. Dr. Simon Patrick, Rector of Covent-Garden. Dr. John Lake, Rector of St. Botolph Biſhopſgate. Dr. William Bell, Vicar of St. Sepulchres, and divers other Reverend Divines of the City.

In the Year 1670, Daniel Mills, D. D. Rector of St. Olaves Hartſtreet, Preſident this Year, gave 40*l.* He alſo cauſed to be ſet up 19 compleat Stalls or Desks, and three half Ones, wherein Books are placed for publick Uſes. He wainſcoted the upper End of the Library, and ſet up a fair Repoſitory for Books, wherein now ſtandeth the great Bible of France in many learned Languages, and whereon is placed the large Regiſtry of Benefactors. He alſo by himſelf, and Procurement of others, was very beneficial in the rebuilding of the College and Library.

The Library enlarged.

This Library was alſo enlarged by the Jeſuits Books that were ſeized Anno, 1679. And at the Motion of the Governor, what were not before embezzelled were granted by K. Charles II. to the College; as alſo by the Benefaction of the Lord Barkley, who gave half his Uncle Cooke's Books to this Library, and promiſed the other half at his Death. Many others gave Books, whoſe Names are inſerted into the Catalogue of the Benefactors, and ſet down according to order in every Book they gave. Mr. Brewer's Name muſt not be forgotten, tho' his good Intention ſucceeded not, who left his Books to the Library; but his Executors pretended there were not Aſſets ſufficient to ſatisfy Debts. Mr. Wynn, Citizen and Dyer gave 100*l*. The Intereſt to be laid out Yearly in Books. Mr. Calfe 20*l*. per Annum for the ſame Uſe, payable by the Leatherſellers Company.

Officers of the Library.

The Library is to be ſurveyed twice a Year: And had at firſt a Library Keeper, and an Under Library Keeper, and an Oſtiary. Now one ſerves for all.

Means to augment this Library.

Propoſals have been made for augmenting this Library. Firſt, that every Author be deſired to give a Book of whatſoever he ſhall publiſh. Secondly, that every London Miniſter at his Admiſſion into a Living be deſired to give a Book. Thirdly, That every Governor do the ſame at his Admiſſion, not under 10*s*. Value. Fourthly, That the Bookſellers be deſired to give one Copy of every of the Books they Print.

The Charge of Rebuilding.

This whole College being conſumed by the Fire, the rebuilding of the Alms Houſe, and the Library, coſt above 1300*l*. the Hall, and all the other Buildings coſt above 2000*l*. more, as was computed in the Year 1688. The Wainſcoting of the Hall coſt 140*l*. And as for the Chambers of the Students, which before the Fire were wholly for ſuch, no Women then permitted to inhabit there, and amounted to a conſiderablet Revenue to the College of about 54*l*. per Annum; The Ground was let out to build upon at Ground Rents.

When this was drawn up, the Preſident, Deans, and Aſſiſtants were,

Lilly Butler, D. D. Preſident.
William Thomas, M. A. } Deans.
Mountague Wood, M. A. }
John Waugh, D. D. }
John Turton, M. A. } Aſſiſtants.]
Samuel Baker, M. A. }

CHELSEA COLLEGE.

Chelſea College.
J. S.

BEſides Sion College, there was another College for Divines, called Chelſea College, being ſituate within the Pariſh of that Name, which indeed comes not properly within the Survey of London and Weſtminſter; but yet being within the Proſpect of the latter named City, and being taken notice of in the laſt Edition of Stow's Survey, I ſhall make mention of it in this Place.

It was built on a Piece of Ground called Thame Shot, containing about Six Acres, and founded near the beginning of K. James the Firſt his Reign; endued liberally, (but not ſufficiently) by Dr. Matthew Sutcliff, Dean of Exeter, for a Provoſt and Fellows, who ſhould devote themſelves to the Study of Polemick Divinity, to vindicate the Reformation of Religion from time to time againſt all Popiſh Writers, who were bred up in Colleges abroad, for this very Purpoſe, to aſperſe this excellent Church, and to draw away the Members of it. That ſo we, having Men bred up in theſe Controverſies, as well as they, might ſtand upon equal Ground with them. In this College alſo were to be maintained two Hiſtorians, to record and publiſh all Matters worthy of Remark in this Church and State: A moſt noble and worthy Deſign of the ſaid Sutcliff, who while he lived had earneſtly employed his Pen in the behalf of Religion againſt Parſons the Jeſuit. In his Lifetime he ſettled Four good Farms in Devonſhire on this College to the Value of 300*l*. per Annum, and upon his Death by Will, Dated Nov. 1. 1628. bequeathed unto Dr. Prideaux, and Dr. Clifford, as Feoffees in Truſt, the Benefit of an Extent on a Statute of 4000*l*. acknowledged by Sir Lewis Stenkley.

Founded for the Study of Polemick Divinity.

How endowed by Sutcliff, the Founder.

King James I. a Learned Prince and firm Proteſtant, liked well of this Purpoſe, and encouraged it. And when the Building began, he laid the firſt Stone himſelf; and moreover gave all the Timber requiſite thereto, which was to be fetched from Windſor Foreſt. And what was more done in this Buſineſs, and what further Proviſion was made for the Endowment of it, and how cordially the King moved others in it, may be ſeen by what follows: ]

A. M.

Not far from Weſtminſter, by the River, there is Erected a goodly Building, not yet finiſhed, for Students in Divinity, commonly known by the Name of Chelſea College, whereof I thought fit to make mention, becauſe I find an Act of Parliament, made in the Seventh Year of King James, in the behalf of the ſame College; as alſo a Declaration publiſhed by Authority, in the Year 1616, containing the Reaſons that moved his Majeſty and the State to Erect the ſame; which here followeth:

Act of Parliament for Chelſea College. The Cauſe of the Erection of the College there.

“ Whereas his Majeſty, of his moſt Royal and “ Zealous Care for the Defenſe of true Religion
“ now eſtabliſhed within this Realm of England,
“ and for the refuting of Errors and Hereſies re-
“ pugnant unto the ſame, hath been graciouſly “ pleaſed, by his Letters Patents under the great “ Seal of England, to found a College at Chelſea
“ near London, and therein to place certain learn“ ed Divines, and to Incorporate the ſame by “ the Name of The Provoſt and Fellows of the Col- “ lege of King James in Chelſea, near London, of “ the Foundation of the ſame James King of “ England; and hath of his moſt gracious Bounty
“ and Goodneſs, not only endowed the ſame with “ certain Lands, Privileges, and Immunities;
“ but hath alſo for their further Maintenance and “ Suſtentation, given unto them a Capacity and “ Ability, to receive and take from his Majeſty,
“ or any of his loving Subjects, any Lands, Te“ nements, Hereditaments, Gifts, Benefits, and “ Profits whatſoever, not exceeding in the whole
“ the Yearly Value of Three Thouſand Pounds,
“ as in and by the ſaid Letters Patents doth more
“ at large appear. And whereas, alſo it is ma-
“ nifeſt and evident, that the bringing in of freſh “ Streams of running Water into the City of “ London, is very convenient, neceſſary, and pro“ fitable, as well for the private uſe of ſuch as “ ſhall rent the ſame, as a Help for cleanſing the “ ſaid City in the time of Sickneſs, and preſerving
“ the ſame againſt all ſudden Adventures of Fire:
“ It is therefore Enacted, &c. that it ſhall and “ may be lawful to the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows,
“ their Succeſſors, Deputies, and Aſſigns, at all
“ and every ſuch Place and Places, in the open “ Fields or Marſhes, lying between the Bridge “ called Lock Bridge, in or near the Pariſh of “ Hackney, in the County of Middleſex, and the “ Bridge called Bow Bridge at Stratford Bow in the “ Pariſh of Stepney in the ſaid County, (as by the

The Name of that Corporation.

The Ability thereof to receive Lands.

The Provoſt, &c. may dig a Trench out of the River Lee.

Of what Quantity.

“be returned, and made to open it ſelf into the main River, within ſome ſuch convenient diſtance from the Mouth thereof, as to the ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall (for the Intents and Purpoſes hereafter expreſſed) be thought fit: Upon which Ditch or Trench, or Places near adjoining thereunto, it ſhall and may be lawful to the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Deputies, or Aſſigns, to Erect, or cauſe to be Erected, certain Engines, Water Works, or Water Wheels, as alſo Houſes or Coverings requiſite for the ſame, where by the Aſſent of the ſaid Commiſſioners the ſame ſhall be agreed upon, to be no Lett or Hindrance to the ordinary Paſſage of Barges, Boats, or other ſuch Veſſels upon the ſaid River of Lee, and by and through the ſaid Ditch or Trench, to carry and convey ſo much of the Water of the ſaid main River, as by the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Deputies, or Aſſigns, ſhall be thought requiſite and neceſſary to be uſed for the Working or Motion of the ſaid Engines or Water Wheels, and ſhall alſo by the ſaid Commiſſioners be thought to be no Prejudice or Hindrance to the ordinary Paſſage of Barges, Boats, or other ſuch Veſſels upon the ſame River.

They may Erect Engines, &c.

They may open Springs, &c.

And that it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Deputies and Aſſigns (in all Places apt and convenient, within a convenient Diſtance of the ſaid Engines or Water Works) to dig for the taking and further opening of Springs of freſh Water there found, or to be found on the Weſtſide of the ſaid River next unto the City of London, and the Water of the ſaid Springs to carry and convey by, and through certain little Gutters or Trenches, or Pots or Pipes under the Ground, into one Pit, Pond, or Head, of convenient Largeneſs, to be made by the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Deputies, or Aſſigns, in ſome Places apt for the ſame: And that it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Deputies, and Aſſigns, having by Art and ſlight of Engines and Water Works, or by any other Means or Device raiſed the Water of the ſaid Springs, and ſo much of the Water there running in the ſaid Ditch or Trench as ſhall be thought neceſſary, to ſuch Height, and into ſuch Place, Pond, Head, or Receipt, (as to them ſhall ſeem in that Behalf requiſite) to convey and carry the ſame in cloſe Pipes under the Ground from the ſaid Water Works, and the ſaid other Places of Receipt, unto the City of London, and the Suburbs thereof, for the perpetual Maintenance and Suſtentation of the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, and their Succeſſors, by the Rent to be made of the ſaid Waters conveyed as aforeſaid.

They may convey Pipes underground.

They may dig and open Ground to make Conduit Heads.

And that for the convenience of the ſaid Water, it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Deputies, and Aſſigns, (in all Places convenient between the ſaid Water Works, and the ſaid City of London) to Dig, Cut, and open the Ground, to ſuch Depth and Breadth as ſhall be convenient for the laying in of the ſaid Pipes or Pots, through which the ſaid Water ſhall paſs; and for making little Conduit Heads for Vents unto the ſame, for the better Paſſage of the ſaid Waters; and the ſame Ground ſo opened for the Purpoſe aforeſaid, (after the ſaid Pipes or Pots are laid in and placed) the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Deputies, and Aſſigns, ſhall with Turf, Earth, Gravel, and other Materials, again fill up and cover.

They may have free Paſſage to make, and after to preſerve the Things made.

“And be it, &c. that it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Deputies, and Aſſigns, from time to time, and at all times convenient, with their Men, Horſes, Carts, or other Carriages, to have free Entry and Paſſage, by, over, and through any Ground or Land, in Places, and at Times meet and convenient for the doing and performing of any Thing requiſite, for the making of the ſaid ſeveral Paſſages of Waters, or for the doing of any other Act or Thing concerning the ſame, authorized by this Act, as alſo for the continual Preſervation and Reparation of the ſaid Works, as often as need ſhall require.

What Recompence the Owners of the Ground ſhall have.

And be it, &c. that the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the great Seal of England, for the time being, by Commiſſion under the great Seal of England, at the Requeſt and Charges of the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, their Succeſſors, Subſtitutes and Deputies, or upon the Complaint or Petition of any Perſon or Perſons whom it may concern, ſhall Nominate, Appoint, and Authorize, by Commiſſion or Commiſſions under the great Seal of England, Seven diſcreet and ſufficient Perſons, whereof two ſhall be Juſtices of Peace of the County of Middleſex, and two of the City of London, and three others at the Choice and Appointment of the ſaid Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper, every of the ſaid Perſons having Lands and Tenements, of the clear Yearly Value of 40*l.* at the leaſt; which ſaid Seven Perſons, or any Four, or more of them, ſhall have Power to order and ſet down what Rate or Rates, Sum or Sums of Money ſhall be paid by the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, as well for ſatiſfaction and recompence of Damages, in making the fore-recited Works, or any Thing belonging to the ſame; as alſo for any manner of Damages to be ſuſtained, in the mending or reparation thereof from time to time, or any other Coſts or Charges ſuſtained by reaſon of the ſame, to the Lords, Owners, and Occupiers of the Ground and Soil, or to others intereſted in the ſaid River or Waters, for which Compoſition is to be made by the Intent of this Act, if the Parties cannot of themſelves agree, and in what manner the ſame ſhall be paid.

How they may recover it.

And that for the Recovery of ſuch Money as ſhall be ſo ordered and ſet down by the ſaid Commiſſioners, or any Four or more of them, the Party or Parties to whom the ſame Money ſhall be due and payable, by the true Intent of the ſaid Order, ſhall or may recover the ſame, together with the reaſonable Coſts and Damages for the forbearance thereof, againſt the ſaid Provoſt and Fellows, by Action of Debt, Bill, or Plaint, in any of his Majeſties Courts at Weſtminſter, wherein no Eſſoin or Protection ſhall be allowed.

What Grounds may not be digged.

Provided always, and it is further enacted, &c. that the ſaid Water ſhall not be conveyed thorough the Houſe, Garden, or Orchard of any Perſon or Perſons, or thorough any Part thereof, or thorough any Cornfields, while the Corn is growing or ſtanding in the ſame, without the Conſent firſt had of the Owners and Occupiers of the ſaid Houſes, Gardens, Orchards, and Cornfields. Anno 7. Jac. cap. 9.

A brief Declaration of the Reaſons that moved His MAJESTY and the STATE to Erect a College of Divines, and other Learned Men, at CHELSEA; together with a Copy of His Majeſty's Letters in favouring the ſame: And an Addition of ſome Motives, forcible to excite good Chriſtians Zeal to a voluntary and liberal Contribution.

UNderſtanding by Experience, that want of Information hath much hindred Mens Devotion in Contributing toward the Erection and Dotation of Chelſea College; We have thought it very fit, together with his Majeſty's Letters, ſeconded by my Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to declare the Reaſons that cauſed this Work to be undertaken; and to add ſuch Motives, as we have ſuppoſed may be moſt effectual to give Satiſfaction to his Majeſty's Deſire, and Perfection to this Honourable Deſign.

The Popiſh Faction gave occaſion to this College.

Firſt, It was conſidered, That the Pope's Agents travelled Sea and Land, wrote Books in Favour of their Faction; deviſed Lies and Slanders, to bring Religion and the Profeſſors thereof into Hatred, and not ſparing any ſtanding in their way; by Falſhood and Treachery oppugned Kings and Princes, that could not endure the Pope's Tyrannical Government. And for this End, Men of ready Wits, good Speech, long Experience, and competent Learning, have been maintained in Colleges, furniſhed with Books, holpen with Counſel and Directions, bound with Laws and Oaths, to uphold the Papal Hierarchy and Hereſy; and, which moveth much, encouraged with great Promiſes, and large Rewards.

Whereunto albeit private Men, piouſly affected, have from Time to Time oppoſed themſelves; yet becauſe they wanted Encouragement to undertake ſo great a Labour, Counſel of their Ancients to direct them, Books and Libraries to inſtruct them, Forms of proceeding to keep them in Compaſs, and Rewards to maintain them; thoſe excepted that are due for Eccleſiaſtical Cures; It was further adviſed, That to make a ſufficient Defence for the Truth of Religion, and Honour of the State, and a ſtrong and continual Oppoſition againſt the continued Lies, Slanders, Errors, Hereſies, Sects, Idolatries, and Blaſphemies of our Adverſaries; it was neceſſary to unite our Forces, and to appoint ſpecial Men, that without other Diſtraction might attend the Cauſe of Religion and the State, being furniſhed with Directions, Inſtructions, Counſel, Books, Preſſes, competent Maintenance, and other Neceſſaries.

This then was the Reaſon why this College, by his Majeſty and the State, was firſt deſigned, and a Corporation granted with large Privileges; viz. That a ſelect Number of Divines, and others, ſhould be gathered together into one Body, and united with one Form of Laws, and there maintained. Who being furniſhed with Books, and directed by Men of Experience and Action, might always be ready to maintain our Chriſtian Faith; to anſwer the Adverſaries Calumniations, as well againſt Religion, as the State; to defend the Majeſty of Kings and Princes, againſt the Uſurpation of Popes; the Liberty of Chriſtians, againſt the Yoke of Superſtition: To ſupply the Defect of Teaching, where Appropriations have devoured the Miniſtry; by Teaching and Conference, to convince the obſtinate Papiſt and Atheiſt, and by all lawful Means to maintain Truth, and diſcover Falſhood.

This is the College commended by his Majeſty, and intended by the State; and eaſy to be perfected, if it pleaſe all true Chriſtians to further it with their Help and Favour, according to ſome Proportion of their Means.

His Majeſty's Letters, directed to my Lord of Canterbury, follow in theſe Words:

Right Truſty and Well-beloved Counſellor,
We greet you well.

The King to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

“WHEREAS the Enemies of the Goſpel have ever been forward to write, and publiſh Books for confirming of erroneous Doctrine, and impugning the Truth; and now of late ſeem more careful than before, to ſend daily into our Realms ſuch their Writings, whereby our Loving Subjects, tho' otherwiſe well diſpoſed, might be ſeduced, unleſs ſome Remedy thereof ſhould be provided: We, by the Advice of our Council, have lately granted a Corporation, and given our Allowance for Erecting a College at Chelſea, for Learned Divines to be employed to write, as Occaſion ſhall require, for Maintaining the Religion profeſſed in our Kingdoms, and Confuting the Impugners thereof. Whereupon Dr. Sutcliffe, deſigned Provoſt of the ſaid College, hath now humbly ſignified unto Us, That upon divers Promiſes of Help and Aſſiſtance towards the Erecting and Endowing the ſaid College, he hath at his own Charge begun, and well proceeded in the Building; as doth ſufficiently appear, by a good Part thereof already ſet up in the Place appointed for the ſame. We therefore being willing to favour and further ſo Religious a Work, will and require you to write your Letters to the Biſhops of your Province, ſignifying unto them in our Name, That our Pleaſure is, they deal with the Clergy, and other of their Dioceſe, to give their Charitable Benevolence for the perfecting of this good Work, ſo well begun. And for the better Performance of our Deſire, We have given Order to the ſaid Provoſt, and his Aſſociates, to attend you and others, unto whom it may appertain, and to certify Us from Time to Time of their Proceeding. Thetford, the Fifth of May, 1616.

To write to the Biſhops, to promote this good Work.

Theſe Letters my Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſendeth abroad to the Biſhops of his Province, and ſecondeth them in theſe Terms:

The Archbiſhop's Letter to the Biſhops.

“NOW becauſe it is ſo Pious and Religious a Work, conducing both to God's Glory, and the Saving of many a Soul within this Kingdom; I cannot but wiſh, that all devout and well-affected Perſons ſhould, by your ſelf and the Preachers in your Dioceſe, as well publickly as otherwiſe, be excited to contribute in ſome meaſure to ſo holy an Intendment now well begun. And altho' theſe and the like Motions have been frequent in theſe latter Times, yet let not thoſe whom God hath bleſſed with any Wealth be weary of well doing; that it may not be ſaid, that the idolatrous and ſuperſtitious Papiſts be more forward to advance their Falſhoods, than we are to maintain God's Truth. Whatſoever is collected, I pray your Lordſhip may be carefully brought unto me; partly that it paſs not through any defrauding Hand, and partly that his Majeſty may be acquainted what is done in this Behalf.

Your LORDSHIP's
very Loving Brother,
G. CANTERB.

The like Letters are written to my Lord Chancellor, and my Lord Maior of London.

A pious Work projected by the King and State.

By theſe Letters it may appear, That this College is not an idle Project of any private Man, but a pious Work projected by the King and State: And that all that profeſs Religion, and deſire the Continuance and Advancement thereof, yea, all that honour his Majeſty, and wiſh the Proſperity of the State, and deſire the Increaſe of Learning, have Intereſt therein, and I hope ſhall receive Contentment and good Satiſfaction by the ſame.

Earneſtly recommended.

Being then a Work of Piety, for the Maintenance of true Religion; who can be accounted truly pious and religious, and yet yield no Help to advance it? Being a Project to maintain the Ho-

Honour of the State; what good Subject will not contribute to ſet forward this Project? But to touch only the Point of God's Honour; let us remember the Words of the wiſe Man, Prov. iii. Honour the Lord with thy Subſtance. Let us alſo conſider what the Lord himſelf ſaith, 1 Sam. ii. They that honour me, I will honour; and they that deſpiſe me, ſhall be deſpiſed. Now who can ſay he honoureth God, that ſuffereth him by Idolatry, Superſtition, and Blaſphemy to be diſhonoured, and will give nothing to ſuppreſs Baal's Prieſts; and is content that the Pope be worſhipped like the Idol Bel? Can God's Honour ſtand with the Superſtition, Hereſy, Idolatry, and Blaſphemy of Papiſts, Prophaneneſs of Atheiſts, Fanatical Doctrine of Schiſmaticks and idle Noveliſts?

It is not ſufficient for true Chriſtians to profeſs true Religion, but they muſt with Zeal maintain it; and with Heart abhor, and with Hand ſuppreſs Idolatry and Superſtition. Who will riſe up with me againſt the Wicked? ſaith the Prophet, Pſal. xciv. And Pſal. cxxxix. he ſaith, He hated thoſe that hated the Lord, with an unfeigned Hatred. The Law, Deut. xiii. is direct againſt ſuch as entice us to ſerve other Gods; our Eye may not pity them, nor may we ſhew Mercy unto them, no altho' they be our Brothers, or our Wives that lye in our Boſom.

An odious Thing alſo it is, either to ſuffer Truth to be ſuppreſſed, or Lies to be received. St. Auguſtin, in Epiſt. ad Caſulanum, ſaith, It is a Fault to hide Truth, as well as to tell Lies: Uterque reus eſt, & qui Veritatem occultat, & qui Mendacium dicit. Chryſoſtom, Hom. 25. in Math. doth charge him to be a Traytor unto Truth, that dare not boldly utter it, or defend it: Non ille ſolum eſt Proditor Veritatis, qui Veritatem tranſgrediens, pro Veritate Mendacium loquitur; ſed etiam qui non liberè Veritatem pronuntiat quam pronuntiare tenetur, aut non liberè Veritatem defendit, quum liberè defendere convenit.

Some ſuppoſe that Chriſtianity and Popery may ſtand together, and themſelves as Neuters ſtand between both, or, as Mediators, would reconcile both. But can Chriſt be reconciled to Antichriſt? There is no Concord betwixt Chriſt and Belial, ſaith the Apoſtle; 2 Cor. vi. Elias told us, there is no halting between Two Religons: No Man that honoureth any Creature, can ſay he truly honoureth God; for God giveth not his Honour to Creatures. Aſa, 1 King. xv. was a good King; yet it is imputed to him, that he took not down the high Places. The Biſhop of the Church of Pergamos, Apocal. ii. is reproved for ſuffering them that taught the Doctrine of Balaam; and the Biſhop of Thyatira, for permitting Jezabel to teach and deceive the People: And ſhall the Church of England any longer ſuffer the Romiſh Balaamites, and the falſe Prieſts of Baal, maintained by the Romiſh Jezabel and her Conſorts, to ſeduce God's People? The falſe Prieſts of Bel uſed all Arts and cunning Practices to deceive, and now will not ſuffer any Religion but that of their God Bel, the Pope: And ſhall not true Chriſtians uſe equal Diligence to maintain Truth, and ſuppreſs Popery, and all other idolatrous and falſe Religion? Ingemui fateor (ſaith Hierom) minus nobis ineſſe Voluntatis ad propugnandam Veritatem, quam ineſt illis Cupiditatis ad inculcandum Mendacium: I ſighed (ſaith he) ſeeing leſs Deſire in us to defend Truth, than in our Adverſaries to maintain Lies.

This College then being erected for Maintenance of Truth, and God's true Service, and a reſolute Oppoſition againſt Errors and falſe Worſhip of God; it cannot but pleaſe God, and content godly Men. The ſame will alſo be a Means to increaſe Learning, and to ſupply the Defects of Places haunted with the Spirits of Antichriſt, the Jeſuits and Maſs-Prieſts; and therefore cannot chuſe but be well approved of all, that either deſire a Learned Miniſtry, or love Learning. Finally; Seeing the Church hath received no greater Diſhonour by any, than by unſufficient and unlearned Churchmen, I hope this may be a Means to recover ſome Part of their loſt Honour.

Wherefore, whether we regard the Service of God, or the Honour we owe to our King, or the Love we bear to our Country and the State; let us not ſhew our ſelves ſparing, or backward, in yielding our Aid to ſet forward a Work ſo religious and profitable for the Church, ſo honourable for the State; ſo neceſſary, in Regard of the Malice of our Adverſaries, and the Defects and Diſcouragement of our own Forces. Other Collections have been either for private Perſons, or Strangers, or Places remote, or Matters concerning ſome particular Occaſions. This concerneth a general Good, and toucheth every Man both in Conſcience and Honour. Heretofore we have endeavoured to maintain Religion, and favour others abroad; let us not therefore neglect our ſelves, and our own Honour, Profit, and neceſſary Service at Home. Neither let any Man think it ſtrange, that a Work of ſuch Greatneſs ſhould be advanced by this weak Means, or that a Project ſo neceſſary ſhould proceed ſo ſlowly. Almighty God, albeit all-ſufficient, yet would have his own Tabernacle built by the voluntary Offerings of his People. Speak, ſaith God to Moſes, Exod. xxv. to the Children of Iſrael, that they receive an Offering for me, of every Man whoſe Heart giveth it freely. And Exod. xxxvi. it followeth; And they brought ſtill unto Moſes free Gifts every Morning; and they ceaſed not, until they were ſtayed from offering. King Solomon likewiſe was greatly holpen in the Building of the Temple, by the Contribution of his Subjects, as appeareth by the Words of Scriptures, 1 King. ix. 19. Further, by voluntary Offerings and Contributions, the Temple was repaired by Joaſh, 2 King. xii. And by Joſiah, 2 Chron. xxxiv.

And this hath been the Uſe and Practice of Ancient Times, in Building and Endowing moſt famous Churches, Colleges, Schools, and other Monuments of Religion and Learning, both in our own and other Countries. Our Adverſaries by this Courſe have had Means to build many Monaſteries and Colleges, and Schools for Jeſuits and Friars; as it were Propugnacles of Superſtition, Hereſy, Idolatry, and Antichriſt's Tyranny; to uphold and make good their own Corruptions in Religion, and Uſurpations upon the Magiſtrate's Government, and every Chriſtian Man's Liberty. And this have they done not only in Europe, but alſo in the Indies; and not one in every Kingdom, but in the ſame State divers, and almoſt in every great City one. And ſhall not this flouriſhing Kingdom build and endow One College, for the Maintenance of God's true Service, and the Honour of the whole State? It were a Diſhonour to our Nation, and the whole Church and State, to think contrary.

Colleges and Schools for Jeſuits.

Propugnacles for Superſtition, &c.

The Work, we confeſs, hath hitherto proceeded ſlowly: And no marvel, seeing great Works are not eaſily atchieved. Noah's Ark, God's Tabernacle and Temple, and famous Schools and Colleges, albeit founded by Kings and great Men, were long in building: And do we wonder that this College is not yet finiſhed? Further; it pleaſed God to deprive us of Prince Henry, our principal Hope, and the chief Author of this Deſign. Laſtly, Who knoweth whether God hath appointed theſe weak Means, to ſet forward a great Work; that his Power in our Weakneſs might have the whole Glory?

Prince Henry, the chief Author.

Let us therefore, good Countrymen and Chriſtians, hearken willingly to his Majeſty's Motion, and readily follow his Example. Let it appear by our Bounty, how zealous we are to maintain his everlaſting Truth, and root out Error and Idolatry. Let us, by Effects, declare how ſtudious we are to do good Works, and to advance our Country's Honour. They that have much, may give of their Abundance; the reſt according to the Meaſure of their Means. God as well accepteth the Widow's Mite, and poor Man's good Will, as the rich Man's Treaſure.

If we honour God with our Subſtance, he will honour us, and increaſe our Subſtance. If we build a Houſe for the Maintenance of his Truth, that it may continue to our Poſterity, God will uphold our Houſes, reſtore to us, and double it to our Poſterity. Abraham, by offering his Son, was made a Father of many Sons, yea, of Nations. And Solomon, that ſhewed his Royal Magnificence in building God a Temple, in Honour and Riches paſſed all other Kings. How then can we excuſe our ſelves, if we deny God a ſmall Offering, that daily offereth to us many Graces, and giveth us all the good Things we poſſeſs? Our Souls and Bodies are a Sacrifice due to him; and therefore no Chriſtian may deny to him an Offering out of his worldly Goods, if God's Service require it.

As for thoſe that draw back in this Service, and refuſe to concur in promoting God's Honour, let them mark the Words of our Saviour, Matth. xii. He that is not with me, is againſt me. And the Curſe of the Angel upon the People of Meroz, Judg. v. Curſe ye Meroz, ſaith the Angel; for they came not up to help the Lord.

But we hope we ſhall not need many Words to move them that already are ſo well perſwaded, nor to perſwade Men that in Religion and Devotion are ſo forward. It is the Duty of good Chriſtians to advance God's Honour, and repreſs Superſtition, Hereſy, Idolatry, Blaſphemy. It is the Office of good Subjects to defend the Honour of the State, againſt the Sycophancies of Engliſh Fugitives, and the ſecret Practices of foreign Enemies, their Adherents. The Adverſaries uſing all their Skill, and joining their Forces againſt Religion and the State; it behoveth us likewiſe to unite our Forces, and to join in Conſultation how to reſiſt them. This common Buſineſs requireth common Help: The Practices of the Adverſaries provoke us to uſe Speed; the Quality of the Work being for Defence of Religion and the State, will move any, whoſe Heart is not hardened, chearfully to give. Whoſoever ſhall willingly give, ſhall receive of God a full Reward in this Life, and when they dye, their Works ſhall follow them; and then whatſoever they have given to God on Earth, they ſhall aſſuredly find in Heaven.

This College, why at Chelſea?

Wherefore recommending the College of Chelſea to every Religious Chriſtian's devout Thoughts, we ceaſe further to preſs them. Only for Satiſfaction of thoſe that deſire to know why this College is erected at Chelſea, and not in one of the Univerſities, this we thought fit to add; That this Place was thought moſt fit to receive Directions from our Superiors; to conſult with Men of beſt Experience; to obtain Intelligence from foreign Parts; to print Books, and to diſperſe them; and laſtly, to obtain the Favour of the State and City. Further hereby; As all Emulation may be avoided, ſo the Help of both Univerſities may as well be had by Intercourſe of our Agents, as if the College ſtood in either of the Univerſities.

Thus all Things now ſtand. God bleſs the Proceeding of this Work, and give Honour to his own Name, and a happy Iſſue to this holy Deſign. Amen.

Only a ſmall Part built.
J. S.

But after all this Endeavour and Pains to bring this good Work to ſome Perfection, there was only one Range of Building erected, and that ſcarce finiſhed, which coſt 3000 l. all begun and done chiefly by the ſaid Dr. Sutcliff. But this was ſcarce an Eighth Part of the whole intended Edifice; that is, a double Quadrangle, beſides Wings on each Side. But however, Provoſts and Fellows were appointed from Time to Time. The firſt Provoſt and Set of Fellows, nominated by the King himſelf, were theſe:

Full. Church Hiſt. Lib. X. p. 52.

Names of the Provoſt and Fellows.

Matthew Sutcliff, Dean of Exeter, Provoſt.
John Overal, Dean of St. Paul's.
Thomas Morton, Dean of Wincheſter.
Richard Field, Dean of Glouceſter.
Robert Abbot.
John Spenſer.
Miles Smith.
William Covitt, [perhaps for Covel].
John Howſon.
John Layfield.
Ben. Charrier. [This Man turned Papiſt afterwards.]
Martin Fotherby.
John Boys.
Richard Bret.
Peter Lilie.
Francis Burley.
Doctors of Divinity.

William Hellier, Archdeacon of Barnſtable.

John White, Fellow of Mancheſter-College.

William Camden, Clarencieux, } Hiſtorians.
John Heywood, Doctor of Law, [perhaps Heyward]. }

All great, learned Men, and of the beſt Figure in thoſe Times. And as theſe were preferred to Biſhopricks, (as many of them were) or died; K. James, by Letters Patents, dated November 14. 1622, ſubſtituted others in their Rooms: Among whom was the remarkable Archbiſhop of Spalato.

A Contribution towards it among the Clergy.

To advance this Work, the King, 1616, ſent his Letter to Abbot, Archbiſhop of Canterbury (as was mentioned before) to ſtir up all the Clergy in his Province to a liberal Contribution. He accordingly wrote his Letters to the Biſhops to deal with their reſpective Clergy and others of Ability, to give their charitable Benevolence for the perfecting ſo pious a Deſign. But the Collections came in but ſlowly and ſparingly, ſo that finally the Building ſtopt and went not forward, and ſo by little and little fell to Decay and Ruin. And at laſt there was a Decree in Chancery, made by Coventrie, Lord Keeper, that three of thoſe four Farms formerly given to the College, ſhould return again to the Poſſeſſion of the Heir general of Dr. Sutcliffe; and this by the Conſent of Dr. Featly the third Provoſt of the College, and Dr. Prideaux ſurviving Truſtee. Suits were alſo commenced about the Title of the very Ground it ſtood on, between William Lord Mounſon, who Married the Widow of the Earl of Nottingham, that granted the Leaſe of the Land, and the fourth Provoſt. This Provoſt was Dr. Samuel Wilkinſon, living about the Year 1654 or 1655, when Dr. Fuller wrote his Church Hiſtory, to whom the ſaid Provoſt imparted the Records of the ſaid College.

The Building ſtopt.

Suits commenced about the College.

But though this College, ſet apart for Learning, came to this unhappy Diſappointment, yet now in our Times, after it had laid long neglected, our Kings have caſt a favourable Eye upon on it, and founded it anew, though not for the ſame, yet for another good Purpoſe, as ſhall be ſhewn in its Place, rearing there a far nobler Structure.

DOCTORS COMMONS.

The College of the Civilians, called Doctors Commons.

J. S.

TO the Divines of the City I ſubjoin the Civilians; who, as the former addict themſelves to the Study of the Law of God, ſo the latter ſtudy the Laws of Nature and Nations; and therefore have deſervedly a large comely Structure appointed them in Baynard-Caſtle-Ward, in the Pariſh of St. Bennet Pauls Wharf, almoſt over againſt the College of Heralds, but ſomewhat higher; where they live together, ſtudy the Civil Law, practiſe, and decide Cauſes within their own Walls, in the Common Hall: for the doing Right to ſuch as have Controverſies about Eccleſiaſtical or Civil Matters. This College is commonly called Doctors Commons, becauſe the Doctors of the Civil Law live here in the manner of a College, Commoning together. And all Perſons that have Buſineſs relating to the Civil or Eccleſiaſtical Laws, or have Occaſion to conſult with Learned Men in that Faculty, may repair hither, where their ſeveral Chambers, Apartments, and Offices be.

A Library here.

And where alſo is a fair ſpacious Room for a Library, repleniſhed with a great Number of Books of all Sorts, but eſpecially of Hiſtory, and of that Faculty, given by divers of this College: And among the reſt, the whole Library of Sir John Gibſon, Knight, ſometime Chancellor to Archbiſhop Grindal, and his Two Succeſſors of York, and Judge of the Prerogative Office; Anceſtor to James Gibſon, Eſq; the late worthy Town-Clerk, who beſtowed it. And, as the Learned Civilian, Dr. Harwood, hath told me, that Library is, and will be in a continual growing Condition; every Archbiſhop and Biſhop, at their Confirmations, preſenting 20 l. or more, to the ſaid Society, for the ſaid Purpoſe, to buy Books for that Library. The laſt Archbiſhop of Canterbury gave 50 l. for that Uſe.

I ſhall firſt ſet down the Original Foundation of this Place. Next, Specify the Cauſes belonging to the Cognizance of theſe Civilians. Then, Shew the ſeveral Courts that are kept here, or belong to it: And who the Practiſers in them be. And laſtly, The Terms and Times when theſe Courts are kept.

I. Dr. Henry Harvey, Doctor of the Civil and Canon Law, and Maſter of Trinity-Hall in Cambridge, Prebendary of Ely, and Dean of the Arches; a Reverend, Learned, and good Man; purchaſed and provided this Houſe for the Civilians and Canoniſts to dwell in; being then an old Stone Building belonging to Paul's Church, but let out. They beforetime were lodged in Pater-noſter Row, in a meaner and leſs Houſe; afterwards, and ſtill a Tavern, known by the Name of the Queen's Head: Which had ſometime been an Houſe for a Reſidentiary of St. Paul's.

Courts here.

Here are the Courts kept, for the Practice of Civil or Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes. Several Offices are alſo here kept; as the Regiſtrary of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Regiſtrary of the Biſhop of London.

II. The Cauſes, whereof the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Law take Cognizance, are theſe that follow; as they are enumerated in the Preſent State of England: Blaſphemy, Apoſtacy from Chriſtianity, Hereſy, Schiſm; Ordinations, Inſtitutions of Clerks to Benefices, Celebration of Divine Service, Matrimony, Divorces; Baſtardy, Tythes, Oblations, Obventions, Mortuaries, Dilapidations, Reparation of Churches, Probate of Wills, Adminiſtrations; Simony, Inceſts, Fornications, Adulteries, Sollicitation of Chaſtity; Penſions, Procurations, Commutation of Penance, Right of Pews, and other ſuch like, reducible to theſe Matters.

The Courts.

III. The Courts belonging to the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Law, are divers.

The Arches.

Firſt, The Court of Arches. Which is the higheſt Court belonging to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. It was a Court formerly kept in Bow-Church, in Cheapſide: And the Church and Tower thereof being arched, the Court was from hence called The Arches, and ſo ſtill is called. Hither are all Appeals directed in Eccleſiaſtical Matters within the Province of Canterbury. To this Court belongs a Judge, who is ſtiled The Dean of the Arches; ſo called, Becauſe he hath a Juriſdiction over a Deanry in London, conſiſting of Thirteen Pariſhes, exempt from the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of London. This Court hath (beſides this Judge) a Regiſter, or Examiner, an Actuary, a Beadle or Crier, and an Apparitor; beſides Advocates, and Procurators, or Proctors.

Advocates and Proctors in the Arches.

Cotton Libr. Cleopatra F 2.

In the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, Whitgift being Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Dr. Coſins Dean of the Arches, a Paper was drawn up (as it ſeems) by Order; Wherein it was written, That there ſhould be, by Uſage and Cuſtom Time out of Mind, but Twelve Doctors of Law admitted, which were called Advocates, to plead: And Ten Proctors, to be as Attorneys. But now [that is, in thoſe Times of Queen Elizabeth] they were trebled. Theſe, after they be once admitted by Warrant and Commiſſion, directed from the Archbiſhop, and by the Dean of the Arches, may then exerciſe as Advocates and Proctors there, and in any other Court.

The Audience.

Secondly, The Court of Audience. This was a Court likewiſe of the Archbiſhop's: Which he uſed to hold in his own Houſe; where he received Cauſes, Complaints and Appeals; and had Learned Civilians living with him, that were Auditors of the ſaid Cauſes, before the Archbiſhop gave Sentence. This Court was kept in later Times at St. Paul's. The Judge belonging to this Court was ſtiled, Cauſarum, Negotiorumq; Cantuarien. Auditor Officialis. It had alſo other Officers, as the other Courts.

Complaints of this Court.

There were anciently Complaints made of this Court; once in the Reign of King Henry VIII. as of the Troubles and Inconveniencies it cauſed both to Clergy and Laity; And that Men were forced up to London oftentimes from the remoteſt Parts, for a ſlanderous Word, or a Farthing Candle. And therefore there was a Convocation that took notice of this Court, and made Complaint of it to that King; and urged, That the Archbiſhop's Court of the Arches, kept at London, beſides his other Courts kept within his own Dioceſe, was ſufficient; being authorized to hear and determine all Cauſes and Complaints appertaining to a Metropolitan. It was alſo complained of, in reſpect of the Place where it was kept; namely, in London, within the Church and Juriſdiction of another Biſhop: As tho' the Archbiſhop minded to call other Biſhops obedientially out of their Juriſdictions. But this Stir ſeemed partly to be moved out of an ill Will in the Popiſh Clergy towards Cranmer, who now was Archbiſhop. They ſuggeſted alſo, That the Archbiſhop kept this Court, as he was Legate of the See of Rome: Inaſmuch as no Archbiſhop within Chriſtendom, ever had any Authority to keep any ſuch Court, but only Legates of the See of Rome. And that therefore if the King thought fit to continue the Uſe of it, it would be adviſable he ſhould give it to ſomebody elſe, by Special Commiſſion from himſelf, and at his Pleaſure. Whereupon the Archbiſhop was fain to enter his Proteſt, That he kept not his Audience Court, by virtue of his Title of Legatus natus; and pleaded, That the Parliament had confirmed the former Privileges of the Archbiſhops of Canterbury, whereof this Court was one. And ſo this Court continued long after: But ſince the Civil Wars under King Charles the Firſt, it hath been diſuſed.

Prerogative Court.

Thirdly, The next Court for Civil Cauſes belonging to the Archbiſhop, is the Prerogative Court: Wherein Wills and Teſtaments are proved, and all Adminiſtrations taken. Which belongs to the Archbiſhop by his Prerogative; that is, by a Special Preeminence, that this See hath in certain Cauſes above ordinary Biſhops within his Province: This takes place, where the Deceaſed hath Goods to the Value of Five Pounds out of the Dioceſe; and being of the Dioceſe of London, to the Value of Ten Pounds. If any Contention grow touching any ſuch Wills or Adminiſtrations, the Cauſes are debated and decided in this Court.

Officers of this Court.

To it belongs a Judge; who is ſtiled Judex Curiæ Prerogativæ Cantuarienſis: And a Regiſter; who hath convenient Rooms in his Office, for the diſpoſing and laying up ſafe all Original Wills and Teſtaments; and whither any may have Recourſe, that have Occaſion to ſearch ſuch Wills: And for a Shilling may read any one of them over; and for other moderate Prices, at ſo much a Sheet, may have the whole, or ſome Part of any of them tranſcribed and copied for his Uſe. This Regiſter alſo hath his Deputy, beſides ſeveral Clerks.

This Prerogative Office is now kept in the Dean of St. Paul's his Court.

The Faculty Court.

To theſe add, Fourthly, The Court of Faculties and Diſpenſations: Whereby a Privilege, or Special Power is granted to a Perſon by Favour and Indulgence, to do that which by Law otherwiſe he could not: As, To eat Fleſh upon Days prohibited; To marry, without Banns firſt asked in the Church Three ſeveral Sundays, or Holy-days; The Son to ſucceed his Father in his Benefice: For one to have Two, or more Benefices, incompatible: For Non-Reſidence; and in other ſuch like Caſes.

This Authority was given to the Archbiſhop by the Statute 25. Hen. VIII. Cap. 21. And the chief Officer of this Court is called Magiſter ad Facultates.

There is a Regiſter alſo belonging to this Court.

In theſe Diſpenſations the Archbiſhops have always uſed to be very tender, and to refuſe many that come for them; unleſs upon very good Reaſons and Conſiderations.

Beſides theſe Courts peculiarly pertaining to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, there is,

The Admiralty.

Fifthly, The Court of Admiralty: Which was erected in Edward the Third his Time. This Court belongs to the Lord Admiral of England, a high Officer, that hath the Government of the King's Navy, and the Hearing of all Cauſes relating to Merchants and Mariners. He takes Cognizance of the Death or Mayhem of any Man, committed in the great Ships riding in great Rivers, beneath the Bridges of the ſame next the Sea. Alſo he hath Power to arreſt Ships in great Streams, for the Uſe of the King, or his Wars. And in theſe Things this Court is concerned.

Officers of this Court.

There is a Judge of this Court, who muſt be a Civilian; and his Title is, Supremæ Curiæ Admiralitatis Angliæ Locumtenens Judex. The other Officers of this Court, are, a Regiſter, and a Marſhal, who carrieth a Silver Oar before the Judge; beſides an Advocate, and Proctor of the Admirals.

The Goods of Pirates formerly enjoyed by the Judge and Officers.

The Judge, Clerk, and Serjeant of this Court, were wont to have the Goods and Chattels of all attainted for Piracies, for their Travail in keeping of Seſſions. But not far from the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, the Lord Admiral paſs'd all his Intereſt to the Goods of Traitors and Pirates to that Queen: And ſo they were no longer enjoyed as before.

Judge of the Admiralty's Complaint.

Dr. David Lewis was Judge of the Admiralty in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, Anno 1573. And in the Year 1580, that Office of the Admiralty decaying much, he made a Complaint thereof unto the Lord Treaſurer; ſhewing him by what Means it came to ſo low a Condition, in theſe words; which I tranſcribe verbatim from his ſaid Complaint.

The Benefits thereof, how infringed.

“ Firſt, There is no ſtanding Fee incident to the ſame. The Commodities thereof do grow only by the great and little Seals, and by ſuch Inſtruments and Decrees, that do paſs in Cauſes depending there. The Judge, Clerk, and Serjeant, were wont to have the Goods and Chattels of all attainted for Pyracies, for their Travail in keeping of Seſſions: Which they have not now, by reaſon that my Lord Admiral hath of late paſſed all his Intereſt to the Goods of Traytors and Pyrates, to her Majeſty.

“ The Caſes that are treated of in the Court of Admiralty do proceed only of Things done upon, and beyond the Seas: And yet the Judge cannot enjoy the ſame, by reaſon of Prohibitions out of her Majeſty's Bench; denied to none that will ſue for them. By reaſon whereof, and that the Suitors of the Court of the Admiralty be many times vexed with Actions upon the Caſe, for ſuing their Merchants and Mariners, be ſo terrified, as they have forſaken the Court of Admiralty; and do now ſue for Things done beyond and upon the Sea, at the Common Law, in her Majeſty's Bench, and in the Guildhall, London. And the ſame are maintained there, by ſurmiſing the Matters to be tranſacted in ſome Place upon the Land; where in truth the ſame was done beyond and upon the Sea. And there may no Traverſe be admitted touching the Place.

“ Finally, The Company of Merchants trading in Spain and Portugal, have of late obtained Privilege of her Majeſty, under the Great Seal, not only to make Laws and Ordinances, but alſo to hear and determine all Quarrels, Suits and Strifes happening between any of the ſaid Company, or between any of them and any other, tho' he or they be not of their Company; and to puniſh ſuch as will not obey them therein, by Impriſonment. Whereby the Judge of the Admiralty ſhall not hereafter have to do with any Matter happening between the ſaid Merchants, either upon, or beyond the Sea. Whereas before, the Court of Admiralty ſtood chiefly by ſuch Cauſes as grew in Spain and in Portugal: And now the ſame being transferred to the Knowledge of Merchants, the Court of Admiralty is brought to utter Ruin, ſo that the ſame is not worth the keeping.

Dr. Lewis Judge of the Admiralty.

The ſaid Dr. Lewis, in the ſaid Year 1580, gave this Account of himſelf: That he ſerved in that Court of Admiralty now Twenty two Years. And before that he was an Advocate about Eleven Years; having withal the Officialty of Surrey. That he continued an Advocate, after he became Judge, Five or Six Years: So as thereby he made a competent Living. After that Sir William Peter and Dr. Wotton began to withdraw themſelves from Court, the ſaid Judge was driven to give ſuch Attendance there, (none elſewhere in her Majeſty's Service) that he was forced to forego both his Officialty and Advocateſhip. And yet ſo long as he enjoyed his Office of Admiralty whole, and without Impairment, he took his Hindrance that way in good part, in Hope of Recompence ſome other way. And hereupon he grounded his Complaint aboveſaid.

This Court formerly kept in Southwark.

This Court was, in former Times, kept at St. Margaret's Hill in Southwark; but now-a-days it is held in the Hall in Doctors Commons, where the other Civil Courts are kept. Only upon the Trial of Pirates, and Crimes committed at Sea, the Court often ſits at the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Bailey.

The Court of Delegates.

To theſe I add the Court of Delegates. To which high Court, Appeals do lie from any of the former Courts. This is the higheſt Court for Civil Cauſes. It was eſtabliſh'd by an Act in the 25th of Henry VIII. Cap. 19. Wherein it was enacted, "That it ſhould be lawful, for lack of Juſtice at, or in any of the Archbiſhop's Courts, for the Parties grieved to appeal to the King's Majeſty in his Court of Chancery. And that upon every ſuch Appeal, a Commiſſion under the Great Seal ſhould be directed to ſuch Perſons as ſhould be named by the King's Highneſs. Like as in caſe of Appeals from the Admiralty Court; to determine ſuch Appeals, and the Cauſes concerning the ſame. And no further Appeals to be had or made from the ſaid Commiſſioners for the ſame." Theſe Commiſſioners are appointed Judges only for that Turn. And they are commonly of the Spiritualty, as Biſhops; of the Common Law, as Judges of Weſtminſter Hall; as well as thoſe of the Civil Law. And theſe are mixed one with another, according to the Nature of the Cauſe.

This Commiſſion, when granted.

This Commiſſion of Appeal may be granted in Three Caſes, I. When any Sentence is given in any Eccleſiaſtical Cauſe by the Archbiſhop, or his Official. II. When any Sentence is given in any Eccleſiaſtical Cauſe in Places exempt. III. When Sentence is given in the Admiralty in Suits Civil and Marine.

Commiſſion of Review.

Laſtly, Sometimes a Commiſſion of Review is granted by the King under the Broad Seal, to conſider and judge again, what was decreed in the Court of Delegates. But this is but ſeldom, and upon great, and ſuch as ſhall be judged juſt Cauſes by the Lord Keeper. And this done purely by the King's Prerogative; ſince by the Act for Delegates, no farther Appeals were to be had or made from thoſe Commiſſioners, as was mentioned before.

Practiſers in theſe Courts.

IV. The Practiſers in theſe Courts are of two ſorts, } Advocates, Proctors.

Advocates.

Advocates are ſuch as have taken their Degree of Doctor in the Faculty of the Civil Law; or (when this Kingdom ſubmitted to the Papal See) of the Canon Law, or of the Decrees; that is, Canons and Decrees made and enjoined by Popes. Theſe are retained as Counſellors or Pleaders. And they muſt firſt, upon their Petitions to the Archbiſhop, have his Fiat; and then they are admitted by the Judge to practiſe. The manner of their Admiſſion is ſolemn. Two Senior Advocates in their Scarlet Robes with the Mace carried before them, conduct the Doctor up the Court with three low Reverences; and preſent him with a ſhort Latin Speech, together with the Archbiſhop's Reſcript. And then having taken the Oaths, the Judge admits him, and aſſigns him a Place or Seat in the Court; which he is ever to keep, when he pleads.

Their Habits.

The Habits they uſe in Court, both Judges and Advocates, are a Scarlet Robe, and a Hood lined with Taffata, if they be of Oxford; if of Cambridge, White Minever, and round Caps of Black Velvet.

Their Number.

Anno 1585, the Doctors then inhabiting the Commons, and Exercents in theſe Courts were,

Dr. Bartholomew Clark, Dean of the Arches.
Aubrey,
Mowſe,
Martin,
Stanhope,
Skevington,
Ceſar,
Ford,
Jones,
Lloyd,
Dune,
Gifford,
Smith,
Creke,
Drewry,
Gilbert
Farrer.

but Sixteen or Seventeen in all. Which Number is now conſiderably increaſed; the Doctors Exercent in theſe Courts in the Year 1694, being Forty four.

Proctors.

Proctors, or Procurators, the other ſort of Practiſers, are they that exhibit their Proxies for their Clients, and make themſelves Parties for them, who draw and give Pleas, or Libels and Allegations in behalf of their Clients; produce Witneſſes, prepare Cauſes for Sentence, and attend the Advocates with the Proceedings. They are admitted alſo by the Archbiſhop's Fiat, introduced by two Senior Proctors. They wear Black Robes, and Hoods lined with White Fur.

Anno 1585, The Number of the Proctors then I cannot punctually aſſign; but the chief Practiſers then, and living about the Commons, were

Francis Clark,
Wheeler
Barker,
Swinborn,
Philip Morgan.

In the Year 1694, the Number of the Proctors were Forty three.

Numbers of the Proctors reduced by Archbiſhop Cranmer.

Yet in Henry the VIIIth's Time, the Numbers of the Proctors were found a Grievance: And that they were ſo clamorous by reaſon of the Plenty of them, that neither Judges nor Advocates could be heard. That they retained and concluded Cauſes oftentimes without the Advocates, and thruſt themſelves into Cauſes without the Knowledge or Will of the Parties. In order to the reducing theſe Evils, Archbiſhop Cranmer (that great and ever memorable Reformer of Abuſes) thought good to begin with reſtraining of the Numbers of them. And whereas they were about Twenty in the Court of the Arches, and Twenty four more, he made an Order that thenceforth there ſhould be no more admitted till the Number were reduced to Ten; and then that Number never to be increaſed. And this was confirmed by the Chapter and Convent of Chriſt-Church, Canterbury. Though ſome looked upon this as a Craft of the Proctors of that Time; that all others being excluded from being Proctors, they might have all the Buſineſs of the Arches in their own Hands. But this Order gave Offence to many; and a Petition was drawn up againſt it, and preſented to the Parliament. Therein they ſhewed, how prejudicial this would be to the Commonwealth; becauſe the Number of Ten Perſons was not ſufficient to diſpatch the Cauſes that that came into that Court. And ſo there muſt be Delays and prolix Suits; and that it was a great Diſcouragement to young Men in ſtudying the Law; and contrary to the Canon and Civil Law, that permits any Man to be Proctor for another, a few excepted. Thus much for thoſe Practitioners, the Proctors.

The Terms. Times of Sitting.

V. The Terms for the pleading and ending of Cauſes in theſe Civil Courts, are little different from the Term-times of the Common Law. The Order as to the Time of the ſitting of theſe Courts is thus. The Sitting of the Court of Arches hath the Preeminence of ſitting firſt, according to the Quality of that Court, and regulates the Sittings of the others. The Sitting of the Court of Audience was the Morning next after the Sitting of the Court of Arches. The Prerogative Court ſits in the Afternoon, as the Audience ſat in the Morning. The Court of the Admiralty is held on the ſame Day with the Arches, but in the Afternoon.

Theſe Courts once held at *Exeter Houſe.

This College was conſumed by the general Devaſtation that happened by Fire to the City, Anno 1666. And then Exeter Houſe in the Strand was employed for the ſame Uſe. Where the Civilians had their Chambers and Offices; and the Courts were kept in the Hall. But after ſome Years the Commons being rebuilt far more conveniently, and more ſumptuouſly than before, the Civilians removed thither again.

Prohibitions,* to call Cauſes into the Temporal Courts,

For the Relief of the Subjects in caſe of any hard Dealings feared from Civil or Eccleſiaſtick Laws, the Lords Chief Juſtices may ſtop Proceedings in theſe Courts, and call the Matters in Controverſy to be heard before them, by a Writ of Prohibition. Which lies of one that is impleaded in the Court Chriſtian for a Cauſe that belongeth to the Temporal Juriſdiction. Whereby as well the Party and his Council, as the Judge himſelf and the Regiſter, are forbidden to proceed any further in that Cauſe. The Law Books ſhew the Cauſes for which this Prohibition lies. Bracton ſaith, it lies not after a Sentence given in any Cauſe.

Complained of,

But theſe Prohibitions were ſo frequently granted, and in Cauſes that ſeemed properly Eccleſiaſtical, that the Civilians and Eccleſiaſticks have ſometimes made great Complaints of them, as exceeding injurious to their Practice, and vexatious to the Subject; and alſo ſeeming to derogate from the ſupreme Authority, in taking away Cauſes from the High Commiſſion and Delegates, which acted by a ſpecial Commiſſion from the Prince.

Under Archbiſhop *Parker.

Thus in the Year 1573, under Archbiſhop Parker, the Judge of the Admiralty being Dr. David Lewis, the Lord Chief Juſtice had very often granted Prohibitions out of the Court of Kings Bench to this Court, almoſt to the Ruin of it: Whereupon in the Year beforeſaid the Lord Admiral uſed ſharp Speeches to him for it; and warned Dr. Lewis, that when ſuch Prohibitions ſhould be granted again, to ſpare to move the Lord Chief Juſtice, but to make the Lord Treaſurer acquainted with it. Accordingly, when another Prohibition was granted the ſame Year, Dr. Lewis wrote of it to the Lord Treaſurer, ſignifying what juſt Cauſe of Grief he had by reaſon of a Prohibition granted the Day before in a Cauſe which he had deſcribed in a Paper encloſed. And that this, and one more before, were two ſuch Precedents, that if they took place, in ſhort Time would utterly overthrow the Juriſdiction of the Admiralty. That he was therefore forced to crave his Lordſhip's Favour to be a Means to the Lord Chief Juſtice that Day, and eſpecially to his Colleagues, (ſince as far as he could perceive, his Lordſhip had no liking of the Prohibition) to ſtay the ſame. He added, that if theſe Prohibitions were not prevented, he ſhould not be able to ſhew his Face in that Court any more; theſe Prohibitions tending ſo much to his Diſcredit, and the utter Ruin and Subverſion of the Juriſdiction of the Admiralty.

Under Arch-biſhop Grind

In the Year 1580, under Grindal the next Archbiſhop, Dr. Lewis complained again to the Lord Treaſurer of the Decay of his Office, and drew up the preſent mean State of the Judge and Court of Admiralty. He ſhewed how the Cauſes which were treated of in this Court, proceeded only of Things done upon and beyond the Seas; and yet the Judge could not enjoy the ſame, by reaſon of Prohibitions out of Her Majeſty's Bench; denied to none that would ſue for them. By reaſon whereof, and that the Suitors to this Court were many times vexed with Actions upon the Caſe for ſuing there, Merchants and Mariners were ſo terrified, as they forſook the Court of Admiralty, and ſued for Things done beyond and upon the Sea, at the Common Law, in her Majeſty's Bench, and in the Guild Hall of London. And the ſame were maintained there by ſurmiſing the Matters to be contracted in ſome Place upon the Land. Where in truth the ſame was done beyond and upon the Sea; and there might no Traverſe be admitted touching the Place.

And theſe Prohibitions were grievous to the other Courts as well as this, and chiefly the Eccleſiaſtical.

Under Archbiſhop Whitgift. Cott. Librar. Cleopatra F. I.

Again, about the Year 1598, under Archbiſhop Whitgift, theſe Prohibitions lay heavy upon the Civil Courts. And then a notable Paper was drawn up for the Conſideration of the Queen or the Parliament, entitled, Certain Collections and Inferences concerning Matter of Prohibitions and Conſultations: Not unfit to be thought upon for the better Preſervation of her Majeſty's Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical; which were theſe, viz.

Statute de Conſul. Anno 24. Ed. I. Anno 2. Hen. V. Cap. 3. 4. Edw. IV. Fol. 37. 31. Hen. VI. Fol. 14.

I. Since by the Laws and Inſtitutes of this Realm, the Libel is appointed as a Rule for the granting of Prohibitions and Conſultations, How can a Prohibition duly be granted, either before the Libel is exhibited in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, or without Sight and diligent Peruſal thereof, or upon any other Matter or Suggeſtion that may be probably gathered out of the ſame?

Anno 1. R. III. Fol. 4. 38. Hen. VI. Fol. 22.

II. Where the Cauſe originally is undoubtedly of Eccleſiaſtical Cognizance, Why ſhould any Prohibition be granted (as almoſt all be) upon any Matter pleaded at Bar, or by way of Exception, tho' merely Temporal; the Law it ſelf, and common Reaſon being plain and evident to the contrary? For ſuch Matter incident comes not there to be finally ſentenced and determined. But it is uſed as a Means and Furtherance for the Deciſion of his Principal. And ſuppoſing the Law were otherwiſe, then might either Party at their Pleaſure, by pleading ſome Matter Temporal, make any Cauſe Eccleſiaſtical whatſoever, ſubject to a Prohibition?

III. Since the Prohibition once granted, (though never ſo unduly) muſt needs bring with it Delay of Juſtice, intolerable Expences, and many great Inconveniencies to the Party prohibited, Why are Prohibitions ſo uſually granted, without calling or hearing both Parties, and the Judge Eccleſiaſtical alſo (ſi ſua putaverit intereſſe) contrary to the common Rules of Juſtice in all Cauſes, ſpecially in Matters of ſo great Prejudice?

IV. Can it be thought expedient, or reaſonable, that the Plaintiff making choice of the Court Chriſtian for his Relief, ſhould afterwards in the ſame Cauſe be ſuffered to procure a Prohibition? Were it not ſound Diſcretion and Policy, to cut off ſuch wilful malicious Vexation of a Subject, and publick Scandal to Juſtice, howſoever the Law be defective and ſilent in that behalf?

V. To ſue for a Prohibition not till after Concluſion in the Cauſe, is very prepoſterous and inconvenient. But after Sentence given, in Bracton's Opinion, is altogether unlawful; much more after two or three Inſtances, and as many Sentences paſt. And yet in all theſe Caſes Prohibitions are common and ordinary.

VI. What Law or Reaſon can be pretended, why the Judge Eccleſiaſtical, after Conſultation delivered unto him, may not condemn the Party who brings the Prohibition, in Expenſis retardati proceſſus; in caſe the Judges ſhall refuſe, as oftentimes they do, to aſſeſs double Coſt and Damage, according to the Statute, or in any other Caſe whatſoever, wherein the Judges can or will allow no Charges at all.

25. Ed. I.

VII. If in the Prohibition directed to the Eccleſiaſtical Judge, the Suggeſtions appeared notably falſe, vain, or frivolous, as in ſome of late hath been ſeen; Why may not the Temporal Judge in that Caſe juſtly be preſumed wittingly and willingly to infringe the Liberties of the Church? And thereupon, after due Circumſtances obſerved, be declared and denounced excommunicate, according to the Statute in that behalf eſtabliſhed?

VIII. Is there either Warrant or Colour of Law, that any Prohibition ſhould be grounded upon any of theſe Surmiſes, viz. That Matters Teſtamentary and Matrimonial only be Eccleſiaſtical; or that the Law Civil requireth two Witneſſes, where the Common Law accepteth of one? Seeing by the firſt Suggeſtion divers and ſundry Cauſes undoubtedly known, and confeſſed to be of Eccleſiaſtical Cognizance, are falſely ſuppoſed to be of Temporal Juriſdiction; and by the ſecond, unlearnedly miſconceived, no Cauſe ſo purely Spiritual, but muſt be determined at the Common Law.

IX. Were it not very convenient and neceſſary, conſidering the very long and tedious and chargeable Suits in obtaining Conſultations, together with the manifold Difficulties which accompany ſuch unwelcome Motions, that the Temporal Judges would be pleaſed, for Relief of poor Subjects, within ſome reaſonable and competent Time to determine the Queſtions depending before them, as touching Conſultations. And that hereafter the Spiritual Courts be not kept in Suſpence for two, three, or four Years; as often it hath been, before the Conſultations can be procured, notwithſtanding the beſt and uttermoſt Endeavours of the Defendant, and the manifold Juſtice of this Demand.

24. Ed. I.
1. Ed. III.

18. Ed. III.
5.

X. It ſeemeth by the Scope and Purport of all the moſt ancient Statutes in that behalf provided, that the Prohibition and Conſultations, as other original Writs, ought not to be granted but in the Court of Chancery by the Lord Chancellor of England. And howſoever of late Years the Courſe hath been drawn another way, yet no doubt the Power of the Chancellor is no whit thereby reſtrained, but that he may lawfully (and it were to be wiſhed he would) reſume and put in Execution his ancient Right and Authority. So ſhould not her Majeſty's Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction be driven as now it is, to admit the Cenſure and Judgment of thoſe, who indeed be principal Parties as touching the Queſtion of Prohibitions.

Anno 24. Ed. II.

XI. What Cauſe or Grievance ſoever cannot be redreſſed by any Writ but of the Chancery, there the Statute expreſly forbiddeth the King's Prohibition to take Place; but it is manifeſt and notorious, that moſt of the Prohibitions now-a-days, or rather all, be granted in Stay of ſuch Complaints, as wherein neither by any Writ out of the Chancery, nor any other Courſe of Proceeding at the Common Law, the Subject can receive ſound Juſtice, or final Cenſure.

An. 50. Ed. III. cap. 4.

XII. Can it be warranted either by Law or Statute, that after Conſultation once granted in the King's Bench, a ſecond Prohibition ſhould be gotten out of the Common Pleas in the ſame Cauſe, the Matter not being augmented, enlarged, nor otherwiſe altered. And yet howſoever the Statute be plain and evident to the contrary, divers ſuch Prohibitions have been of late obtained.

XIII. If ſuch Care and Conſideration had been taken in the granting of Prohibitions, as were fit and neceſſary in Cauſes of ſo great Moment, the Judges Temporal would never have granted ſo many Conſultations as have been granted within the Compaſs of three or four Years.

XIV. Foraſmuch as both the Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal be now united in the Crown of the Realm; which were heretofore de facto ſevered, and derived from ſeveral Heads and Authorities; and for that the Ground and true original Cauſe of Prohibitions was none other than the foreſaid Severance and Partition of Juriſdictions; may it not be very probably drawn into Queſtion, Whether as the Caſe now ſtandeth, any Prohibition at all may in ſound Conſtruction of Law be warranted; at leaſt, how the Form and Manner of Prohibitions heretofore uſed, may now, without Offence and Derogation to the Queen's Prerogative Eccleſiaſtical, be retained and practiſed? As though the two Juriſdictions remained now diſtinct, and as ſeveral as before; and as though her Majeſty's Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical may not, with as little Prejudice to the Crown, encroach upon the Temporal, as the Temporal may upon the Eccleſiaſtical.

XV. But in caſe the Prohibition, by force of ſo many Years Uſe and Cuſtom, may not now conveniently be diſcontinued, either in Matter or Manner; yet, in true Senſe and Meaning of Law, What Reaſon can be deviſed why the Prohibition ſhould be extended to the Reſtraint of her Majeſty's High Commiſſion, or Court of Delegates, both of them being authorized under the Great Seal of England, and eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament; and neither of them ſo much as thought upon for divers hundred Years after the Prohibition was current in England; neither by colour of any Argument or Similitude can be drawn to the Caſe of ordinary Juriſdiction, either as then it was, or now it is uſed?

XVI. And for that her Majeſty's Delegates have no general Commiſſion ad univerſitatem Cauſarum; but for every ſeveral Cauſe of Appeal receive a ſpecial and particular Commiſſion, it may ſeem ſomewhat ſtrange and extraordinary, that any Subjects ſhould preſume to countermand her Majeſties expreſs Command, and to forbid the Judges Delegates to proceed any further in any one Cauſe, which her Majeſty hath eſpecially and particularly commanded them to hear and determine.

And

Under Archbiſhop Bancroft.

And as through the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, under three Archbiſhops, theſe Prohibitions were thus ſtomached by the Civilians; ſo in the Reign of K. James I. under Archbiſhop Bancroft, in the Year 1606, the Convocation then met, ſtirred in it, and prayed ſome Redreſs by a Petition of the Lower Houſe to the King, to this Tenor:

The Convocation petition K. James I. about Prohibitions. Cotton Library, Cleopatra, F. 2.

Some of theſe Civilians, now in chief Truſt and Place, are;

Judges, &c. in theſe Courts.

Dr. John Betteſworth, Judge of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, and Dean of the Court of Arches.
Sir Henry Penrice, Knt. Judge of the High Court of Admiralty.
Dr. George Paul, Vicar General to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.
Dr. Henchman, Chancellor of the Dioceſe of London.
Sir Nathan Lloyd, Knt. Advocate General.
Dr. Ja. Johnſon, Maſter of the Faculties.

Regiſters of the Courts.

There is alſo a Regiſter belonging to each of theſe Courts, viz. the High Court of Admiralty, and Delegates, the Court of Arches, and of the High Court of Chivalry, of the Prerogative Court. Alſo a Regiſter to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's; and another to the Chancellor and Commiſſary of London.

ROYAL SOCIETY.

The Royal Society. J. S.

THere is yet a more modern Colledge, inſtituted for Experimental Philoſophy, called THE ROYAL SOCIETY, founded alſo in this City, and a very great Ornament to it. The Meeeting of the Members thereof is wont to be formerly at Greſham-College, now in Crane-Court in Fleetſtret.

The Original of it. R. B.

The great Benefit by this Society for the improvement of Knowledge.

The Original of this Society was about the Years 1650, 1651, 1652, at Oxford, &c. and about 1658 in London, when divers Learned and Judicious Perſons of different Profeſſions, uſed to have Meetings together; all of them great Improvers of Ingenuity, and Promoters of a Noble Deſign, viz. the bettering of the Condition of Human Life by a vigorous Advancement of real Knowledge, and an Improvement of Arts and Sciences; their Buſineſs being to conſider, diſcover, and take Account of Philoſophical Experiments, Obſervations, and Matters; to view and diſcourſe upon the Production and Rarities of Art and Nature; to conſider how they may be improved, and what to deduce from them for the Benefit of Mankind, and to make a Record thereof for future Ages.

And ſince their Aſſembly or Inſtitution, they have made a great many commendable Experiments, very profitable and delightful, relating to Eclipſes, Meteors, Comets, and other Cœleſtial Phœnomena; likewiſe relating to Mines and Minerals; to Animals, and Plants; to Earthquakes, Fiery Eruptions, Inundations, Mountains, Lakes, Tides, Currents, the Depth of the Sea, with abundance of the like Works of Nature; they alſo have much advanced the Art of Navigation, ſo uſeful to us, and improved that of Architecture, both Civil, Military, and Natural. They have alſo been very induſtrious in promoting the planting of Trees, as well for Fruits as for Timber, and other Uſes, to the great Benefit of the Nation.

The firſt Perſons that began to meet.

Amongſt the firſt Perſons that met (which was at Wadham College in Oxford, at the Lodgings of Dr. Wilkins, late Lord Biſhop of Cheſter) were Dr. Seth Ward late Biſhop of Saliſbury, the Honourable Robert Boyle, Eſq; Sir William Petty, Dr. Wallis, Dr. Goddard, Dr. Willis, Dr. Bathurſt, Mr. Chriſtopher Wren, and ſome others.

They meet at Greſham College.

And by their Meetings, for the conſulting of the Matters aforeſaid, they begat Applauſe, not only at Home but in Foreign Parts, which augmented their Number, eſpecially about the Year 1658, at which time they had a Meeting at Greſham College; and the greateſt part of them living in London, they continued their Meetings at the ſaid College, until the Year 1660, being the time of the Reſtauration of King Charles II. ſoon after which, the Deſign (being favoured by ſome ingenious Perſons, who had followed the King in his Exile) pleaſed ſo far his Majeſty taking notice thereof, that he was graciouſly pleaſed ſo to favour and incourage it, as to grant a large Charter to them, bearing Date the 23d of April, 1663, whereby they were made a Corporation; to conſiſt of a Preſident, of a Council, and of Fellows, for promoting the Knowledge of Natural Things, and uſeful Arts, by Experiments; wherein his Majeſty declared himſelf to be the Founder and Patron, Sovereign and Companion of this Society; giving them power to purchaſe Lands and Houſes; to have and uſe a Common Seal and Coat of Arms; to have two Secretaries; two or more Curators of Experiments; one or more Clerks; and two Serjeants at Mace: He likewiſe gave them Power to make Laws, Orders, and Conſtitutions amongſt themſelves; to have one or more Engravers and Printers, with power to Print whatſoever they ſhall think good of their own Obſervations and Remarks; to Take and Anatomiſe dead Bodies, executed by Order of Law, to Erect Colleges, &c.

K. Charles the IId, granted them a Charter.

Coat of Arm

The Coat Armour granted to this Society is the Field, three Lions of England in chief. The Creſt. An Eagle. The Supporters hunting Hounds. Emblems of Sagacity and Search.

Upon their meeting at London, which much augmented their Number, the Lord Viſcount Henry Brounker, the Lord Brereton, Sir Paul Neal, John Evelyn, Eſq; Dr. Scarborough, Dr. Clark, and divers others, became Members of this Society, and ſtill increaſed, ſo that at this Day they are very conſiderable, according to the Liſt or Catalogue by and by to enſue.

The Office of the ſeveral Members of this Society.

The Preſid

The Preſident is to call and diſſolve the Meetings, to propoſe the Matter whereon to conſult, to put Queſtions, to call for Experiments, to admit of Members that from time to time ſhall be received into the Society.

The

Treaſurer.

The Treaſurer receives and disburſes all Moneys.

The Secretary.

The Secretary reads all Letters and Informations, Replies to all Addreſſes, or Letters from Foreign Parts, or from others; to take notice of the Orders, and material Paſſages at the Meetings, Regiſters all their Experiments and Concluſions, and publiſheth that which is ordered and allowed by the Society.

The Curators.

The Curators or Experimentors are to receive the Directions of the Society, and at another Meeting to bring all to the Teſt; and the Society judgeth thereof. Whereby the World may have the concurring Teſtimony of many Perſons of undoubted Credit for the Truth of whatſoever they ſhall publiſh.

Of the Election of Members into this Society.

The electing Members by Ballotting.

The manner of Electing of Fellows is according to the Venetian Way by Ballotting. At one Aſſembly the Candidate is propoſed by ſome that know him well; the next Meeting he may be put to the Scrutiny, for which the Candidate muſt have the Major Number of 21 Suffrages at the leaſt, and then at that or the next Aſſembly he may be introduced, and ſolemnly admitted by the Preſident: At his Admiſſion he ſubſcribes this following Promiſe:

That he will endeavour to promote the Good of the Royal Society of London, for the Improvement of natural Knowledge.

After this, he may at any time free himſelf from this Obligation, only by ſignifying under his Hand to the Preſident, that he deſires to withdraw from the Society.

When any one is admitted he pays to the Treaſurer only 4*s.* afterwards 13*s.* a Quarter, ſo long as he continues a Member; and this is towards the defraying ſome neceſſary Expences for the College.

The Library.

This Royal Society for Advancement of this noble Deſign, hath begun a Library, to conſiſt only of ſuch Authors as may be ſerviceable to their Deſign; towards which the Lord Henry Howard, Earl Marſhal of England, was pleaſed to beſtow on the Society his whole Library then at Arundel Houſe in the Strand, (where this Society met for ſome time after the Fire of London,) with a free permiſſion of changing ſuch Books as were not proper for their Deſign; by which Means, and by other publick Gifts of Books, they will have a compleat Library of all that hath been publiſhed in Antient and Modern Languages, which either regard the Production of Nature, or the Effects of all Moral Arts and Sciences.

H. Howards
ooks.

Repoſitory.
Colwell,

They have a Repoſitory, which was the Gift of Daniel Colwell, Eſq; a Member of this Society, which is kept in this College, wherein are to be ſeen many Thouſands of great Rarities, ſome of them fetched from the fartheſt Parts of the known World, as Beaſts, Serpents, Birds, Fiſhes, Flies, Shells, Seeds, Feathers, Minerals, Earths, ſome Things petrified, others oſſified, Mummies, Gums, Skeletons, &c.

ſæum.

Dr. Nehemiah Grew hath given an Account of theſe Curioſities in a juſt Volume, Intitled, Muſæum Regalis Societatis: A Catalogue and Deſcription of the Natural and Artificial Rarities belonging to the Royal Society, and preſerved at Greſham College; Printed Anno 1681. In this Repoſitory, there be Rarities (as they are digeſted by the foreſaid Doctor) firſt of Animals, and that of theſe Kinds, viz. of Human Bodies, of Quadrupedes, of Serpents, of Birds, of Fiſhes, of Shells, of Inſects. Secondly, Of Plants and their Kinds, of Trees and their Woods, Fruits, Nuts, Berries. Of Shrubs, of Herbs, of Moſſes, and of Sea Plants. Thirdly, Of Minerals of theſe Kinds, viz. Stones, Metals, Mineral Principles, viz. Jet, Amber, Earths. And Fourthly, of Artificial Matters, as of Things relating to Chymiſtry, and other Parts of natural Philoſophy; of Things relating to the Mathematicks, and ſome Mechanicks. Laſtly, Of Coins and other Matters relating to Antiquity, with a Liſt of thoſe who have contributed to the Muſæum. And being founded by Daniel Colwal, Eſq; Fellow of the ſaid Society, Dr. Grew Prefaced his Book, as with a Dedication to the Society, ſo with an Epiſtle to him who had offered up to the Society ſo noble an Hecatomb. He is likewiſe mentioned with Honour for his voluntary Undertaking for engraving the Plates of the Work, done in order to a publick Good. And in grateful Memory of him his Picture faceth the Book.]

R. B.

To this Repoſitory, many Rarities both of Art and Nature have been ſince added by other worthy Members of the Society, and by other ingenious Perſons; and if it increaſeth as in probability it will, it is like to be one of the largeſt, and filled with the moſt Curioſities of Nature of any in the World.

King Charles of this Society.

To conclude, as King Charles II. gave to this Society a Patent, with a Coat of Arms, ſo for the promoting of Arts and Sciences, and to encourage Learned Men, he was pleaſed after the Example of the greateſt and moſt renowned Monarch that ever was in Europe, to enroll himſelf one of the Society.

Time of Meeting.

The time of meeting for this Society is on Wedneſdays at three a Clock in the Afternoon.

Times of Election of Members of Council.

The time of Election for the Members of Council, out of the Fellows, is upon the Feaſt of St. Andrew in the Morning, after which they all Dine together at a Veniſon Feaſt.

Of the Council, Eleven of the Old Ones are to ſtand for the enſuing Year; the reſt to be Elected out of the reſt of the Members.]

SOCIETY of ANTIQUARIES.

A Society of Antiquaries.

Life of Camden, by. Ed. Gibſon, now Biſhop of Lincoln.

TO this Learned Society I muſt add another of great Honour, while it continued, but now extinct; when ſeveral Perſons of Honour and Learning combined into a Society or College of Antiquaries, beginning in the Reign of Q. Elizabeth, of which we have ſome Account in the Life of Learned Camden, who was one of the Society. They met one Day in the Week at Darby Houſe, where the Heralds Office was and ſtill is kept; and their Buſineſs was to confer together concerning the Antiquities of this Land; and at each Meeting two Queſtions were propounded to be the next Week diſcuſſed, each ſhewing their Opinions of them. And that which ſeemed moſt material, was, by one appointed for that Purpoſe, entred into a Book, that it might be of Uſe afterwards, and remain to Poſterity. This Society increaſed daily, many Perſons, both Learned and Noble, joyning themſelves as Members thereof; but at length it flagged, and ſo was diſcontinued for Twenty Years; but was revived again by divers ingenious Gentlemen, in the Year 1614. Some of the Members were Sir James Ley, Knt. Attorney of the Court of Wards, afterwards Earl of Marleburgh, and Lord Treaſurer; Sir Robert Cotton, Knt. and Baronet; Sir John Davies, K. James's Attorney for Ireland; Sir Richard St. George, then Norroy; Mr. Hackwel, the Queens Solicitor; Mr. Camden, Clarentieux; Sir Henry Spelman, Knt. and ſome others, whereof the two laſt were of the Original Foundation.

Theſe prudently began this Society, by drawing up ſome Rules of Government and Limitations to be obſerved among them; whereof this was one, that for avoiding of Offence, they would meddle neither with Matters of State, nor Religion. At one of theſe Meetings they agreed upon two Queſtions, according to their formerly propounded Method, one whereof was touching the Original of the Terms, of which Sir Henry Spelman (from whoſe Letter I have ſet down all this Matter) ſaith, that it being obſcure, and generally miſtaken, he took ſome pains about. But before the next Meeting, underſtanding the King took ſome Miſlike of the Society, and being informed that they had reſolved to decline all Matters of State (which very Caution might have given the King ſome Jealouſy) they forbare to meet any more; and ſo this brave Society ſunk: but ſome Benefit of it remained; namely, what that learned Knight had prepared concerning the Hiſtory of our Terms. It remained in MS. in the Bodleian Library at Oxford; ſince Printed, tho' not ſo Correct.

Camden appealed to thi College.

To this Society of Antiquarians, I find Camden referring himſelf, when Brookeſmouth, York Herald, had made Exceptions to divers Genealogies of Noblemen, in his Britannia, as falſe, in a Tract of his, Printed Anno 1599. called A Diſcovery of Errors, &c. In Anſwer to which, that Learned and Modeſt Man, ſet a few Sheets at the End of his Edition of the Britannia, Anno 1600, vindicating his Writings from the Calumnies of that Herald; and at laſt referring the Accounts he had given of thoſe ancient Pedigrees excepted againſt, either to the Earl Marſhal, or to the College of Heralds; vel ad Collegium Antiquariorum, qui ſtatis Temporibus, conveniunt, & de rebus antiquis conferunt: Quorum plerique etiam in Genealogiis ſunt exercitati: i. e. ‘Or to the College of ‘Antiquaries, who at ſet Times met, and con‘ferred concerning Antiquities, divers whereof ‘were well ſkilled in Genealogies. But return we to the Royal Society.

Mr. Thomas Operator. Proper Subjects propounded to the Society.

The ingenious Mr. Thomas, the preſent Operator to the Society, in a Paper kindly imparted to me, hath drawn up, under divers Heads, the Subjects proper for the Learned Members, to communicate, as well for the Honour of the Society, as for the advancing and diſperſing abroad of uſeful Knowledge; which, as he writes, if handled with Judgment and Sincerity, ſeem moſt agreeable towards the promoting of thoſe Ends, which this Royal Society was at firſt inſtituted for by K. Charles II. the Founder and Patron; and ſince from time to time ſucceſsfully ſupported by the due Care and Benevolence of its own Members, for the Advancement of the Purpoſes already mentioned. All along remembring, at leaſt as a Society, not to aſſert any Thing but what Ocular Demonſtration would allow to be Matter of Fact, in ſpight of the Hypothetical Influence of Ariſtotelians, Carteſians, Adepts, Aſtrologers, and common Longitudinarians.

Aſtronomical Obſervations.

He therefore wiſhed, that ſuch as had Opportunity, Capacities, and the Advantage of good Teleſcopes, would communicate all Aſtronomical and other Obſervations, whether of the Spots in the Body of the Sun, of their Situations and Variations therein, of their Increaſe and Decreaſe; or of the Nebulæ mentioned by that univerſal Scholar, and moſt acute Philoſopher Dr. Halley, No. 347. of the Philoſophical Tranſactions. Of new Stars appearing, or of others diſappearing. Of Comets, and of all Eclipſes, whether of the Sun, Moon, Stars, or Satellites.

Dr. Halley.

Uncommon Appearances in the Heaven, Auroræ Boreales, Meteors, &c.

That accurate Accounts would be no leſs acceptable of all uncommon Appearances in the Heavens; ſuch as Auroræ Boreales, Meteors of all Kinds, Thunder and Lightning; particularly noting the Time between the Flaſh and the Crack, and the like Phænomena. Alſo Regiſters of the Wind and Weather, of the Thermometer and Barometer; of the Quantity of Rain that falls upon any ſpace of Ground, though but a Foot ſquare; of the conſtant Flux and Reflux of Tides for ſome time, with Remarks; ſuch, as how high they Flow, and how low they Ebb, and the Moon's Age at the time of obſerving them.

Deſcriptions of Quadrupeds, Birds, Reptils, &c.

That all new Diſcoveries in Natural Hiſtory would be alſo very deſirable; ſuch as good Deſcriptions of Quadrupeds, Birds, Reptils, Inſects, of amphibious Animals, of Fiſh, whether Teſtaceous, or of other Kinds: Of Plants, Minerals, Foſſils, or the like, that are either met with but rarely, ill treated by the Authors that writ of them, or that have hitherto paſſed unregarded: Whether they may be of any Advantage to Mankind, as Food or Phyſick; and whether thoſe, or any other Uſes of them can be further improved.

Mineral Waters.

As likewiſe Accounts of the different Sorts of Mineral Waters, of their Chymical Analyſis, or of other Experiments, (ſuch as thoſe of Dr. Slare upon the Pyrmont) in what Caſes and Quantities they have been taken; and with what Succeſs.

Diſſection of Morbid Bodies.

Diſſections of Morbid Bodies, whether Human, or of other Animals, were highly wanted, with particular Relations of the Parts decayed or affected; and of the Symptoms, during Life, attending thoſe Diſtempers, with all Anatomical Diſcoveries and remarkable Caſes, not only in Phyſick and Surgery, but alſo in Farriery, and the Diſeaſes of Cattel; ſuch as the Murrain amongſt the Cow Kind, and the Rott amongſt Sheep; and their Cures, if poſſible.

New Experiments in Chymiſtry and Pharmacy.

He recommended alſo new Experiments, either in Chymiſtry, ſuch as thoſe of the Learned Dr. Friend, in his Prælectiones Chymicæ, or in Pharmacy; ſuch, as what Medicines are eaſily incorporated together, and what not: And how compound Medicines may be reduced leſs ſimple, yet anſwer the ſame End, &c. or upon all, or any of the Materia Medica; ſuch as thoſe of Monſieur Tournfort.

Agriculture, Planting, Gardening.

That Improvements in Agriculture would be in like manner gratefully received. Such as the moſt commodious ways to water the high Grounds, and to drain the more wet and low; To meliorate the barren, and to enrich even the fertile Land. What Sort of Grains, Plants, or Fruit thrive beſt in the ſeveral Soils; And how each of them may be manured to the beſt Advantage: With all uſeful Obſervations in Planting and Gardening; like thoſe of Mr. Evelyn and Mr. Bradley. All Microſcopical Diſcoveries, like thoſe of Mr. Lewenhoeck, Dr. Hook, and of the aforeſaid ingenious Mr. Bradley.

Microſcopical Diſcoveries.

Mechanicks, Engines, &c.

That no leſs valuable would be new Inventions or Improvements in Mechanicks; with Deſcriptions of Machines, Engines, Inſtruments, or the like; made uſe of either in Mines or Water-Works; in the more commodious Loading, Unloading, or Carrying of Goods; or for the greater Benefit of ſpeedy Travelling by Sea or Land: More eſpecially in the Arts of Navigation and War. Hereunto may be added, Exact Hiſtories of all Sorts of curious and beneficial Trades in any Country: Such as the Make of their Tools, and the way of applying them; with an Account of their Materials, both rough and wrought.

Philoſophical Tranſactions.

He added, how theſe few Hints, with great Variety more of this kind, and the beſt manner of Proceeding in moſt of them, might be gathered out of the Philoſophical Tranſactions, publiſhed from Time to Time by the Secretaries of this Society; out of the Memoirs of the Academy Royal of Sciences at Paris, the Acta Lipſica, the Miſcellanea Berolinenſia, and others.

The ſame Gentleman diſtinguiſheth the Learned Members of this Society into divers Ranks; of ſuch as were of great Ability in the Sciences following; ſome in one, ſome in others: Viz. In Natural Philoſophy, in Aſtronomy, Geometry, Opticks, Natural Hiſtory, Anatomy, Chymiſtry, Mechanicks, Huſbandry, Gardening and Planting, and Antiquities.

Antiquities.

Concerning this laſt, viz. Antiquities, he acknowledgeth, That properly ſpeaking, it was not the Buſineſs of the Royal Society; but that many of its Members were Antiquarians: And that ſeveral Things in that venerable Study were no leſs entertaining, than uſeful and ſatisfactory. And that therefore it was not to be queſtioned, but that all ancient Manuſcripts, Paintings, Medals, Coins, Urns, Monuments, Inſcriptions, or ought elſe, tending either to explain the Ceremonies, Cuſtoms, Arts and Sciences of our Anceſtors, or to ſet any controverted Points of Hiſtory in a clear Light, muſt be received with Gratitude.

Books, and Rarities requeſted for the Library and Repoſitory.

And laſtly, For the Increaſe of the Library and Repoſitory, he moved well diſpoſed Perſons to be Benefactors, either of Books, or other Curioſities: Adding, That new Books upon any of the foregoing Subjects, or Abſtracts of them; alſo any Thing remarkable, rare or curious, toward augmenting their Libraries, and Repoſitory of Rarities, (kept at the Royal Societies Houſe in Crane-Court, Fleetſtreet) would be no unacceptable Preſent.

To which Houſe all Communications might be directed, to be left for either of the Secretaries.

And that this might be ſaid for the Encouragement of ſuch Benefactions; That the Donors would be thereby entitled, not only to have their Names recorded in the Minute-Books of one of the beſt intended Societies in Europe; (And that bears no inconſiderable Reputation amongſt all the Learned World abroad, however diſregarded by ſome here at home;) but alſo to meet with convenient Opportunities of having their Donations carefully preſerved, for the Benefit and Satisfaction of Poſterity.

And that now there can be no room to doubt, but that the Royal Society is in as fair a way as any Corporation can be, of being eſtabliſhed a perpetual one: Eſpecially if we duly conſider the Contributions and Legacies lately left it; which may be ſeen at their Houſe aforeſaid: Moſt of which generous and worthy Benefactors being yet alive.

Schools.

J. S.

TO theſe Colleges and Societies of Learning, it ſuits well to ſubjoin the Foundations of Charity, for the bringing up of Youth in good Literature, and Chriſtian Manners; which we call Schools. Concerning which, to what hath been ſaid at Chap. XXII. let theſe Things be added concerning them.

Ancient Schools in London.

Due Care was taken in ancient Times, that London ſhould be ſupplied with Schools of Learning.

Fitzſtephen Deſcript. Lond.

In King Stephen's Time, there were Three principal great Schools, belonging to the Three chief Churches, as Fitzſtephen writes; (but he does not tell us which thoſe Churches were;) where Youth were bred up in the Skill not only of Grammar, but Logick, Philoſophy, Rhetorick, Poetry, and Wit. Beſides which, there were Schools of leſſer Account. But afterwards, and in the Times of King Henry VI. groſs Ignorance and want of Learning prevailed in London, as well as elſewhere; which appeared even in Churchmen themſelves, (to their Shame) as well as in the Laity. And Schools were neglected, and gone to decay. Wherefore, for the reſtoring of Learning, Four grave Clergymen, and Parſons of Pariſhes in the City, petitioned the Parliament that ſat in the 25th Year of Henry the VIth, That they and their Succeſſors might be allowed to ſet up Schools in their Four reſpective Churches, and appoint Schoolmaſters in them: Viz. In Great Alhallows, St. Andrew Holborn, St. Peter's in Cornhill, and St. Mary Cole-Church.

It may be worth the relating of this Matter out of the Records of the Tower. The Petition of theſe Reverend Perſons ran to this Tenor:

Record. Turr. Rot. Parl. An. 25. H. VI. N°. 19. Petition to the Parliament, for ſetting up Schools.

'To the ful worthie and diſcrete Communes in 'this preſent Parlement aſſemblyd, to conſidre 'the grete Nombre of Gramer Scholes that ſometyme were in divers Parties of this Realme, beſide thoſe that were in London, and how few 'ben in theſe Dayes, and the grete Hurt that is 'cauſed of this, not oonly in the Spiritual Partie of the Chirche, where oftentyme it apperith 'to openly in ſom Perſones with grete Shame, 'but alſo in the temporal Partie; to whom alſo 'it is full expedyent to have competent Congruite for manie Cauſes, as to your Wiſdomes 'apperith.

'And foraſmuche as to the Cite of London 'is the commone Concourſe of this Land, ſom 'lake of Schole Maiſtres in ther own Contree, 'for to be enfourmed of Gramer ther, and ſom 'for the grete Almeſs of Lordes, Merchants, and 'others, that which is in London more plenteuoſly, 'ſooner than in manie other Places of this 'Reaume, to ſuch pouere Creatures as never 'ſhuld have be brought to ſo greet Vertu and 'Counyng as thei have, ne had hit ben by the 'meane of the Almeſs aboveſaid:

'Wherfor it were expedyent, that in London 'were a ſufficient Nomber of Scholes, and good 'Enfourmers in Gramer; and not, for the ſingular avail of two or three Perſones, grevouſly to 'hurt the Multitude of yong Peple of al this 'Land. For wher there is grete Nombre of Lerners and few Techers; and al the Lerners be compelled to go to the few Techers, and to noon 'others, the Maiſtres waxen riche of Monie, and 'the Learners pouere in connyng, as Experyence 'openlie ſhewith ayenſt all Vertu and Ordre of 'Well Publik.

'And theſe Premiſſes moven and ſturen of 'grete Devocion and Pitee Maſtre William Lycchefeld Parſon of the Parich Chirche of Al Hallowen the More in London, Maiſtre Gilbert, Perſon of Seint Andrew Holbourne, in the Suburbs 'of the ſaid Citee, Maiſtre John Cote, Perſon of 'Seint Petre in Cornhull of London, and John 'Neel, Maiſtre of the Houſ or Hoſpital of Seint 'Thomas of Acres, and Perſon of Colchirche in 'London; to compleyne unto you, and for Remedie beſechyn you, to pray the Kyng our Soveraign Lord, that he bi the Advys and Aſſent 'of the Lords Spirituel and Temporel in this 'preſent Parliament aſſembled, and bi Authoritie 'of the ſame Parliament, will provide, ordeyne 'and graunt to the ſaid Maiſtre William and his 'Succeſſors, that they in the ſeid Pariſh of Alhallowen, ‘ hallowen, to the ſaid Maiſtre Gilbert, and his Succeſſors, that they in the ſeid Pariſh of Seint Andrew to the ſaid Maſtre John and his Succeſſors, that they in the ſaid Pariſh of Seint Petre, and to the ſeid John Maiſtre, [of the ſeid Hoſpital] and his Succeſſors; that they within the foreſaid Parriſh of our Ladie of Colchirche, in the which the ſaid Houſe of S. Thomas is ſette; may ordeyne, create, eſtabliſh, and ſett a Perſon ſufficientlie lerned in Gramer, to hold and exerciſe a Schole in the ſame Science of Gramer, and it there to teche to al that will learne.

‘ And that everiche of the ſaid Maiſtre, Maiſtre William, Maiſtre Gilbert, Maiſtre John, and John Neel, Maiſtre; ſuch Schole Maiſtre ſo bi him ſett, and everiche of their Succeſſors, ſuch Scolemaiſtre by him, or bi any of his Predeceſſors ſo eſtabliſhed and ſett, ſpeciallie as is above rehercid, may in his own Parich or Place remove, and another in his Place ſubſtitute, and ſett, as often as any of the ſaid Perſones, or their Succeſſors ſemith, [and] the Cauſe reaſonable ſo requireth.

‘ And ſo to do ich of the ſaid Perſones and their Succeſſors, as often as it happenyth any of the ſaid Scoles to be voyd of a Scolemaiſtre in any manner wyſe, to the honour of God, and encreaſyng of Vertue.

‘ Reſponſio. The Kyng wille, that it be do, as it is deſired; ſo that it be done bi thadvyſe of the Ordinary, therelles of the Archbiſhope of Canterbury for the time being.

Five other publick Schools in London.

Nine Years after, viz. 34. H. 6. were Five other Schools ſet up in other Churches in London, by the Care of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Biſhop of London, confirmed by the King's Letters Patents; to wit, one within the Church Yard of St. Pauls, a Second at the Collegiate Church of St. Martins Le Grand, another at St. Mary de Arcubus, that is Bow-Church in Cheapſide, another at St. Dunſtans in the Eaſt, and the Fifth at the Hoſpital of St. Anthonies, and no more.

This was done for this good End, to check and ſuppreſs other ſmaller Schools of late ſet up by ignorant and illiterate Grammar Maſters, which did the Youth more harm than good, as the Kings Letters Patents did hint, which were as follow:

Pro magiſtris Grammaticalibus in Civitat. London. Record. Turr. Rot. pat. 34. H. 6. part. 2. mem. 20.

There was alſo an Act of Parliament to confirm this.

All theſe antient Schools are long ſince diſſolved and vaniſhed, except St. Anthonies which outlaſted the reſt; but better are eſtabliſhed in their Rooms. For the Difference between theſe and our later Schools is, that though theſe were publick and common Schools, yet were not free; only ſuch Boys as were hopeful, and their Parents poor, were exhibited to, and their Schooling paid for by the voluntary good Will of Noble Men and Merchants, and the Richer Sort of Citizens. But the Schools of later Times, which we call Free-Schools, do much exceed them, in that they are Houſes founded by pious Men, and a Yearly competent Maintenance ſettled upon the Teachers, on condition to teach ſuch a Number of the Children of the Pariſh, where they are built, freely, without taking any Salary or Reward from their Parents or Friends.

Free Schools.

The preſent Free Schools.

Of this latter and more modern ſort of Schools, the City now hath theſe following, viz. that near St. Pauls, that near Mercers Chapel, both belonging to the Company of Mercers; that near Canning-ſtreet, belonging to the Merchant Taylors Company; one in Ratcliff, one in Barking Pariſh, one in White Chappel, one in Cripplegate Pariſh: Others belonging to Hoſpitals; two in Southwark, beſides many more maintained by the Societies for Reformation of Manners. To which add ſeveral others in the neighbouring City of Weſtminſter, to be mentioned particularly when we come to the Deſcription of that City. But before we take any further notice of any of theſe Schools, let us firſt make ſome Mention of old St. Anthonies.

St. ANTHONIES SCHOOL.

St. Anthonies School.

That of St. Anthonies, though it be now extinct, yet for the Antiquity and Fame of it, when it ſtood, in this our Perambulation, we are bound to go and viſit even in the Ruins of it. It was ſituate in Broadſtreet-Ward, in the Pariſh of St. Benet Fink, and near the Place where the French Church now ſtands in Thredneedle Street. This School was large and fair, and (before St. Paul's School was founded) of the chiefeſt Account in London; and many eminent Scholars were bred up in it, of which Sir Thomas More was one, whoſe Maſter was named Nicholas Holt, a Man of Fame and Learning in thoſe Days. The School was part of an Hoſpital well endowed, dedicated to St. Anthony of Vienna, which at length Edward IV. annexed and appropriated to the Collegiate Church of Windſor, to enjoy the ſame with all the Eſtate thereunto belonging, to their proper uſe, when it ſhould become void by Death, Reſignation, or otherwiſe. The Revenues of the School being at length embezzelled, it is now come to nothing: Yet it was in being in the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's Time, when one Hilton, a grave and good Man was Maſter. But more of the Antiquities of this School may be read when we come to Broadſtreet Ward.

Monaſtic. Anglican.

St. PAUL'S SCHOOL.

St. Pauls School.

The next Foundation appointed for the Education of Youth, both for Antiquity and Repute, is that called St. Pauls School, Built and well Endowed by an excellent Pious and Learned Clergyman, Dr. John Colet, K. Henry the VIIIth's eſteemed Chaplain, Dean of St. Pauls, the only ſurviving Son of Sir Henry Colet, Knt. Citizen and Mercer of London, and twice Lord Maior of the ſaid City. This School was founded, and a Maſter for it provided at the Year 1509, for one Hundred Fifty three Children to be taught freely; the Dean perhaps in that preciſe Number, having his Mind upon the like Number of great Fiſhes caught by St. Peter, in that miraculous Draught, upon the Direction that Chriſt gave to caſt down the Net on the right ſide of the Ship, John xxi. 11. And ſuch was his generous and liberal Mind, that he ſettled his whole Patrimony upon it in his Lifetime. The School Houſe is large and ſpacious, fronting the Street on the Eaſt of St. Pauls Cathedral. It conſiſteth of Eight Claſſes or Forms; in the firſt whereof Children learn their Rudiments; and ſo according to their Proficiency are advanced unto the other Forms till they riſe to the Eighth. Whence, being commonly made perfect Grammarians, good Orators and Poets, well inſtructed in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, and ſometimes in other Oriental Languages, they remove to the Univerſities; and many of them enjoy Exhibitions, ſome of Ten Pounds a Year for Seven Years (if they tarry ſo long) towards their Maintenance there. The School is governed and taught by two Maſters, viz. an High Maſter, and a Surmaſter, and a Chaplain: Whoſe cuſtomary Office was to read the Latin Prayers in the School (framed for the peculiar uſe thereof) and to inſtruct the Children of the two firſt Forms in the Elements of the Latin Tongue, and alſo in the Catechiſm and Chriſtian Manners; for which there is a Room called the Veſtibulum, being the Anti-room to the School, where the Youth are to be initiated into the Grounds and Principles of Chriſtian Knowledge, as a good and proper Introduction into other Human Learning. The pious Founder dedicated this his School to the Child JESUS, (who ſat among the Doctors at Twelve Years old) as the great and compaſſionate Patron of the Children here to be educated. This, Part of the Founders Epitaph ſhews;

Quique Scholam ſtruxit celebrem cognomine JESU.

ſo that the true Name of this School is Jeſus School, rather than Pauls School; but the Saint hath robbed his Maſter of his Title.

Inſcriptions upon the School.

The Founder delighted in Inſcriptions and Mottoes, which he appointed to be ſet up in ſeveral Parts and Places of the School, as ſhort and pithy Intimations of his Mind and Intentions, which were all there remaining before the great Fire. Over the Windows on the Outſide toward the Street were theſe Words ingraven in great Capital Letters SCHOLA CATECHIZATIONIS PUERORUM IN CHRISTI OPT. MAX. FIDE ET BONIS LITERIS. Over the School Door, INGREDERE UT PROFICIAS. Upon each Window on the Inſide were to be read theſe Words painted on the Glaſs, AUT DOCE, AUT DISCE, AUT DISCEDE, ſuggeſting both to Scholar and Teacher their Duty or Doom; which I remember the upper Maſter, in my Time, uſed often to inculcate upon ſuch Scholars, as were idle and negligent: Either Learn or be gone.

The Veſtibulum.

In the Veſtibulum, which was the Antichamber to the School Room, was this Inſcription in Capitals upon the Wall, ſhewing for what End and Purpoſe this Apartment was intended. HOC VESTIBULO CATECHIZENTUR PUERI IN FIDE, MORIBUSQUE CHRISTIANIS, NEQUE NON PRIMIS GRAMMATICES RUDIMENTIS INSTITUANTUR, PRIUSQUAM AD PROXIMAM HUJUS SCHOLÆ CLASSEM ADMITTANTUR. In another Place of this Veſtibulum was Ingraven, PUERITIÆ CHRISTIANÆ JOH. COLET. DEC. S&i. PAULI HANC SCHOLAM POSUIT: Denoting how qualified, (viz. with Chriſtian Knowledge and Manners) it was the Founders Will thoſe ſhould be, that were to be Scholars here. Over the Door entring out of the Veſtibulum into the School Room this Verſe;

$$\textit{Mente} \left\{ \begin{matrix} \textit{Velis,} \\ \textit{Poſſis,} \\ \textit{Adſis,} \end{matrix} \right\} \textit{hac Lege recludor.}$$

The School Room.

In the School Room over the Door was this Inſcription PUERI IN HAC SCHOLA GRATIS ERUDIENDI C. L. III. TANTUM, AD NUMERUM SEDIUM. Underneath which, ſince the rebuilding of the School by the Mercers, for ever grateful Remembrance, were theſe Lines added, compoſed, I conjecture, by Mr. Crumleholm, then the worthy Maſter.

At the upper end of the School, facing to the Door, was a decent Cathedra, or Chair placed, ſomewhat advanced, for the high Maſter to ſit in, when he pleaſed, and to teach and dictate there. And over it was a lively Effigies, (and of exquiſite Art) of the Head of Dr. Colet, cut (as it ſeemed) either in Stone or Wood; and over the Head in Capitals, DEO OPT. MAX. TRINO ET UNI JOHANNES COLETUS DEC. S&i. PAULI LONDIN. HANC SCHOLAM POSUIT. On which Figure an excellent Poet, and once a Scholar of this School, made theſe Verſes:

'Eloquio juvenes ubi Lillius ille polivit,
'In Statuâ ſpiras, magne Colete, tuâ.
'Quam ſi Praxiteles feciſſet magnus, & ille
'Forſitan æquâſſet, non ſuperâſſet opus.
'Hac Sâlva Statuâ, divina Forma Coleti

But this Figure was deſtroyed with the School in the great Fire; yet was afterwards found in the Rubbiſh by a curious Man, and Searcher into the City Antiquities, who obſerved (and ſo told me) that it was Caſt and Hollow, by a curious Art now loſt.

Mr. Bagford.

Some further Account of this School.

From this School I was ſent to Cambridge, having had my Education there, by the good Providence of God, for near the Space of ſix Years. And therefore it will be pardoned to my publick Gratitude to that Place, if I inſiſt a little longer in my Declaration of the firſt founding of it, and of Matters relating thereunto; as, of the Laws and Inſtitution of it, made by the Founder; of the School-Maſters that have been ſet over it by the Mercers, to whom the Care of it is committed, of ſome of the eminent Perſons bred up in it. And laſtly, Of the Benefactors, beſide the firſt Founder.

Colet makes Book for School.

As ſoon as Colet had built his School, he provided a Book for his young Scholars: Which he called, An Introduction of the Parts of Speaking for Children and young Beginners, into Latin Speech. Which is the Ground and firſt Draught of that Book we now commonly call The Accidence. By this Introduction he put the firſt Rudiments into an eaſier and apter Method for learning, than any was before. And this he recommended in a Prefatory Epiſtle to William Lilly the Maſter, to teach it the Children, dated the Calends of Auguſt 1509. viz. in theſe Words.

Joannes Coletus ſuo Lilio ſalutem,

Procures Eraſmus's Book De Copia, for his School.

And near about this Time, or not long after, he procured from his Friend Eraſmus Roterodamus, another Book for his School, namely, that entitled, De Copia Verborum. For which he promiſed the ſaid Eraſmus (while he was once walking with him in his Garden) fifteen Angels, as a Gratuity. And no queſtion Eraſmus was pleaſed well to contribute ſomething to ſuch a Foundation, which he himſelf took occaſion ſometimes to commend and extol; as he did in a Letter to Colet, Anno 1512, in theſe Words, Ludum literarium longe pulcherrimum, ac magnificentiſſimum inſtituiſti; ubi ſub electiſſimis ac probatiſſimis præceptoribus Britannica Pubes rudibus ſtatim annis ſimul & Chriſtum & optimas imbiberet literas, i. e. 'You have erected a 'moſt beautiful and noble School, where under 'the choiceſt and moſt approved Maſters, the 'Engliſh Youth might, ſoon after their Childhood, 'imbibe both Chriſt and the beſt Learning.

Conſtruction of the Eight Parts of Speech.

In the Year 1513, Collet ſent Lilly another Book for the School, of the Conſtruction of the Eight Parts of Speech: Which was done by Eraſmus alſo, upon the earneſt Suggeſtion of Colet, being nothing but the Emendations of, and Additions to ſuch a Work, firſt done by Lilly. This was nothing but the Grounds of our Latin Syntaxis. This Book he alſo introduced with a Latin Epiſtle, viz.

Which Colet recommends to Lilly to teach in his School.

Haud aliter mihi videor affectus in novam hanc ſcholam noſtram, Lili chariſſime, quam in unicum filium pater: in quem non ſolum gaudet univerſam ſuam ſubſtantiam transfundere, verum etiam ſua viſcera, ſi liceat, cupit impertiri. Nam ut huic eſt parum genuiſſe, niſi eundem diligenti Educatione ad bonam frugem provexerit, ita meo animo non ſatis eſt, quod Ludum hunc inſtitui, hoc eſt, genui, quodq; in ſumpto patrimonio univerſo, vivus etiam ac ſuperſtes ſolidam hæreditatem ceſſi, niſi modis omnibus dem operam, ut pijs moribus & bonis literis diligenter educatus ad maturam frugem adoleſcat. Proinde libellum hunc de conſtructione octo partium orationis ad te mitto, puſillum quidem, ſed non puſillum utilitatis allaturum noſtræ pubi, ſi diligenter abs te fuerit traditus.

Scis in præceptis brevitatem placere Flacco: Cujus ſententiam ipſe vehementer approbo. Porro, ſi qua præterea erunt digna cognitu, tuarum partium erit, ut incident in prælegendis authoribus, ad notare. Bene vale: Domi noſtræ. MDXIII.

This Book De Conſtructione went ſome time under Eraſmus's Name. Yet Eraſmus declined to have it reckoned his, as being Lilly's Groundwork. And Lilly, on the other hand, modeſtly refuſed to have himſelf made the Author, after ſuch conſiderable Changes and Improvements made by Eraſmus. Who in the Year 1515, wrote a Preface before this Book, now commonly called, The Syntaxis, wherein he publickly diſowned it to be his, out of reſpect to Lilly; concluding with theſe Words, Verum hæc mihi præfari viſum eſt, ne poſt hæc quiſquam, ut meum amplectatur, i. e. But this I thought good to preface, that none hereafter might take the Book as mine.

Colet's Catechiſm for his School.

Colet alſo framed a ſhort Catechiſm in Engliſh, for the Youth of his School, which he obliged all to learn; and was uſed in the Times of Popery to be bound up at the beginning of the Accidence. It conſiſted of the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith, the Doctrine of the Seven Sacraments, an Explanation of the Love of God, of our own ſelves, and of our Neighbours; and laſtly, divers ſhort Precepts for a good Life. To which he joined in the Latin the Apoſtles Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ave Maria, and two ſhort Prayers; one to the Virgin Mary, and the other to JESUS the Guardian of the School. And if the ſuperſtitious Parts of this Catechiſm had been laid aſide; and the reſt, which is very pious, had been retained for the Uſe of the School, it would, in my Opinion, have been very well done; and the Founder's Will more complied with.

The Ordinances of St. Paul's School.

Ex Chart. Societat. Merceror. Lond.

The primary Inſtitution, Ordinances, Appointments and Documents of this School may be gathered from an old Statute Book, wrote by the Founder's own Hand, and by him delivered to Lilly; Which is thus inſcribed, Hunc libellum ego JOANNES COLET tradidi manibus magiſtri Lillij, XVIII. die Junij, Anno Dom. MCCCCCXVIII. It begins, JOHANNIS COLETI Fundatoris ſcholæ manu ſua propria prologus. "John Colet, Son of "Henry Colet, Dean of St. Paul's, deſiring nothing "more than Education, and bringing up Children "in good Manners and Literature, in the Year of "our Lord a Thouſand five hundred and twelve, "builded a School [not fully finiſhed till that "Year] in the Eaſt End of St. Paul's Church "for 153 Boys, to be taught free in the ſame.

"And ordained there a Maſter, a Sur-Maſter, "and a Chaplain, with ſufficient and perpetual "Stipends ever to endure; and ſet Patrons, De-"fenders, Governors and Rulers of the ſame "School, the moſt honeſt and faithful Fellow-"ſhip of the Mercers of London.

"And for becauſe nothing can continue long "and endure in good Order without Laws and "Statutes, I the ſaid John Colet, have expreſſed "my Mind, what I would ſhould be truly and "diligently obſerved and kept of the ſaid Ma-"ſter, Sur-Maſter, and Chaplain, and of the "Mercers, Governors of the School. That in "this Book may appear to what Intent I founded "this School.

The Ordinances for the High Maſter;

Then follow his Ordinances, "That he found-"ed the School in the Honour of Chriſt Jeſu in "pueritia, and of his bleſſed Mother Mary. That "the High Maſter ſhould be choſen by the War-"dens and Aſſiſtants of the Mercers. That he be "a Man whole in Body, honeſt, virtuous, and "learned in good and clean Latin Literature, "and alſo in Greek, if ſuch might be gotten; a "wedded Man, a ſingle Man, or a Prieſt, that "hath no Benefice with Cure or Service. His "Wages to be a Mark a Week, and a Livery "Gown of 4 Nobles, delivered in Cloth. His "Lodgings to be free. And to have the Tene-"ment of Stevenhith to reſort unto. That the "Sur-Maſter be verſed in Learning and well Lettered, to teach under the Maſter; either ſingle Man, wedded, or Prieſt, that hath no Benefice with Cure or Service: To be whole in Body. The High Maſter to chuſe him, as the Room ſhall be void; and to be confirmed by the Surveyors of the School; Lodgings to be aſſigned him in the Old Change: His Wages to be Six Shillings and eight Pence per Week; and a Livery Gown of 4 Nobles, delivered in Cloth.

Sur-Maſter;

For the Chaplain.

“That there ſhall be in the School a Prieſt daily, as he could, to ſing Maſs in the Chapel of the School, and to pray for the Children to proſper in good Life and in good Letters. That he was to be ſome honeſt, good, and virtuous Man. To be choſen by the Wardens and Aſſiſtants of the Mercery. To learn himſelf, or (if learned) to help to teach the School, if it ſeemed convenient to the High Maſter. To have no Benefice with Cure of Souls, nor no other Office or Occupation. To teach the Children the Catechiſm, and Inſtruction of the Articles of Faith and the Ten Commandments in Ergliſh. His Wages to be 8*l*. by the Year, and a Livery Gown of 26*s*. 8*d*. delivered in Cloth. His Chamber and Lodging to be in the new Houſe in the Old Change, or the Maſter's Lodging.

For the Children.

“Children of all Nations and Countries indifferently to be taught, to the Number of 153. The Maſter to admit theſe Children as they be offered; but firſt to ſee that they can ſay the Catechiſm, and alſo read and write competently; and to pay 4*d*. for writing their Name. Which Money the poor Scholar that ſwept the School was to have. Thrice a Day, viz. Morning, Noon, and Evening, proſtrate to ſay the Prayers contained in a Table in the School. No Tallow Candles, but only Wax to be uſed. No Meat, Drink, or Bottles to be brought; nor no Breakfaſts nor Drinkings in the Time of Learning. That the Scholars uſe no Cock-fighting, nor riding about of Victory, nor diſputing at St. Bartholomews; which be but fooliſh Babling and Loſs of Time. That they have no Remedies [i. e. Play Days begged] except the King, an Archbiſhop, or a Biſhop, preſent in his own Perſon, deſired it. The Children every Childermas Day to go to Paul's Church, and hear the Child-Biſhop Sermon, and after to be at the High Maſs, and each offer a Penny to the Child-Biſhop; and with them the Maſters and Surveyors of the School. In general Proceſſions, when warned, they ſhall go twain and twain together ſoberly; and not ſing out, but ſay devoutly ſeven Pſalms with the Litany. That if any Child admitted here, go to any other School to learn there, ſuch Child for no Man's Suit be again received into the School.

Child-Biſhop Sermon at St. Paul's.

What Authors to be read.

“To be taught always in good Literature both Latin and Greek, and good Authors, ſuch as have the very Roman Eloquence, joined with Wiſdom; ſpecially, Chriſtian Authors, that wrote their Wiſdom with clean and chaſt Latin, either in Verſe or Proſe. But above all, the Catechiſm in Ergliſh; after that the Accidence. Then Inſtitutum Chriſtiani hominis, which Eraſmus made at my [i. e. Colet's] Requeſt; the Copia Verborum of the ſame Author: Then other Chriſtian Authors; as Lactantius, Prudentius, and Proba; Sedulius, Juvencus, and Baptiſta Mantuanus; and ſuch other as ſhall be thought convenient for the true Latin Speech.

The Mercers Company Governors of the School.

“The Honourable Company of Mercers of London, to have all the Charge and Care, and Rule of the School. They to chuſe every Year of their Company two honeſt, ſubſtantial Men to be the Surveyors of the School. Who, in the Name of the whole Fellowſhip, ſhould take all the Care and Buſineſs of the School for that Year. They, to come into the School Six Days before Chriſtmaſs, and ſo many Days before Eaſter, St. John Baptiſt and Michaelmas: and pay the Maſters and Chaplain their Quarterly Wages; and at the latter end of the Year their Liveries in Cloth. And once in the Year to give up their Accounts to the Maſter, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants. And that to be about Candlemas, three Days before, or three Days after. Then a little Dinner to be made; and to call to account the receiving of all the Eſtate of the School: And the Maſter Warden to receive a Noble, the two other Wardens five Shillings; the Surveyors two Shillings; and for their riding to viſit the Lands 11*s*. the Clerk of the Mercery 3*s*. 4*d*. with ſome other Gifts. That which was ſpared that Day in Rewards and Charges, to be put into the Treaſury of the School. What remained, to be given to the Fellowſhip of the Mercery, to the maintaining and repairing all belonging to the School from time to time. The Surpluſage, above Repairs and Caſualties, to be put into a Coffer of Iron given by Colet, ſtanding in their Hall. And there from Year to Year to remain apart by it ſelf; that it might appear how the School of it ſelf maintained it ſelf. And at length over and above the whole Livelihood, if the ſaid School ſhould grow to any further Charge to the Mercery, that then alſo it might appear to the Laud and Praiſe, and Mercy of the ſaid Fellowſhip.

“Laſtly, That he left it to the ſaid Company to add and diminiſh to and from this his Book, and to ſupply it in every Default, and alſo to declare in it, as Time, Place, and juſt Occaſion ſhould require.

The Rents increaſed.

But now the Rents and Incomes of this School, by the good Huſbandry and Faithfulneſs of the Company of Mercers, are greatly advanced. So that the Salaries of the Maſters are more than doubled; and many Exhibitions, ſome of Ten Pounds, and ſome of Six Pounds odd Money, are granted forth towards the Maintenance of the Scholars that go away from the School to the Univerſities, payable for Seven Years, if they tarry ſo long there.

rnt and re- ilt.

This School was burnt down in the common Calamity by Fire, Anno 1666, but built up again much after the ſame Manner and Proportion it was before; together with the Library; and an Houſe added on the South End thereof for the Second Maſter. Whoſe Dwelling before, and from the firſt Founding of the School, was in the Old Change, adjoining to the ſaid School: This Houſe hath a very handſome Front, anſwerable to the High Maſter's Houſe at the North End of the School, on which is engraven, ÆDES PRÆCEPTORIS GRAMMATICES.

Their Names.

1512. William Lillie, High Maſter; placed by the Founder. Of whom Eraſmus, in his Epiſtle before the Syntaxis, gave this Character, viz. Utriuſq; literaturæ haud vulgariter peritus, & rectè inſtituendæ pubis Artifex. i. e. That he was a Man ſingularly ſkilled in both kinds of Literature [Latin and Greek] and an Artiſt in the right bringing up of Youth. Being a good Poet, he made the Latin Rules in our Grammar for the Genders of Nouns, and the Preterperfect Tenſes and Supines of Verbs, putting them into Hexameter Verſe, for Youths eaſier learning and remembring them. He compoſed alſo thoſe excellent Rules in Latin Verſe, called Qui mihi, for the Inſtruction of the Children, his Scholars, in good Manners. He bred up many great Scholars, and ſuch as afterward proved famous in their Times; as Lupſet, Sir Anthony Denny, Sir Edward North, Sir William Paget, Leland the Antiquary, who acknowledges it in one of his Epigrams; Inſtructor Lillius ille fuit. After Ten Years, or more, he was ſucceeded by

1522. John Rightwiſe, or Ritwis (in Latin, Juſtus,) who had been ſecond Maſter before; and was Lillie's Son in Law, having married his Daughter Dionyſia. He was born in Norfolk, bred at Eaton School and King's College in Cambridge, where he was admitted in 1508, reputed an excellent Poet, and wrote theſe Verſes upon Lilie, his Father in Law and Predeceſſor;

Vivere perpetuis ſi poſſunt nomina Chartis,
Ac cineri quenquam eſt fas ſupereſſe ſuo;
Crede tuo hoc, LILI, doctrinæ munere claro,
Dignus es æterna poſteritate frui.

Leland hath an Epigram to this Maſter, intitled, Ad Juſtum Paulinæ ſcholæ Moderatorem: Beginning

Qui linguas teneras nova refingis
Quadam dexteritate, nec ruinam
Muſarum pateris nitentium ullam;
Tu nunc, Juſte, meum manu benigna
Carmen ſuſcipe - - - - - -

This Rightwiſe made the Tragedy of Dido out of Virgil, and acted a Part in it with his Scholars before Cardinal Wolſey, with great Applauſe.

Rents eaſed.

He reviſed and augmented Lilies Propria quæ maribus, & As in preſenti. And publiſhed them with an Interpretation of the Words in them. After Ten Years Labour here, he alſo gave Place to

1532. Richard Jones. Next him ſucceeded

1549. Thomas Freeman: Who alſo ſpent Ten Years in the laborious Employment of the Education of Youth, and then came into his Province

1559. John Cook, M. A. admitted into King's College Cambridge, Anno 1533. He ſeems to have been a Native of Lincolnſhire, and School-Fellow to the Lord Treaſurer Burghley; as may be conjectured from a Letter of the ſaid Cook's to the ſaid Lord, thankfully acknowledging the obliging Reception that great Miniſter of State once gave him, after a long Abſence and Intermiſſion of Acquaintaince. Cum Uſus aliquis, (as the Letter ran) a primo pæne ſtudiorum noſtrorum curriculo, vix intereſſet; i. e. when there had ſcarce been any Converſation between them from the firſt Courſe of their Studies to that Time.

This Letter he began with a good Sentence and a good Principle; which, to leave ſome Remembrance of the Man, I ſhall here ſet down. Equidem in communi vita ac ſocietate hominum inter ipſos, nihil prius neq; libero homine dignius eſſe reor, quam animo ut propenſo ſimus ad eos juvandos, qui ope altera indigent. Eo etenim orti omnes, editiq; in lucem ſumus, bene ut mereamur alter de altero, præſertim in amicorum inopia ac neceſſitudine.

He went from the School to a good Living in Somerſetſhire, called North Cadbury. Which he obtained from the Patron, the Earl of Huntingdon, by the Interceſſion of his ſaid Noble Friend, the Lord Treaſurer.

There is a Copy of handſome Latin Verſes of this Cook's compoſing, ſet before Dr. Tho. Wilſon's Book of Uſury. He that ſucceeded him, was

William Malim, of Kings College in Cambridge; 1573. and afterwards lived at the Court; Son perhaps to John Malim, Phyſician, buried in St. Peters Cornhill, London, and that gave 40*l.* to the Poor of that Pariſh: A neat Scholar, writ a fine Hand, and Maſter of a very good Latin Style; and had been a great Traveller; had ſeen Conſtantinople, Antioch, Jeruſalem, and many other famous Cities in Aſia. Upon his return he was preſented to Secretary Cecyl, by Sir Ambroſe Cave. The Secretary retained him at his Table. And he with the great Earl of Leiceſter recommended him to the Queen. Sir William Cecyl afterwards employed him to retrieve what he could of the Writings of Sir Thomas Chaloner; and he prepared and publiſhed his ingenious Work De Repub. Anglorum, wrote in Latin Verſe. He had two great Patrons, viz. the foreſaid Cecyl, after Lord Treaſurer, and the great Earl of Leiceſter. After he had been near Seven Years Maſter of this School, he grew quite weary of his Work in rolling of Siſyphus his Stone, as he called it, and applyed himſelf to his great Patron the Lord Treaſurer, acquainting him with his Reſolution of reſigning; and praying his Favour to provide him ſome other more agreeable, and more eaſy, and more profitable Employment. (For in thoſe Times, the Salary was not ſo weighty and encouraging as ſince it hath been.) He complained to his aforeſaid Patron, Me nimium Paupertate gravari, libertate privari, conculcari Doctrinam, ſpes meas exinaniri. He deſired not, he ſaid, a freedom from all Labours, but with Ovid:

Mitius Exilium, pauloque quietius opto.

he wiſh'd for a milder, and a little more quiet Baniſhment; concluding his Letter with theſe Verſes:

Adſis tu Cynoſura mihi, ter Nobilis Heros,
Nè tenui in menſa deſit mediocre Salinum;
Ne nimium fractum me rodat triſtis Egeſtas,
Neve ego perpetuò curis involvar acerbis.
Hæc mea vota precor ſupplex ne ſegnius hauri,
Candide Mæcenas, unus qui ſingula poſſis.
Sic tibi multiplices currant fæliciter anni,
Proſpera magnanimi numeres & luſtra Metelli.

He ſtayed about two Years after this Application to the Lord Treaſurer, and then departed, and ſeems to have got a Prebend of Lincoln, and became afterwards Maſter of Eaton School.

1581. John Harriſon, M. A. He was alſo of Kings College in Cambridge. A great Antiquary for Coins, and Engliſh Hiſtory. He had ſome Conteſt with the Company of Mercers for the Augmentation of his Salary. And by an Order agreed and eſtabliſhed, it was conſiderably increaſed to him and his Succeſſors. He continued Maſter of St. Pauls School Fifteen Years.

1596. Richard Mulcaſter, M. A. of a good Family in Carliſle in Cumberland. He was alſo bred in Eaton School, and choſen thence to Kings College in Cambridge; thence Elected Student of Chriſts Church, Oxon, Anno 1555. He ſeems to have been the firſt Maſter of Merchant Taylors School, in the Pariſh of St. Laurence Pountney, London. For he was choſen thither, Anno 1561, where after he had ſpent Five and Thirty Years he became Maſter of St. Pauls School. For the uſe of this School he wrote a Catechiſm in Latin in Hexameter and Pentameter Verſes. He alſo publiſhed two Books in Engliſh, while he was Maſter of Merchant Taylors School, about the Inſtruction of Children, in 4to. The former he preſumed to dedicate to the Queen, becauſe it pretended a common Good: For in it he laid down Poſitions for the training up of Children in Learning and Health. The latter which he called, The Elementarie, teaching the right Writing of Engliſh, he dedicated to the Earl of Leiceſter.

He was a Man of great Account for his Learning in thoſe Times: And for his Knowledge in the Oriental Languages, was valued by that great Engliſh Rabbi, Hugh Broughton. He had the Honour to be Maſter to Biſhop Andrews, while he governed Merchant Taylors School. He dyed Parſon of Stanford Rivers in Eſſex, whither he retired two or three Years before his Death. Next him came 1608. Alexander Gill born in Lincolnſhire, M. A. of Corpus Chriſti College Oxon. He wrote a Book intitled Logonomia, for amending and rectifying the Writing of the Engliſh Language. And being a Divine as well as a Critic, he wrote a Tract concerning the Trinity in Unity, againſt a certain Anabaptiſt. And another Book entitled, Sacred Philoſophy of holy Scripture. He was buried in Mercers Chapel.

1635. Alexander Gill, D. D. Son of the ſaid Alexander. He had been ſecond Maſter before under his Father. He was eſteemed one of the beſt Latin Poets in his Time. Many Pieces of his Poetry are extant. He remained Maſter of this School the ſhorteſt time of any Maſter before or ſince, being removed in the Year 1640, perhaps for his Severity, yet he had an Annuity allowed him of 25*l*.

1640. John Langley, born near Banbury in Oxfordſhire, of Magdalen Hall, Oxon, firſt Maſter of the College School in Gloceſter, from thence choſen to St. Pauls. A general Scholar, and eſpecially a great Antiquary in Matters of our own Country. Of the Stories and Curioſities whereof, he made a conſiderable Collection in his Travels. He was known and beloved by the learned Selden. He compoſed a ſhort Rhetorick, and a compendious Proſodia for the uſe of his School, beſides divers Amendments, Additions, and Explanations of the Latin and Greek Grammars, uſed by his Scholars. He had a very awful Preſence and Speech, that ſtruck a mighty Reſpect and Fear in his Scholars, which however wore off after they were a little uſed to him. And his Management of himſelf towards them was ſuch that they both loved and feared him. He was a ſingle Man, and dyed in the Year 1657, and was buried in Mercers Chapel, all the Scholars attending his Funeral, walking before the Corps (hung with Verſes inſtead of Eſchotcheons) from the School through Cheapſide, with White Gloves on: and I then was one of the Number. His Funeral Sermon was preached by one of his learned Friends, Dr. Edward Reynolds, (afterwards Biſhop of Norwich) upon the Text Acts vii. And Moſes was learned in all the Learning of the Egyptians; wherein both Learning, and the Learned Man deceaſed, were much commended: And the Sermon was Printed.

1657. Samuel Cromleholme, or Crumlum of Corpus Chriſti College, Oxon, who was alſo removed from the Government of Glouceſter School hither, where he had once been ſecond Maſter. And ſuch an Opinion had Mr. Langley of him, that on his Death Bed he recommended him to the Mercers, as the fitteſt Man to ſucceed him. He was πολύγλωττος, one that underſtood a great many Languages, and exceeded his Predeceſſor in that ſort of Learning. In his Time Pauls School was burnt in the great Fire; and he loſt an incomparable Library; for he was very curious in Books. But he lived to teach School there again, after the beautiful rebuilding of it. He dyed a Married Man, but without Children. From whoſe Care of my Education, (which I think my ſelf bound publickly to acknowlege) I removed to the Univerſity of Cambridge, Anno 1661.

1672. Thomas Gale, D. D. A Yorkſhire Man, bred at Weſtminſter School, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; an excellent Grecian and Antiquarian, eſpecially for the Hiſtory of this Kingdom. A Married Man, and had Children. He reſigned, being made Dean of York, lately deceaſed. His Son is Roger Gale, Eſq; a Perſon of great Learning, and Merit.

1697. John Poſtlethwait, born in Cumberland, bred in Merton College, Oxon, choſen from a School in St. Martins in the Fields, of the Foundation of Dr. Thomas Teniſon, while he was Rector of the ſaid Pariſh, ſince the moſt Reverend Father Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Who upon the Experience and thorough Knowledge of him, recommended him with a moſt ample Commendation to the Mercers Company, whoſe Teſtimonial was as followeth:

The Archbiſhop's Recommendation of him.

“I have known Mr. Poſtlethwait nigh Twenty Years. He hath been long the upper Schoolmaſter at St. Martins. I have never known him wilfully abſent for two Hours on any Day in School time. He is a Man of great Abilities in Learning, and particularly in that which relates to Grammar, in the Knowlege of the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin Tongues. He is of a very even Temper, and one who ſtudieth the Temper and Genius of Youth. His Scholars are in awe of him by reaſon of his grave Deportment and good Diſcipline, but he doth not terrify them with Severity. He hath ſent forth divers eminent Scholars. And I do believe for Inſtance ſake, that there are few in the Nation equal (for their Time) to Wallis of Magdalen College, Oxford, and Mr. Fawcet of Benet College in Cambridge, late his Scholars. He is very careful of the Religion and Manners of thoſe under his Care, and taketh pains with divers of them every Lord's Day before Church time. His Converſation is ſerious and diſcreet, and hath nothing of Pedantry in it. I have ſaid very much of him, and yet I cannot do him Juſtice in ſaying leſs.

THO. CANTUAR.

Upon his Death, Philip Ayſcough, M. A. who had been Surmaſter ſucceeded; now living.

Iſaac Steel, M. A. preſent Surmaſter.

Hugh Wyat, A. B. Chaplain, or third Maſter.

Out of this School, by the care of theſe diligent and learned Men, have gone forth from time to ſons of minence E- cated in School.

to time many that have proved able Stateſmen, Prelates, and Divines, Phyſicians, and Civilians, and others that have been raiſed to Quality and Honour, whoſe Names cannot here be ſet down; only I will mention Sir Anthony Denny, Sir Edward North, Sir William Paget, Lupſet, Leland, in more antient Times: In later times, Whitaker the learned Profeſſor of Divinity in Cambridge, and Diſputant againſt the Papiſts; Dr. Cumberland, the great Philoſopher and Mathematician, as well as Divine; the antient Biſhop of Peterborough, now deceaſed, and Dr. Meggot late Dean of Wincheſter, a ſingular Preacher; Sam. Pepys, Eſq; Secretary ſometime to the Navy; Sir Thomas Davies, late Lord Maior of London; Benjamin Calamy, D. D. Sir Charles Scarborough, one of the learnedeſt Phyſicians of his Time; Spencer Compton, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, and Knight of the Shire of Suſſex.

I conclude this Catalogue with the moſt Victorious Duke of Marlborough, one of the greateſt Generals of this Age in Europe.

Knight, D. D.

I only add further the Words of him that preached the laſt Anniverſary Day before the Gentlemen bred up at the School. 'At this preſent 'ſome of them [that had been Scholars there] 'are deſervedly honoured with the Mace, the Co'ronet, and the Mitre.

The Reverend Founder ſaw ſome Succeſs of his School in his own Time. Sir Thomas More, who had a great Friendſhip with the Founder (who alſo was his Confeſſor,) in a Letter to him, compared his School to the Wooden Horſe of Troy, out of which the Grecians iſſued to ſurprize the City. In like manner, ſaid he, out of this your School many have come, that have ſubverted and overthrown all Ignorance and Rudeneſs.

efactors.

Beſides the Founder, the School hath enjoyed other Benefactors.

The Lady Camden, Wiſe to Sir Baptiſt Hickes, Lord Camden, (ſome time a Mercer in Cheapſide) gave certain Exhibitions of 10*l. per Annum*, to ſuch of the Scholars as went thence to Trinity College in Cambridge, beſides other Exhibitions.

The School at MERCERS CHAPEL.

e School Mercers apel.

Another of theſe publick Schools is that which is kept at Mercers Chapel, which I ſubjoyn next to St. Paul's School, becauſe it hath the ſame Patrons and Governors, viz. the Company of Mercers, who pay the Maſter 40*l.* a Year, and allow him an Houſe, for which he is bound to teach 25 Scholars gratis. The School is of great Antiquity, and hath been under the Patronage of the Mercers ſo long that the Founder is not known: unleſs it be he that was the Founder of St. Thomas of Acons, Thomas Fitzthebald, who Married Thomas Becket's Siſter. Who in the Reign of K. Henry II. founded in this Place an Hoſpital for a Maſter and Brethren, Knights Hoſpitalers: which upon a Surrender of it to K. Henry VIII. Anno 1538. was purchaſed by the Mercers, who continued the School, whether by Contract, or voluntary good Will, I am yet to ſeek. Only thus much appears, that when by an Act of Parliament, 25 Hen. 6. Four Grammar Schools were appointed to be opened in London for the Education of the City Youth, one of theſe was to be kept in the Hoſpital of St. Thomas of Acres, or Colechurch adjoining to it; and the Maſter of the ſaid Houſe, or Parſon of the ſaid Pariſh, from time to time to place a fit Schoolmaſter there.

The preſent (or late) Maſter of this School is Mr. Hilſby; the Uſher, Mr. Fogg.

MERCHANT TAYLORS School.

rchant Tay- School.

Another School of great Fame and Reputation is, that ſituated in the Pariſh of St. Laurence Pountney, near Caning Street, and Erected Anno 1661, 3. Elizab. by the Worſhipful Company of Merchant Taylors of London, Emanuel Lucar being then Maſter of the ſaid Company. Mr. Richard Hills, ſometime Maſter of the Company, gave 500*l.* toward the Purchaſe of the Place where the ſaid School ſtands, which was called The Manor of the Roſe, an Houſe belonging to a Duke of Buckingham.

The State and Condition of it.

This School conſiſteth of Six Forms, where near three Hundred Boys have their Education; whereof by the Statutes of the School an Hundred are taught gratis, Fifty at 2*s.* 6*d.* a Quarter; and an Hundred at 5*s.* a Quarter. And for the due inſtructing of theſe, the School maintains a Maſter (whoſe Salary is 10*l.* a Year, but his Benefits otherwiſe very conſiderable) and three Uſhers. And for the better Enquiry into the Proficiency of all the Scholars, there is an Order appointed for the Probation of the School to be made only by the Maſter and the three Uſhers. The firſt Probation to be on the 11th Day of March; the Second on the 11th of September; the Third on the 11th of December; not being Sundays, and then upon the next Day following. And there be excellent Orders ſet down in the Regiſtry, (kept in the School Library) to the Number of Thirteen, directory of the Maſter in this Buſineſs, as to his Probation and Tryal of the Abilities of all the Boys that learn there.

The Schools Three Probation.

A fourth Probation appointed.

In the Year 1645, the Company of Merchant Taylors appointed a Fourth Probation, upon the Motion of Mr. Du-Gard, then chief Maſter of this Grammar School, viz. that there ſhall be another private Probation of the Scholars, beſides theſe Three which are already ſettled by the Orders of the School. And this is on the 15th Day June Yearly. The preciſe Manner of this Examination is ſet down in the School Regiſtry; and all the Orders thereof allowed and approved under the Hands of ſome of the greateſt Scholars and Divines in thoſe times, viz. John Overal, D. D. Dean of St. Pauls; John Dove, D. D. John Spencer, D. D. Nic. Fenton, D. D. John Childerley, D. D.

Examinations twice a Year.

It was further thought fit afterwards, for the ſatisfaction of the Maſter and Wardens, and Court of Aſſiſtants of the Merchant Taylors, as well for the true and faithful performance of the Probation of the Maſter and the three Uſhers, as likewiſe to know what Boys profit moſt, and be the beſt and likelieſt Scholars, that the Probations themſelves ſhould have their Examination and Tryal, to be done at two ſeveral times every Year. And this Examination to be made by two judicious Men, well learned both in Greek and Latin, being by the Maſter and Wardens thereunto requeſted two or three Days before. The Place of Examination to be in the South Part of the School, commonly called The Chapel. The Time to be between the 11th and 12th Days of the Months of March and September. And the whole Buſineſs to be ſo ordered, that the Examination be fully done between the Hours of Six and Eleven. The Maſter and Wardens, or two of them, to be at the School with the two learned Men at Six of the Clock in the Morning.

A Catalogue of the Maſters of this School. Regiſtry of the School.

The Maſters of this famous School from the firſt Foundation of it to the preſent time, with the Year of their reſpective Entrance, and the time of their Continuance, the following Table will ſhew.

NAMES of the MASTERS.

Entrance, Anno 1561. Continuance, Anno 25.

Richard Mulcaſter, firſt Maſter. He was bred at Eaton School, afterwards removed to Kings College in Cambridge; afterwards became a Student of Chriſts Church, Oxon; noted for his excellent Skill in Grammar and Philological Learning; unanimouſly choſen the firſt Maſter of this School: many Years after removed to the Government of Entr. Anno Contin. Years. the Free-School by St. Pauls. He became Parſon of Stamford Rivers in Eſſex, where he dyed Anno 1611. He writ (as hath been mentioned) a Tract about the Education of Children; and a Book called The Elementary, for the true writing of the Engliſh Tongue, Printed 1582, (wherein his Learning may be ſeen) being but the firſt Part of the ſaid Elementary; wherein he deſigned to ſhew the whole Matter which Children were to learn, and the whole Manner, how Maſters were to teach them.

1586. 5. Henry Wilkinſon.
1592. 6. Edmund Smith.
1599. 24. William Hayne.

This Man gave ſeveral Books to Sion College Library, when it was firſt Erected, about 1631, viz. Stevens Theſaurus, an Hebrew Bible of Plantins Edition, &c. See the Regiſtry in that Library.

1624. 7. Nicolas Gray.
1631. 2. John Edwards.
1634. 9. William Staple.
1644. 5. William Du-Gard.
1649. 7.m. John Stevens. Who left in the School Regiſtry this ſingle Memorial of himſelf, in regard of his ſhort continuance here.

Res Deus noſtras celeri citatas Turbine verſat.
Joh. Stevens, Sept. 25. 1650.

1650. 10. William Dugard.

The Succeedings of theſe two laſt named Dugard, were thus expreſſed in a Diſtick:

Regiſtry of the School.

Dugardum ſequitur Stephanus, Stephanumque viciſſim
Dugardus: Sortes verſat utrinque Deus.

This Dugard was a very diligent, exact, and excellently learned Man in all Grammatical Learning. And under his Care and Influence the School greatly flouriſhed. He Printed ſeveral Books for the Uſe of his School. Had a good Strain himſelf in Oratory and Poetry. A Stroke or two of his Poety in Greek, we have of his own Hand extant in the School Regiſtry; where by the way we may ſee, how he ſtood affected to the Mutations in the Age wherein he lived; firſt upon the Beheading of K. Charles I.

Μάρτυς ὑπὲρ θείων πατρικῶν τε νόμων ὅχ' ἄριστος
Σκηπτούχων ΚΑΡΟΛΟΣ μὲν ἀλειτέων χερσὶν ἔπιπτεν.
Ἴλερμος ὁ Δουγάρδου.

Martyr pro divinis patriiſque Legibus
Optimus Sceptriger CAROLUS ſceleratorum manibus cecidit.

Gulielmus Dugard.

* See the particular Cauſe at the End of this Chapter.

For which Verſes perhaps, or for his Affection to that King, (for I find no other Cauſe *) he might be diſcharged the School at that time.

Another Greek Diſtich remaining in the ſaid Regiſtry under his Hand is upon the Uſurper Oliver Cromwell's Mother, buried in Weſtminſter; which perhaps is the only Epitaph extant on her;

Ἐπὶ τῆς μητέρος τοῦ Ὀλιβέρου Κρομουέλλου ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τοῦ ὠεστμοναστηρίου κειμένης.

Μήτηρ τοῦ τέκνου καταράτου ἐνθάδε κεῖται.
Ὃς δύο μὲν βασιλεῖς τε καὶ ὤλεσε τρεῖς βασιλείας.

i. e. In Matrem OLIVERI CROMWELLI in Eccleſia Weſtmonaſterienſi ſepultam.

Mater nati execrabilis hic jacet:
Qui duos Reges, triaque regna perdidit.

This Dugard, after he had been Maſter Seventeen Years was diſmiſt the School in the Year 1661, for breaking ſome Orders of the Company, having been publickly warned and admoniſhed of it before: And departing he left this Verſe to his Succeſſor concerning the School Regiſtry, which hitherto he diligently had kept himſelf; School Regiſt.

——— Munere cedens
Hanc ſucceſſori ſcribendi Lampada trado.
Guil. Du Gard, haud ita pridem Mercatorum Sciſſorum, jam vero privatæ Scholæ in Vico de Colemanſtreet Moderator, Nov. 21. 1661.

And ſuch was his Reputation, that when he opened his private School in Colemanſtreet, within Eight Months he had gathered 193 Scholars.

John Goad, D. D. He was a Perſon of very good Eſteem, and valuable Learning, and brought up many good Scholars, who honour his Memory; particularly skilled in Aſtrology and Prognoſtications of the Winds and Weather; and for ſome time did preſent K. Charles with Monthly Accounts of every Days Wind and Weather. He was put out by the Company for too juſt Suſpicions of being Popiſhly affected; ſucceeded by ——— Hatcliff.

Ambroſe Bonwick, a Nonjuror.

Matthew Shorting, D. D. formerly of Jeſus College, and my old Fellow Collegian; after Conduct of Kings College, Cambridge. To whom I was beholden for his ready Admiſſion of me into the School Library, and imparting to me a ſight of the firſt Volume of the Regiſtry; the ſecond whereof I ſaw in Sion College.

Thomas Parcel, B. D. preſent Chief Maſter.
Matthew Smith, B. D.
John Gilman, D. D.
John Critel, M. A. Maſters alſo of the ſame School.

The Library.

The Library belonging to this School (as appears by a Parchment Book lying there) was built at the Charge of the Company of Merchant-Taylors. Who have now maintained the School with a Maſter and Three Uſhers an hundred and forty Years and upwards, at their proper Coſt and Charges: And after the great Fire, rebuilt it with the Houſes for the Maſter and Uſhers.

The Gentlemen brought up at this School, Citizens and others, began an Annual Feaſt in the Year 1698. The Collections made at thoſe Feaſts, amounting to a conſiderable Sum, they do lay out upon Exhibitions, to be allowed to ſuch of the School as are ſuperannuated, and miſs of Elections.

RATCLIFF SCHOOL.

Ratcliff School.

In Ratcliff, in the Pariſh of Stepney, is another Free School, convenient for the Inhabitants of thoſe Parts of the City, founded in the Reign of King Henry VIII. by Nicholas Gibſon, Grocer; and in the Year 1538, one of the Sheriffs, for Sixty poor Mens Children, to be there taught by a Schoolmaſter, who was to have a Salary of 10*l.* a Year; and an Uſher, who was to have 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* This School is under the Care of the Company of Coopers, London. Here the famous Biſhop Andrews was ſome time a Scholar. Out of this School, of later Times, ſome of the Scholars yearly entertain the Natives of Stepney Pariſh with Speeches and Verſes in Latin and Greek, as they paſs by it, on the Day of their Anniverſary Feaſt. To this School is an Almſhouſe annexed for 14 poor People, by the ſame Founder.

The preſent State of this Foundation.

This charitable Foundation in Ratcliff, (as to the State of it at preſent) conſiſts of an Hoſpital, as well as of a School: To which belongs a Chappel, where Prayers are read to thoſe that belong to it. Thirty Boys are here taught free, beſides other Children that reſort thither for good Learning. Mr. Lee the Schoolmaſter's Salary is 36*l. per Annum.* To which belongeth alſo an Uſher, who teacheth Arithmetick and Mathematicks. They want Exhibitions for the Encouragement of the Scholars, to fit themſelves to be ſent thence to the Univerſities. To this Foundation belong alſo Twenty Penſioners, that is to ſay, fourteen Women and ſix Men; the former have 20*s.* a Quarter, and the Men 25*s.* a Quarter. Each have a Room and a Cellar, and a Garden Plat. The Founder Mr. Gibſon's Picture is there remaining. This Foundation was once burnt down, but rebuilt by the Company of Coopers of London, the preſent Patrons.

CHRISTCHURCH SCHOOL.

Chriſt Church School.

Another of theſe famous Schools in London, is that of Chriſt's Church Hoſpital; which, as well as the Hoſpital, is under the Patronage and Government of the City. Here are commonly very learned and able Schoolmaſters appointed from time to time; who formerly did not only inſtruct the poor Children of the Foundation, but many other Children of Citizens, ſent thither by their Parents, who paid for their Schooling. And here they arrived oftentimes to very good Skill in the Grounds of Latin and Greek Learning, as well as at the other Schools before mentioned; but now none allowed to be taught there but ſuch as are of the Foundation.

Diſputations yearly among theſe Scholars.

Let me mention a laudable Cuſtom that the Scholars of this School had, that begun in the Year 1554. Which was, that on St. Bartholomew's Day publick Diſputations were held among them upon the Points of Grammar, and upon what they had learned. And for the rendring it the more ſolemn, the Lord Maior and Aldermen, and the learned Counſil of the City, would be preſent, as Judges of the Diſputation. Who, after all was over, rewarded thoſe that acquitted themſelves beſt with Pens of Gold and Silver, and gratified and encouraged the Schoolmaſters with Money. This was ſet on foot by Sir Will. Cheſter in his Sherivalty. And Sir Martin Bows, a very wealthy, and as worthy a Citizen and Alderman, for the further Encouragement of this ingenuous Emulation among the Youth, added, for another Reward to be beſtowed at theſe Diſputations, Bows (in Alluſion to his Name, and for a Remembrance of the Donor) and Arrows of Silver (in memory of his Trade, being a Goldſmith) and a certain Sum of Money to the Maſters; and likewiſe to the Maior and his Brethren (to encourage them to be preſent) a Banquet of Wine and Pears. This continued throughout Queen Mary's Reign; but was laid aſide in the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's. This, Cooper in his Chronicle (who was once a Schoolmaſter himſelf in Magdalen College, Oxon.) took Notice of, as a very good Practice, and ſhewed himſelf ſorry it was left off, being ſo profitable to the Children, and ſo comfortable to the City; and wiſhed heartily that it might be revived again by ſome generous minded Men.

CHARTERHOUSE SCHOOL.

Charterhouſe School.

There is another famous School at the Hoſpital of the Charterhouſe near Smithfield. Where Forty Boys are received and harboured; and have Allowance of Chamber, Lodging, Table, and Gowns, as well as Inſtruction. But to be admitted only ſuch as the Schoolmaſter ſhall find and approve to be well entered in Learning, nor under the Age of Ten Years, and not above Fourteen or Fifteen. The Schoolmaſter muſt be of a competent Age, that is, of 27 Years at leaſt, and a Maſter of Art, of good Reputation both for Life and Learning in the Latin and Greek Tongues. To the School alſo belongs an Uſher, who muſt have taken the Degree of Batchelor of Art of two Years at the leaſt before his Election hither, and of the Age of Four and twenty. To be read none but approved Authors, Greek and Latin, as are read in the beſt Free Schools. The upper Form to be furniſhed with Greek Teſtaments for their Uſe in the Chapel. Beſides the Scholars weekly Exerciſe, the higheſt Form muſt every Sunday ſet up in the Great Hall four Greek and four Latin Verſes apiece, to be made upon any Part of the ſecond Leſſon appointed for that Day: for the Maſter of the Hoſpital, or any Stranger to view and examine. As alſo two of them are appointed weekly to read the Chapter, and ſay Grace at every Meal in both the Halls. The Maſter and Uſher are to take care to teach the Scholars to cifer and caſt Accounts, eſpecially thoſe that are leſs capable of Learning, and fitteſt to be put to Trades. Not to take into their Tuition above 60 other Scholars, unleſs they entertain another Uſher. To receive, for teaching thoſe of the Foundation, no Fee nor Wages from their Friends. To be careful to obſerve the Nature and Ingeny of their Scholars, and accordingly to inſtruct and correct them. In Correction to be moderate. Theſe are the Statutes for the Teachers of the School.

The Maſters.

The Scholars.

Now as for the Scholars, tho' their Number at firſt was but Forty, yet now Four and Forty are choſen and admitted. They are to continue in the Houſe but Eight Years at the moſt. Hence they are elected to either of the Univerſities, and to any College in either, according to their Friends Choice and Determination. Their Allowance there is 20*l. per Annum*, paid quarterly, without any Charge or Trouble. But they are not to diſcontinue above two Months in the Year. Twenty nine of theſe Scholars are ſometimes maintained in the Univerſities together, by the ſaid Exhibition for Eight Years. Others who are ſuperannuated, being unwilling, or uncapable of Learning, are deſigned for Apprentices. And theſe are ſet apart for Writing and Ciphering, to qualify them for Trades; and have the Sum of 40*l.* given with them. The Scholars all dine in the Hall in a Collegiate manner, and wear Gowns with Sleeves. And (which is another good Benefit of this School;) as the Houſe hath a great many Livings of Value in their Patronage, ſo they commonly beſtow them upon their own Scholars.

Other Schools in and about London.

Beſides theſe Schools of greater Fame, in and about London, are divers other ſuch Places for Education of Youth, more lately founded. As that in Bunhilfields in St. Giles Cripplegate Pariſh. Over the Door entring in, is ſignified in Writing whoſe Gift it was, viz. Mr. Throgmorton Trotman's Free-ſchool. Upon the School Houſe is a Latin Inſcription, importing, that it was finiſhed at the Charges of the Haberdaſhers Company, Anno Dom. 1673. Richard Wynn, Eſq; Maſter. Hugh Ratcliff, Philip Smith, Nicholas Smith, John Freeſton, Wardens. Richardo Houghton, A. M. primario & primo Magiſtro; with the Arms of Trotman ſet there and painted. The Salary is 50*l. per Annum*, for which Thirty Boys of the ſaid Pariſh of St. Giles are to be taught free. Mr. Thomas Wright, M. A. is the preſent Maſter; who alſo hath a Dwelling Houſe there, appropriate to the School Maſter.

School in Bunhilfields.

School in Seething Lane.

There is another Free School in Plough Yard in Sydon, or Seething Lane, in the Pariſh of Alhallows Barking, lately founded by one Hickſon, a Brewer; endowed with Twenty Pounds a Year, for one Maſter to teach Twenty poor Children; whereof Fourteen to be of the ſaid Pariſh of Barking, and ſix of an Hamlet in Wapping. This Maſter hath an Houſe for himſelf where the ſaid School is kept, and two Chaldron of Coals yearly allowed him. It is moreover endowed with 8*l.* a Year for a Writing Maſter, to teach the Children Writing and Caſting Accounts. The preſent Maſter is Mr. Graſſie.

School in Whitechappel.

In Whitechapel is another Free School, founded by Mr. Davenant, late Rector of Whitechapel: the Salary is 20*l. per Annum*: And is, or lately was, in the Hands of Three Truſtees, Mr. Sabin, Mr. Bateman, and Mr. Weſt. Mr. Caſe Maſter. This School hath been conſiderably endowed, and the Number of Children to be taught enlarged, by the Gift of a Thouſand Pounds, ſent by ſome nobly minded, but unknown, Lady. Which hath been laid out by the Pariſhioners for the Purchaſe of Lands in Tilbury, the Rent whereof is for the yearly Maintenance of the School and Children.

School in Clerkenwell.

Another Free School is ſituate in St. James's Clerkenwell, in the Road going to Iſlington, founded by Mrs. Alice Owen, Widow firſt of Alderman Elkin, and afterwards of Judge Owen; endowed with 22*l. per Ann.* To which is a Chapel and an Almshouſe adjoined, given by the ſame charitable Hand.

Hackney School.

There be doubtleſs ſeveral other Free Schools in the Suburbs and Neighbourhood of London. As that at Hackney, in the Church-yard, founded long ago in the Time of, and as it is ſaid by Chriſtopher Urſwyke, ſome time Rector there; with an Houſe for the Maſter. On which is engraven toward the Street theſe Words, EXTRUCTA FUIT HAEC DOMUS ANNO DOM. 1519. CHRISTOPHORO URSWYKE, RECTORE. And in another Place, MEMORARE NOVISSIMA. Mrs. Margaret Awdley, ſome time an Inhabitant of Hackney, (whoſe Houſe was in Clapton, where Mr. Howard now lives) for the Encouragement of the Schoolmaſter, gave a Salary of 20*l. per Ann.*. Which Mr. Lupton, the preſent Maſter, enjoyeth.

St. Mary Overies School.

If we ſhould now paſs over the Bridge to Southwark, there we ſhould meet with Two great Free Schools.

One in the Pariſh of St. Mary Overies: It is a very fair Building of Brick, ſituate on the South ſide of the Church, founded in the Fourth Year of Queen Elizabeth, Anno Dom. 1562, in the Place, as ſome ſay, where the Prior of the Priory of St. Mary Overies Houſe ſtood, which the Pariſhioners bought, and built the School thereon. This School, with the Houſing for the Maſter, was burnt down in the Year 1676, but rebuilt again very gracefully and conveniently. Over the Back Door is an old Stone preſerved from the Fire, with this Inſcription in Capitals; LIBERA SCHOLA GRAMMATICALIS PAROCHIANORUM PAROCHIÆ SANCTI SALVATORIS IN SOUTHEWARKE IN COM. SURRIE, ANNO IV$^{to}$. REGNÆ ELIZABETHAE. It is governed by a Maſter, whoſe Salary is 30*l. per Annum*, and an Uſher, whoſe Salary is 20*l. per Annum.* It is free for ſuch poor Children as are born in the Pariſh. It hath at preſent, or lately had about Sixty Scholars. It is taken care of by Six Governors; whoſe Qualifications muſt be, That they have been Upper Churchwardens, and have ſerved all the other Offices in the Pariſh. The Vacancies are fill'd by Election among themſelves, of ſome duly qualified Perſon or Perſons. There is alſo a Writing School hard by, for the Conveniency of this School, for Thirty Boys to learn to write and read. The Salary is 20*l. per Ann.* which was given by Mrs. Appleby. Abraham Anthony is the Schoolmaſter of this Writing School; and the Maſter of the Free School is Mr. Simms.

St. Olave's School.

The other Free School in Southwark, is that ſituate in the Pariſh of St. Olaves. This School was firſt ſet on foot by ſome of the Pariſhioners; who afterward were made a Corporation by Letters Patents from Queen Elizabeth. By virtue whereof there be appointed over it Sixteen Governors, whereof the Rector is always one. They are to be Men of the beſt Quality and Reputation in the Pariſh. And when one dieth, another is choſen by the Survivors to ſupply his room. In this Foundation are Three Schools, namely, for Latin, Writing, and Reading. And for this Purpoſe it maintains a Maſter and three Uſhers. The Latin Maſter, who is the chief Maſter, his Salary is 60*l. per Annum*; and hath an Uſher under him, who is called the Latin Uſher: His Salary is 30*l. per Annum.* The Writing Maſter, or Uſher, hath 40*l. per Annum.* And the Reading Maſter or Uſher 20*l. per Annum.* There is an Houſe for the chief Maſter, and another for the Reading-Uſher. In this School are taught three hundred Boys. It is well endowed with Rents from ſeveral Houſes and Lands in Horſeydowne in Southwarke, Little Britain, &c. The preſent, or late Maſter is, or was the Reverend Mr. Dunſtar.

Schools in Weſtminſter.

In Weſtminſter alſo, beſide the Queen's School belonging to the Collegiate Church, are the Free Schools in St. Martins in the Fields, and at St. James's, Mr. Palmer's School in St. Margaret's Pariſh, and others; which ſhall be taken Notice of, when we come to the Deſcription of that City.

Private Schools.

There be alſo many private Schools kept in and about London; where the Schoolmaſters hire the School Rooms themſelves, and receive Salaries or Quarteridges for teaching.: Some for teaching the learned Languages, Latin and Greek; ſome for Writing and Arithmetick, and Merchants Accounts; and ſome for Mathematicks, Geography, and Navigation; that ſo the Youth of the City may be brought up to be hereafter uſeful to the Publick; ſome in the Church; ſome in the State; ſome for the Sea and Travel abroad; ſome for Trade and Buſineſs at home; and finally, that all the Members of this Metropolis might be able to get an honeſt Maintenance, and be ſerviceable to the Crown, or otherwiſe, whenſoever there be occaſion. The moſt noted of theſe private Grammar Schools are theſe: The School in St. Mary Axe, Mr. Speed now or late Maſter: The School near St. Lawrence Jewry Church, Mr. Wooten Maſter: The School in Chriſt Church Pariſh, Mr. Brice Maſter: The School adjoining to the Church of St. Bartholomew Exchange: The School adjoining to the Church of Alhallows Lombard Street: The School in Cloth Fair adjoining to Great St. Bartholomews, &c.

Charity Schools.

To theſe we muſt add, to the eternal Credit and Honour of the City, and to the entailing the Bleſſing of God upon it, thoſe ſundry Schools of Charity (unknown to former Times) ſet up of late by the pious good Wills of many Citizens, exhibiting yearly thereunto, both for poor Boys and Girls, not only to teach them Reading, Writing, Sowing, Spinning, and other Manufactures, and bringing them up in Chriſtian Knowledge and good Manners; but alſo to furniſh them with Cloaths, and to put them forth in due Time to Trades, to enable them hereafter to procure Livelihood to themſelves in an honeſt way. Of which Schools in and about London and Weſtminſter there were in Number Fifty four, ſo long paſt as Anno 1704. Wherein were taught and partly cloathed 1398 Boys, 745 Girls. Voluntary Subſcriptions towards theſe Schools about 2164*l.* Gifts from the Beginning for their Maintenance 3199*l.* 10*s.* beſides Collections at Sermons, ſet up by the Societies, 1042*l.* And from theſe Schools have 306 Boys and 75 Girls been put forth Apprentices. Which Benefactions ſince that Time are vaſtly increaſed, as will be ſhewn hereafter.

Other Schools.

There be alſo kept in the City and Suburbs divers other Schools, for teaching many commendable Arts and Accompliſhments: As Schools for Navigation, and the Uſes of the Compaſs, fair Writing and Arithmetick, Fencing, and the Uſe of the Weapons. A Mathematical School is lately ſet up by the Reverend Mr. Harris, where young Gentlemen are taught the Grounds of Geometry, Aſtronomy, Geography, Hiſtory. Another School for Drawing, Limning, Painting, ſet up Anno 1697, by one Mr. B. Lens, now, or late living in Fleet Street. An Art exceeding uſeful for almoſt all ſorts of People; as for Gentlemen that travel, to take Landſkips of the Places of Remark, as Churches, Monaſteries, Caſtles, Fortifications, Towns, Proſpects, Rivers, Rarities, Antiquities, &c. And for Tradeſmen, ſuch as are concerned in Building, as Maſons, Carpenters, Joyners, Painters, and the like.

A School for the Art of Drawing.

The Profeſſor of this Art teacheth on Tueſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays, in the Morning, from Eight to Eleven; and on Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, in the Evening from Six to Nine. The Price a Guinea Entrance, and a Guinea a Month. He alſo goeth to the Houſes of ſuch as chuſe rather to learn at home; as Perſons of Quality, Ladies, &c. He hath very well ſet forth the general Uſefulneſs of this Art by a printed Paper, which may deſerve to be here inſerted.

Mr. Lens's Deſcription thereof.

Graphice by Ariſtotle is generally taken for the Art of Drawing any thing whatſoever with the Pen or Pencil, and was reckoned among the chiefeſt of thoſe his Παιδεύματα, or generous Practices of Youth; as rendring them ſo many ways ſerviceable to their Country, and profitable to themſelves.

Of incredible Service and Advantage it would be to our Smiths of all ſorts, Maſons, Bricklayers, Carpenters, Joyners, Carvers, Turners, Embroiderers, Tapeſtry-Workers, Silverſmiths, Jewellers, nay to all our Handicrafts in general.

For ſhew moſt of theſe Workmen abovesaid a Draft of what you would have done, their want of Skill in Drawing renders it almoſt uſeleſs to them.

For Example, Should an Engineer invent a Machine, and draw it in all its Parts, with its Views per Front and Sides, the whole in Perſpective, a Ground Plot thereof, with a Scale annex'd thereto; With what Difficulty do they work, and the Projector muſt be always by, or all will be marr'd; whereas could our Handicrafts and Mechanicks draw, a Man might ſend his Work from a Hundred Miles Diſtance, drawn as aboveſaid, and be ſatisfied it would be performed to his Mind, and according to his Directions.

By what has been ſaid, I would not have it thought, that none of our Handicrafts and Mechanicks can draw; for ſome do of my own Knowledge very well: Which Qualification hath made them the moſt excellent of all others; for the Beſt Drafts-Man will be the Beſt Artiſt in what Art ſoever.

The School.

The Deſign of this School is to have a conſtant Nurſery or Breed of Youths proper for Artificers; for as two, three, or more, wiſe, rich, and artful Citizens, make it not a wiſe, rich, and artful City or Country, but the general Bent, Genius and Inclination, and the greater Part of them ſo qualified.

For Proof of what hath been ſaid, diſcourſe with the meaneſt of all our Handicrafts, tho' he cannot draw, yet will endeavour to chalk out after his faſhion, your Meaning and his; knowing by pure Inſtinct, that all the Rhetorick in the World cannot convince like a Drawing.

What an Honour would it be for our Workmen and Handicrafts, and Satisfaction to the Employer, when he comes to beſpeak any thing of them qualified with Drawing; to ſee them Sketch out as faſt as you ſpeak, with a Pen or Pencil, what you would have done, and be ſure to pleaſe you even before a Stroak be ſtruck therein; and this would prevent an Error which the unſkill'd in Drawing often commit, in aſking extravagantly too much ſometimes, and as often too little; by Drawing, they would compute the Charge to a Tittle.

If Parents ſent their Children to Drawing as cuſtomarily as they do to Latin and Writing, it being altogether as uſeful to them; they would ſoon find the Advantage themſelves and their Children would reap thereby.

For a Maſter would take a Servant qualified with Drawing, with half the Money, and be a Gainer thereby; for the Boy would come to Work in half the Time, and both be aſſured, the Maſter of a Servant for his Turn, and the Boy of being a Maſter of his Calling; and not ſerve ſeven Years, as many do, to little or no Purpoſe.

Neither would our Handicrafts and Mechanicks alone be advantaged hereby; it is an Accompliſhment for Noblemen and Gentlemen, Scholars, all Students in Art or Nature; Generals, Engineers, Mathematicians, Surveyors, Surgeons, and an Infinity of others.

How defective are the beſt Hiſtorical Accounts of Animals; as Birds, Beaſts, Fiſhes, Inſects, Plants, Deſcriptions of Countries, Cities, Caſtles, Manners, Habits, Cuſtoms, &c. without Drawings or Sculptures; being little more uſeful than a Demonſtration of Euclid would be without a Scheme?

The greateſt Maſter of Words cannot deſcribe in the verboſeſt manner any Object, as Beaſt, Bird, or Inſect (if never ſeen before) ſo as to make it be known when ſeen; which Drawing performs infallibly, and with few Strokes.

I ſhall only add, what Veneration and Eſteem the Artiſts of this kind have met with in the World: The Profeſſion hereof being admitted into the firſt Place among the Liberal Arts, and throughout Greece taught only to the Children of Noblemen, and forbidden to their Servants and Slaves. Of no leſs Account was it among the Romans, ſince one of the moſt Noble Families in Rome, the Fabii, thought themſelves much honour'd by the Surname of Pictor. Claudius Titus the Son of Veſpatian, the Two Antonines, and divers other Emperors and Princes, were excellent in this Art; as were alſo in theſe latter Times many of the greateſt Princes of Europe; Francis I. King of France; Margaret Queen of Navarre; Emanuel Duke of Savoy; with many others.

To conclude, ſpeaking of France: The prodigious Height that Nation is arrived to in this preſent Age in moſt Arts, may be attributed to the Publick Academies and Schools, erected at the King's own Charge for Drawing, Painting, &c. which hath produced ſuch Plenty of Artiſts of moſt kinds. Thus that ingenious Profeſſor of Drawing.

Schools for young Women.

There be alſo in and about the City, Schools for the Education of young Gentlewomen in good and graceful Carriage, Dancing, Singing, playing on Inſtruments of Muſick; in Reading, Writing, ſpeaking French, raiſing Paſte, &c. which render Women that have theſe commendable Qualifications, ſo much beyond others in their Behaviour, Converſation, and good Houſewifery.]

Hoſpitals. J. S.

THERE are in and about the City of London certain Houſes called Colleges, not ſo much deſigned for Learning, as for the common and comfortable living together of ſuch as are Aged, poor or decayed by Sickneſs or Misfortunes, and are mere Foundations of Charity. And therefore ſuch Colleges I put together with Hoſpitals in the two next Chapters, purpoſely ſet apart to give ſome Relation of them. And Firſt, of ſuch as are erected in the City or Suburbs; and then after taking notice of three or four that are neither in London nor the Suburbs, but near bordering within one, two, or three Miles thereof.

Of all theſe ſome are more ancient Foundations, ſome more Modern, but moſt ſince the Reformation; and they are theſe that follow; Chriſts Church, St. Bartholomew, Bridewel, St. Thomas, Bethlehem, or Bedlam, the Workhouſe in Biſhopſgateſtreet, Charterhouſe, or Suttons Hoſpital, St. Katharines, the Savoy; Trinity College or Hoſpital near Mile-End; Asks Hoſpital at Hockſton; Chelſey College; Dulwich College; Greenwich Hoſpital; The Hoſpital at Deptford; Morden College; The new Hoſpital near Shoreditch.

The State of the Poor in London formerly.

What the deplorable Condition of the Poor in London was before Hoſpitals and Reception for them, in the Times of Popery, may be known from an Addreſs made to the Citizens in thoſe Days: ‘Oh! ye Citizens, if ye would turn but even the Profits of your Chauntries, and your Obits, to the finding of the Poor with a politick and godly Proviſion; whereas now London being one of the Flowers of the World, and touching Worldly Riches, hath ſo many, yea, an innumerable Number of poor People forced to go from Door to Door, and to ſit openly in the Streets a Begging: And many not able to do for others, but lye in their Houſes in moſt grievous Pains, and die for lack of Aid of the Rich, to the great Shame of thee, O London: I ſay, if ye would redreſs theſe Things, as ye be bound, and ſorrow for the Poor, ſo ſhould ye be without the Clamour of them, which alſo have cryed unto God againſt you.

Lamentat. againſt Lond. Printed at Nuremburgh, 1545.

‘But unto theſe blind Guides, [a ſort of luſty Lubbers, as the Writer called thoſe Chauntry Prieſts] ye be Maintainers of their Idleneſs, and leave the Lame, the Blind, and the Priſoner unholpen. Ye will give 6, 7, 8, yea 12*l.* Yearly, to one of them to ſing a Chauntry, to rob the Living God of his Honour, &c. And again; I think in my Judgment, under Heaven is not ſo little Proviſion made for the Poor, as is in London, of ſo rich a City.

Orders for the Four Hoſpitals, made Anno 1577.

It was not before the Year 1557, Offley Maior, that wholeſome and good Orders were made and agreed upon for the Four Hoſpitals, by the Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, Governors of the Poſſeſſions, Revenues, and Goods of the ſaid Hoſpitals; and were to be read in every the ſaid Hoſpitals at a full Court once every Quarter, either 14 Days before, or after the Quarter Day; Beginning with a Preface, giving Account therein of the Royal Founders, and unto whom they had committed the perpetual Care of them; and who by that Authority had made the ſaid Ordinances: Which Preface ran in this Tenor; viz.

‘Whereas the moſt excellent and worthy Princes, our late Sovereign Lords, K. HENRY VIII. and K. EDWARD VI. of their bountiful Benignity, and charitable Devotion, towards the Succour and Suſtentation of the Poor in this City, have given and granted by their Letters Patents, with Indentures of Covenants and Bonds, to the ſaid Princes and their Succeſſors, by the City made for performation thereof, to the Maior and Commonalty, Citizens of this ſaid City; as well Four ſeveral Hoſpitals (that is to ſay) by K. HENRY VIII. one Hoſpital, called St. Bartholomews the Little; and by K. EDWARD VI. three other Hoſpitals called Chriſts Hoſpital, Bridewell Place, and St. Thomas Hoſpital; as alſo certain Lands and Tenements, towards the Relief and Maintenance of ſuch Poor as there are relieved; and have alſo by their Kingly Prerogative, granted unto the Maior and Commonalty, for the better Government of the ſame, amongſt other Things in the ſame Letters Patents, Authority, and Power, to elect and chuſe Governors and Officers, and alſo to make and conſtitute good and wholſome Ordinances for godly Maintenance thereof: By vertue of the which Letters Patents, We, the ſaid Maior and Commonalty have made and ordained theſe Rules and Ordinances in Manner and Form following.

Then follow Orders, How many Governors ſhall be Elected; the Manner of their Election; and how they ſhall be divided, and of their continuance; the Charge of every Governor in general; of general Courts, touching the Government of all the Four Houſes, and what in them is to be done; of a full Court in Chriſts Hoſpital for weighty Cauſes, and what is thereat to be done; what is to be done at ordinary Courts, when two or more of the Governors be aſſembled, the Treaſurer being one; touching the admitting of Children, and granting of Penſioners, to be either paid in this Houſe or in Pariſhes; for the putting forth Children to Service; for the Examination of ſingle Women being gotten with Child, and the Perſons with whom they have committed the Offence; Governors, viz. a Comptroller, and a Surveyor General; a Preſident; a Treaſurer, three Almoners, two Scrutiners, a Renter, two Surveyors, with an Account of the reſpective Duties: The Officers, viz. the Clerk, the Matron, the Nurſes and Keepers of Wards, the Steward, the Officer appointed to warn the Collectors and Church Wardens, the Cook, the Butler, the Porter, the Shoemaker, the Chirurgeon, the Barber, the Beadles, with the Charges of each of theſe Officers.

Theſe Orders were confirmed at a Court held on Wedneſday, 28 Sept. An. Ph. and Mar. 4. and 5. in theſe Words:

‘At this Court it was agreed, that all the ſeveral Articles and Ordinances hereafter mentioned and expreſſed, and openly read to the Court here this Day, concerning the Governance and Ordering from henceforth of the Houſe of the Poor in Weſt Smithfield, and the Hoſpitals of this City, lately deviſed by Sir Martin Bowes, and Sir Rowland Hill, Knights, and divers others of my Maſters the Aldermen, and the Commoners of this City, being Governors and Surveyors at this preſent of the ſaid Houſes, and of all the Lands and other Revenues of the ſame

The Gray Fryars within Newgate, and St. Bartholomews Hoſpital, belonging antiently to the Priory of St. Bartholomews hard by, together with St. Nicholas and St. Ewen, two neighbouring Pariſhes, were obtained by the City of K. Henry VIII. in the 38th Year of his Reign: All which that King granted to the City for the relieving and ſuccouring of their Poor; one of the laſt good Acts that King did before his Death. And in the beginning of January, (in the latter End of which Month K. Henry dyed) Ridley, Biſhop of Rocheſter, declared at St. Pauls Croſs this Gift of the King before the People, and his charitable End therein.

The King did in the ſame Year, grant the City the Hoſpital of Bethlehem or Bedlam. He alſo then founded two Churches out of thoſe two Religious Houſes, the one to be called Chriſts Church out of the Gray Fryars, and the other Little St. Bartholomews out of the Hoſpital of that Name, with competent Salaries, for the reſpective Vicars and Miniſters.

And as the King had founded Churches on theſe Places, ſo according to that his Grant, it lay upon the City to eſtabliſh here a ſtanding Proviſion for the Poor. And accordingly, ſome part of the Scite of the Gray Fryars they purpoſed for a large Hoſpital for poor Fatherleſs Children, here to be decently maintained and piouſly brought up, and fitted for Trades and Callings. But it was not before 5 or 6 Years after the Kings Grant, viz. Anno 1552, the Lord Maior and Citizens fell upon the reparation and fitting up of the Fryars for the Reception of the Children. And they effected it the ſame Year, and called it Chriſt Church Hoſpital, ſo that in the Month of September they took in near 400 Orphans, and cloathed them in Ruſſet, but ever after they wore Blue Cloath Coats, whence it is commonly called The Blew Coat Hoſpital. Their Habit being now a long Coat of Blue warm Cloth, cloſe to the Arms and the Body, hanging looſe to their Heels, girt about their Waſte, with a red Leather Girdle buckled; a looſe Petticoat underneath of Yellow Cloth, a round thrum Cap tyed with a red Band, Yellow Stockings, and Black Low heeled Shoes, their Hair cut cloſe, their Locks ſhort.

There was one Act of Benevolence of K. Edward expreſt to this Hoſpital of his Founding, that was ſomewhat remarkable. Which was his granting hereunto all the Church Linnen formerly uſed in the publick Religious Worſhip in the Churches of London: For the King having appointed Commiſſioners to take a view of all the Goods belonging to the Churches in and about London, great Quantities of Linnen Veſtures and Cloath were found in the ſame, and more a great deal than there was need of now in the Celebration of the Reformed Divine Worſhip. Wherefore the King wrote to Ridley Biſhop of London, one of his ſaid Commiſſioners, and a great Inſtrument of this Foundation: ‘ That towards the Relief of ‘ thoſe poor Orphans and others, charitably ‘ brought and gathered together by his loving ‘ Subjects the Citizens to his new Hoſpital of ‘ Chriſt Church, the ſame Linnen ſhould be delivered to the Governors for their Uſe, thinking ‘ as he added, that any Thing therein beſtowed, to ‘ be to the Relief and Suſtentation of the Temple of God, who inhabited in thoſe poor People. ‘ Yet leaving to every Church neceſſary Linnen ‘ Veſture, as ſhould ſerve to the publick Uſe and ‘ Miniſtry within the ſaid Churches, according ‘ to the preſent Uſage.

St. Thomas

But there were other miſerable Objects of Poverty in the City beſides poor Orphans, namely the Poor, Sick, and Lame. For the Reception of ſuch, to have Lodging, Food, Phyſick, and Tendance, the City appropriated their Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew, as alſo St. Thomas Hoſpital in Southwark. Which together with the Borough they had lately purchaſed of King Edward VI. for a conſiderable Sum of Money.

The State of Chriſt Church, and St. Thomas Hoſpitals, Anno 1553, MSS. Archiep. Parker, CCCC.

What Monies were raiſed by the noble Chriſtian Benevolence of the Citizens, upon K. Edward's Encouragement; what large Expences were laid out; and what Condition thoſe Hoſpitals were already come in in the Year 1553, the laſt Year of that Prince, may be obſerved from a Paper I have met with in one of the moſt valuable Manuſcript Libraries in England, as to that of Chriſt Church, and that other of St. Thomas: Which Paper ſeems to have been drawn up for the ſatisfaction of the ſaid King, and was as follows:

A true and ſhort Declaration of the State and Charge of the new Erected Hoſpitals in the City of London, Anno Dom. 1553.

Libr. CCCC. Miſcell. G.

‘ The whole Benevolence granted of all the ‘ Citizens of London, toward the Erection of two ‘ Houſes; that is to ſay, of St. Thomas and ‘ Chriſts Hoſpitals. And may moſt plainly appear ‘ in a fair Book, wherein the Pariſh, Ward, Name, ‘ Surname, and Sum, that every Perſon gave ‘ thereunto, is expreſſed, and amounteth unto 2476*l.*

The Charges of the Erection of thoſe two Houſes, and the Furniture of them, as by moſt plain Accounts may appear doth amount to 2479*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

So is the Charge greater than the Benevolence
3*l.* 10*d.*

There is received into Chriſts Hoſpital of Fatherleſs and helpleſs Children the Number of 380.

And in St. Thomas's Hoſpital of Aged, Sore, and Sick Perſons, 260.

And there is relieved in divers Pariſhes within the City of London, of poor decayed Houſeholders, with certain Penſions, and remain ſtill in their Houſes, the Number of 500 Perſons.

So that the whole Number that is relieved by this Means is 1140 Perſons.

There are daily lodged and fed in Chriſts Hoſpital 260 Children, and in St. Thomas's Hoſpital 260 Perſons. And to every one is allowed daily, for their Meat, Bread and Drink, 2*d.* Which amounteth Monthly to 126*l.* Yearly to 1638*l.*

There is alſo paid in the Country for nouriſhing of an 100 Children at 10*d.* the Week one with another, which amounteth Monthly to 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* Yearly to 216*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

The board Wages for Forty two Keepers of the ſame Children, and aged People in both the Houſes, with their Waſhers; that is, to every 15 Perſons one Keeper; and every Keeper hath 16*d.* the Week; and two Matrons 18*d.* the Week, each of them, which amounteth Monthly to 12*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.* Yearly to 117*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*

The Apparel to all the ſaid Perſons, that is to ſay, Sheets, Shirts, Coats, Caps, Hoſen, Shoes, Paper Books, Ink, which ſometimes is more, and ſometimes leſs: but by the Precedent of this Year, as may appear by plain Account amounteth to 180*l.*

There is alſo ſpent ordinarily in both the ſaid Houſes in Fewel, that is to ſay, in Wood and Coal, (as alſo by the Account thereof will appear) as much as amounteth Yearly to 260*l.*

There is alſo given to decayed Houſeholders, or in ſundry Pariſhes in the City of London, to ſome more, and to ſome leſs; (as alſo may particularly appear by a fair Book, wherein their Names are entred) Yearly 468*l.*

There is alſo given to the Lazar Houſes adjoining to the City of London, to the intent they ſhall not beg within the ſame, nor within three Miles compaſs thereof, (except it be at their own Doors) to the great Annoyance of all ſuch as have frequented the City in Term time, and at other Times and Places, 60*l.*

There is alſo paid in ordinary Fees, for the good Government of the ſaid Houſes, as followeth:

To an Hoſpitaller being a Prieſt, 10*l.*

To Five Surgeons, each of them 15*l.* Yearly, 75*l.*

To two Stewards, each of them 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* 13*l* 6*s.* 8*d.*

To two Butlers, each of them 6*l.* 12*l.*

To two Cooks, each of them 8*l.* 16*l.*

To Four Porters, each of them 6*l.* Yearly. 24*l.*

To a School-maſter, 15*l.*

To an Uſher, 10*l.*

To two School-maſters for the Petites, each of them 53*s.* 4*d.* 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

To School-maſters for Writing, 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

To two Clarks, 20*s.*

To two Matrons, each of them 53*s.* 4*d.* 5*l.* 6*s* 8*d.*

To Forty four Women, each of them 40*s.* a Piece. 88*l.*

To two Men that carry Wood and Coal, and to be charge of the ſame, 4*l.*

Thus may it appear, that the ordinary Charges of this new Erection, as before hath been particularly deſcribed, amounteth Yearly to 3290*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*

Towards the Maintenance whereof there is collected by the Geſte, [Cheſt, perhaps] and free Alms of the Citizens, as may appear in a fair Regiſter, wherein is expreſſed the Ward, Pariſh, Name, and Sum, that every Perſon within the City gives hereunto, 2914*l.*

So that the ordinary Charges of theſe two Houſes, is greater than the ordinary Alms that is given for the Maintenance of them, as may appear, &c. amounteth to 377*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*

Towards the Diſcharge whereof there hath been given this Year by Legacies and other Gifts, by ſundry charitable Perſons, as may alſo particularly appear, 129*l.* 15*s.* 7*d. ob.*

So reſteth to diſcharge the ordinary Expences, beſides all manner of extraordinary Expences, Reparations, Furniture of neceſſary Implements; and many other Charges which certainly are very great, 247*l.* 9*s.* 8*d. ob.*

Which Sum hath been paid and disburſed by the Governors of the ſaid Houſes, out of their own Purſes, which daily travel for the good Order of them, 247*l.* 9*s.* 8*d. ob.*

By the peruſal of this Paper it appears, that not only ſuch as were harboured within theſe Hoſpitals were taken care of, but ſuch as were Objects of Charity abroad as poor Houſekeepers, Alms Folks, in and about the City, were relieved alſo out of the Collections made for theſe Houſes, according to the Diſcretion of the Governors.

Bridewell.

There were alſo in the City many others of the poor neceſſitous Sort, that had neither Houſe nor Harbour to put their Heads in, but were fain to lye abroad in the open Streets; and divers Families of other Poor fain to lye under one Roof. This did cloſely affect many good Citizens, and particularly Ridley, the good Biſhop of London, who by ſome means was informed of it, and moved in it. And conſidering that Bridewell, an old decayed Houſe of the Kings, ſituate in the City, being very large and capacious, might be extremely ſerviceable to this charitable Purpoſe, he endeavoured to find a Way to beg it of the King, eſpecially at this time, when one was about buying it of the King to put it down, and convert it to his own Uſe. And for the compaſſing this, in the Month of May, this charitable Year 1552, he wrote a very pathetical Letter to Sir William Cecyl, Knt. the King's Secretary (whom he knew to be of a pious Diſpoſition, as well as much about the King) having promiſed to the Citizens to move him in this Matter, becauſe he took him for one (as he told him in his Letter) that feared God. His moving Letter ran to this Tenor:

Biſhop Rid-ley's Suit for Bridewel. Letter to Cecil;

" Good Mr. Cecyl, I muſt be a Suitor unto you " in our Maſter Chriſts Cauſe. I beſeech you be " good unto him. The Matter is, Sir: Alas! " he hath lien too too long abroad (as you do " know) without Lodging in the Streets of Lon- " don, both Hungry, Naked, and Cold. Now " Thanks be unto Almighty God, the Citizens " are willing to refreſh him, and to give him " both Meat, Drink, and Cloathing, and Firing, " But alas! Sir, they lack Lodging for him. For " in ſome one Houſe, I dare ſay, they are fain to " lodge three Families under one Roof. Sir, " there is a wide, large, empty Houſe of the " Kings Majeſty, called Bridewell, that would " wonderfully well ſerve to lodge Chriſt in, if " he might find ſuch good Friends in the Court " to procure in his Cauſe. Surely I have ſuch a " good Opinion in the Kings Majeſty, that if " Chriſt had ſuch faithful and hearty Friends, " that would heartily ſpeak for him, he ſhould " undoubtedly ſpeed at the Kings Majeſties Hands. " Sir, I have promiſed my Brethren, the Citi- " zens, to move you, becauſe I do take you for " one that feareth God, and would that Chriſt " ſhould lye no more abroad in the Street.

He prayed him alſo for God's ſake, that he would ſtop the Sale of this Houſe, in caſe any were about buying of it, as he heard there was; and that he would ſpeak in our Maſter's Cauſe. The ſaid Biſhop wrote alſo to Sir John Gates, another great Man at Court, about this Buſineſs more at large; and he joyned, he ſaid, Cecyl with him, and all other that loved and looked for Chriſts final Benediction on the latter Day; meaning that in the Goſpel, Come ye Bleſſed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the World. For I was an hungry, &c. He alſo ſent Instructions by the Bearer of this Letter to confer further with Cecyl in this Affair. So that that holy Martyr Ridley's Name muſt not be forgotten as a great Inſtrument in the procurement of Bridewell to the City.

And Sir Jo Gates.

Bridewell, f what Uſe.

Afterward this Houſe being obtained to the City, it was employed for the Correction and Puniſhment of idle, vagrant People, and Strumpets, and for ſetting them to Work, that they might in an honeſt way take pains to get their own Livelihood.

Dobbs and Barnes their good Deſe in furthering this Found tion.

And here I cannot omit to leave upon Record, to their eternal Honour, the Names of two good Maiors of London, Dobbs, and Barnes; the former a main Inſtrument of procuring the Foundation of this and the other Hoſpitals: The latter, of furthering the good Eſtate of them, whom in this moſt chriſtianly affectionate manner, the beforeſaid good Biſhop of London, accoſted in one of the Letters he writ out of Priſon a little before his Death: ' O Dobbs, Dobbs, Alderman, ' and Knight, thou in thy Year didſt win my ' Heart for evermore, for that honourable Act, ' that moſt bleſſed Work of God, of the Erection ' and ſetting up of Chriſts Holy Hoſpitals, and ' truly Religious Houſes, which by thee and ' through thee were begun. For thou like a Man ' of God, when the Matter was moved, [perhaps ' by himſelf, the Biſhop] for Chriſts poor ſilly ' Members, to be holpen from extreme Miſery, ' Hunger and Famine, thy Heart I ſay, was ' moved with Pity, and as Chriſts high honour- ' able able Officer in that Cauſe, thou calledſt together thy Brethren the Aldermen of the City, before whom thou brakeſt the Matter for the Poor: Thou didſt plead their Cauſe: yea, and not only in thine own Perſon thou didſt ſet forth Chriſt's Cauſe; but to further the Matter thou broughteſt me into the Council Chamber of the City before the Aldermen alone, whom thou haddeſt aſſembled there together to hear me ſpeak, what I could ſay, as an Advocate, by Office and Duty in the poor Mans Cauſe. The Lord wrought with thee, and gave thee the Conſent of thy Brethren, whereby the Matter was brought to the Common Council, and ſo to the whole Body of the City; by whom, with an uniform Conſent, it was committed to be drawn, ordered and deviſed by a certain Number of the moſt witty Citizens and politick; endued alſo with Godlineſs, and with ready Hearts, to ſet forward ſuch a noble Act, as could be choſen in all the whole City. And they like true and faithful Miniſters, both to the City and their Maſter Chriſt, ſo ordered, deviſed, and brought forth the Matter, that Thouſands of poor ſilly Members of Chriſt, that elſe for extreme Hunger and Miſery ſhould have famiſhed and periſhed, ſhall be relieved, holpen, and brought up; and ſhall have cauſe to bleſs the Aldermen of that Time, the Common Council, and the whole Body of the City; but eſpecially thee, O Dobbs, and thoſe choſen Men by whom this honourable Work of God was begun and wrought.

'And thou, O Sir George Barnes, thou waſt in thy Year, not only a Furtherer and Continuer of that which before thee, by thy Predeceſſor was well begun, but alſo thou diddeſt labour ſo to have perfected the Work, that it ſhould have been an abſolute Thing, and a perfect Spectacle of true Charity and Godlineſs unto all Chriſtendom. Thine Endavour was to have ſet up an Houſe of Occupations, both that all kind of Poverty being able to work ſhould not have lacked, whereupon profitably they might have been occupied to their own Relief, and to the Profit and Commodity of the Commonwealth of the City; and alſo to have retired thither the poor Babes brought up in the Hoſpitals, when they had come to a certain Age and Strength; and alſo all thoſe which in the Hoſpitals aforeſaid have been cured of their Diſeaſes. And to have brought this to paſs, thou obtainedſt (not without great Diligence and Labour, both of thee and thy Brethren) of that Godly King Edward, that Chriſtian and Peerleſs Prince, the Princely Place of Bridewell, and what other Things to the performance of the ſame, and under what Condition, it is not unknown. That this thine Endeavour hath not had like Succeſs, the Fault is not in thee, but in the Condition and State of the Time.

By the Contents of which Letter before-cited may be underſtood more particularly than perhaps any Hiſtory hath yet told us, what that Courſe and Method was the Citizens took in their firſt Attempts in founding Bridewell and Chriſts Hoſpitals.

But while theſe before-mentioned good Motions were in hand in the City, the King was excited to theſe Charities, by good Sermons preached before him; ſuch was that of Mr. Lever, a Learned and Pious Preacher in thoſe Days, and Maſter of St. John's College, Cambridge, who, in a Lent Sermon before him, had theſe Words: 'O merciful Lord, what a Number of Poor, Feeble, Halt, Blind, Lame, Sickly, (yea, with idle Vagabonds, and diſſembling Caitiffs mixt among them) lye and creep, begging in the Miry Streets of London and Weſtminſter? It is too great Pity afore the World, and to utter Damnation afore God, to ſee theſe Beggings as they uſe to do in the Streets. For there is never a one of theſe, but he lacketh either thy charitable Alms to relieve his Need, or elſe thy due Correction to puniſh his Fault, &c. Theſe ſeely Souls have been neglected throughont all England, and eſpecially in London and Weſtminſter. But now I truſt, that a good Overſeer, a godly Biſhop,* I mean, will ſee that they in theſe two Cities ſhall have their Needs relieved, and their Faults corrected, to the good Enſample of all other Towns and Cities. Take heed that there be ſuch Graſs to ſit down there, as ye [ſpeaking to the King] command the People to ſit down: that there be ſufficient Houſing, and other Proviſion for the People there, as ye command them to be quiet. The Men ſat down about 5000 in Number: Which was part of the Goſpel for the Day, out of which he took his Text.

mas Lever's ermon in ent, Anno 55.

* Biſhop Ridley.

And Ridley, that zealous and charitable Prelate, and a true Father of his Flock in London, was ſeaſonably called alſo to preach before the King at Weſtminſter; where he ſo cloſely and affectionately preſs'd Perſons in high Place and Calling, to be Inſtruments in helping and ſuccouring the Poor, that the King was exceedingly moved with his Diſcourſe, and preſently ſent for him, taking notice to him of his Sermon; and that he ſuppoſed he chiefly had him in his Eye, as being the higheſt of thoſe in great Place and Calling, that he the Biſhop ſpake to. Then the King aſſured him of his own Readineſs to promote ſuch good Purpoſes; deſiring him to direct him therein, and what he would adviſe him to do on that Part. How the Biſhop hereupon referred the King to the City, and how the King preſently cauſed a Letter to be penned and ſent to the Maior and his Brethren to enter into Conſultation about it; and how the Maior, the Biſhop, and other eminent Citizens, met together to prepare ſomething for the King in the behalf of their Poor; and the Report thereof made to the King, and other Matters relating hereunto, they are all ſet down at large under Chriſt Church in the Ward of Farringdon Within.

Ridley moves the King to Charity to the City Poor.

The Concluſion of this good Conſultation was, that as the City had appointed the Gray Fryars, now called Chriſt Church for poor Children; St. Bartholomews, and likewiſe St. Thomas in Southwark, for the Maimed and Diſeaſed; and Bridewell for the Correction of Vagabonds, Strumpets, and idle Perſons, and for finding them Work; ſo they obtained of the King to grant the Governors of theſe Places to be a Corporation, and to have Authority convenient for the governing thereof: And he conſtituted himſelf chief Founder, and Patron.

The King makes the Governors of theſe Hoſpitals a Corporation.

In June an Indenture bore Date, and was made between the King, and the Maior, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, and their Succeſſors for ever, towards the Maintenance of Poor and Impotent People; granting all the Manor Houſe, and Place of Bridewell, with the Appurtenances, lying and being in the Pariſh of St. Bridget in Fleetſtreet, with other Lands, and with a Licenſe to purchaſe 4000 Mark Land for the Uſe abovesaid; beſides the Lands given them by his Majeſty in London, and elſewhere; and to purchaſe ſo much Land, beſides Fees and Penſions granted to the Officers; and that the Lands given them by the King ſhould be quit and diſcharged of all Tenths and Firſt Fruits. That they might make godly and wholſome Ordinances, Statutes and Rules, for the Government of the Poor. And that within the City of London, and County of Middleſex, they might ſearch and examine all manner of ſuſpicious Houſes, Taverns, Ale-Houſes, &c. and other ſuſpected Places for Ruffians, ans, Vagabonds, and idle Perſons. This Gift of the King was computed to the Yearly Value of 450*l*.

And moreover, out of his mere Grace and Chriſtian Charity, he gave out of the Hoſpital of the Savoy, now ſuppreſt, for the aforeſaid charitable Uſe, a great Part of the Revenue thereof, which was 700 Mark Land, together with the Bedding and Furniture; though dying ſoon after, the Grant ſeemed not to be fully finiſhed. But for fear it ſhould not take place, (ſo much it ran in the King's Mind) that in his laſt Will he cauſed this Clauſe to be inſerted; "The Grant made to "the Maior and City of London, touching the "Savoy and Lands thereof, to be performed.

Syn. Papiſon.

This Hoſpital near 100 Years ago is ſaid to have maintained 700 Perſons; that is, poor Children with Officers. The Charge reckoned at 4000*l*. per Annum.

Idle Perſons reſort to the City to be harboured in theſe Hoſpitals.

This Hoſpital of Chriſt's Church, as alſo thoſe others founded for the Relief of poor Children, and other ſick and diſeaſed People of the City, gave Occaſion, not long after the founding of them, to Numbers of Poor, and Lame, and Sick People, and many of them idle Perſons, Rogues, and Vagabonds, to flock into the City from all Parts, expecting preſent Relief and Entertainment here; which cauſed the Lord Maior, Anno 1569, to iſſue out a ſtrict Order to forbid all ſuch Reſort, and ſuch Perſons to be taken up and brought to Ward; and Warning to be given, that none ſhould give them Harbour: Which Order was as followeth:

An Order by the Lord Maior, againſt Rogues, Vagabonds, and Maſterleſs Men, reſorting now in great Numbers to the City; upon pretence to be relieved by the Alms of Chriſt's Church and Bridewell.

'Foraſmuch as Experience of late hath ſhewed, That the charitable Relief, given as well by the Queen Majeſties noble Progenitors, as alſo the charitable Alms from time to time collected within this City, and beſtowed by the Citizens, as well upon the Poor and Needy Citizens, being Sick, Impotent, and Lame, as the poor Orphans and Fatherleſs Children, born, or being within the ſaid City, not having wherewith to relieve themſelves, as well in Chriſts Church, and Bridewell, as in other the Hoſpitals founded for the Relief of the Poor within the City of London; hath drawn unto the ſaid City great Numbers of Vagabonds, Rogues, Maſterleſs Men, and Idle Perſons, and alſo Poor, Lame, and Sick Perſons, dwelling in the outmoſt Parts of the Realm, ſo as the ſaid City is thereby oppreſt, to the great Prejudice of the ſaid City, and of the needy Poor, inhabiting in the ſame; and that theſe needy Beggars, and impotent Perſons coming out of Foreign Parts of the Realm, and alſo the Rogues and Vagabonds greatly diſliked the Queen, &c. the Maior, and his Brethren the Aldermen in her Majeſties Behalf, ſtraitly charge and command, all and every Perſon and Perſons whatſoever, dwelling or inhabiting within the ſaid City and Liberties and Suburbs thereof, that they do not at any time hereafter, give any Relief, Lodging, Alms, or Maintenance, to any Vagabonds, Rogues, &c, or to any common or valiant Beggar; but contrariwiſe, to cauſe ſuch Beggars, Rogues, Vagabonds, and Maſterleſs Men, to be apprehended and brought to Ward, to the end, that they might be examined and puniſhed by ſuch as have Authority in that Behalf, according to the Queens Law, &c.

'And further, the ſaid Maior and Aldermen, ſtraitly charge and command, for the better avoiding the ſaid common Beggars, &c. that no manner of Perſon whatſoever, ſhall let any Tenement, Cottage, Chamber, or Room, to Farm, either by the Day, by the Week, by the Month, by the Quarter, or by the Year, or any other time, to any common Beggar, or Vagabond, &c. Imprinted by John Day over Alderſgate.

A Mathematick School founded here by K. Char. II.

Beſides this firſt Royal Founder King Edward, Chriſt Church Hoſpital hath of late enjoyed another Royal Founder, viz. King Charles II. who founded a Mathematical School and Ward, lying on the Weſt Part of the Hoſpital, for the Inſtruction of 40 Boys in the Mathematicks, eſpecially in that Part of it that reſpects Navigation; and liberally endowed it with one Thouſand Pounds a Year, paid out of the Exchequer for Seven Years for the founding thereof.

The Qualification of the Mathematick Maſter.

The Mathematical Maſter at Chriſts Hoſpital, by the Conſtitution of the Houſe, muſt be thus qualified; he muſt be a Sober, Diſcreet, and Diligent Perſon, of good Life, a good Scholar, very well underſtanding the Latin and Greek Languages, a very good Mathematician, well knowing and ready in the Theory and Practice of all its Parts; to the end Boys may be furthered in the Latin Tongue, and the Maſter able to anſwer Strangers, if need be; and that they and others may find his Abilities to Satiſfaction.

The Scholars to be put forth to Maſters of Ships.

And by the Conſtitution, Ten are to be put forth Yearly Apprentices to Maſters of Ships: to the End they may be fit in time to do Service in the Navy Royal, and Ten more to be received into their Rooms. Theſe Youths who are choſen out of the reſt of the Blewcoat Boys, are to be the moſt acute, and of the readieſt Wits, that they may be fit for Mathematical Studies.

Badge of theſe Boys.

Theſe as a Badge of Diſtinction, wear on their Breaſts faſtened to their Coats a Plate of Silver, with ſome Figures engraven, the Dye whereof is kept in the Tower, where they are all ſtamped. The chief Figures are three of the Liberal Sciences, viz. Arithmetick, with a Scroll of Accounts in one Hand, and laying her other Hand upon a Blew Coat Boys Head, having his Cap under his Arm. The next Figure repreſenteth Geometry, with a Triangle in her Hand. The Third, Aſtronomy, with a Quadrant in one Hand, and a Sphere in the other. There is alſo the Figure of a Ship or two under Sail, with a Wind from Heaven, blowing as it were upon it a proſperous Gale. There be alſo in the Clouds two Angels, one of them a Mercury; and theſe Words wrote round declaring the Royal Founder, and the Year when this School commenced, viz. Auſpicio Caroli Secundi Regis, 1673. This Badge they wear conſtantly, not only in the Hoſpital, and about the Town, but when they are put forth; which when ſeen ſecureth them from being preſſed. But they will ſometimes put it into their Pockets, as not caring to own the Place of their Education; for which when it is diſcovered, they are reprimanded.

The beginning and occaſion of this Mathematick School.

And here it muſt not be omitted, for perpetual Memory, to remark the firſt Occaſion of inſtituting this moſt uſeful Mathematick School, Founded in this Hoſpital. It was accidental, and owing in a great meaſure to Sir Robert Clayton, Knt. and Alderman, and ſometime Lord Maior of the City, who as the ſetting up of ſuch a Diſcipline in this Hoſpital firſt came into his Mind, ſo he was very inſtrumental and active, in bringing it to that Succeſs it afterwards came to, by his moving it ſo ſeaſonably to the Lord Clifford, then Lord High Treaſurer: who as effectually propounded it to the King. I ſhall relate the Subſtance of it, as I had it from his own Mouth in his own Houſe, Apr. 16. 1706.

Sir Robert Clayton, Knt. the firſt Contriver.

He had been occaſionally reading (according to his Cuſtom at leiſure Times to divert himſelf with Books) of the French King's Government; and particularly, how he had appointed, that Children in all his Maritime Towns ſhould be taught the Art of Navigation gratis; and had Erected Schools for that Purpoſe, for the greater Increaſe of Seamen, and Benefit of Trade, and Service of his Fleets. Which good Policy raiſed ſome Thoughts in the ſaid Alderman's Mind; concluding, how ſuch Education, at leaſt of ſome Part of that great Number of Boys, would tend more to the Publick Good, if it were ſet up in Chriſts Hoſpital, than the ordinary Courſe of Learning then taken with them. This grew warm upon him; and he began to frame a Project for the ſetting up ſuch a School. Which he communicated firſt to Sir Patience Ward another Alderman; and they reſolved to take in a Third Perſon; and with one Thouſand Pounds a Piece Charge to make a Proviſion and Encouragement for a Mathematick Maſter, and to build him a Dwelling Houſe near the Hoſpital, and to ſet up a School Room there, for the teaching of a competent Number of the Children.

Sir Patience Ward.

An Accident forwardeth it.

While this was in Conſultation, a favourable Opportunity offered it ſelf, which was this. The ſaid Sir Robert Clayton, calling once accidentally at the Treaſury, (his Buſineſs requiring him often to have recourſe thither) to ſpeak with Sir Robert Howard then Secretary to the Treaſury; at his coming out Mr. Parry, then Clerk of Chriſts Hoſpital, met him, intreating him to ſpeak to Sir Robert Howard in behalf of the ſaid Hoſpital, ſhewing him a Petition drawn up to the Lord Treaſurer Clifford, and deſiring him to procure the ſaid Howard to deliver it. The Occaſion of which Petition was this:

Before the Revolution in the Year 1660, a private Citizen, who had a Debt of 7000*l.* charged upon Weavers Hall, (which according to ſome Methods in thoſe Times was ſecured to be paid out of a Fund of the King's Lands) gave by Will this 7000*l.* to Chriſts Hoſpital, for the maintaining Forty Children, who were to wear a particular Badge, or be cloathed as he particularly directed. Theſe Children were by this Requeſt maintained till the Reſtoration. At which time the Crown Lands reverting to the King, the Hoſpital did petition his Majeſty, that he would pleaſe to pay them this 7000*l.* to continue the Maintenance of theſe Forty Children, according to the Requeſt of the Donor; whereupon the King granted them the ſaid Sum, to be paid out of the Arrears of the Exciſe due at his Reſtoration. But there being many great Sums of Money charged to the Queen Mother, and other Perſons of Quality, out of the ſaid Arrears, Prior to this 7000*l.* it was not hitherto paid.

Sir Robert Clayton moves it to the Lord Treaſurer.

But after many Years, the ſaid Clerk of the Hoſpital thought fit, by a new Petition, to put the Lord Treaſurer in mind of the ſaid Grant of the King. This Petition, brought as before was ſaid, Sir Robert Clayton took, and went in with it to the Secretary of the Treaſury, who preſently in Company with Sir Robert carried it to the Lord Treaſurer, to whom it was read: But after the reading, my Lord acquainted Sir Robert Clayton what great Sums of Money were charged upon the ſaid Fund prior to this, and that it was impoſſible for him to help the Hoſpital. Sir Robert, (like a good Advocate for the City's Poor) told him, that the Citizens of London, he hoped, were as careful in managing of their publick Charities as of their private Concerns; and that if his Lordſhip would place 7000*l.* upon a certain Fund to be paid by 500*l.* a Year, they would endeavour to maintain the Children with it, which the Lord Treaſurer evaded alſo. But the diligent Alderman finding him in a good Humour, proceeded further with him, telling him, that a poor Friend of his was upon ſuch an important Project in that Hoſpital, that would deſerve a better Founder; and ſo diſcourſed to him the Deſign he and Sir Patience Ward were contriving. It took with the Treaſurer; and it pleaſed him ſo well, that he charged Sir Robert to go and frame him a Petition upon that Subject he had diſcourſed to him of, and added, that he would deliver it that very Night to the King before he ſlept.

Sir Robert departed, and took the Clerk of the Hoſpital along with him in his Coach; and ſetting him down at the Hoſpital, ordered him immediately to bring him a Liſt of the Governors of that Houſe to Sir John Frederick's, then Preſident; which Liſt being brought and peruſed, they pitched upon Six to aſſiſt in this Matter, whereof Sir P. Ward, and Sir Richard Ford, Aldermen were two. While theſe were ſummoning, Sir Robert prepared a Petition. Theſe Governors now being aſſembled, he ſignified to them the preſent Advantage for the Hoſpital, and ſhewing them the Petition, required them to go up with him to deliver it; but they declined it, and left it upon Sir Robert, telling him, that he having begun it was the fitteſt to carry it on.

A Petition to the King in that Behalf, and the Succeſs.

He was not diſcouraged in ſo good a Work, but that Night carried up the Petition himſelf, and delivered it into the Hands of the Lord Treaſurer, who appointed him to come to him the next Day; which he accordingly did, and found that the Treaſurer had ſhewn the King the Petition, and had a Reference made back to himſelf for the Payment of 1000*l.* a Year to the Houſe, until the 7000*l.* were paid; and the Hoſpital was to covenant to maintain ſo many Boys, and to teach them the Mathematicks.

The Treaſurer then alſo gave an Order to Sir Heneage Finch, Attorney General, (aftewards Earl of Nottingham) to prepare a Patent with all advantageous Clauſes accordingly, and commanded Sir Robert Clayton to attend Mr. Attorney with it. He was well known to him; and having acquainted him with this Affair, the Attorney was extreamly well pleaſed with it, and deſired Sir Robert himſelf to give ſuch advantageous Clauſes as he could think of, to be inſerted in the Patent. He thereupon called together the Committee to have their Aſſiſtance; and ſo they prepared the Heads of ſuch Clauſes as they could think of: which he gave to Mr. Attorney, who appointed Sir Robert to call upon him again at a ſet time, and he would draw the Patent with his own Hand. He came according to the time, and had a rough Draught given him to take what further Advice he ſhould think fit. Which he ſhewed to the Committee or the Governors, and then returned it to the Attorney, by whom it was ſoon finiſhed, and had the Great Seal affixed to it. And Sir Robert paid the firſt 500*l.* (it being to be paid half Yearly) to the Hoſpital, on account of Rent, which was due from him to the Crown.

Thus was this publick good Work, tending ſo much to the Honour both of the King and City of London, brought to paſs from the Beginning to the End, by the prudent Contrivance and perſevering Induſtry of this Alderman, which therefore I have related ſo largely. Sir Robert was then made a Governor of the ſaid Houſe, and Sir Jonas Moor, Samuel Pepys, Eſq; and ſeveral other Perſons, known to be Friends and Favourers of the Mathematicks, were called into the Govetnment, for the better managing and ſettling this new Royal School.

The King's other Bounty to this School.

King Charles II. the Royal Founder was pleaſed farther to make a Grant of the Sum of        for to place out Ten of the Mathematick Boys Apprentices to Maſters of Ships, wherein he reſerved the laſt Year of their Time to his Service. This Sir Robert Clayton believed Mr. Pepys was the chief Inſtrument to procure.

Q. Anne places out one of theſe Boys.

Queen Anne lately ſent for a Boy out of this her Mathematick School, for Mr. Richards her Ingineer going to Portugal. The Boy's Name alſo was Richards; he was very uſeful and highly agreeable to the Engineer; inſomuch, that he hath of late ſent to Mr. Treaſurer to thank him for his Boy; and adding, that he went beyond all others in his Ingenuity and Fitneſs to ſerve him.

Another Ward of Mathematick Boys preparing.

The Governors, at the late worthy Treaſurer's good Motion, repaired an old Ward over the North Cloiſters, to be appropriated for other Forty Boys to be taught Mathematicks, as the Kings Boys are; but are to wear a diſtinct Badge from them, as belonging to another Foundation; namely, the old Foundation.

The Number of Children here provided for.

There have been ſometimes a Thouſand poor Children and more, maintained here at one time. And ſo hath been the Will of the Governors to continue ſuch a Number ſtill: But the Foundation could not ſuſtain them, and borrowed Money, and ran in Debt; and ſo they were reduced to a leſs Number. But now, by great Benefactions of late, and a careful Treaſurer, they are advancing towards that Number, taking care of at this preſent between Six and Seven Hundred Boys.

Duly provided for.

Theſe live partly in Chriſts Hoſpital, and partly at Nurſe in Country Towns in Hertfordſhire, provided with convenient Diet, Cloathing, Lodging, and Learning. And a great many of the Boys are put forth Yearly Apprentices, and the Girls diſpoſed to good Services. And ſome of a more pregnant Wit, and that have a Genius for Study, are ſent to the Univerſities. And many of theſe have proved afterwards Men eminent either for Wealth, or Acquiſitions of Learning, or Uſefulneſs in the Commonwealth.

The State of this Houſe.

But now to relate ſome further Particulars of the State of this Hoſpital; as the Rooms and Apartments, the Schools, the Maſters and Miſtreſſes, the Governors, and Officers, the Proviſions for their Maintenance, the good Order and Government, the Expences and the Benefactors.

The Hall.

There is a great and ſpacious Hall well built, where the Boys Dine and Sup. It was built after the great Fire by Sir John Frederick, Alderman of London, and coſt him 5000*l.* In this Hall at the upper End is a large Picture, that covereth all the Wall of the North End, and ſtretcheth on the Eaſt and Weſt Walls, repreſenting K. James II. (but intended for K. Charles II. had he lived but a little longer) ſitting there, and his Nobles, and the Governors, and Treaſurer, and others in great Numbers ſtanding about him, with the Pictures of K. Edward VI. and K. Charles II. as Founders, drawn half way, Painted as hanging up in the ſame Table. And there is a particular Repreſentation of the Mathematick School; it is done by Vario, and reckoned worth 1000*l.* There is likewiſe at the other End of this Hall a large Picture more antient of K. Edward VI. the firſt Founder, delivering his Royal Charter for this Hoſpital to the Maior, who kneeleth with the Aldermen behind him; a Biſhop (which I ſuppoſe is Ridley) with many others ſtanding about; an antient and a fine Piece.

In this Hall is a good Organ, that oftentimes plays, when the Boys alſo ſing their Pſalms or Anthems on Sundays and other ſpecial Days.

Eight Wards.

There be Eight Wards where the Childrens Beds are, and where they Lodge and Harbour; to which one more may be added, which makes a Ninth, but it is not made uſe of at preſent wanting Repair, but now gone in Hand with to be fitted up for the reception of Boys, as the reſt. In each of theſe Wards are harboured about Fifty odd, one with another.

The Girls Ward built.

The Girls have a Ward alſo by themſelves, which is ſituated paſſing out of the great Hall on the Eaſt. It is fair and handſome, and indeed, the beſt Ward of all. It was built at the Coſt of Mr. John Morice, and Sir Robert Clayton; the former giving 1000*l.* the other much more. Mr. Thomas Firmin, Girdler, that charitable Citizen in his time, took upon him the care of the Building, and was ſupplyed with Money from them, yet concealing their Names according to their Deſire, mentioning no more concerning them in this good Work, but only that two charitable Citizens were at the Charge of it. It is ſaid, there will be a Marble Statue ſet up here for Sir Robert Clayton, as his Memory deſerveth to be perpetuated for his ſingular Charity towards other Hoſpitals, as well as this.

Mr. Thomas Firmin.

The Occaſion. Mr. Cakevil.

But take a more particular Account of this Building, from one who had it from the Relation of Sir Robert himſelf, and how the Builders came to be known. Sir Robert had had a very great Fit of Sickneſs in the Year 168---, and, being reſtored to a good State of Health, did think fit to make an Acknowledgment to God for this Mercy by ſome Publick good Work: And conſulting with the ſaid Mr. Firmin upon that Subject, he propoſed ſomething ſhould be done for Chriſts Hoſpital, which ſince the great Fire had been but little reſtored hitherto from its Ruins; and excited him particularly to build the Girls Ward there; the doing of which was computed at 2000*l.* Coſt. Mr. Morice, Sir Robert's Partner, was contented to give one half thereof. And Mr. Firmin was employed in the Care and Managery, with a ſtrict Injunction given him, that their Names ſhould not be diſcovered. This was not all that was intended: For Sir Robert then deſigned, that the Children of the Houſe ſhould be better fitted for common and ordinary Trades, than by the Methods then taken they were; and did project ſeveral Rooms under the Wards for ſeveral Trades; where the Children, not engaged in Mathematicks ſhould ſpend ſome of their time in honeſt Callings, that might be uſeful to the Houſe and the Publick too, according to ſome Models he had procured of Hoſpitals from abroad. While this Work was carrying on, it was found convenient to make this a double Ward, however at firſt deſigned only for a ſingle one; and the Stair Caſe to be ſet within the Cloiſters to ſerve both. This augmented the Charge at firſt propoſed to near double the Sum; and Mr. Morice, Sir Robert's Partner, was now dead, ſo that the whole Burthen now lay on him. While this Work was in hand, having privately viewed it, he intended ſomething further, which would have coſt 500*l.* more.

A further good Work ſtopt by F ction.

But it moſt unſeaſonably happened at this time, that Feuds and Factions grew high among the Citizens, which ended at laſt in the depriving them of their Charter. And then was this moſt liberal and publick ſpirited Citizen and Magiſtrate, put out both of the Government of the City, and of this Hoſpital, with many other worthy Citizens, and ſo the good Work unhappily ſtopt. But Mr. Firmin ſoon took the Opportunity to let the remaining Governors underſtand, what a Piece of Ingratitude this was, ſhewing them in ſome Zeal, that he that was thus diſcharged, was the very Man that had highly deſerved of the Houſe in this expenſive Building, by whoſe whole Charges it had for divers Years been carried on; whereby the Founder of this Ward came to be at length known, which otherwiſe might have been concealed to this Day.

Ward for th Sick.

Another Ward there is, being a convenient Ward apart by it ſelf for the Sick, where they that fall into any Diſtempers are removed, and due care taken of them.

The Cloiſter.

Of the ancient Buildings remaining, there is an old Cloiſter, and was Part of the old Priory. It ſerves for a Thorowfare, and a Place of Recreation for the Boys; eſpecially in rainy Weather. But being gone to Decay, it hath been lately repaired, by the Direction of that Excellent Architect, Sir Chriſtopher Wren, Kt.

Schools.

For SCHOOLS, there be theſe: A Grammar School, a Mathematick School, a Writing School, and a School for the Girls; where they learn to Read, to Sew, and to Mark.

The Grammar School is ancient; the other more modern, and ſet up ſince the great Fire.

Of the Mathematick School, beſides what hath been ſaid of it already, this may be added; That for the Maintenance of it, there have been received by the Houſe out of the Exchequer, for Seven Years together, to the Summer 1704, 370 and odd Pounds yearly: And ſo no queſtion it continues.

Writing School.

The Writing School is a very fair Structure, at the End of the great Hall, lofty and airy; founded by Sir John Moore, Knight, ſometime one of the Aldermen of the City, and Preſident of this Houſe. It containeth long writing Boards, ſufficient for 300 Boys to ſit and write at. It coſt the nobly-minded Builder, they ſay, 5000 l. Whoſe Statue in white Marble, at full Proportion, is placed at the upper End, with this Inſcription:

Anno Dom. 1694.

This Writing School, and Stately Building, was begun, and compleatly finiſhed, at the Sole Charge of Sir JOHN MOORE, Knight, and Lord Maior of the City, in the Year MDCLXXXI; now Preſident of this Houſe: He having been otherwiſe a Liberal Benefactor to the ſame.

It reſteth upon Columns; and is built below into Tenements and Shops, which they let out; there being Seven in all.

The Maſters.

The Maſters of theſe Schools are Four: Viz. A Grammar-Maſter, who hath alſo an Uſher to aſſiſt him; a Mathematick Maſter, and a Writing Maſter; who have 100 l. per Annum each for their Salaries, beſides Houſes.

There be alſo two School-Miſtreſſes, that teach the Girls; who alſo have ſufficient Salaries, and Houſes to dwell in.

The Grammar-Maſter hath alſo an Addition of 20 l. yearly, for Catechizing the Boys: And his Uſher hath 50 l. a Year beſides.

A Drawing Maſter.

Chriſt's Hoſpital is lately further improved, by entertaining a Maſter to teach the Boys Drawing. Some Skill in which Art is ſo very uſeful to many, or moſt Mechanical Trades; by the learning of which, the Children may be put forth Apprentices to ſuch Callings; as, beſides Painters, thoſe of Seamen, Carpenters, Joyners, Plummers, Carvers, &c. The Maſter an able Man in his Faculty, Mr. Lens, uſed to reſort hither certain Days in the Week, to teach ſuch as be appointed him.

Now for the GOVERNORS, and Officers of this great Hoſpital.

Governors.

Treaſurer.

The GOVERNORS are many, and commonly Perſons that have been Maſters or Wardens of their Companies, or Men of Eſtates, or from whom there be Expectations of Charity. Out of theſe, one is Preſident; and he commonly is ſome ancient Alderman, that hath paſſed the Chair; and another is Treaſurer, who takes care of the Affairs of the whole Houſe, and of the Revenues; and therefore is commonly reſident, and hath a good Houſe to dwell in; but without any Salary. And ſuch an one is choſen by the Governors for this great Truſt, who is of Note for his Abilities, Integrity and Charity. And according to the Repute he hath, ſo the Hoſpital uſually flouriſheth, and the Benefactions come in plentifully. And ſuch, in all Reſpects, were the late Treaſurers; Mr. Hawes, Mr. Brerewood, Mr. Toung and Mr. Lockington.

The preſent Treaſurer is Sir George Mertin.

The Governors Charge.

Every Governor, when he is admitted into this Society, hath this Charge ſolemnly given him, in the Preſence of the Preſident, or Treaſurer, and other Governors aſſembled in Court:

> “Worſhipful!
> “The Cauſe of your Repair hither at this preſent, is, To give you knowledge, that you are Elected and Appointed by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, to the Office, Charge and Governance of Chriſt's Hoſpital.
> “And therefore, this is to require you, and every of you, That you endeavour your ſelves, with all your Wiſdom and Power, faithfully and diligently to ſerve in this Vocation and Calling: Which is an Office of high Truſt and Worſhip. For ye are called to be the faithful Diſtributors and Diſpoſers of the Goods of Almighty God to his poor and needy Members. In the which Office and Calling, if you ſhall be found negligent and unfaithful, ye ſhall not only declare your ſelves to be the moſt unthankful and unworthy Servants of Almighty God; being put in Truſt to ſee the Relief and Succour of his poor and needy Flock; but alſo ye ſhall ſhew your ſelves to be very notable and great Enemies to that Work, which moſt highly doth advance and beautify the Commonwealth of this Realm, and chiefly of this City of London.
> “Theſe are therefore to require you, and every of you, That ye here promiſe before God, and this Aſſembly of your Fellow Governors, faithfully to travail in this your Office and Calling; that this Work may have his Perfection; and that the needy Number committed to your Charge be diligently and wholſomly provided for; as you will anſwer before God, at the Hour and Time when you and we ſhall ſtand before him, to render an Account of our Doings. And promiſing this to do, you ſhall be now admitted into this Company and Fellowſhip.

Officers.

Beſides the chief Governors, they have divers Officers that receive Salaries; viz. Three Clerks, a Steward, a Matron; for every Two Wards, a Nurſe and her Maid; a Porter, and Four Beadles.

They have alſo Three Servants, which they call Streetmen, that ſee to the well Government of the Carts of London.

They have alſo certain Clerks for Blackwell-Hall; whence are certain Duties coming to the Houſe.

Proviſions.

As for the Proviſion for this great Family, the Drink is ſupplied by Three Beer-Brewers; and the Bread by Three Bakers.

Almoners.

There be Two of the Governors, that are called Almoners, who, for a Month or more, take care to buy and lay in Butchers Meat, that is, Beef and Mutton; the Steward attending them.

The Butcher receiveth 40 l. every Month.

Their daily Fare.

And after this manner the Children fare daily. They have every Morning for their Breakfaſt Bread and Beer, at Half an Hour paſt Six in the Morning, in the Summer Time; and at Half an Hour paſt Seven in the Winter. On Sundays, they have boiled Beef and Pottage for their Dinners; and for their Suppers, as good Legs and Shoulders of Mutton as can be bought; as of 12, 13 or 14 Pounds apiece. On other Days, their Fare, as it is thrify, ſo it is ſufficient.

On Tueſdays and Thurſdays, the ſame Dinners as on Sundays; that is, boiled Beef and Pottage. On the other Days, no Fleſh Meat: But on Mondays, Milk Pottage; On Wedneſdays, Furmity; On Fridays, old Peaſe and Pottage; On Saturdays, Watergruel.

They have Roſt Beef about Twelve Days in the Year, by the Kindneſs of ſeveral Benefactors; who have left, ſome 3 l. ſome 50 s. per Annum, for that End and Purpoſe.

Their Supper is Bread and Cheeſe, or Butter for thoſe that cannot eat Cheeſe. Only Wedneſdays and Fridays, they have Pudding-pies for Supper.

Their Bread.

Their Bread formerly was very coarſe and brown; but by the Care and Order of Mr. Breerwood, a late Treaſurer, it was changed, and is very good wheaten Bread. And when it firſt was brought into the Hall in the Bread-Baſkets, the poor Childrens Hearts rejoiced, and they gave a great Shout, praying God to bleſs their good Treaſurer.

Their good Orders.

The good Orders of this numerous Houſe is alſo much to be commended. Omitting the reſt, I ſhall relate the Cuſtom on the Lord's-Days; which bringeth Multitudes of People, both of the City and Court, thither, to behold.

On Sundays.

As ſoon as the Boys come from Church, in the Afternoon, they all repair to the Writing-School. There all their Names are called over. Then the chief Maſter catechizeth them; that is, Two Wards at a Time, and the Ward of the Girls. [Note, He Catechizeth Three times a Week; whereof Sunday is one.] Then he Expoundeth upon the Catechiſm. And that holds till about half an Hour paſt Five. After a little Reſpite, the Boys go into the Hall to Supper. All being come in; one Boy appointed goeth up into a Pulpit there placed, and readeth a Chapter, being the Second Leſſon for the Day. After that, he reads likewiſe ſeveral good Collects, or ſhort Prayers, compoſed (or ordered to be compoſed) by the Right Reverend the Biſhop of London; being all ſuitable to the Occaſion: As, for all States of Men; and Thanks for their Benefactors; and Prayers for their Foundation. At the End of every Prayer, all the Boys cry AMEN, that makes a very melodious Sound. The Boy that readeth, is one of the uppermoſt, and deſigned for the Univerſity. The Prayers being done, a Pſalm is named by the ſame Boy; and all ſing, with a good Organ, that is placed in the ſaid great Hall. That done, the ſaid Boy in the Pulpit craves a Bleſſing upon their Supper. And then all the Boys and Girls, that were ſtanding round in their Order before, go quietly each to the Tables, and take their Places (which they know) without any Noiſe. Then certain of the Boys, in their Turns, ſome bring Bread in their Baſkets, ready cut in good Pieces; and others, Trenchers; and others, ſmall Beer; of which they have as much as they pleaſe. Then are brought, in ſeveral wooden Platters, Legs of Mutton, uſually cut out into reaſonable Pieces; and the Nurſes diſtribute them to each Boy. Supper being done, (which is not long) the former Boy goes up into the Pulpit again, and gives Thanks: And then ſets a Pſalm; and all the Boys ſing well with the Organ. This done, they all, in very quiet and good Order, retire from the Hall to their ſeveral Wards; the Nurſes of each Ward going before their reſpective Ward; and one of the Boys in each Ward carrying the Bread-Baſket upon his Shoulder, another the Table-Cloth; and ſo the Hall is preſently cleared. And the Nurſes and Boys, as they paſs along by the Treaſurer, make their Obeiſance. When they are thus retired to their ſeveral Wards, the Nurſes hear them all read Chapters out of the Bible: And then they ſing ſome Pſalm again; and ſoon after, they all go to Bed.

Mr. Deputy Hawes, July 16. 1704. then Treaſurer, did me the Favour to ſhew me all this very decent Chriſtian Order.

The Ward for the Sick.

And that theſe poor Children may be cared for in Sickneſs as well as in Health, there is a convenient Apartment by it ſelf for ſuch to be kept in: Which contains a Room for the Lodging of the Sick, a Kitchen, for dreſſing their Diet, and preparing ſuch Food or Phyſick as is needful for them; and a Conſultation Chamber, where the Phyſician, Apothecary or Chirurgeon meet, to confer upon the Patients Diſtempers and Cures: Together with other Places convenient. There is a Nurſe proper to this Ward; And they have a Phyſician; who was formerly the very Learned and well deſerving Dr. Sloan; now Sir Hans Sloan, Baronet; an Apothecary, and a Chirurgeon: Who commonly come two or three times a Week, or oftner, as there is Occaſion for them. The College of Phyſicians appoint the Doctor. And in ſuch a good State of Health was this Hoſpital, that in the Month of July, Anno 1704, (when I was there) there were but Five Lads in this Ward; and they then pretty well.

Children of Chriſt's Hoſpital at Ware and Hertford.

Beſides the Children that are maintained within the Walls of this Hoſpital, there be conſiderable Numbers belonging to it, which are ſent out and provided for in the Country; viz. at Ware and Hertford, in Hertfordſhire. And they are of the leaſt and youngeſt ſort; and afterwards brought home to London. At each Place is a Schoolmaſter, to teach the Children to read; with a Salary of 50 l. each.

At Ware is a fine Building, like a College, making a large Quadrangle, for Boys, containing a Schoolhouſe and a Maſter's Houſe, and 20 Houſes for Nurſes to keep the Children. Sir Jonathan Raymond, Knight, ſometime Alderman of London, bought and gave them a Field near adjoining, to recreate themſelves and to play in. In the Summer of the Year 1704, Fifty ſeven Boys, and more, were going thither. Eighty Children then being kept there.

At Hertford is alſo a Schoolhouſe and a Maſter's Houſe, and Thirteen Houſes more, each with two Rooms on a Floor, and Gardens belonging. Hither were ſent in the Year 1704, Ninety ſix Boys, and ſome Girls; which Girls were ſent thither for Air, becauſe not well. So that divers Years ago, an Hundred Children were kept at Hertford.

Expences, Benefactions, and Revenues.

This Hoſpital expends 12 or 1300 l. a Year, in Salaries to Officers, Clerks and Servants. And the Foundation hath ſuch a Reputation, and the Eſtate belonging to it ſo well employed, and ſo juſtly managed, and uſed to the real Intents of it, and the Government of it ſo good and regular, that many have been encouraged to be frank Benefactors to it. And ſeldom Men of Eſtate in the City dye, but they leave it very good Legacies, gacies, whether in Sums of Money, or in Houſes and Lands. But ſome of late have been extraordinary in their Bounty: As Mr. Stone of Skillingthorp in Lincolnſhire, left an Eſtate there of about 500 l. a Year, for the proper Uſe of this Place: Yet leaving many Charities for the Hoſpital firſt to pay out.

Mr. Garraway left an Eſtate to it, near Arundel in Suſſex, of above 700 l. a Year: Whoſe Picture, in grateful Memory of him, is ſet up in the great Hall by Mr. Treaſurer.

One Mr. Bacon gave a conſiderable Eſtate in Reverſion, in caſe of the Death of Two Relations.

Sir John Frederick, Sir Robert Clayton, Sir John Moore, Mr. Morice, Noble Benefactors, we have mentioned before; And a great Number more might be mentioned.

Revenues belonging to this Hoſpital.

So that their yearly Revenue in Houſes and Lands, as it ought to be, to ſatisfy ſuch vaſt Charges, ſo (Thanks be to God for Perſons well diſpoſed to this Charitable Foundation) is conſiderably great. And by the Bounty of the City, to increaſe the wealthy Eſtate thereof, it hath allowed this Houſe the Benefit of looking after, and Licenſing the Carts of London; the whole Care and Ordering whereof belongs to it. There are 420 Carts allowed in the City: Each of which pays a certain ſmall Sum for Sealing.

They have alſo a Duty of about Three Farthings upon every Cloth brought to Blackwell Hall; allowed them by Acts of Common Council: And they keep Clerks there, to receive it.

The Account of this Hoſpital Anno 1704.

The Account given in, in the Year 1704, of the State then of this Hoſpital, was thus:

Put forth Apprentices, and diſcharged the Hoſpital, - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - 28

Whereof Five from the Mathematical School, put forth to Commanders of Ships.

Children buried the Year before, - - - - - - 6

Children remaining there; kept in the Houſe, and at Nurſe, - - - - - 438 } - - 638
Newly admitted, - - - - - 200 }

Anno 1705.

The Account given in the Year 1705, of the State of this Hoſpital, ſtood thus:

Put forth Apprentices, and diſcharged this Hoſpital the Year paſt, - - - - - - - - - - 48

Thirteen whereof, inſtructed in Mathematicks and Navigation, were placed forth to Commanders of Ships.

Buried the ſame Year, - - - - - - - - - - 10

Remaining under the Care and Charge of the ſaid Hoſpital, kept either in the Houſe, or at Nurſe, - - - - 596 } - - 699
And newly admitted, - - - 103 }

An. 1706.

The Condition of Chriſt's Hoſpital, from the Year 1705, to 1706, (as it was publiſhed) was thus:

Children put forth Apprentices, and diſcharged the Hoſpital, - - - - - - - - - - - - 35

Nine whereof being inſtructed in the Mathematicks and Navigation, were put out to Commanders of Ships.

Children buried, - - - - - - - - - - - - - - 9

Children remaining in the Hoſpital, or at Nurſe elſewhere, - - - - - - - - - - - 814

Of theſe, thoſe at Nurſe are 664; and 150 newly admitted.

An. 1707.

And from Eaſter 1706, to Eaſter 1707, this was the State thereof.

Put forth Apprentices out of Chriſt's Hoſpital the laſt Year, - - - - - - - - - - - - - - 69

Whereof out of the Mathematical School, to Commanders of Ships, - - - - - - - - - - 11

Remaining under Care and Charge of the Hoſpital, with 150 newly admitted, - - - 901

Anno 1711.

Some few Years after, viz. in the Year 1711, the Account of this Hoſpital ſtood thus:

Put forth Apprentices, and diſcharged, were, 125

Whereof Ten, inſtructed in Mathematicks and Navigation, were put forth to Commanders of Ships.

Children buried, - - - - - - - - - - - - - - 11

Remaining there in the Houſe, or at Nurſe elſewhere, - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - 871

An. 1717.

Now for the Year 1717, the Account given in, was;

Children put forth Apprentices, and diſcharged, 80

Whereof, out of the Mathematick School, placed to Commanders of Ships, Nine.

Children buried the Year before, - - - - - - 9

Then remaining under the Care and Charge of the Hoſpital, and at Nurſe elſewhere, 773

And more newly admitted, - - - - - - - - 205

Amounting in all to - - - - - - - 978

The Names of all which are regiſtred in Books kept in the Hoſpital, and to be ſeen; and alſo when and whence they were admitted.

Certain Boys of this Hoſpital ſent to the Univerſity.

In the Month of September, 1717, the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, together with ſeveral of the Aldermen and Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital met there: Where Six of the Boys educated at that School were, after paſſing Examination, and being found fit, ſent to the Univerſity, to ſtudy there.

The Report in 1718.

The Report given of this Hoſpital this laſt Year, viz. 1718.

S. BARTHOLOMEW's HOSPITAL.

How incorporated. R. B

THis Hoſpital is incorporated by the Name of the Hoſpital of the Maior, Commonalty and Citizens of London, Governors for the Poor, called Little S. Bartholomew's, near to Weſt Smithfield. It was erected for Sick and Maimed People: Where great Care is taken of them, and all Neceſſaries for Food, Lodging, Attendance, Phyſick and Medicaments proper for their Cure, adminiſtred. For they have good able Phyſicians and Surgeons provided, belonging to the Hoſpital; who give their conſtant Attendance, as Occaſion requires. And they have Matrons and Nurſes, to look to them, and to ſee that they have what is convenient.

Erected for Sick and Maimed.

There belongs alſo to the Hoſpital an Apothecary, to provide and prepare what the Phyſicians direct. And the Diſeaſed are duly viſited by them in the Wards where they are lodged, every Morning and Evening, as there is need: Every one having a Bed to himſelf. And by the Care of the Matrons, the Wards are always kept clean and neat.]

The ancie Foundatio thereof. J. S

It formerly belonged to the Priory of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, founded by one RAHERE, an ingenious Gentleman, belonging to King Henry the Firſt; founding it about the Year 1102; and he was himſelf the firſt Prior.

It was governed by a Maſter and Eight Brethren, and Four Siſters, to take care of the Poor of the ſaid Hoſpital.

Both Priory and Hoſpital were diſſolved under King Henry the Eighth: Who in the laſt Year of his Reign, founded the Hoſpital anew, and gave 500 Marks per Annum towards its Maintenance.

King Edward the VIth was a chief Benefactor to it, as was ſhewn before.

But to give ſome more particular Account of the firſt State of this charitable Foundation; and afterwards, of the more modern and preſent Condition of it. It was founded for the Relief of an Hundred Poor and Sick of the City of London, by the foreſaid K. Henry VIII. endowing it with the Yearly Revenue of Five Hundred Marks, conditionally, that the City alſo for their Part ſhould add other Five Hundred Marks by the Year; which Thing with all due Thankfulneſs they received at his Majeſties Hand, and embraced the Condition. But when the City took a Survey of what was given by the King for this Yearly Sum, they found, the raiſing of this 500 Mark Rent, to lye only in certain Houſes, ſome in great Decay, and ſome rotten and ruinous; and ſome to whom better Tenants had happened, already leaſed out at Terms and Rent, ſcant reaſonable for the Behoof of the Poor; ſo that for to make them again worth the wonted Revenue, and then to continue in the ſame, was no ſmall Charge. Penſions alſo were iſſuing out of the 500 Mark, and granted by Letters Patents of that King to the Hoſpitaler there, and to other Miniſters of the ſame.

e Citizens iligence in ing it.

In the Hoſpital it ſelf was found only ſo much Houſhold Implement and Stuff towards the ſuccouring of theſe Hundred Poor, as ſufficed three or four Harlots then lying in Childbed, and no more: So much had the godly meaning of that King been abuſed in thoſe Days. The Citizens neverthleſs were not diſcouraged with the evil Doings of others, and the great Fall of their Hopes, but provided with what ſpeed they could, to the Redreſs of the Decays, Diſorders, and Defaults, and beſtowed thereabout not much leſs than a Thouſand Pounds; whereby in K. Edward's time it came to ſuch a Point that it was fit to receive the Number, and to ſuccour them with all Neceſſaries, requiſite; and accordingly received them, and maintained them. But within Five Years, after the Citizens had the Care of this Hoſpital, they were, and that even in Pulpits, exclaimed againſt, as if they had wronged this Charity, by this miſtaken Suppoſition, that this Hoſpital ſhould have made a general Sweep of all Poor and Afflicted, as tho' the City had abuſed this Charity; and ſo for their Care were rewarded with nothing but open Detraction.

e Number the Cured.

In this Seaſon, notwithſtanding, were healed of the Pox, Fiſtula's, filthy Blains and Sores, to the Number of Eight Hundred; and thence ſafe delivered, that others having need might enter in their rooms; beſides Eight Score and Twelve that dyed there in their intolerable Miſeries, which might have dyed and ſtunk in the Noſes of the City.

eCity pubes the firſt ders and erſeers of s Hoſpital.

Upon this Slander ſo widely ſpread, it was thought good by the Lord Maior, as chief Patron and Governor of this Hoſpital, in the Name of the City, to publiſh at that time who were the Overſeers and with the Orders by him appointed, and from time to time practiſed and uſed, by Twelve of the Citizens moſt antient in their Courſes, for the Redreſs and Stay of ſuch Slanders; and that it might be an open Witneſs unto all Men how well Things were adminiſtred there, and by whom; and likewiſe to excite all well diſpoſed Perſons more and more to beſtow their Charity here.

Ord. and nances in Appendix.

And becauſe theſe Men that thus ſpake againſt the Managery of this Hoſpital, endeavoured to ſtop any further Charities and Gifts towards it; ſuggeſting, that there was enough already for this Hundred of diſeaſed People to be looked after, it was declared that the City, of their endleſs Good will towards this moſt neceſſary Succour of their poor Brethren in Chriſt, although at the firſt they ſeemed bound to the preciſe Number of an Hundred, and no more, wiſhed all Men to be moſt aſſuredly perſuaded, that if by any Means poſſible they might, they deſired to enlarge the Benefit to a Thouſand.

Governors and Officers.

At this firſt Erection the Hoſpital was taken care of by two Ranks of Perſons, viz. Governors, and Officers; which latter were hired for Wages to have the neceſſary Doings in the Service of the Houſe.

Governors.

I. The GOVERNORS, among them the Lord Maior was chief Patron. The others were ſo changed, that the one Half remained two Years in their Governance. And they were in Number Twelve, who were placed there by the Lord Maior, whereof Four were Aldermen, the Reſidue Commoners, thus named:

The Preſident, always the Senior Alderman.
Surveyors Four, two Aldermen, and two Commoners.
Almoiſners Four, one Alderman, and three Commoners.
The Treaſurer, a Commoner.
Scrutiners two, both Commoners.

Officers.

II. OFFICERS continiuable or removeable, as the Governors ſhall find Cauſe, and were thus called;

1. The Hoſpitaler.
2. The Renter Clerk.
3. The Butler.
4. The Porter.
5. The Matron.
6. The Siſters, Twelve.
7. The Beadles, Eight.

There were alſo three Surgeons in Wages of the Hoſpital, giving daily attendance upon the Cures; and a Miniſter, who was the Viſitor of Newgate according to his Office and Charge.

The Governors were always Elected by the Lord Maior and his Brethren the other Governors, who Yearly Elected Six; that is to ſay, two Aldermen and four Commoners, who were admitted into the Hoſpital after this Manner; The whole Company of the Twelve old Governors ſitting in Aſſembly together, cauſe their Clark to read unto the Six newly Elected their Charge. That done, and the new Elected conſenting, and yielding themſelves to the Charge, the half of the Governors, that had fulfilled their two Years Governance ſtood apart; and the other half that remained, with the new Elected, took them by the Hands after their Degrees, and ſo admitted them; and before they parted all Dined together, as well thoſe that came anew, as thoſe that had governed their time, and thoſe that remained, every Man at his own Coſt and Charge.

The Charges of the Hoſpital.

Now for the Charges of St. Bartholomews, as it was in the Reign of K. Edward VI. there were Certain Charges, and Uncertain. Under the Uncertain come the Monies laid out for Shirts, Smocks, and other Apparel for the Poor, for Sugar and Spices, for Caudles for the Sick, Flax for Shirts, and Weaving of the ſame, Cloth for Winding Sheets, Bowls, Brooms, Baskets, Incenſe, Juniper Aſhes to buck their Cloaths. Alſo, Mony given to them at their Departure; which is meaſured according to their Journey and Need: Which uncertain Charges amounted one Year to the Sum of Sixty Pounds.

The certain Charges aroſe from the Yearly Wages and Fees of Officers and Servants, and the Charges of Houſhold, Reparations, &c.

Of the Antiquity of this Hoſpital, ſee more in the Deſcription of Faringdon Ward without, in which it is ſeated.

It may not be amiſs to relate the Form of the Charge beforeſaid, that was uſed to be given to the new Governors when they were admitted. The whole Company of the Twelve old Governors, ſitting in Aſſembly together, cauſed their Clerk to read unto the Six newly elected the Charge hereafter following:

The Charge to the Governors.

‘ It may pleaſe you to underſtand, that ye are here elected and choſen, as Fellow Governors of this Hoſpital, to continue by the ſpace of two Years. By all which time, according to ſuch laudable Decrees and Ordinances, as have been, and ſhall be made, by the Authority of the Lord Maior, chief Patron hereof, in the Name of the City, and the Conſent of the Governors for the time being, all your other Buſineſs ſet apart, as much as you poſſibly may, ye ſhall endeavour your ſelves to attend only upon the needful Doings of this Houſe, with ſuch a loving and careful Diligence as ſhall become the faithful Miniſters of God, whom ye chiefly in this Vocation are appointed to ſerve, and to whom for your Negligences or Defaults herein, ye ſhall render an Account. For truly ye cannot be blameleſs before God, if after you have ſet Hand to this good Plough, and promiſed your Diligence to the Poor, ye ſhall contrariwiſe turn your Head backward, and not perform the Succour that Chriſt looketh for at your Hands, and hath witneſſed to be done to himſelf, with theſe Words, Whatſoever ye do to one of theſe needy Perſons for my Names ſake, the ſame ye do unto me. And contrariwiſe, if ye neglect and deſpiſe them ye deſpiſe me.

‘ We therefore require and deſire every of you, on God's Behalf, and in his moſt holy Name, that ye endeavour your ſelves, to the beſt of your Wit and Powers, ſo to comfort, order and govern this Houſe, and the Poor thereof, that at the laſt Day ye may appear before the Face of God, as true and faithful Stewards and Diſpoſers of all ſuch Things, as ſhall for the Comfort and Succour of them (during the time of your Office) be committed to your Credit and Charge. And this to do we require you faithfully to promiſe in the Sight of God, and Hearing of your Brethren. And ſo doing We here admit you into our Fellowſhip.’

And ſo likewiſe had all the Officers, Superior and Inferior, their reſpective Charges, in a certain Form of Words given them, but too long to be here ſet down, as they remain in an old Book, ſet forth in K. Edward VI. his Reign, called Orders and Ordinances for the better Government of the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew the leſs. Which may be found in the Appendix.

There was alſo a pious Form of Thankſgiving, which the Diſeaſed being cured, and to be diſcharged the Hoſpital, were to repeat upon their Knees in the Hall, before the Hoſpitaler and two Maſters of the Houſe at the leaſt, having learned it without Book according to the Hoſpitaler's Charge; which being ſo decent as well as pious an Act I cannot forbear to inſert.

A Thankſgiving to ſaid by the Diſeaſed, when cured and diſcharged.

‘ We magnify and praiſe thee, O Lord, that ſo mercifully and favourably haſt looked upon us, miſerable and wretched Sinners, which ſo highly have offended thy Divine Majeſty, that we are not worthy to be numbred among thy elect and choſen People. Our Sins being great and grievous, are daily before our Eyes. We lament and be ſorry for them, and with ſorrowful Heart and lamentable Tears, we call and cry unto thee for Mercy. Have Mercy upon us, O Lord, have Mercy upon us, and according to thy great Mercy wipe away the Multitude of our Sins: And grant us now, O Lord, thy moſt holy and working Spirit, that ſetting aſide all Vice and Idleneſs, we may in thy Fear walk, and go forward in all Virtue and Godlineſs.

‘ And for that thou haſt moved, O Lord, the Hearts of godly Men, and the Governors of this Houſe, to ſhew their exceeding Charity towards us, in curing of our Maladies and Diſeaſes, we yield moſt humble and hearty Thanks to thy Majeſty, and ſhall inceſſantly laud and praiſe thy moſt holy and glorious Name, beſeeching thee, moſt gracious and merciful Lord, according to thy holy Word and Promiſe, ſo to bleſs thine own Dwelling Houſe, and the faithful Miniſters thereof, that there be here found no lack, but that their Riches and Subſtance.

‘ ſtance may increaſe. That thy holy Name may thereby be the more praiſed and glorified; to whom be all Laud, Honour, and Glory, World without end. Amen.

heir Courts. Their Hoſpi- als abroad.

This Hoſpital now contains two ſpacious Courts for the Harbour of theſe Poor, Sick, and Maimed. There is alſo a Building belonging to it, called The Preſident's Building, for cutting of the Stone. They have alſo an Houſe in Kent Street in Southwark; and another at Kingſland in the Pariſh of Hackney. Beſides, there be many other Patients, on whom are beſtowed the Charity of their Medicines.

ynopſ. Papiſm.

Near an Hundred Years ago this Hoſpital maintained about 300 poor diſeaſed People, at the Yearly Charge of 2000*l.*

The great Relief adminiſtred in this Hoſpital. R. B.

Although this Hoſpital wholly eſcaped the late dreadful Fire in 1666, yet a great Part of its Revenue being in Houſes in London, ſuffered much thereby. Notwithſtanding, ſuch hath been the Care of the Governors, the Diligence and Induſtry of the Phyſicians and Surgeons, and the Supplies of ſeveral good Benefactors; that there have been Yearly received in here many Maimed and Sick Seamen and Soldiers, with other diſeaſed Perſons from divers Parts of the King's Dominions, and ſome from Foreign Parts; and many cured, and relieved with Money and other Neceſſaries at their Departure, beſides their Diet and Lodging during their Cure.

The Numbers here harboured and cured.

By comparing the Cures here done in ſeveral Years paſt one with another, and the conſtant Numbers that are harboured here, a new Eſtimate may be given of the Annual Charges of this Hoſpital; for one Year with another there are ſeldom leſs than 1500 Perſons cured. And ſeldom are there leſs in it than 250 Perſons.

A new Ward built.

This Hoſpital hath within theſe few Years been enlarged by a new Ward, built of Brick and Stone on Part of the Churchyard, ſtanding upon Peers or Pillars; under which are Shops which front the common Paſſage, called The Long Walk, betwixt this and Chriſt Church Hoſpital.

Several new Wards built. J. S.

The late True Report, viz. Anno 1717, informed us, that this Hoſpital hath been lately enlarged by ſeveral new Wards built; and ſo made capable of receiving a much greater Number of Patients than formerly, whereby the conſtant Annual Charge thereof is much increaſed; and the ordinary Revenues thereof are much leſſened by the dreadful Fire, and ſo becomes a very fit Object of the Charity of all good Men, towards preſerving the Lives of many miſerable People, who otherwiſe muſt periſh.]

Benefactors. R. B.

To this Hoſpital, divers Honourable and other worthy Charitable People, have contributed their Benevolence; and to ſignalize the ſame, and to put others in Mind to follow ſo good an Example, the Governors have thought fit to have their Names fairly wrote with a Penſil in Oyl, on both Sides of the publick Paſſage, from Smithfield to Chriſt Church Hoſpital, at a convenient Height from the Ground, to be read by Paſſengers.

St. THOMAS's HOSPITAL.

Its Foundation. R. B.

THIS Hoſpital is ſeated in the Borough of Southwark, but in the Cities Juriſdiction, and is properly to be ſubjoined to that of St. Bartholomews, being alſo appropriated for the Cure of the Sick and Maimed poor People, which are thither ſent from the ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, by Certificates from the Church Wardens, and other ſubſtantial Inhabitants of the Pariſh where they dwell. And are accordingly received, and care taken of them, as at St. Bartholomews, until cured, or reſtored to Health, if curable.

Synops Papiſm. J. S.

It is under the ſame Government with the former, and was Incorporated with Chriſt Church.] It was reckoned about an 100 Years ago to maintain 300 poor diſeaſed, with the Charge of about 2000*l.* by the Year.]

Repaired or Rebuilt. R. B.

This Hoſpital being very old was not long ſince rebuilt with more Conveniencies, and far more handſome than formerly; the firſt Stone being laid by Sir John Fleet, in his Maioralty, and the Work carried on by the Generoſity of ſeveral worthy Perſons.

Damaged by Fires.

Although this Hoſpital did wholly eſcape the Fire of London, Anno 1666, yet a conſiderable Part of the Revenue lay in ſeveral Houſes in London, which were deſtroyed thereby, which much impaired its Annual Revenue. And again, this Hoſpital ſuſtained very great Loſſes by three other great Fires which happened in Southwark; and ſince that in London, viz. one in the Month of May, 1676. Another in June 1681: And a Third in September 1689. But notwithſtanding theſe conſiderable Loſſes ſuſtained, yet the Governors in the Years 1693 and 1694, finding moſt of the Buildings of the ſaid Hoſpital very old, low, damp, and very incommodious for the reception of the Sick and Wounded Perſons, did begin to build anew ſome Part thereof; ſo that in the Year 1694 they had expended (of the Governors free Gift) near 2000*l.* and were Anno 1695 ſtill purſuing the ſame Building, not upon the old Foundation, which now is finiſhed, being a very curious Structure, all of Brick and Stone. The Court Room, ſtanding upon Columns of Stone, between two Court Yards; round about which are Wards and Lodgings for the ſick and maimed Patients: So that the whole Charge in the Building this Hoſpital came to many Thouſand Pounds.]

Some Part rebuilt very ſplendidly.

Other Wa to be Rebu J. S.

And even while the Building was carrying on, the careful Governors, to their Praiſe, maintained the ſame, or a greater Number of Patients than before. There are ſome of the old Wards ſtill to be rebuilt, which cannot be accompliſhed without the aſſiſtance of charitable Perſons.

This was the Condition of this Hoſpital ſome Years ago, but now moſt of thoſe former Buildings, very old and incommodious for Patients, are rebuilt, chiefly by the Governors themſelves, and ſo capable of many more Patients than before. But the Yearly Revenue is not ſufficient to anſwer the conſtant Annual Charge of ſo great a Number.

Numbers o Perſons cure

Abundance of poor Creatures have received Cures here. In the Year 1694, there went out Cured 1824 Perſons; few Years, leſs than a Thouſand or 1500.

State of th Hoſpital. An. 170

In the Year 1704, the Account given in of the State thereof was as follows:

Cured and Diſcharged from this Hoſpital, of Wounden, Sick, and Maimed Soldiers, Seamen, and other diſeaſed Perſons, —— 2877

An. 170

The State of this Hoſpital the Year 1705 was thus given in:

Cured and Diſcharged this Year, —— 2638

An. 170

The Condition of St. Thomas's Hoſpital from the Year 1705 to the Year 1706, (as it was publiſhed by the City) was thus:

Cured and Diſcharged from this Hoſpital of Wounded, Sick, and Maimed Soldiers and Seamen, and other diſeaſed Perſons, —— 2592
Buried, —— 126
Remaining under Cure, —— 359

An. 170

And from Eaſter 1706 to Eaſter 1707, this was the State thereof:

BRIDEWELL HOSPITAL.

Bridewell, for Harbour and Work.

J. S.

OF this Houſe ſomething was ſpoke before; having been anciently the London Houſe for the Kings, where they often removed their Courts from Weſtminſter; till being in Decay, and long diſuſed, King Edward VI. gave it to the City, in the Seventh Year of his Reign.

It is ſeated near to Blackfriars; from which it is ſevered by the Canal of Fleet-ditch. It was obtained of the King at firſt for an Harbour of poor harbourleſs People, that lay abroad in the Streets. It was ſoon after improved to be a Workhouſe, not only to give Lodging to poor, idle, wandring Perſons, Beggars and others; but to find them Work, to help to maintain themſelves. But tho' this was granted in the Year 1553, yet it ſeems, it was not before Two Years after, that the City entred and took Poſſeſſion of it by Gerard their Maior, having obtained Queen Mary's Confirmation.

A Mill for Work at Bridewell.

In the Time of Queen Elizabeth, about the Year 1570 and odd, one John Pain, a Citizen, invented a Mill to grind Corn; which he got recommended to the Lord Maior, for the Uſe of Bridewell. This Mill had Two Conveniences: One was, That it would grind a greater Quantity conſiderably than any other Mills of that Sort could do. And the other (which would render it ſo uſeful to Bridewell) was, That the Lame, either in Arms or Legs, might work at it, if they had but the Uſe of either. And accordingly theſe Mills were termed Hand-Mills, or Foot-Mills.

This Mill he ſhewed to the Lord Maior, who ſaw it grind as much Corn with the Labour of Two Men, as they did then at Bridewell with Ten. That is to ſay, Two Men with Hands, two Buſhels the Hour; or Two Men with Feet, two Buſhels the Hour. If they were lame in their Arms, then they might earn their Livings with their Legs: If lame in their Legs, then they might earn their Livings with their Arms.

One Mill would grind twenty Buſhels of Wheat in a Day: So that by Computation it was reckoned, that one of theſe would find a Thouſand Perſons.

The ſame Inventor would have put the Maior and Aldermen upon having Twenty five of them; that is, in each Ward one; for Rogues that ſhould be taken up in thoſe Wards; and Three or Four of a greater Sort for Bridewell, the Bridge-Houſe, and Leaden-Hall. What Iſſue this had, I cannot tell.

Old Recor remaining Bridewell Church.

I ſhall make a Note of one Thing in this Place: That long after this Houſe of Bridewell was given away to the City, there remained many old Records there; which had probably been there repoſited ever ſince the Kings of England made it their Reſidence. This, in the Days of Queen Elizabeth, was, by ſome body belonging to the Lord Treaſurer, diſcovered to him; Informing him, That certain old Fines were kept there, in the Cuſtody of the Cirographer, [i. e. the Officer in the Common-Pleas that engroſſeth Fines;] and that the ſame Fines ought to be in the keeping of the Lord Treaſurer and Chamberlains of the Exchequer: And moved him to call the ſaid Cirographer before him, to know by what Right he kept the ſame; and thereupon to give Order for their removing.

One who lived in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſpeaking of the Hoſpitals, and particularly of this, applying himſelf to the Romaniſts that boaſted of their Hoſpitality: 'Look 'into London, ſaid he, what Hoſpitals be there 'founded in the Goſpel Time. The Poor in'deed relieved; Youth godly brought up; and 'the Idle ſet to work. Popery would ſometime 'feed the Hungry, but ſeldom correct the un'profitable Drones, that ſucked the Honey from 'the labouring Bees; nor bring up Children in 'the Fear of God. But to fill the Belly, and 'not to teach Virtue, is to increaſe Vice. 'Well worth BRIDEWELL, therefore: For 'it is a good School.'

This a Right Reverend Biſhop of Durham ſpake to oppoſe his Popiſh Adverſary, who had preferred the Times of Popery before thoſe of the Goſpel, becauſe of the Hoſpitality of their Religious Houſes.

Another, who wrote above an Hundred Years ago, giveth this Account of Bridewell: That in it were an Hundred poor Children trained up, beſides many other Perſons kept at work.

This, and the Three other Hoſpitals, were thought to ſpend, by Charitable Gifts upon the Poor, about 10000 l. yearly.

In Bridewell, at the City's Charge, were built in thoſe Times Twelve new Granaries, ſufficient to contain Six Thouſand Quarters of Corn; and Two Storehouſes, which might hold Four Thouſand Chaldron of Coals; for the Proviſion of the City: At the Charge of 3000 l. or thereabouts.]

The Uſe of this Hoſpital now is for an Houſe of Correction, and to be a Place where all Strumpets, Night-walkers, Pick-pockets, vagrant and idle Perſons, that are taken up for their ill Lives, as alſo incorrigible and diſobedient Servants, are committed by the Mayor and Aldermen, who are Juſtices of the Peace within the ſaid City: And being ſo committed, are forced to beat Hemp in publick View, with due Correction of whipping, according to their Offence, for ſuch a Time as the Preſident and Court ſhall ſee Cauſe. The Court-Day being generally every Friday in the Forenoon.

And to this Hoſpital are ſent ſeveral Youths, as Apprentices to Glovers, Flax-Dreſſers, &c. who there reſide: And theſe are clad in Blue Doublets and Breeches.

In the Year 1666, this Houſe was burnt, and all the Apartments thereto belonging; as alſo all the Dwelling-Houſes in the Precinct of Bridewell; which was about Two Thirds of the Revenues of the Houſe. But notwithſtanding its lying in Ruins, the Governors made Proviſion for the ſeveral Arts-Maſters and their Apprentices, in Places remote from the City, until ſuch Time as the ſaid Hoſpital could be rebuilt. And now the Chapel, Court-Houſe, Work-Houſes, and Dwelling-Houſes within the ſaid Hoſpital (by the Care and Pains of the worthy Governors thereof intruſted therewith, and the liberal Contributions of divers worthy Perſons) are all rebuilt, in a more convenient manner than formerly. Which Reparations, Rebuilding, and other incident Charges occaſioned by the Fire, amounted to above 6000 l. And now the working Trades go on in the ſame manner as before.

And moreover, there have been Vagrants, and the like idle People, taken in and relieved. Alſo Apprentices brought up in the aforeſaid Trades, every Year many Hundreds.

And beſides the great Loſs that this Houſe ſuſtained by the Fire in 1666, their Revenue was much impaired by Two other Fires that happened at Wapping; where a great many Tenements belonging to it were burnt; the one in June, 1673; and the other in November, 1682.]

This Hoſpital hath the ſame Preſident and Governors with that of Bethlem, which under the Account of that Hoſpital will be mentioned.

More of this Houſe of Bridewel, as to the Antiquities and Founding of it may be ſeen, when the Reader comes to the Ward of Faringdon without, in which it ſtands.

Other Houſes of Correction.

There are other Houſes of Correction, belonging to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Parts adjacent, and both called by the Name of Bridewel, as being for the ſaid Purpoſe. The one is by Clerkenwel Church, commonly called New Priſon; and this belongs to the County, as well as to the adjacent Parts. And to this all ſuch Lewd and Diſorderly Perſons as aforeſaid, are committed by the Juſtices of the Peace for the County, and are there kept to Work, and Puniſhment inflicted on them, as the Juſtices at their Seſſions ſhall think fit.

The other Houſe of Correction for the ſaid Offences is in Tuttle Fields, and is for the Liberty of Weſtminſter.]

BETHLEM Hospital; commonly called BEDLAM.

Firſt Founded for a Priory of Canons with Brethren and Siſters. R. B.

THE Hoſpital of St. Mary of Bethlem, ſeated in Biſhopſgate Ward, without the City Wall, betwixt Biſhopſgate-ſtreet and Moorfields; firſt founded by Simon Fitz Mary, one of the Sheriffs of London, in the Year of our Lord 1246, to be a Priory of Canons with Brethren and Siſters, and to wear a Star upon their Copes and Mantles; and to receive the Biſhop of Bethlehem, and the Canons or Meſſengers of the Church of Bethlehem, whenſoever they ſhould have occaſion to travel hither; as will appear more at large in the ſaid Fitz Maries Charter, exemplified in its proper Place in Biſhopſgate Ward.

K. Henry VIII. gave this Houſe to the City of London. They converted it to a Houſe or Hoſpital for the Cure of Lunaticks: But not without Charges at ſo much the Week, for theſe brought in, if they or their Relations were of Ability; and if not, then at the Pariſh Charge, in which they were Inhabitants.

Bethlem f Lunaticks.

This Hoſpital ſtood in an obſcure and cloſe Place, near unto many common Sewers; and alſo was too little to receive and entertain the great Number of diſtracted Perſons, both Men and Women. Therefore upon a charitable Conſideration of the ſame, the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, did grant unto the Governors a ſufficient Piece of Ground againſt London Wall on the Southſide of the Lower Quarters of Moorfields. And in purſuance thereof they did proceed to build a new Hoſpital, which now ſhews a ſtately and magnificent Structure, containing in length from Eaſt to Weſt 540 Foot, and in Breadth 40 Foot, beſides the Wall which incloſeth the Gardens before it, which is neatly ordered with Walks of Free Stone round about, and Graſs Plats in the Middle. And beſides this Garden, there is at each end another for the Lunatick People, when they are a little well of their Diſtemper, to walk in for their Refreſhment; this Wall is in Length 680 Foot, and in Breadth 70 Foot at each end, being very high; and that part fronting the Fields hath Iron Grates in ſeveral Places of the Wall, to the end that Paſſengers, as they walk in the Fields, may look into the Garden.

New Beth ſeated in Moorfields. Dimenſio of it.

This large Fabrick is built of Brick and Free Stone; the Gate or Entrance all of Stone, with two Figures of a diſtracted Man and Woman in Chains (a curious Piece of Sculpture) over the Gate. And in this, as well as in the Building, the Architecture is good. It hath a large Cupolo with a gilded Ball, and a Vane at the Top of it, and a Clock within, and three fair Dials without.

And behold here in a Map a Proſpect of the Building fronting the Fields.

The Be of this ſpital to Kingdom.

The great Benefit that doth accrue hence to the City of London, and other Parts of this Kingdom, is very conſiderable, if we conſider the great Number of diſtracted Perſons brought in Yearly, and moſt receiving Cure, and being for the moſt part Poor and Indigent.]

New Beth J. S.

But to give yet a further and more particular Account of the preſent State of this noble and uſeful Foundation, the late learned Phyſician to the ſame, Dr. Edward Tyſon, was, upon my Solicitation, pleaſed to draw up this brief Relation following:

Dr. Tyſon.

The Hoſpital of Old Bethlehem being ruinous, and too ſtrait and cloſe for the Patients; in the Year 1675, the Lord Maior, Aldermen, Governors, and Citizens of London, began to build this new Hoſpital in Moorfields, nigh the Wall of the City: And though the Structure be ſo large and magnificent, yet by the great Application that was made in haſtning the Building, 'twas finiſhed the next Year, as appears by an Inſcription over the Arch facing the Entrance into the ſaid Hoſpital, viz.

This Hoſpital was begun to be built in April, 1675, and was finiſhed in July, 1676.

Sir William Turner, Knt. and Alderman, Preſident.
Benjamin Ducane, Eſq; Treaſurer.

The Charge of this Building was computed to amount to nigh 17000*l.* where now (with ſome Additions lately made) there is an Accommodation for 150 Patients, whereas in the old there were uſually but 50 or 60.

An Abſtract of Orders of Court made the 30th of March 1677, for the good Government of the Hoſpital of BETHLEM.

I. That the Bell be rung at Sun ſetting every Evening, Summer and Winter; and that then all Perſons do depart, and that aftewards no Perſons be admitted in, but Quality or Governors.

II. That no Servant go out of the Hoſpital till half an Hour after ringing of the Bell; nor ſtay out after Eight from Michaelmas to Lady Day, nor after Ten from Lady Day to Michaelmas; and that but one half of them be out at one time.

III. That the Back Gate at London Wall ſhall always be kept ſhut, except extraordinary Occaſions of bringing in Beer, &c. and that no Perſon ſhall come in to ſee the Lunaticks that way.

IV. That no Perſon, except Governors, ſhall be permitted to ſee the Lunaticks on Sundays.

V. That no Perſon do give the Lunaticks Strong Drink, Wine, Tobacco, or Spirits: Nor be permitted to ſell any ſuch thing in the Hoſpital.

VI. That ſuch of the Lunaticks as are fit, be permitted to walk in the Yard till Dinner-time, and then be lock'd up in their Cells; and that no Lunatick that lies naked, or is in a Courſe of Phyſick, be ſeen by any Body, without Order of the Phyſician.

VII. That no Servant, or other Perſon whatſoever, ſhall take any Money given to the Lunaticks, to convert the ſame to their own Uſe, but the ſame to be kept for the Lunaticks, till recovered, or laid out for them in the mean time, as the Committee thinks fit.

VIII. That no Officer or Servant ſhall beat or abuſe any Lunatick, nor offer any Force to them, but upon abſolute Neceſſity, for the better governing of them.

IX. That no Perſon do preſume to ask any Perſon for Money, till ſuch Perſon's Charity be firſt put into the Poor's Box; and that what afterwards ſhall be given to ſuch Servant, be put by him into the Servants Box, to be diſtributed among them, purſuant to an Order of Court for that purpoſe.

X. That ſome of the Committee go weekly to the ſaid Hoſpital, to ſee the Proviſions weighed; and that the ſame be good, and rightly expended. That the Men Servants ſhall attend the Delivery of the Diet to the Lunatick Men, and the Women Servants to the Lunatick Women.

Auguſt 11.
1699.

Ordered, That the Porter, Baſket Men, and all other Servants of the ſaid Hoſpital, take effectual Care, that no Perſon whatſoever that they in the leaſt ſuſpect to be lewd or diſorderly Perſons, nor any Boys or Girls, that they think are Apprentices, and come there to idle away their Time, be upon any account permitted to come into the ſaid Hoſpital; that the Steward of the ſaid Hoſpital for the Time being, be Superviſor over all the Servants thereto belonging; and if any of them be remiſs in their Duties, he to acquaint the Weekly Committee therewith.

And in the ſame Paſſage on Pannels in Golden Letters are ſet the Names of all the Benefactors to this Hoſpital ſince the building of the ſame, viz.

Beſides theſe, in ſingle Tables are the following Inſcriptions.

1691. Mr. John Fowke of Claybury near Woodfoard in Eſſex, Son of John Fowke, Eſq; ſome time Lord Maior of London, out of his Pious and Generous Diſpoſition to Charity, did by his Will give the Yearly Rent of one Hundred Ninety five Pounds. And alſo one Thouſand ſix Hundred and Eighteen Pounds, Nineteen Shillings and Two Pence in Money. To the intent, that one third Part of the ſaid Rents, and one half of the ſaid Sum of Money, ſhould be for ever employed in ſetting up ſuch as ſhall ſerve their Apprentiſhips in Bridewell Hoſpital; and the other two third parts of the Rents, and Moiety of the ſaid Sum of Money, to the Relief of the poor Lunaticks in Bethlehem Hoſpital.

Mr. William Pott, Citizen and Apothecary of London, late a worthy and charitable Member and Governor of this Hoſpital, did by his laſt Will give the Manor of Barfreſton (alias) Barſton, and divers Lands in the County of Kent, of the Yearly Value of one Hundred and Eleven Pounds: upon Truſt, out of the Rents thereof, to pay two Hundred Pounds to Chriſts Hoſpital, (whereof he was alſo a Governor) and afterwards in Truſt for this Hoſpital of Bethlem, for relief of the poor Lunaticks therein. 1691.

Mr. John Edmonſon, late of St. Katharines near the Tower of London, Sailmaker (deceaſed) did by his Will give to Suſanna his Wife (ſince alſo deceaſed) for the Term of her Life, all his Meſſuages, Lands, and Tenements, in the Iſle of Thanet, or elſewhere in Kent, of the Yearly Value of Fourſcore Pounds, or thereabouts: And after her Deceaſe, unto the Governors of the Hoſpitals of Bethlem and Bridewell, London, for ever, for the uſe of the Poor of the ſaid Hoſpitals. 1699.

And that care is taken of theſe poor Lunatick Patients, not only in the Houſe, but likewiſe when diſcharged thence, appears by theſe following Inſcriptions:

A Perſon unknown gave by the Hands of Dr. Edward Tyſon Fifty Pounds, for providing Medicines for ſuch poor Patients as have been cured in this Hoſpital, for preventing their Relapſe.

The ſame Perſon by the Hands of Dr. Edward Tyſon gave one Hundred Pounds more, to be diſtributed by him to ſuch Patients as ſhall be cured in the ſaid Hoſpital, toward their preſent Subſiſtance or Cloathing when diſcharged thence. 1701.

Benefactions towards the Wardrobe.

By the Conſtitution and Cuſtom of the Houſe, the Perſons that put in the Patients were obliged to provide them Cloaths while they continued there; but it being obſerved, that for want of them they ſuffered in their Health, not being timely provided, the Weekly Committee, and other Governors, and other charitable Perſons, have contributed towards erecting and furniſhing a Wardrobe. The Names of which Benefactors are likewiſe ſet up in the ſaid Wardrobe, as follows:

ho are re- ved into s Hoſpital.

'Tis by the help of ſuch Benefactors that this Hoſpital is enabled to bear their great Charges; for their Yearly Revenues fall much ſhort of their Expences; eſpecially ſince they have increaſed the Number af the Patients ſo much; and whereas, formerly each Patient paid 5*s. per* Week, now they pay nothing.

This indeed makes a great Application of Perſons to the Hoſpital for the getting in of their Friends, though not fit to be received; not conſidering, that 'tis an Hoſpital for Cure, and not an Alms Houſe. Such Patients therefore the Governors think fit to be received, that are furious, raving, and capable of Cure; or if not, yet are likely to be miſchievous to themſelves or others, and are really Poor.

J. S. The late learned Phyſician Dr. Tyſon informed me, that from the Year 1684 to 1703, (during which time he had been ordinary Phyſician there) there had been in this Hoſpital 1294 Patients; of which Number had been cured and diſcharged 890, which is above two Patients in Three; that after ſome Years caſting up the Numbers of Men and Women Patients he found them pretty equal, and very little difference. And though ſeveral ſince his time have had the ſmall Pox in this Hoſpital, yet not one has dyed of it.

Further Remarks. J. S.

Beſides this brief Account of Bethlem, I may add a few Remarks yet farther, of which I have been informed, either from the foreſaid Phyſician Dr. Tyſon, or from Deputy Gardiner, the late Treaſurer, both deceaſed.

Governors.

The Governors of this Hoſpital, as alſo that of Bridewel, are chiefly Citizens; but yet ſome are Noblemen or other Gentlemen of Quality and Wealth.

Preſident.

The Preſident who is the chief Governor, is uſually choſen out of ſuch Aldermen of the City as have paſt the Chair. He preſides over all, and is Preſident of Bridewel as well as this. His Buſineſs is on Court Days at Bridewel, to examine and judge the Priſoners ſent thither, and according to their Crimes, with conſent of the Court, directeth their Puniſhments, and there tranſacts other Buſineſs relating to both Hoſpitals. He alſo ſigneth Warrants for ſuch Patients as are to be ſent to Bethlem.

Treaſurer.

The Treaſurer is choſen out of the Governors. His Buſineſs is more particularly to take care of the Revenues, as in receiving the Monies, and ordering the neceſſary Payments. And in the Abſence of the Preſident he taketh the Chair at the Courts held at Bridewel, and likewiſe ſigneth the Warrants for the Lunaticks to be ſent to Bethlem.

The Committee.

And for the greater Eaſe and Diſpatch in tranſacting the Affairs of both Hoſpitals, there is Yearly appointed out of the Governors a Committee for each Hoſpital. The Committee for Bethlem conſiſteth uſually of Thirty ſix Perſons, of whom Six are obliged to attend the Service of the Hoſpital for two Months, viz. Six for January and July; other Six for February and Auguſt, and ſo on. The uſual time of the meeting of the Six is on Saturdays; when they examine the Stewards Accounts for the Week preceding, which being approved is tranſcribed into a Book and ſigned by them. They likewiſe take notice of the Proviſions; give Directions about Repairs; view the Patients to be admitted or diſcharged; and do other Matters that may come before them, as was hinted before. But if any Thing of greater Import happen, it is referred to the General Court. For if they do not preſently determine the Matter, they appoint the ſame Committee, or a larger, to examine into it, and ſo make their Report to that Court.

The Clerk.

The Office of the Clerk is to enter the Names of the Lunaticks, to take the Securities of ſuch as are admitted for Cure, and to gather all the Rents.

A Miniſter.

They have a Miniſter alſo to whom they allow 20*l.* a Year, whoſe Office is to viſit the Lunaticks, and to inſtruct and pray with ſuch of them as are capable of it; and to do other Spiritual Offices among them.

Admittance of Lunaticks.

Now concerning the Lunaticks themſelves, and the Management of them. The Method of admitting Patients into the Hoſpital is this; that the Patient be brought upon Saturday, when the Committee meets, to be viewed by them and the Phyſician; and if he be judged a fit Object for that Hoſpital, then there is a Warrant drawn up by the Clerk of the Hoſpital, to be ſigned by the Preſident; or in his Abſence by the Treaſurer, for his Admittance. And thoſe that put the Patient in are obliged to give Bond to be ſigned by two Perſons, to take him away when diſcharged the Houſe; or if he dyes to be at the Charge of burying him.

Now thoſe are judged the fitteſt Objects for this Hoſpital that are raving and furious, and capable of Cure; or if not, yet are likely to do miſchief to themſelves or others; and are Poor, and cannot be otherwiſe provided for. But for thoſe that are only Melancholick, or Ideots, and judged not capable of Cure, theſe the Governors think the Houſe ought not to be burthened with.

The Care and Cure of the Lunaticks.

As to the Care and Cure of the Patients, here is undoubtedly the greateſt Proviſion made for them of any publick Charity in the World; each having a convenient Room and Apartment to themſelves where they are locked up a Nights; and in it a Place for a Bed; or, if they are ſo ſenſleſs as not fit to make uſe of one, they are every Day provided with freſh and clean Straw. Thoſe that are fit for it, at convenient Hours, have liberty to walk in the long Galleries, which are large and noble. In the Summer time, to air themſelves, there is two large Graſs Plats, one for the Men, and another for the Women. And in the Winter a Stove for each apart, where a good Fire is kept to warm them. In the Heat of the Weather, a very convenient Bathing Place to cool and waſh them, and is of great Service in airing their Lunacy; and it is eaſily made a hot Bath for reſtoring their Limbs when numbed, or cleaning and preſerving them from Scurvey, or other cutaneous Diſtempers. Their Diet is extraordinary good and proper for them, which every Week is viewed by a Committee of the Governors.

A Wardrobe for the Lunaticks.

And though the Friends that put in the Patients are obliged to provide Cloaths, yet it being obſerved, that for want of a timely Supply they have often ſuffered, there is a Wardrobe erected, from whence they are furniſhed. For though when raving and furious they do not ſuffer much from the Weather, yet in the Intervals they are liable to it, and often contract other Diſtempers, care of which is likewiſe taken as well as of their Lunacy.

Other Diſtempers of the Lunaticks.

Several that have come into the Hoſpital with Loſs of Limbs, and not able to go, have recovered them, and been ſent out perfectly well. Others that have been, to the greateſt Extremity, over-run with the Scurvey, with Ulcers in their Mouths, with Hydropical Swellings in their Limbs, with Mortifications of their Toes, with Herpes exedens in large Blotches over great Parts of the Body, and Variety of other Diſtempers: have been (thanks be to God) recovered and ſet well, as likewiſe ſuch as have been taken with the Small Pox.

Gentle Uſage practiſed towards them.

So that by God's Bleſſing for Twenty Years paſt, ending 1703, there have been above two Patients in three cured, as the Phyſician hath told me. Which Number of Patients recovered is the more conſiderable, becauſe many, or moſt that come there, have been under Cure before; and being thought incurable are thruſt into the Hoſpital to avoid their Charges of keeping elſewhere. Many of which Patients, by finding a greater Kindneſs, and better Uſage here than in their other Quarters, with a great deal of Acknowledgment, have confeſſed their Senſe of it. And many, though reſtored to Health, have rather deſired to continue there than to be turned out; the Kindneſs of the Hoſpital being greater to them than of their Friends and Relations; for there is nothing of Violence ſuffered to be offered to any of the Patients, but they are treated with all the Care and Tenderneſs imaginable. If raving and furious, they are confined from doing themſelves or others Miſchief. And it is to the Credit and Reputation of the Hoſpital, that in ſo great a Number of Lunaticks that are conſtantly kept there, it is very rare, and in many Years, that any one Patient makes away with himſelf.

How diſcharged when Cured.

And not only Proviſion is made, and Care taken for theſe Patients, whilſt in the Hoſpital, but likewiſe when cured and diſcharged, there is an Obligation in the Bond given, when they are admitted, whereby they are required to take them out in order to provide for them. But where they are deſtitute of Friends, and unprovided with common Neceſſaries, a Charity was given by a Perſon unknown, at the Phyſician's Diſcretion, to give what he ſhall think convenient for their preſent Subſiſtence, or to provide them with Cloaths for the preſent till they ſhall fall into Buſineſs: And likewiſe Proviſion is made to furniſh any Patient that hath been in the Hoſpital with Medicines gratis, for the preventing of any Relapſe; which hath been of great uſe to theſe poor Creatures, and ſo neceſſary a Charity and uſeful, that 'tis hoped both will be ſupplyed when the Sums given are expended.

When a Patient is cured and to be diſcharged, he is called before the Committee of the Governors and Phyſician; who examine him, and being found fit to be diſcharged, the Phyſician gives a Certificate of the ſame; and then the Steward of the Houſe takes care to ſee him delivered to his Friends.

Number of Patients.

The Number of Patients, ſince the Charge of 5*s. per* Week was taken off, and that they have been taken in, and maintained free of Charges, was ſeldom leſs than 136, namely, as many as there were Rooms and Conveniences for them, ſo that the Hoſpital was always crowded and full: And uſually the Names of a great many were taken before-hand, to be admitted as ſoon as Room ſhould be made by the Diſcharge of any Cured, or by their Death.

150 Patien now in Beth-*lem.

But now it muſt not be omitted to be mentioned, that as the Houſe will contain 150 Patients, ſo there are lately finiſhed certain Chambers ſufficient to make up the Number. And ſo many Patients they now have.

How long i Cure.

The Time of Cure is uncertain: Some have been cured in a Month, Two or Three: Some continue diſtracted many Years.

To the Queſtion, Whether there be more Men or Women Lunatick kept here, the Anſwer was, there have been no Inequality of Number obſerved as to the Sexes.

And to all this let me ſubjoin the Weekly Food and Diet provided for theſe Lunaticks.

Their Weekly Diet.

Sunday. Boiled Beef and Broth, and Bread for Dinner. And a Meſs of hot Broth and Bread for Supper.

Monday. Bread, Cheeſe, and Butter for Dinner. Milk Pottage, and other Pottage, with Bread for Supper.

Tueſday. Boiled Mutton or Veal, and Broth for Dinner. And hot Broth for Supper.

Wedneſday. Bread and Cheeſe, or Butter for Dinner. And a Meſs of Milk Pottage, or other Pottage for Supper.

Thurſday. Boiled Beef, Broth and Bread for Dinner. And a Meſs of hot Broth and Bread for Supper.

Friday. Bread and Cheeſe and Butter for Dinner. Milk Pottage or other Pottage for Supper.

Saturday. Peaſe Pottage, Rice Milk, and Furmity. Or other Pottage and Bread for Dinner. And Bread and Cheeſe and Butter for Supper.

And ſuch Fruit is given them as is moſt ſeaſonable.

Spittal Sermon at St. Brides by Dr. Tobot.

Remarkable were the Expreſſions, (to add no more) uſed by the Preacher on Wedneſday in Eaſter Week, this preſent Year 1719, concerning the poor People received into Bethlem, proper to raiſe a Compaſſion towards them: ‘That theſe ‘had loſt their Senſes, and the Uſe of the Rea‘ſon and Underſtanding which they once had; ‘and now had nothing left but their outward ‘Shape to diſtinguiſh them from the Creatures ‘below them. Theſe are ſad Objects indeed. ‘They ſhew us to our ſelves in the worſt Diſguiſe, ‘by turning to us the weak and dark Side of ‘Human Nature; and ſerve to convince us ‘what little Reaſon we have to glory in our ‘Wiſdom, or in any intellectual Attainments; ‘ſince the ſtrongeſt Brain may ſo ſuddenly, and ‘by ſo many Accidents be diſordered, &c.

‘That the Sight of thoſe unhappy Wretches ‘might raiſe ſuch Reflections as theſe in our ‘Minds, but ſhould never be made Matter of ‘Sport, and Paſtime, Recreation, and Diverſion. That this would be a barbarous and inhuman ‘Abuſe of ſuch ſad Spectacles. But as often as ‘we beheld them, we ſhould bleſs God for pre‘ſerving us from their miſerable State, and do ‘all we can to relieve them under it: To have ‘them again reſtored to their Senſes, and reco‘vered to their right Mind.

The WORKHOUSE in Biſhopſgateſtreet.

The Workhouſe in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet. J. S.

THERE is ſtill one Houſe remaining, wherein poor People and Vagrants are received and taken care of, eſpecially of poor Children: And this of late Founding, but of excellent Uſe and Service to the City. It is the WORKHOUSE in Biſhopſgateſtreet, adjoining to that which was Sir Paul Pindar's Houſe, which though it hath not a Penny Revenue, yet is able to maintain ſeveral Hundreds of poor Children, beſides great Numbers of idle Perſons of both Sexes; being founded upon an Act of Parliament in the 13th and 14th Years of K. Charles II. which gave Power to raiſe a ſufficient Sum of Money upon the Inhabitants of the City to defray the Charges. It is governed by Fifty two Citizens; and the Lord Maior for the Time being is always Preſident, and the Aldermen his Aſſiſtants. It receives poor Children, and grown Vagrants, and other idle People. The Children are taught to ſpin Wool and Flax, to Sow and Knit, to make their own Cloaths, Shoes, and Stockings, and the like Employments; to inure them betimes to labour. They are alſo taught to read, and ſuch as are capable, to write and caſt Accounts; and alſo the Catechiſm, to ground them in Principles of Religion and Honeſty. The Vagrants and Beggars, Men and Women, are employed in ſewing, beating Hemp, picking Okam, and raſping Logwood. And among theſe, ſeveral great Cheats, pretending to be Lame, Dumb and Blind, and Burned, have been detected.

For poor Children, and idle Perſons.

A Deaf and Dumb Cheat brought hither.

One Robert Cunningham, about 40 Years old, was brought into this Workhouſe in September, 1705, that went begging up and down the City, with a Paper of Rhimes, pretending to be Deaf and Dumb, by reaſon of Sickneſs, Famine and Cold, and to come from London-Derry, and that he waited for a Penſion. But he was detected to have no Infirmity, and is to be ſent a Soldier in her Majeſties Service. This is the Fourth pretended Dumb Perſon lately diſcovered.

And another named Mary Welch.

And in April 1707, was brought to this Workhouſe one Mary Welch with her two Children. She uſed to beg about London and Weſtminſter, and in other Parts with her ſaid Children in Paniers on Horſeback, being wrapt up in Sheets and Blankets, pretending that they were burnt in their Limbs by a Fire in Lincolnſhire that conſumed her Houſe. This Trade ſhe followed ſeveral Years. All which pretended Calamity was notoriouſly falſe, the ſaid Mary and her two Children being found of their Limbs, and no ways ſcorched by any Fire, and are now kept at Work in the Workhouſe.

Two other begging Cheats taken up.

And on Sunday, Decemb. 12. 1708, the Beadle of Bridgeward took up a Man dreſt in Womans Cloaths, begging and counterfeiting himſelf Lame. There was one John Davis, alias Fox, a luſty young Fellow begging with him, who alſo pretended Dumbneſs, ſhewing a Certificate printed, which ſet forth that he loſt the Uſe of his Speech by ſleeping in a Field, as he was coming from a Fair in May 1707. This Man ſet upon the Beadle as he was taking up the pretended begging Woman. In the Scuffle ſhe got away by the help of the Crowd, but the other was ſeized, and being brought to the Lord Maior was ſent by him to this Workhouſe, where he was brought to his Speech in a little time. And being ſent by the ſaid Maior for a Soldier, he offered to diſcover ſeveral other ſuch Cheats as himſelf. To his Certificate was annexed a Paſs, ſigned by ſeveral Maiors of Towns and Cities, and by Juſtices in the Counties between Cheſter and London, as Newark, Lincoln, Grantham, Cambridge, Stamford, Huntingdon, Peterborough, &c. ſo well it ſeems had he hitherto managed his Impoſture.

An Account of the Work-houſe.

But more particularly, what this Workhouſe ſerves for, and how begun, and ſtill maintained, will appear by this enſuing Paper, which the Government thereof lately took care to have publiſhed, for the promoting of charitable Gifts and Legacies thereto.

A true Account of the Foundation, State and Deſign of the Workhouſe for the Poor of the City of London, Chriſtmas 1704.

‘Whereas by an Act of Parliament made in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Years of the Reign of our late Sovereign Lord King Charles the Second, Entituled, An Act for the better Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom. It is thereby Enacted (amongſt other Things) That from thenceforth there be, and ſhall be one or more Corporation or Corporations, Workhouſe or Workhouſes within the City of London, conſiſting of a Preſident, a Deputy to the Preſident, and a Treaſurer; and that the Lord Maior of the ſaid City for the time being, be Preſident of the ſaid Corporation, Workhouſe or Workhouſes within the ſaid City, and the Aſſiſtants to be the Aldermen of the ſaid City of London for the time being; and Fifty two other Citizens to be choſen by the Common Council of the ſaid City; which Preſident, Deputy Preſident, and Treaſurer for the time being reſpectively ſhall for ever hereafter in Name and Fact, Be Bodies Politick and Corporate in Law, by the Name of the Preſident and Governors of the Poor for the ſaid City; and by that Name every of the ſaid Corporations ſhall and may without Licenſe in Mortmaine Purchaſe, or receive any Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, not exceeding the Yearly Value of 3000l. per Annum, of the Gift, Alienation, or Deviſe of any Perſon or Perſons, who are thereby without further Licenſe enabled to give the ſame, and any Goods, Chattels, or Sums of Money whatſoever, to the Uſes, Intents and Purpoſes in the ſaid Act mentioned (which by the Way is an evident Demonſtration that the Parliament did expect that People would be very liberal in their Charity to ſo good a Work;) and that the poor Inhabitants might in time be eaſed of the preſent Charge. And each reſpective Corporation have thereby Authority, from time to time, to make and appoint a Common Seal for the Uſe of the ſaid Corporation, with Power for the Common Council of the ſaid City to raiſe any Sum or Sums of Money on the Inhabitants thereof, not exceeding one Years Rate to the Poor in any one Year, for carrying on the ſaid Work, as by the ſaid Act (amongſt other Things therein contained) relation being thereunto had, may more at large appear.

‘That at a Common Council held at the Guildhall of the ſaid City of London, the Fourth Day of April, Anno Dom. 1698. The ſaid Common-Council, did by Virtue of the Power given to them by the ſaid Act, Elect Fifty Two Citizens of the ſaid City of London, to be in conjunction with the ſaid Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſaid City for the time being, a Corporation for the Intents and Purpoſes in the ſaid recited Act mentioned. Who have ever ſince put the ſaid Act in Execution, and taken a large Houſe in Biſhopſgateſtreet, and ſeveral other Houſes contiguous thereto, and have laid out ſeveral Sums of Money in purchaſing Ground and Building thereon, and in ſeveral Alterations in making the Houſes aforeſaid fit for the Purpoſes aforeſaid; and the ſaid Common Council have by Virtue of the Authority aforeſaid raiſed ſeveral Sums of Money on the Inhabitants of the ſaid City for the Purpoſes aforeſaid: And the ſaid Preſident and Governors, and ſeveral other Worthy and Charitable Perſons, have largely contributed out of their own Eſtates for the carrying on the ſaid Work, and for the Eaſe of the meaner Sort of the Inhabitants of the ſaid City. And the ſaid Preſident, Treaſurer, and Governors, have made a good Progreſs in the ſaid Work, and hope by the Charity of ſuch Worthy Perſons as may be Contributors thereto, to be enabled to purchaſe ſome Eſtate for the Uſes aforeſaid, (for there is not as yet one Farthing of Yearly Revenue ſettled on the Workhouſe) that ſo the Inhabitants of this City, may in ſome Meaſure be eaſed of the Annual Charge and Expence. And therefore the ſaid Preſident, Treaſurer, and Governors, think it a Duty incumbent on them, and as part of the Truſt repoſed in them, to make a Repreſentation of the Uſefulneſs and Benefit of the ſaid Workhouſe, and how far it is for the Honour and Advantage of this Renowned City, and Her Majeſty's Subjects, and others of this Nation, which is as followeth: Viz.

The Deſign and Intent of it.

‘That the Deſign and Intention of the Governors of the ſaid Workhouſe, is to employ all the poor Children, Beggars, Vagrants, and other idle and diſorderly Perſons that are, or can be found within the ſaid City of London and the Liberties thereof.

‘I. The Poor Children are,

‘1. Such for whom no Settlement can by Law be provided.

‘2. Such whoſe poor Friends being much oppreſſed by a great Charge of Children, or are reduced by Misfortunes to ſuch Circumſtances, that they cannot provide for them themſelves.

‘3. Such who are the Children of Seamen and Soldiers in the QUEEN's Service, many of whom loſe their Lives therein, or are otherwiſe rendred incapable of providing for their Wives, Children, and Families.

Black Guard.

‘4. Such who are commonly known by the Name of the Black Guard, who too commonly lived upon Pilfering Sugar and Tobacco on the Keys, and afterwards became Pickpockets and Houſe Breakers, many of whom at laſt have received their due Rewards, and made their Exits at the Gallows; which are now kept to Work, and get their Livings honeſtly in the ſaid Workhouſe.

‘5. Many Pariſh Children.

‘ All theſe being taken into the ſaid Workhouſe are there taught to Read and Write, and kept to Work until they are qualified to be put out to be Apprentices, and for the Sea Services, or otherwiſe diſpoſed.

‘ II. The Beggars and Vagrants. They are thoſe Sturdy and Inſolent Men and Women who live in the Skirts and Out Parts of this City, and Places contiguous thereto, and other Stragglers and Wanderers, who too frequently reſort to this City. Which when Apprehended and Taken, are in the ſaid Wokhouſe kept to hard Work and Labour until they are by Law diſcharged therefrom.

‘ III. The Idle and Diſorderly Perſons, are thoſe Rogues and Vagrant Men which are there kept until they are put into the QUEEN’s Service by Sea and Land; and thoſe ill Women which are taken up in the Streets, Debauching the Youth, and others of this City, many of which, rather than be continued to Work and Labour, voluntarily tranſport themſelves to the Weſtern Plantations whereby this City and Nation is rid of them.

‘ In Building for theſe convenient Houſes, Work Rooms, Paying Officers and Servants, and in providing Meat, Drink, Waſhing, Lodging, Cloaths, and all other Neceſſaries, and to put them out Apprentices; great Sums of Money are yearly expended, beſides what they ſeverally earn by their own Labour, and beſides what hath been already raiſed by the Common Council of this City.

‘ The Conſideration whereof is earneſtly recommended to all charitable Perſons, who are Well Wiſhers to Honour, Virtue and Morality, that they will vouchſafe by their Wills or otherwiſe, to give their Aid and Aſſiſtance for the Propagating and Continuing this Great Work of CHARITY, which the Governors of the ſaid Corporation have by their Care, Diligence, and Induſtry already made ſo good a Proficiency in, and which may prevent the Ruin of many Idle and Diſorderly Perſons for the future.

‘ Note, There are in the Workhouſe ſeldom leſs than 400 Children at Work, beſides the grown Beggars, Vagrants, and other Idle and Diſorderly Perſons, who are there kept to hard Labour.

Some Years ago the Governors built a very ſtrong and uſeful Building, and of large Dimenſions, containing (beſides other Apartments) three long Rooms or Galleries, one over another, for Workhouſes, which are all filled with Boys and Girls at Work, ſome Knitting, moſt Spinning of Wool; and a convenient Number of Women and Men teaching and overſeeing them; Fires burning in the Chimneys in the Winter time, to keep the Rooms and the Children warm. And they intend (if they get Money) to pull down the reſt of the old Houſes, where now alſo the Poor and the Vagrants are kept at their ſeveral Works, and to build a fair Court anſwerable to the foreſaid New Building, which is on the Southſide thereof.

’Tis to be wondered at, how all Things are contrived here to the beſt Advantage for Thrift and good Husbandry, to maintain in Cloaths and Food ſuch a vaſt Number as live and are harboured here. Some are Taylors, ſome Shoemakers, ſome knit Stockings. They brew their own Drink, having in the New Building Erected a large and convenient Brewhouſe, and over that a Malthouſe. They kill their own Beef and Mutton; and have for that Purpoſe a Slaughter Houſe; but ſince they find it better Husbandry to buy their Meat of the Butcher. And in caſe of Sickneſs, broken Limbs, or Sores, or Wounds, they have Advice, Phyſick, and Surgery gratis.

Their Diet.

Their daily Food is plain but wholeſome and ſufficient. They have Breakfaſts, Dinners, and Suppers every Day in the Week, and a conſtant ſet Allowance each Day. Their Stint each Meal for Bread is four Ounces; for Cheeſe an Ounce and an Half; for Butter an Ounce; for Small Beer what is ſufficient, not exceeding a Pint at a time of 7*s.* a Barrel.

Their Breakfaſt, Sundays, Wedneſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays, is Bread and Cheeſe, or Bread and Butter, and Beer. On Mondays, a Pint of Peaſe Pottage with Bread and Beer. On Tueſdays, a Plumb Pudding Pye of Nine Ounces, and Beer. On Wedneſdays, a Pint of Furmity. On Friday, a Pint of Barly Broth, and Bread. On Saturday, a plain Flower Sewet Dumpling with Beer.

Their Supper always the ſame; to wit, to each four Ounces of Bread, one Ounce and half of Cheeſe, or one Ounce of Butter, and Beer ſufficient.

The Habit of the Children is all the ſame, being made of Ruſſit Cloth, and a round Badge worn upon their Breaſt, repreſenting a poor Boy, and a Sheep; the Motto, Gods Providence is our Inheritance.

They have alſo a large Room, which ſerves them both for a Chapel and a Dining Room. They go to Prayers at Six in the Morning, and at Six at Night; and are duly taught the Catechiſm; and have a Miniſter that attendeth hereupon: And on Sundays they all go to Church at St. Helens, where is convenient Room for them.

The grand Committee of this Houſe.

The Grand Committee for managing the Affairs of the Workhouſe for the Months of November, December, January, February, March, April, in the Years 1704, and 1705, were Sir Robert Clayton, Knt. and Aldermen, Deputy-Preſident; Sir Richard Levett, Knt. and Alderman, Treaſurer; and all the reſt of the Governors, that pleaſe to appear. Theſe, or any Three of them, to meet every Thurſday in the Afternoon, and to ſubdivide themſelves into Committees for the Work, the Accompts, the Vagrants, and for the Proviſions, as they ſee occaſion.

BENEFACTORS to the Workhouſe this laſt Year, viz. 1718, By Legacies.

Dame Sarah Pritchard, 100*l.*
Sir Richard Hoar, late Preſident, 200*l.*
Samuel Shepherd, Eſq; 100*l.*

Thomas Hall, Eſq; 200*l.* In Addition to, before given, 300*l.*

There be alſo other Benefactors, which muſt not be paſſed over without honourable mention, as Mr. Abraham Chitty, who gave a Tun of Logwood, and Ralph Hartly half a Tun. The Company of Apothecaries undertook to pay the whole Charge of the Phyſick for the Children and Servants of this Workhouſe for three Years from the 29th of September, Anno 1701. And Dr. Frederick Slare, Dr. Richard Moreton, Dr. Joſhua Palmer, and Dr. Francis Upton, undertook alternately to viſit all the ſick Children and Servants; and preſcribe ſuch Medicines for them as they from time to time ſhould judge moſt proper. And this gratis. And Thomas Stanton, Surgeon, to ſerve the ſaid Children and Servants in Surgery for three Years gratis. And add to the reſt, that Anno 1703, Sir Edward Northey, Her Majeſty's Attorney General, and Duncan Dee, Eſq; offered themſelves their ſtanding Counſil, and Nicolas Baker, their Atorney without Fee or Reward.

What the Right Reverend the Biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry, ſaid in his Sermon on Eaſter Monday, Anno 1702, before the Governors of the Hoſpitals, concerning this Workhouſe may deſerve to be mentioned.

Biſhop of Litchfield and Cov. Sermon, at Eaſter.

‘ I muſt not forget another publick Charity of admirable Uſe; and which for that Reaſon deſerveth the utmoſt Encouragement; I mean, the Workhouſe Erected for employing poor Children, and ſuch diſtreſſed Vagrant Children as are found within the City and the Liberties thereof. This by the Induſtry of the Preſidents and Governors of the Poor of the City, hath been carried ſo far, that 261 Children of ſeveral Pariſhes remained in the Workhouſe this Year; and 71 have ſince been received. Of Vagrants there remained 71, and 89 have ſince been taken in. All theſe, according to their Ages and Conditions are Clothed, and fed and inſtructed in the Principles of Religion, and in honeſt Arts and Trades. They are inured to Labour, kept Cleanly, and diſpoſed to Honeſty, by Encouragement and Diſcipline. I have not time to ſay of what wonderful Benefit theſe Places are, and may be to the Publick, if they can happily fall into the right Management of them: where the Refuſe of Mankind, they that would otherwiſe be the Bane and Scandal of the Commonwealth, are reſcued from Perdition, and made uſeful Members of it. But it is hardly poſſible for Men to be better employed than in this Work, or to be more charitable than in their Contributions towards it. And may it pleaſe Almighty God to enable thoſe that undertake it, to ſurmount all the Difficulties that croſs their Deſigns. They will then have (what one would wiſh to every good and publick ſpirited Man) the Comforts of their Labours in this Life; and when that is at an End, thoſe Labours will conduct them to the Joys of that Above; and that will for ever remain.

A Boy of this Houſe makes a Speech to the Queen.

One of theſe Boys was already ſo well diſciplined and improved in this Houſe, that the Governors ventured to let him make a Speech to the Queen, when ſhe had occaſion to come into the City ſome Years ago; which being but ſhort may not be amiſs to be here ſpecified.

The SPEECH of JOHN TRUSTY, Aged Eleven Years, a poor Boy belonging to the Workhouſe of the Corporation for the Poor of the City of London; To her Sacred Majeſty Queen ANNE, upon her coming into the City, to dine at the Guildhall, on Thurſday, Octob. the 29. 1702. being the Lord Maiors Day.

‘ May it pleaſe your moſt excellent Majeſty:
‘ To pardon this great Preſumptin in Us poor

‘ Children, who throw our ſelves at your Royal Feet, among the reſt of your glad Subjects, that here in Crowds appear to behold your Sacred Majeſty.

‘ We, MADAM, have no Fathers, no Mothers, no Friends; or (which is next to none) thoſe who through their extreme Poverty cannot help us. * Gods Providence is our Inheritance. All the Support we have is from the unexhauſted Charities of your Loyal Citizens of London, and other your good Subjects, and the pious Care of our Governors, who are now teaching our little Hands to Work, and our Fingers to Spin.

* The Motto on their Badge which they wear at their Breaſts.

* ‘ Theſe Threads, MADAM, are ſome of the early Fruits of our Induſtry. We are all daily employed on the Staple Manufacture of England, learning betimes to be uſeful to the World. And there ſeemed nothing wanting to compleat our Happineſs, but the Opportunity which this Day affords us, of being the Objects of your tender Pity and Compaſſion. One gracious Smile from your Majeſty on this new Foundation will make us live. - - - - - - And live to call you Bleſſed.

* Holding ſome Yarn in their Hands.

‘ And may God Almighty long preſerve your Majeſty for the Good of theſe your Kingdoms, and your Royal Conſort the PRINCE. So pray we, your little Children: And let all your People ſay, AMEN.

The Good done here, 1704.

The Year ending 1704, were put forth Apprentices to Service, and diſcharged, 161. Several whereof were placed forth to Commanders of Ships, and others in the Queen's Service by Sea, to Merchantmen, Fiſhermen, and others. Buried 6. Remaining under the Charge of the Governors, 368. Of grown Vagrants and Beggars, and other idle and diſorderly Perſons, many whereof had Cloathing and other Relief, 653. Diſcharged the laſt Year 609. Many whereof went into her Majeſties Service, either by Land or Sea. Dyed 6. Remain 38.

This Order was publiſhed in the Poſtman, Decemb. 15. 1704, by the Preſident and Governors for the Poor of London, viz.

An Order for taking up idle People, from the Governors of this Houſe.

‘ Whereas the Steets, and Paſſages of this City are generally at this time of the Year much annoyed with Rogues, Vagabonds, and ſturdy Beggars; for prevention hereof for the future, the Preſident and Governors of the Poor of the City of London, do give notice, that if any Overſeer for the Poor, Conſtable, Beadle, Marſhalsman, Warder, or other Perſon, ſhall apprehend any Rogue, Vagabond, or ſturdy Beggar, and bring them before any Juſtices of the Peace, ſo that they may be brought and delivered to, and received by the Keeper of the Workhouſe, he ſhall receive 12*d.* for every ſuch.

Fewer young Criminals by means of this Workhouſe.

What a publick Benefit this Workhouſe hath already proved, may appear from a Preſentment of the Grand Jury, May the 8th, 1706, at Juſtice Hall in the Old Baily, wherein they repreſented to that Honourable Court, ‘ That in attending the Buſineſs of that Seſſions, they did not find any of thoſe young Criminals which formerly were uſed to be brought before them; and that their Attendance there was ſo very ſhort. Which they were ſenſible was owing, in a great meaſure, if not entirely, to the Workhouſe Erected in the City, which received therein all Poor and Vagrant Children, which lay up and down in the Streets, (commonly called by the Name of the Black Guard) and have been there educated, employed, and fitted for Trades, and other Employments, who had been before trained up to Wickedneſs and Vice; and after, having been frequently before this Court, and often pardoned on account of their tender Years, had at laſt (taking no Warning) made their Exit at the Gallows. Whereſore they returned their hearty Thanks to that Honourable Court, and the reſt of the Governors of that Houſe for their great Pains therein, &c.

This was the Condition of this Houſe of Charity divers Years paſt. As for the State of it more lately, take it as it was reported and given in March the 20th, 1715-16.

Theſe are Religiouſly Educated, according to the Uſage of the Church of England; and are employed in Spinning Wool, Sewing or Knitting: They are Dieted and Cloathed, and duly taken care of in Sickneſs. They are taught to Read, Write, and caſt Accompt, whereby they are qualified for Services and honeſt Employments. And have, at their being placed out of the Houſe, a Suit of Cloaths, or 20*s.* in lieu thereof. But Freemens Children (and ſometimes others) have a larger Allowance out of Benefactions, directed to be appropriated to that Purpoſe.

Note, The Smallneſs of the real Eſtate belonging to this Houſe, and want of a ſuitable Supply, has prevented admitting Children in the uſual Manner; and the Undertaking is now reduced to great Streights and Neceſſities.

Vagabonds, Beggars, Pilfering, and other young Vagrants, Lewd, Idle, and Diſorderly Perſons, duly committed in the Year laſt paſt were 363; and 55 that remained at Ladyday, 1715, in all—418

Theſe Vagabonds, Beggars, &c. have proper Relief, and are employed either in beating Hemp, picking Oakum, or waſhing Linnen. And as to ſuch of them who are ſtrolling Vagrants and Beggars, after they have been thus for ſome time confined to hard Labour, and taught thereby how to ſubſiſt honeſtly, they are then, as the Law directs, ſent to their reſpective Settlements.

Of the Children here Educated ſince the Year 1701, there have been diſcharged and placed forth Apprentice to Officers of Ships, to Trades, and to Services in ſeveral good Families (beſides thoſe mentioned in the preſent Account) one Thouſand Four Hundred and Twenty; and within that time Six Thouſand Five Hundred Thirty Four Vagabonds, Beggars, &c. (among which were ſeveral notorious Impoſtors pretending to be Lame, Dumb, and Blind,) have been committed, and puniſhed with Confinement and hard Labour, in the manner above-mentioned. Of the Children there have Dyed 123; and of the Vagabonds, &c. 60.

The Children, and all others in this Workhouſe, are required to attend Divine Service Morning and Evening. Which, in a convenient Place, is there regularly and duly performed.

The preſent real Eſtate belonging to this Corporation (beſides the Ground on which the Workhouſe is ſituated) amounts to little more than 280*l.* per Annum. And the neceſſary Expence far exceeding the Yearly Income, had very much increaſed the Debts of the Houſe, and prevented the farther good Deſigns intended. And therefore it was recommended to good and well diſpoſed Perſons, to encourage by their Charity this moſt uſeful and beneficial Work.

I cannot but add here, that one of the Aldermen, now alive (whoſe Name I muſt conceal) was ſo ſenſible of the great Benefit of this Houſe to the whole City, that he told me, that rather than it ſhould ſink, he would contribute 1000*l.* himſelf to maintain it.

In the Year 1714, Sir Robert Beachcroft, Maior, the Common Council reſolved (as they might by the Act of Parliament) to raiſe 5000*l.* upon the ſeveral Wards, for the neceſſary Suſtentation of the Workhouſe, and for the defraying the Expences and Debts thereof: In the Payment whereof ſome of the Wards are backward, as to their Proportions, even to this Year.

The preſent Treaſurer, a careful and diligent Man, by his Intereſt hath bought ſome Houſes adjoining to the Workhouſe, which coſt 1000*l.* and built two Houſes, fronting the Street, upon that Ground. Which are let for 40*l.* Rent each: which Rent is for the Uſe of the Houſe; having now alſo a very decent Frontiſpiece, with the Effigies of a poor Boy, and another of a Girl over the Gate.

reaſurer, and

The preſent Treaſurer of this Houſe is Samuel Webb of Hackney, Eſq;

Theſe are alſo Officers of the ſame:

Mr. Maine, Steward.
Mr. Chandler, Secretary.
Mr. Barret, Chaplain and Schoolmaſter.
A Keeper of the Idle People and Vagrants.

All which eat at a common Table. This laſt is the Governor of the other Side, who hath under him Hempdreſſers by Trade. There is alſo a Writing Maſter, and School Miſtreſs, and a Porter to wait at the Gate, and to ſummon Courts.

And now while we look back upon all theſe Hoſpitals, and conſider the noble Bounty wherewith the Numbers contained in them are upheld, we may well uſe the Words of a very Reverend Divine (afterward Biſhop of Norwich) which he ſpake long ago to the Citizens from the Pulpit, on the ſame Occaſion: ‘Bleſſed be God, as good Works

So that in ſhort, his Caſe (as by this his own Relation) was; that he, having a Propriety in a Printing Preſs, printed there a Book in Latin, Intitled, A Royal Defence of K. Charles I. Dedicated to his Right and Lawful Heir K. Charles II. ſoon after that barbarous Act committed upon that King's Royal Perſon. For Printing this, he was deprived by the Council of State, of his School, and of Preſs, (which he reckoned a Thouſand Pounds Damage to him) and turned out into the wide World with Wiſe and Six Children; and himſelf impriſoned in Newgate. That afterwads he kept a private School on St. Peters Hill. But in the Year 1650 he was by the Company of Merchant Taylors reſtored to his former School; and that by the Motion of the Council of State, that had before puniſhed him after that ſevere manner.

Of his ſecond Deprivation in the Year 1661, he gives no Reaſon in his Regiſter; but hath only this ſhort Note of the Number of his Scholars, viz.

St. Katharines. Suttons Hoſpital, commonly called the Charterhouſe. The Savoy. Trinity College or Hoſpital. Asks Hoſpital. Dulwich College. Chelſea College. Greenwich Hoſpital. The Hoſpital at Deptford. Morden College. Sir Robert Jeffreys Hoſpital near Shoreditch.

J. S.

NOW beſides theſe Hoſpitals, whereof the Maior, Aldermen and Citizens are Patrons, there be in or near the City, divers other moſt ample and charitable Foundations, wherein they are not concerned. Which we ſhall in the next Place lead our Stranger to. As firſt;

St. KATHARINES Hoſpital.

The Foundation of it.

THIS antient Hoſpital (called alſo a Free Chapel or College) ſometime ſtiled St. Katharine upon the Thames, is ſeated a little Eaſt of the Tower of London, and communicates its Tutelary Saint to it, being ſtiled St. Katharines Tower. It had the Honour to be Founded and Endowed by Queen Matilda, or Maud, Wife to K. Stephen, the firſt Foundreſs. Q. Eleanor, Wife to K. Edward I. was next. And thirdly, Philippa, the right noble Conſort of K. Edward III. And let me add a fourth Queen, (Queen Katharine Dowager) late Patroneſs of the ſaid Hoſpital. It was founded for a Maſter, three Brothers, Chaplains, and three Siſters; Ten poor Women called Bedes Women, and Six poor Clarks; and ſome add, for the good Education of Children: But that is intermitted.

The Antiquities of this Hoſpital.

For the Antiquities of this Hoſpital, Pope Honorius granted Privileges to this Houſe by his Bull, extant in the Exchequer. More of the antient State thereof may be ſeen in Portſoken Ward, within the Bounds whereof it ſtands. Yet ſomething thereof in this Place.

Richly endowed.

The Maſters of this Hoſpital have formerly been of the Clergy, (and ſo the Foundation ſeems to require it) but the conſiderable Benefit accruing to the Maſters hath made it deſired and ſought for, by Perſons of Quality of the Laity; and ſuch have of later times enjoyed it. That it was richly endowed, we may conclude, ſince Noble Queens have given their Bleſſings to it. And beſides it hath enjoyed divers Benefactors. By a Rental of the Year 1649, communicated unto me by a Friend, ſome of the Eſtate may appear. The Sum Total of the Receipts at Michaelmas in Money came to 113*l.* 4*s.* 11*d.* $\frac{1}{2}$.

Theſe Manors and Lordſhips are mentioned there; Ruſhenden and Dandley in Minſter in the Iſle of Shipway, given by Q. Philippa. Lands, Rents, and Tenements in the Towns of Renham and Hartlip in Kent. The Manor of Chiſſingbury Priory in Wilts. The Manor of Quarles in Southhampton. The Manors of Queens Court and Bermgrave, or Bringrave, and Reinſham in Kent. A Mill in Rainham in the ſame County. Queensbury in Hertfordſhire. A Royal Benevolence to be paid by the Maſter.

Out of a certain Charter, it appears that the Maſter of St. Katharines was bound to give Twelve poor Men every Day 12*d.* from the 16th of November [which is the Depoſition of Edmund Archbiſhop] till the Day of St. Edmund, [King and Martyr, which is the 20 Day of November] and alſo a Thouſand half Pence to a Thouſand poor Men that Day, being the Day K. Henry III. dyed.

There is a very fair Church belonging to this Hoſpital, where Prayers are daily ſaid; and on the Lords Days Sermons preached conſtantly throughout the Year, performed by the three Brothers or Chaplains, or by their Procurement. Who were lately Dr. Lake, Vernon, and Biſſet.

A Viſitatio of this Ho ſpital.

The Maſters here made by far the greateſt Benefit, by renewing and granting of Leaſes, while the inferior Members were fain to content themſelves with the ancient Allowance; till of late upon Complaint, a Viſitation being made of this Hoſpital by the Lord Somers then Lord Chancellor, Sir James Butler being Maſter, divers Abuſes were redreſt, and reaſonable Additions made to the old Stipends.

In the Year 1565, Dr. Wylſon being Maſter, the Precinct of St. Katharines was in danger of loſing its ancient Privileges; which occaſioned an earneſt Addreſs from the Inhabitants to Secretary Cecyl; complaining unto him againſt the ſaid Maſter; that he intended, as much as in him lay, for a pivate Gain of a Sum of Money, clearly for ever to ſell and make away to the Lord Maior of the City of London, and his Brethren and the Commonalty, the whole Liberty, Right, Franchiſes, Royalties, and Privileges belonging to the ſaid Houſe and Hoſpital, that did appertain and were part of the Dowry of the Queens of this Realm; which would be, as they ſet forth, an utter ſubverſion and extinguiſhing of the true Foundation thereof; and the impoveriſhing, Decay, and undoing of them and their Poſterity.

e Inhabi- / ts of St. / tharines, / ir Report / this Place.

And that the whole Intent and Purpoſe of theſe Orators might be the better conceived, they drew out divers Notes, or Articles, for the Secretary to conſider.

Firſt, That St. Katharines was an Hoſpital or Free Chapel, founded by Kings and Queens of this Realm above 300 Years ago, and the Foundation never ſince altered to any other Uſe or Purpoſe, than according to that Grant of the great Charter it was mentioned.

That the Maſters of the Hoſpital had been taken by the ſaid Charter, as Cuſtodes and Governors of the ſaid Hoſpital, and as Upholders of the Privileges thereof; and not to alter the true Uſe and Right thereof. As no Maſter hitherto durſt or went about to infringe or break, to their Knowledge.

That it was always Parcel of the Dowry of the Queens of this Realm.

he Uſe and / tent of this / oſpital.

That the true Uſe of the Hoſpital was, for the Divine Service of God, to be a free, pure and perpetual Alms of the Poor; ſix Scholars to be maintained, and other Charges of the ſame Houſe by due means to be ſupported. And that they the ſaid Inhabitants ſhould inhabit, and dwell for evermore within the Circuit of the ſaid Hoſpital, as freely enjoying, and uſing the Privileges, Liberties, Tuition and Defences thereof.

That the Maſter, being but Governor, ought not to uſe, or abuſe any Liberties, Franchiſes, or Privileges, other than is preſcribed him in the ſaid Charter.

he Inhabi- / nts.

That a great Commodity and Profit was brought by them, the Inhabitants, to the Houſe. For whereas, before the Maſters ſtood to the Charges of Reparations of all the Tenements in the ſaid Precinct, the Farmers and Tenants now having Leaſes, did at their own Coſt bear the whole Charges by Building and Maintaining. They paid to the ſaid Houſe for Burials, Chriſtnings, Marriages, Four Offering Days, and Clerks Wages, orderly, as other Citizens did, ſaving privy Tithes, which they never paid. That they paid for Watch to the Tower, 28*s.* every Month, and were burthened at all Callings and Commandments to the Tower of London, about the Queens Buſineſs, as in Watching and other Attendencies.

They prayed, the Secretary would call before him the Comptroller, Surveyor, and Sergeant Plummer of the Queens Works, who of late had Surveyed the Houſe, and were able to inform him of other Abuſes of the ſaid Houſe. And this ſeemed to give a Stop to this Buſineſs.]

SUTTON's HOSPITAL, commonly called the Charterhouſe.

Sutton's Hoſpital or Charter-houſe. J. S.

AND now we ſhall lead our Stranger to another Hoſpital of a later Foundation, (in the Reign of K. James I.) lying within the Limits of London, though out of the Liberties, ſituate near St. Johns Street, a little without Smithfield Bars, in the very Place where Sir Walter Manny, in the time of K. Edward III. Founded a Houſe of Carthuſians, called now corruptly The Charterhouſe.]

I have truly ſet down all this as it was delivered to me in Writing, by a Gentleman of good Worth and Credit. A. M.

This late diſſolved Charterhouſe, by Weſt Smithfield, belonging then to the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Suffolk, after Lord Treaſurer of England, was ſufficiently known to be a very large and goodly Manſion, beautified with ſpacious Gardens, Walks, Orchards, and other Pleaſures, enriched with divers Dependencies of Lands and Tenements thereunto belonging, and very aptly ſeated for wholeſome Air, and many other Commodities. All which Commodiouſneſs of Situation, and Largeneſs of Circuit, gave occaſion to a well minded Gentleman, Maſter Thomas Sutton, to affect that Houſe, as the only Place whereon to build the Foundation of his Religious Purpoſe. For, among other his Chriſtian Determinations, he had formerly intended to build an Houſe at Hallingbury Bouchers in Eſſex, to be an Hoſpital for ſuch poor Men and Children as he himſelf (in his Life-time, or future Governors for the ſame to be deputed) ſhould think fit to be lodged and relieved there: Alſo, for a Schoolmaſter and Uſher, to teach Children to read and write, and inſtruct them in the Latin and Greek Grammar, with a Learned Divine likewiſe to preach the Word of God to them all, and a Maſter beſide, to govern all thoſe People belonging to that Houſe.

His firſt Purpoſe at Hallingbury in Eſſex.

How he intended to tearme the Hoſpital.

To this bleſſed End and Purpoſe, he had procured (by earneſt Suit) Power by an Act of Parliament, to build ſuch an Hoſpital in the Town of Hallingbury Bouchers, and that the ſame ſhould be named, The Hoſpital of King James, founded in Hallingbury in the County of Eſſex, at the humble Petition, and at the only Coſts and Charges of Thomas Sutton, Eſq; appointing alſo ſuch Honourable, Reverend, and Worthy Perſons, as by the ſaid Act of Parliament were nominated and appointed, to be the firſt and inſtant Governors of the Lands, Poſſeſſions, Goods, and Revenues of the ſaid Hoſpital.

The Charter-houſe more convenient for an Hoſpital, than Hallingbury.

But afterward, upon more grounded Deliberation, and finding this goodly Houſe of the Charter-Houſe, to be much nore convenient for the Purpoſe, than that to be builded at Hallingbury could be; he became an earneſt Suiter to the Earl of Suffolk, to purchaſe that Houſe of him; acquainting his Honour nour with the Alteration of his Mind concerning Hallingbury, and his earneſt deſire to make the Charter-Houſe his Hoſpital. The Earl being ſo honourably inclined to ſo godly a Motion, the Matter ſuſtained the leſs debating between them: but the Price being concluded on, the Bargin and Sale was aſſured. The Sum disburſed for this Purpoſe, amounted to 13000 l. which was paid down in Hand, before the enſealing of the Conveyance.

The firſt Governors appointed by Letters Patent, of King James his Hoſpital, founded in in the Charter-houſe.

Then he became Suiter again to his Majeſty, to perform all that at the Charter-Houſe, which he had formerly intended at Hallingbury: whereto the King readily yeilded, being graciouſly affected to ſo charitable a Work, and granted his Letters Patents to the ſame effect. And the Right Reverend Father in God, George Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Thomas Lord Elleſmere, Lord Chancellor of England; Robert Lord High Treaſurer of England; John, elect Biſhop of London; Lancelot Biſhop of Ely; Sir Edward Coke, Knight, Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas; Sir Thomas Foſter Knight, one of his Majeſties Juſtices of the Common Pleas; Sir Henry Hobard, Knight and Baronet, Attorney General; John Overal, Dean of Pauls in London; George Mountaine, Dean of Weſtminſter; Henry Thursby, Eſquire, one of the Maſters of the Chancery; Geffrey Nightingale, Eſquire; Richard Sutton, Eſquire; John Law Gentleman; Thomas Brown, Gentleman; and the Maſter of the Hoſpital of King James, founded in the Charter-houſe, within the County of Middleſex; at the humble Petition, and the only Coſts and Charges of Thomas Sutton, Eſquire, were elected, nominated and ordained by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty in his Letters Patents granted, to be the firſt Governors of the Lands, Poſſeſſions, Revenues and Goods of the foreſaid Hoſpital, and continual Maintenance thereof in Form following.

The whole number in the Houſe, with the Attendants, is 180.

His Hoſpital conſiſting of a Maſter, Governor, a Preacher, a Free School, with a Maſter and Uſher, 80 poor People, and 40 Scholars, is maintained with ſufficient Cloathing, Meat, Drink, Lodging and Wages: beſide Officers and Miniſters to attend on them; and the Number to increaſe, according as the Revenues upon the Expiration of the Leaſes is increaſed.

The greateſt and moſt commendable that ever was given in England by one Man, and to pious uſes.

This famous Hoſpital with the Value of the Lands laid unto it, the Purchaſe of the Houſe, Stock laid in, and Allowance towards the Building: Alſo, the remainder of his Goods unbequeathed, his large Gifts and Legacies to divers Honourable and worthy Friends, beſide great ſtore of far more inferior Account, ſurpaſſing my Capacity to Number, and the reſidue of 20000 Pounds left to the Diſcretion of his Executors; may well and worthily be ſaid to be the very greateſt and moſt bountifull Gift, that ever at any Time was given in England; no Abby (at the firſt Foundation thereof) excepted, or therewith to be compared, being the Gift of one Man only.

Mr. Sutton died before he could ſee his Hopes take their effect.

The Executors to Mr. Sutton.

But alas! what Perpetuity is there to be expected in this Life, where there is no other certainty than of Change? While all eyes ſtand gazing on this hopeful Intention, and every Ear liſtening to hear, when it would come to effect; that Enemy to infinite good and godly Purpoſes, Death, takes away the worthy Maſter Workman; yet not unprovided, as too many are; for he had his needful Occaſions, befitting proviſion for ſo long a Journey, readily ſealed up in the Peace of a good Conſcience: And that which the Tyrant Death had bereft him of, he left to the Performance of his faithful Executors, Maſter Richard Sutton, and Maſter John Lawe, Men of religious and upright Souls, and (God be thanked) the Work is accompliſhed. And on the Monday after Michaelmas Day, being the third Day of October, An. Dom. 1614. the Captains and Gentlemen entred into their famous prepared Hoſpital; to the Glory of God, Honour of the King's moſt Royal Majeſty, Credit of the Governors, Comfort of them appointed to it, and Joy of all good Minds to behold it.

Thus, though no Tongue or Pen can either ſo amply expreſs, or ſufficiently ſet down the great Deſerts of this ſo good and worthy a Man; yet Death having given a period to his Life, and laid him in a goodly Tomb, in the Chapel of his own Hoſpital, there we muſt now leave him, with this Inſcription thereon engraven.

A very coſtly and beautiful Tomb in the Weſt ſide of the Quire.

A Sermon preached in Praiſe of this Foundation. J. S.

In the Year 1629. Percival Burrel (who was the Fourth ſettled Preacher of King James's Hoſpital in the Charterhouſe,) preached a Sermon there, printed, and entitled Sutton's Synagogue, or the Engliſh Centurion, ſhewing the unparallel'd Bounty of Proteſtant Piety. The Text was in Luk. VII. 5. He hath built us a Synagogue. It was dedicated to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and the reſt of the Governors. This Sermon, Dr. Goodall, late Phyſician of the Charterhouſe ſhewed me; as he likewiſe very friendly communicated to me, divers other Writings and Inſtructions, relating to this noble Foundation.

What Perſons this Hoſpital conſiſts of. R. B.

By the Foundation Statutes, this Hoſpital is to conſiſt of a Maſter, or Governor, a Chaplain for preaching and ſaying divine Service Twice a Day, 80 decayed Men which ought to be Gentlemen, Merchants, or Soldiers, and 40 Scholars to be inſtructed in Learning by a Schoolmaſter and an Uſher, who are to be able and approved Scholars. All which have a plentiful Maintenance allowed them, in Lodging, Diet, Cloaths, and Phyſick, living in a collegiate Manner, beſides the Allowance of Money for private Expences, the Men having 6 or 7 l. per Ann. paid them, beſides each a new Gown every two Years, with a ſufficient quantity of Coals for firing in their particular Chambers, beſides the conveniency of the great Fires kept in the publick Halls, during the cold Seaſon.

The Scholars.

The Boys or Scholars, are habited alſo in Gowns, like the Men. And when any of them are fit for the Univerſities, and are elected, each one ſent thither, is to receive 20 l. per Ann. for 8 Years, to be paid out of the Revenues for their Maintenance. And as for thoſe Boys that are found more fit for Trades, there is a conſiderable Sum ſet apart to bind ſuch out Apprentices to good Trades; ſo that when they come to be Men, they may be in a Way to get their Livelyhood.

Scholars and old Men, how taken in.

And as any of theſe 40 Boys are diſpoſed of as aforeſaid, or die; (as likewiſe when any of the old Men die) others are placed in their Rooms by the Governors, each taking his Turn. And in Truth, happy are they that are ſo taken from the Cares and Sorrows of the World, and fixed for their Lives in ſo good a Place as theſe old Men are: having nothing to take care for, but the good of their Souls, to ſerve God, and to live in Brotherly Love together; that when they ſhall leave this their Terreſtrial Habitation of Content, they may be made Fellow Citizens in the heavenly Jeruſalem. Which God in his great Mercy grant to us all.]

The Endowment.

J. S.

In ſhort, we are told, that beſides the firſt Coſt, viz. 13000 l. the Charges afterwards laid out upon it, to fit it for its deſigned Purpoſe, amounted to 7000 l. more. That the Founder endowed it with 4000 l. per Ann. which is ſince improved to 6000 l. And to this Day it is a moſt flouriſhing and uſeful Foundation.

Benefices belonging to the Charter-houſe.

For a further Benefit of the Scholars bred up in Charterhouſe School, to the Revenue of this Foundation are many Eccleſiaſtical Preferments appertaining; which are in the Diſpoſal of the Governors. In the Promotion to which, ſuch as are bred in the Houſe, have the Preference before any other.

One endeavours by Law to recover the Charterhouſe.

But when Sutton was dead, this his moſt ſplendid Foundation received a dangerous Shock by the Means of a private Perſon, who endeavoured to ſwallow it up. For his only Siſter's Son, named Simon Baxter, attempted, as next Heir, to take poſſeſſion of it, and the whole Eſtate annexed to it. This Man entered an Action of Treſpaſs againſt the Executors of Mr. Sutton, and the Governors, the laſt Day of Trinity Term, 10. Jac. in the Kings Bench, for a violent Entry made by the ſaid Executors and Governors, May the 30. the ſame Year. The Cauſe had in it divers Points of Law ſtarted to overthrow the Settlement, viz. Ten Points. On the Plantiff's ſide, was Sir Francis Bacon, Sollicitor General, Mr. Gualter of the Temple, and Mr. Yelverton of Grays Inn. On the Defendants, Hubbart, Attorney General, Hutton Sergeant at Law, and Coventry of the Inner Temple. An Adjournment was made of the Cauſe, from the Kings Bench to the Exchequer Chamber, and there ſolemnly argued by the Judges of the Land. And at length it was here adjudged, with great Applauſe of all that heard it, for the Defendants, the Governors of the Hoſpital. The Plaintiff being but a Man of Ordinary Quality, was judged to have Reaſon to be contented with a tolerable Proviſion that had been made for him, and ſuitable to his degree: For he had allotted to him by Will, the Manor of Turback in Lancaſhire, conſiſting of a fair antient Houſe, two Parks, and large Demeſnes, plentifully ſtored with Timber, valued at 350 l. per Ann.

Orders eſtabliſhed for it.

There was an Eſtabliſhment of this Foundation, with excellent Orders, Jun. 21. 1627. and ſigned with King Charles's Hand, viz.

The Hoſpital of King James, founded in the Charterhouſe, in the County of Middleſex, at the humble Petition and only Coſt of Thomas Sutton Eſq; This Stile to be inviolably obſerved and expreſt upon all Evidences, Conveyances, Leaſes, &c.

An Anniverſary Commemoration of the Founder to be kept every 12*th.* Day of December, with ſolemn Service and a Sermon, and Increaſe of Commons, as on other Feſtival Days.

The Governors jointly taken, to make the Head of this Body corporate; the poor Brothers and Scholars and Officers, as are mentioned in the Letters Patents, to be ſtiled the Members. They to be choſen within two Months after the Vacancy.

All other Officers of the Revenue or Houſhold, not mentioned particularly in the Letters Patents, to be reputed and taken as Members of Arbitrary Election: and in the Governor's Power to make them more or leſs, and to chuſe them ſooner or later.

No Member of the Foundation or of arbitrary Election that is lodged in the Houſe, to be a married Man, either at the Time of his Admiſſion, or after. And if he be, to be deprived.

The common Seal to be kept in the Evidence Houſe, and under Four Keys; to be kept as ſhould be directed. The Maſter of the Hoſpital to have the keeping of one.

The Statutes and Ordinances for the Government of the Hoſpital concluded upon by the Governors, and ratified by the common Seal, to be fairly, and twice engroſſed in Parchment: whereof the Original with the common Seal annexed, to be kept in the Evidence Houſe; and the other to be bound up in a Book, to remain in the Maſter's Cuſtody; and to be brought to the Table at every Aſſembly.

Theſe with many other Ordinances too large to be here ſet down, may be read in the Book of the Foundation of this Houſe written by Herne, printed Anno 1677. which are alſo tranſcribed (but imperfectly) in the New View of London, printed 1708. In theſe Ordinances are mentioned, the Qualifications of the Maſter, the Preacher, the Phyſician, the Regiſter, the Brethren, the Scholars, &c.

How Scholars are got in here.

The Way of getting Children into this School, is, that the Governors at an Aſſembly make a Liſt, and nominate their Lad, each of them, who being approved of, is certain to come into the Place, though it ſhould fall after the Governor's Death. And till the former Nomination and Warrant be ſerved, no other can have any Claim or Virtue; and therefore the beſt Way to get a Place for a young Lad is, to be early in making Application.

The Number maintained.

The Number maintained in the Houſe, when Mr. Herne wrote his Book, (which was An. 1676.) was 188 Perſons, beſides 29 Scholars at the Univerſities, and the ſtanding Council to the Houſe; who then were, Sir William Jones the King's Attorney-General, and Mr. Dolben of the Temple; who had retaining Fees from the Houſe.

Members how qualified.

At the Admiſſion of every Member, it is required, that he be Sober in Mind, and healthful in Body; of which latter, Information is to be given by the Surgeon, with the Approbation of the Phyſician, by an Order made, Dec. 10. 1613.

Salaries.

Of later Time, there hath been an Alteration of the Salaries, according to the Increaſe of the Revenues, by the great Wiſdom and Care of the Governors. At firſt 24 Boys were allowed at the Univerſity 20 l. per Ann. Five Scholars are added ſince, by the good Care and Providence of Mr. Creſſet the Maſter. At the firſt, Forty Boys were to be taken into the School: now Four more are added. The Maſter's Salary hath been raiſed from 50 l. per Ann. to 100 l. and lately to 200 l. per Ann. The Preacher's Salary from 40 l. per Ann. to an 100 l. The Schoolmaſter's from 30 l. to 100 l. per Ann. The Reader's from 20 l. to 30 l. per Ann. The Apprentices have their 20 l. doubled.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| The antient Revenue came to, | 4493 | 19 | 10 | ob. |
| New purchaſed Lands. | 897 | 13 | 09 | ob. |
| Together the Revenues amount to, | 5391 | 13 | 08. | |

The

Loſſes of the Houſe.

The Houſe loſt near 8000 l. in the Time of Beaumont Maſter, and Heyward Regiſter, in the Years 1623, and 1624. And in the Year 1649. the Houſe was robbed of 1600 l. Set behind Hand again in the Time of Gerard another Maſter. And yet by God's Bleſſing conſiderable Additions have been made to the Eſtate and Revenues of the charitable Foundation, ſince the Year 1614. when it was firſt filled.

Orders for this Hoſpital.

Orders have been made by the Governors at ſeveral Times ſince the ſaid Hoſpital's firſt Foundation, and yet continuing in force; to be obſerved by the poor Men, Penſioners and Brothers. As namely,

No Man to be admitted, unleſs he ſhall appear to be clean and ſound of Body.

Not to wear long Hair, or any Weapon within the ſaid Houſe.

If any fall Sick and cannot come into the Hall, to have his Part in Diet in his Chamber, or his weekly Allowance in Money.

The Maſter of the Hoſpital, and every Officer, Poor Man and Member, to take their Diet in the Dining Halls appointed for that Purpoſe: unleſs in Time of Sickneſs.

No Officer, Penſioner or Member to ſend or carry away Bread, Beer or Meat from their Tables: but what remains, to be beſtowed upon Poor Men and Women that do ſervice in the Hoſpital.

One of the Poor Men in their ſeveral Turns, and the Maſter Cook, to go weekly to the Market with the Steward or his Man, to buy Proviſion of Fleſh and Fiſh for the Diet of the Hoſpital: To ſee it be good and ſweet: and ready Money paid for it.

The Maſter and all the Members, to take their Dinner and Supper in the Common Hall, and not in their Chambers. None to ſit down before Grace be ſaid, and the Maſter and chief Officers ſet: Nor to ariſe before Grace be ſaid.

All the Poor Brethren and other inferior Officers, to give dutiful Reverence to the Maſter of the Hoſpital, whenſoever they ſhall happen to be in his Preſence; and when he ſhall ſpeak to any of them, or they to him, to be uncovered.

None to give or receive any evil, reviling or railing Speeches of him before his Face, or behind his Back; and to be obedient to him in his lawful Commands and Injunctions

To be diligent in frequenting the Chapel twice a Day; and there to behave themſelves reverently. And to receive the Holy Communion thrice every Year, viz. at Chriſtmas, Eaſter and Whitſuntide.

None to draw any Weapon in the ſaid Hoſpital, to the intent to hurt any Member, or to ſtrike in Anger any of the Houſe; or be convict of any notorious Crime puniſhable by the Laws of the Realm, upon pain to be removed out of the Houſe.

None to intermeddle with any Buſineſs touching the Affairs of the Hoſpital, but to attend only to the Service of God, and take thankfully what is provided for them, without muttering, murmuring or grudging. None to wear any Weapon, long Hair, coloured Boots, Spurs, or coloured Shoes, Feathers in their Hats, or any Ruffian-like or unſeemly Apparel, but ſuch as becomes Hoſpital Men to wear.

None to lodge abroad out of his ordinary Lodging, or ſuffer any Stranger to lodge in any of their Lodgings.

Not to haunt Houſes ſuſpected of Incontinency, Gaming Houſes, common bowling Allies, Taverns, Alehouſes, by Day or Night, &c. neither to uſe Swearing, or taking God's holy Name in vain, nor railing at his Fellow Brethren; nor to be given to Drunkenneſs, or other notorious Vice.

None to go to any Tavern or Alehouſe with his Livery Gown on his Back.

Nor to have leave to paſs the Seas upon what Pretence ſoever, but by Petition to the Governors.

Nor to go into the Country to viſit their Friends, or other Buſineſs, without the Maſter's Leave: And that but for two Months at furtheſt.

None to paſs the Out-gate of the Hoſpital in their Livery Gowns, upon pain of a Month's Commons out of his Quarters Wages.

Not to undertake the following of other Mens Cauſes and Suits: nor to procure Moleſtation or Troubles to the King's Subjects.

Whenſoever any Petitioner, or Poor Man ſhall with or without Leave go into the Country, or be abſent; or ſhall lye in or about London, Weſtminſter or elſewhere; he ſhall have no Allowance at all in Money or otherwiſe, for his Commons during any ſuch Time.

Nor be ſuffered to be out of Commons; but to take and eat his Commons in the common Dining Hall, according to the Orders of the Houſe.

Other Orders there were made by the Governors, not ſo proper to be comprehended in this Table: but are with theſe abovementioned tranſcribed into a Book remaining in the Veſtry: whereunto any Penſioner may have recourſe, to ſee and read for his better Knowledge and Information.

Prayers.

For the Uſe of the Members of this Hoſpital, there are prepared very pious and well compoſed Prayers upon ſeveral Occaſions, ſuited for the private Devotion of the antient Gentlemen in this Houſe; as upon their Admiſſion: on the Founder's Day: upon the Deceaſe of a Penſioner: in the Morning before he ſtirs abroad: in the Evening: A Prayer before the Sacrament; another after receiving; in Time of Sickneſs: A Prayer to be ſaid by a young Scholar of the Houſe.

An Act for confirming this Houſe.

According to the Orders made in the Year 1627. beforementioned; wherein among other Things it was ordered, That all Diligence ſhould be uſed to obtain an Act of Parliament for the Confirmation of the Foundation, an Act was made 3. Car. I. the Title whereof was, An Act for the eſtabliſhing and confirming of the Hoſpital of King James, founded in the Charter Houſe in the County of Middleſex, &c. and of the Poſſeſſions thereof.

Proviſo for the Lord North's Houſe.

Dudley Lord North had a Manſion Houſe at or near the Eaſt End of the Charter Houſe; concerning which, the ſaid Act made a Proviſo, that it ſhould not extend to give any Title to the ſaid Hoſpital to poſſeſs it; and alſo other Meſſuages, Tenements or Hereditaments of the ſaid Lord North, being within or near the Precinct of the ſaid Hoſpital; but he, his Tenants and Aſſignes, to hold and enjoy the ſame againſt the Governors, Maſter and other Owners of the ſaid Hoſpital; according to the true Meaning of a Grant, Covenant, Clauſe, &c. in one Deed and Feoffment made by Edward Lord North, unto Sir William Peter Kt. and others, bearing date the 6th of Nov. in the 5th Year of Q. Elizabeth; and another Deed made by Roger Lord North and others to Thomas late Duke of Norfolk, bearing date the laſt Day of May, in the 7th of the ſaid Queen.

And nothing in this Act contained any Ways to extend unto the Manſion Houſe of Elizabeth Viſcounteſs Maidſton, ſituate and being in the Charterhouſe Churchyard, near unto the ſaid Hoſpital, nor to any Buildings, Out-Houſes, &c. therewith uſed: Nor to any Manſion Houſes, Buildings, or Grounds therewith uſed, of any other Perſon or Perſons, within or near the Precinct of the ſaid Churchyard or Hoſpital, and not conveyed, or mentioned to be conveyed by the ſaid Thomas Sutton to the ſaid Governors.

Eighty poor Men maintained.

The Ancient Poor Men which this Houſe doth maintain are Eighty in Number: And they are choſen by each particular Governor, every one in their Order, taking his Turn to put in his Poor Man. The Sovereign only putteth in Two; the reſt One apiece in their reſpective Turns, as Places happen to be vacant. And this they do by a Warrant, ſent to the Maſter and Regiſter of the Houſe, under a Form thus ſuperſcribed: To my Loving Friends, the Maſter and Regiſter of Sutton's Hoſpital.

An Obſervation upon their Mortality.

From 1614, to 1676, (when Mr. Hern's Book of this Hoſpital came forth) there had been admitted Five Hundred Fifty four Poor Men, and there alſo ended their Days. By which Account it was computed, That out of Eighty Aged Men, there died but Nine in a Year. Whence an Obſervation was made of the Healthfulneſs and Sweetneſs of the Place. To which another Obſervation may be made, of the Advantage of a regular, temperate Courſe, for Length of Days.

In a Plague the Houſe breaks up.

In caſe the City of London be viſited with the Peſtilence, or ſome ſuch infectious Diſtemper, the Houſe is diſſolved for a Time. And then every Penſioner ſhall have a Certificate, That neither the Bearer, nor any of the Society, had been yet viſited with the Contagion, or in danger thereof; but were in perfect Health and Soundneſs, as in former Times. And therefore, to will and deſire all Men, whom it might concern, to ſuffer A. B. quietly to paſs, and freely to ſtay at the Place of his intended Abode, or elſewhere, &c. And this to be ſigned from the Charterhouſe, by Order of the Lords and Governors.

Governors of the moſt Honourable Rank.

The King, or Queen, the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Treaſurer, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, are Governors of Courſe; and commonly other Perſons of the Court, or Higheſt Nobility, are named Governors of this Hoſpital. And it was the Founder's Wiſdom; who, in his Will, made choice of Men of Honour and Power to be the firſt Governors; that were able to maintain his Foundation by their Intereſt, and to grace it with their Honour.

The SAVOY.

The Hoſpital of the Savo

J. S.

IN the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, ſituate in the Strand, leading to Weſtminſter, ſtood another famous Houſe of Charity, called The SAVOY. It was anciently a very Noble Houſe, built and inhabited by Peter Duke of Savoy, Uncle to Queen Eleanor, King Henry the Third's Queen. After him, it came to the Duke of Lancaſter, and was his Seat; being one of the moſt Magnificent Buildings in the Nation. Afterwards being burnt down in a Rebellion, Anno 1381, it lay in Aſhes and Rubbiſh, I know not how long: But in the latter End of King Henry the Seventh, he built it again; not now for an Houſe to be inhabited by Nobility, as it was before; but to be a Charitable Foundation, to harbour an Hundred poor People, Sick or Lame, or Travellers; to be furniſhed with Lodging, Food, Firing and Attendance, for a certain Time: Dedicating it to St. John Baptiſt, and Endowing it Royally.

The State Condition the Savoy.

And over the Gate entring in, was the King's Arms, and theſe Two Lines in old Characters engraven:

King Henry the Seventh, to his Merit and Honour,
This Hoſpital founded, poor People to ſuccour.

A Maſter Four Chaplains.

To this Hoſpital was afterwards added, (as it ſeems) by the laſt Will of K. Henry VII. a Maſter, and Four Chaplains, to pray for his and his Royal Conſort's Soul.

Out of an Extract of that King's Will, there was,

" Item, Land aſſured for the Hoſpital of the " Savoy, and Proviſion of Two Hundred Beds, " and other Things for the Chapel there, 500 " Mark Land.

“ Item, For Building and Finiſhing the ſaid “ Chapel and Hoſpital, Money delivered to the “ Dean and Chapter of Paul's, 10000 Mark in “ Money.

Monaſtic. Angl. Vol. 2.

In Compliance wherewith, King Henry VIII. his Son, in the Second Year of his Reign, granted that Place, or Piece of Ground, called The Savoy, to Richard Biſhop of Wincheſter, Richard Biſhop of London, and divers others, Executors of King Henry the Seventh's Will, for the Founding an Hoſpital. And by another Deed, Anno Quarto, granted Licenſe to the ſaid Executors, to found ſuch Hoſpital for Five Secular Chaplains, one of which to be Maſter; to pray for the good Eſtate of him, and Katharine his Conſort, and for the Soul of King Henry the Seventh, and Elizabeth his Conſort, and Arthur Prince of Wales. And to be called, The Hoſpital of Henry VII. late King of England, at the Savoy. And to be a Body Corporate; and to have a Common Seal, and yearly Revenues to the Value of 500 Mark by the Year, for the Maintenance of the ſaid Chaplains, and ſuch other Works of Mercy and Piety, as by the ſaid Executors ſhould be appointed.

A Commiſſion 5. Edward VI. to Viſit this Hoſpital.

But to give ſome further Light into this Foundation, as to the Revenues and Perſons belonging to it, and the Poor here relieved; I ſhall give a brief Account of a Commiſſion iſſued out from the King, 5. Edward VI. to Sir Roger Cholmley, Knight, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and certain others, to viſit this Hoſpital: Who were to make particular Enquiry into theſe Articles.

I. How, and in what Sort the Foundation Statutes and Ordinances of the ſaid Hoſpital were obſerved.

II. Wherein the ſame did agree with the common Orders and Proceedings of the Realm in Cauſes of Religion.

III. How the Miniſters, both Men and Women, gave Attendance, and did their Duties in their ſeveral Offices and Vocations.

IV. Of the State of the Houſe, and Order of the Lands.

The State and Condition of the Savoy.

Of which laſt, this was the Sum of the Report they gave in to the King and his Council.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| The Value and Iſſues of the Lordſhips, Manors, Lands, &c. the laſt Year amounted to | 541 | 5 | 5 ob. |
| Reprizals, Fees, Payments, Expences, Reparations, &c. | 746 | 7 | 7 ob. q. |
| So that the Expences exceeded the Revenue, by | 205 | 4 | 2 |

Numerus Pauperum Ægrotantium.

The Numbers of the Poor refreſhed within the ſaid Hoſpital, from Michaelmas, Anno 4. Edward VI. to the 24th of September, Anno 5. Edward VI. of Sick and impotent People, beſides others nightly lodged there, 8339

The yearly Fees and Salaries briefly ſtood thus:

| | l. | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| To the Maſter of the Hoſpital, | 30 | 00 | 0 |
| To the Four Chaplains, | 16 | 00 | 0 |
| Two Conducts, | 6 | 13 | 4 |
| Thirteen Siſters, | 52 | 06 | 8 |
| Ten Servants, | 22 | 06 | 8 |
| Other Officers, as Phyſician, Surgeon, Auditor, and Steward, | 28 | 00 | 0 |
| Expences upon poor People, | 133 | 06 | 4 ob. |

So that beſides the Damage this Houſe received by the firſt Maſter of all, (when the Treaſure appointed by Foundation and Statutes was by him totally conſumed, and nothing remained thereof) the Savoy was now become ruinous, and in a very declining Condition. Which inclined the King, upon a Motion made to him by the City of London, to diſſolve it; as he did; and granted the Beds and Furniture to the City, for the Uſe and Benefit of the Poor, to be harboured at Bridewell; and ſettled much of the Revenues of the ſaid Hoſpital upon it. So that the Charity did not ceaſe hereby, but was removed from one Place to another.

Diſſolved.

The Bedding and Revenue of the Savoy given to Bridewell.

Q. Mary founds it anew.

But Q. Mary, K. Edward's Succeſſor, founded the Savoy anew, incorporated and endowed it; and placed one Jackſon Maſter of the Hoſpital. And then all the Court Ladies and Maids of Honour, in imitation of the Queens Charity, contributed their Parts and Shares towards it, by ſending ſufficient ſtore of Beds and Bedding, and other Things neceſſary, for Furniture of the Rooms where the Poor were to be harboured.

The Chapel now a Pariſh Church.

In the beginning of Q. Elizabeth, the Chapel became a Church, for the Inhabitants in and about the Parts of the Strand next the Savoy, to reſort to, to hear Divine Service and Sermons, and for the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments. And was ſo allowed and appointed by Grindal Biſhop of London, with the Conſent of the Maſter, and the Pariſh of St. Clements. And ſo the Savoy, which formerly ſtood within the Pariſhes of St. Clements Danes, and St. Mary the Strand, was now become a Pariſh it ſelf.

Viſited by Archbiſhop Grindal.

The Savoy had the bad Fortune to meet with another ill Maſter, Thomas Thurland by Name; who came in about Q. Elizabeth's Acceſs to the Crown. He, beſides that he was a Papiſt, and of a ſcandalous Life, embezzelled the Goods and Revenues; and the Poor wanted Neceſſaries; and ran the Houſe above 2000*l.* in Debt. So that in the Year 1570. it was viſited by Archbiſhop Grindal, with others; and the Maſter was deprived; but upon Promiſe and Oath of better Behaviour was afterwards reſtored again about the Year 1575.

Rogues get Harbour here.

However this Houſe was founded and intended for charitable Relief, yet it was much abuſed. So that in Q. Elizabeth's time, a great many Rogues and idle Beggars ſheltered themſelves here, upon pretence of being Needy, or Lame, or Sick, and to want Relief, according to the Order of the Foundation; which was, That the Maſter was ſworn to receive Claudicantes, Ægrotantes, & Peregrinantes. For Anno 1581, in the Month of January, a Search being made by the Recorder, in London and the Suburbs, for Rogues, he ſent the Conſtables of the Dutchy to the Hoſpital of the Savoy; and they brought to him to Bridewell Six tall Fellows, that were Draymen, belonging unto Brewers, and were neither Lame, Sick, nor travelling Perſons. The Conſtables, if they might have had their own Wills, would have brought as many more. But the Maſter wrote a very courteous Letter to the Recorder, and the other Juſtices to pardon them. But though he wrote thus charitably for them, they were all ſoundly paid and ſo ſent home to their Maſters. And it was obſerved, that the Savoy was a great Nurſery of theſe evil Perſons, and a Place as it was then uſed, not converted to any good Uſe or Purpoſe.

The Modern State of this Hoſpital.

The more Modern State of this Houſe is, That in the Reign of King Charles II. it was made uſe of in good part as a Gariſon; and Soldiers were here lodged; their Beds being placed as they uſually are in Hoſpitals. The other Parts of the Hoſpital are now turned into divers Dwelling Houſes, and granted away to private Perſons.

A French Church here.

Here was ſome Time ago a French Church ſet up, for the Uſe chiefly of the French Refugees: A neat Building, and conveniently large. The Miniſters, who are French Proteſtants, do uſe the Service Book uſed in the Church of England, being tranſlated into the French Language. And they have a Pair of Organs, that play when they ſing their Pſalms.

This Church is much frequented by Engliſh, as well as French.

Laſtly, For a Concluſion, let this be added concerning the Savoy:

An Agency to be ſet up here with Foreign Churches.

That about the Time of the Civil Wars, a Motion was made to convert this Houſe and the Revenue, to maintain an Agency for mutual Correſpondence between Godly and Learned Divines, for the advancing of the Treaties of Peace Eccleſiaſtical among the Churches. And the Reaſon thereof, urged in a Paper, was; 'That theſe 'Treaties were now more than ever neceſſary to 'be maintained, that the Churches Abroad might 'be brought to ſome good Intelligence and Correſpondence with us; which all this while (as 'the ſaid Paper went on) the Diſturbers of Publick Peace had hindred and ſtopped, to the 'great Grief of many who laboured to keep up 'good Correſpondency with them; to the great 'Diſadvantage of this Church: Which for want 'of good Intelligence with Foreign Proteſtants, 'hath ſuffered and loſt much of her ancient and 'good Reputation among them. Which to regain, and alſo to benefit and uphold the Publick Cauſe of Religion among all Proteſtants, 'againſt which the Papiſts unanimouſly conſpire, 'and work ſtrongly, both by Falſe Brethren 'within, and violent Attempts and miſchievous 'Plots without; and to prevent the dangerous 'Effects of their Attempts and Counſels, whereby they ſtudy to work the Overthrow of the 'Truth, by fomenting and increaſing the Diviſions of Proteſtants.

To prevent this, an Agency for the Treaties of brotherly Unity, and Correſpondence in Religious Matters, was greatly neceſſary between this Church and Foreigners. And the Savoy was allotted for the Place. But I cannot relate what Succeſs this good Purpoſe had.]

TRINITY COLLEGE, or Hoſpital.

Trinity College for Sea Officers.

J. S.

THis is a very fair Structure of Brick and Stone, near Mile-End, North of the high Road, with a graceful Entrance; conſiſting of two Rows of Building one Story high, fronting each other; the Length whereof on both Sides paved with Free Stone, in the Middle a Graſs-Plat, encloſed with Palliſadoes, and ſet with young Fir Trees: And at the further End Northward, ſtands a very comely Chapel, with a Clock, aſcending with divers Steps; where Prayers are read on Sundays, Wedneſdays and Fridays. Which Chapel, on each End, is contiguous to two other Apartments.

It was founded in the Year 1695, for ſuch decayed or ancient Seamen as had been Maſters of Ships, or Pilots, or their Widows, and none other.

There are Pumps belonging to every Two Houſes.

Builder.

It was built by the Trinity Houſe, upon a Piece of Ground given for that Uſe by a Sea Captain of Note, named Captain Mudd, of Ratcliff, ſome time an Elder Brother of the Company: His Widow alſo contributing thereto.

The Expences of this Building aroſe from the Money of the Ballaſt Office, belonging to the Trinity Houſe by Act of Parliament; with which that Houſe continually performs great Charities, and gives Monthly Reliefs to poor needy Mariners, or their Widows, to the Number of Two Thouſand, and more.

This Hoſpital contains Twenty Eight Apartments, each conſiſting of Two Rooms one above another.

Penſions.

Every Perſon belonging to this Foundation at firſt received in Money, Weekly, after this Proportion: Some a Crown, ſome Four Shillings, ſome Three Shillings and Sixpence; according to the Need or Quality of the Perſon. But the Penſion now is ſettled at Twelve Shillings, payable every firſt Monday in the Month.

Beſides this Foundation for the Uſe and Benefit of Seafaring Men, there be Two others founded for the ſame End; the one at Greenwich, and the other at Deptford; which ſhall be mentioned in their Place.

And as this Hoſpital lies on the great Eaſt Road from London; ſo there is another as modern, ſituate at Hoxton, near the Northern Road; Viz.]

ASKE's HOSPITAL.

Aske's Hoſpital for Twenty poor Men, and as many poor Boys.

J. S.

SO named from one Mr. Robert Aſke, an Haberdaſher that dealt in Raw Silk, born in Yorkſhire: Who dying in the Year 168---, was buried in Aldermanbury Church; in which Pariſh he lived. By his laſt Will, he left 20000 l. to the Company of Haberdaſhers, in Truſt, to Build and Endow an Hoſpital, for the Harbour and Relief of Twenty poor, decayed, ſingle Men of the Company. And then, after divers other Legacies and Charitable Bequeſts, the whole Remainder of his Eſtate he left to the ſaid Company: Which, as it held out, he gave them in Truſt for Twenty poor Boys, Sons of Haberdaſhers; to be likewiſe maintained, and have Learning in the foreſaid Foundation.

Conſequently, ſome of the Chief Members of the Company entred upon the Eſtate; which amounted to 30000 l. and upwards. And upon this fair Bottom, they reſolved to erect a very Creditable Structure, both for the Honour of the Founder, and their own. A Model of a Stately Building, as well as convenient for the Purpoſe, was drawn by Dr. Hook, the Learned Mathematician of Greſham College: By which, they purchaſing a convenient Piece of Land at Hoxton, built that Noble Hoſpital that ſtands there, at the Expence of 13 or 14000 l.

Here are now maintained upon this Foundation Twenty poor Citizens, who have each their Lodgings, Firing, and Diet at a common Table together; and every two Years a Gown; and 3 l. a Year in Money, which hereafter may be increaſed. Likewiſe as many Boys enjoy the ſame Benefit; and alſo are taught to Write and Cypher, to fit them for Callings.

To this Foundation belong alſo a School and a Chapel; where a Chaplain is provided to read Prayers twice a Day, and to teach the Children. For which he hath his Diet at the common Table, 40 l. a Year, and a very convenient Apartment.

The Hoſpital ſtands advantageouſly, with Graſs Plats before it, and Rows of Lime Trees. On the Peers of one of the great Gates going in, are Two Stone Statues, repreſenting Two of Aſke's Hoſpital Men, in full Proportion.

The Building is ſuſtained with Stone Columns, with a handſome Portico underneath, the full Length of the Structure.

Under the Pediment, is the Effigies of the Founder in Stone; his Gown on, and a Roll of Parchment in his Hand, which ſeems to be his Laſt Will.

Underneath him is thus written:

The ROYAL HOSPITAL.

Chelſea College. J. S.

CHELSEA COLLEGE was alſo founded in the Reign of King James the Firſt; not ſo much a College of Charity, as of Learning, viz. for the Entertainment of Learned Men and Writers. And therefore, under that Conſideration it comes not under our preſent Cognizance, but hath been ſpoken of already in its proper Place. But of later Times, (the Ground eſcheating to the King) it hath been founded anew for the Ends and Purpoſes of a Charitable Relief of Soldiers, and ſtiled, The Royal Hoſpital of Chelſea. And as ſuch, we ſhall declare a few Things concerning it.

The preſe State of i

In Dr. Edward Chamberlain's Preſent State of England, and in a late Deſcription of the Town and Church of Chelſey, ſome particular Account is given of this Royal Hoſpital. Whence theſe Matters briefly taken may be worthy to be noted. For what Uſe and Service this Houſe is deſigned, appears from a fair Inſcription in Capitals upon the Cornice of the Piazza, viz.

Iu Subſidium et Levamen Emeritorum Senio,
Belloque fractorum, Condidit CAROLUS II.
Auxit JACOBUS II. Perfecere GULIELMUS &
MARIA Rex & Regina, MDCXC.

This Hoſpital conſiſteth of two Wings, each 360 Foot long, and near 80 broad. It is three Stories high. On the North it is joyned by a Chapel and Hall near the ſame Dimenſions; and lyeth open toward the South, having a pleaſant View of the Gardens adjoining, of the Thames, and of Surry beyond it.

It hath 16 Wards for the Accommodation of above 400 Men. Several Buildings are adjoining, that make two other large Courts, and are Apartments for the Officers and Servants of the Houſe, as Bakers, Launders, &c. for old maimed Officers of Horſe and Foot, and the Infirmary wherein to lodge the Sick.

Beſides the Buildings is a large Piece of Ground incloſed, planted and made into Walks for the Diverſion of the Soldiers. And before it very good Gardens and Canals, running down to the Thames ſide. It conſiſts of Forty Acres of Ground, and was deſigned by Sir Chriſtopher Wren, Surveyor General of the Queen's Works. The Charge of Building is computed to be 150000*l.* There be now in this Houſe near 500 Men, which with the Officers, Servants, and Out-Penſioners, make near 800. The vaſt Charges are defrayed out of the Poundage of the Army, which comes to 12000*l.* a Year and more: beſides one Days Pay of each Officer, and of each common Soldier, once every Year, which amounts to above 3000*l.* as Dr. Chamberlain accounted.

Chaplains.

There be Prayers twice a Day. The Chaplains are two, who have each 100*l.* a Year Salary. The Furniture and Plate of the Chapel were given by K. James. They all Dine in common in the Hall. The Officers by themſelves at a ſeparate Table. Over Head is a noble Piece of Painting of K. Charles II. on Horſeback, with ſeveral others as big as the Life, deſigned by Signor Vario, finiſhed by Mr. Cook; the Gift of the Earl of Ranelagh. The Pavement of the Chapel and Hall are Black and White Marble.

In the midſt of the Quadrangle is a Braſs Statue of K. Charles II. in the antient Roman Dreſs, ſomewhat bigger than the Life, ſtanding upon a Marble Pedeſtal, given by Tobias Ruſtat. It coſt, they ſay, 500*l.*

Who are admitted.

He that is capable of Admiſſion into this Society, is one that is maimed and diſabled in the Service of the Crown, or that hath ſerved the Crown Twenty Years. They wear red Coats lined with Blue; and are provided with all other Cloaths, Linnen and Woollen; and have plentiful Diet, clean Lodging, Waſhing, and Firing. In ſhort, they live ſo eaſily and conveniently, that ſome Soldiers coming to ſee this Hoſpital, (as Dr. Chamberlain hath related) have almoſt longed to be Old enough or Lame enough, to be admitted into the Society.

The Royal Hoſpital at Greenwich.

Greenwich Hoſpital for poor
Seamen.
J. S.

THE Proviſion aforeſaid hath our Nation made now (by the good Providence of God) for Decayed, Aged, and Maimed Soldiers, that have ſerved their King and Country in Land Services. In like manner, for thoſe that have been employed in the like good Services by Sea in the Royal Navies, and are reduced to the like Straits, another Royal and Stately Foundation is Erected at Greenwich upon the Thames, on the South-Eaſt Side of London; where formerly ſtood a Houſe of Pleaſure for our Kings, and where the ever memorable and proſperous Q. Elizabeth was born.

Founded by K. William,
and Q. Mary.

This Hoſpital was of K. William and Q. Maries Foundation; who in the Year 1694, Octob. 25. iſſued out their Letters Patents; wherein they gave and granted to Sir John Somers, Lord Keeper, Thomas Duke of Leeds, Preſident of the Privy Council, Thomas Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Privy Seal, Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, one of the principal Secretaries, Sidney Lord Godolphin, firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, and divers others, their Heirs and Aſſigns, that Piece or Parcel of Ground ſituate within the Pariſh of Eaſt Greenwich, being part of their Majeſties Manor of Eaſt Greenwich, containing in the whole Eight Acres, two Roods, and Thirty two Square Perches; and all that Capital Meſſuage lately built, or in building by K. Charles II. and ſtill remaining unfiniſhed, commonly called The Palace at Greenwich, and ſeveral other Edifices and Buildings. To the intent that every Part thereof ſhould be converted and employed unto, and for the Uſe of an Hoſpital, for the Relief of Seamen, their Widows and Children, and Encouragement of Navigation.

A Commiſſion for this Hoſpital.

The Year after, the King again (the Queen being dead) iſſued ont his Letters Patents, dated the 12th of March, An. 1695, and in the Seventh of his Reign, for a Commiſſion for this Hoſpital. Wherein firſt, was ſet forth the Reaſon of his founding this Hoſpital; namely, that nothing would more effectually contribute to the Trade, Navigation, and Naval Strength of this Realm, than the endeavouring to increaſe the Number of Engliſh Seamen. And that the Seafaring Men of this Kingdom, had for a long time diſtinguiſhed themſelves throughout the World for their Induſtry and Skilfulneſs in their proper Employments, and by their Courage and Conſtancy, manifeſted in Engagements and Hazards for the Defenſe and Honour of their Native Country. And that nothing was more likely to continue their antient Reputation, and to have greater Numbers to betake themſelves to the Sea, than the making ſome competent Proviſion, that Seamen, who by Age, Wounds, or other Accidents, ſhould become diſabled for further Service at Sea, and ſhould not be in a Condition to maintain themſelves comfortably, might not fall under Hardſhips and Miſeries, but might be ſupported at the publick Charge: and that the Children of ſuch diſabled Seamen, and the Widows and Children of ſuch Seamen as ſhould happen to be ſlain in the King's Service, might in ſome reaſonable manner be provided for and educated. And that therefore, both he himſelf and the Queen deceaſed, having frequently reflected upon the Premiſſes ſince their Acceſſion to the Crown, had determined to erect and eſtabliſh an Hoſpital for the Purpoſes aforeſaid.

Therefore in theſe Letters Patents laſt mentioned, he commiſſioned Prince George Hereditary of Denmark, the Archbiſhop for the time being, the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper for the time being; alſo the Lord Preſident of the Council, the Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, the Secretary of State for the time being; and a great Number more of the Nobility, the Biſhops, the Aldermen of the City, Commiſſioners of the Navy, Sea

Captains, Trinity Houſe, and other Gentlemen, or ſome of them; To meet together from time to time, for the executing of this Commiſſion. As, to conſider of proper Methods to be obſerved in executing the ſame, by empowering Seven or more of them (whereof one or more to be of the Privy Council, of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, &c.) to call others to their Aid and Aſſiſtance, and to appoint and conſtitute Sub-Committees, and to call to them the King's Surveyor General of his Works, and other Artiſts, to conſider what Part of the Structures and Buildings now ſtanding, will be unfit or not ſerviceable for the Hoſpital; and in what manner ſuch of the preſent Structure as ſhall be thought fit to ſtand may be fitted and prepared for Uſe and Service: Likewiſe to prepare Models of the Building, with ſuch Schemes and Draughts as may beſt explain the ſame; and to preſent ſuch Models and Schemes to the King for his Royal Approbation. Likewiſe to prepare a Charter or Charters of Foundation, and alſo ſuch Statutes, Conſtitutions and Orders, as may be proper for it; and to receive the King's Yearly Allowance towards this Building; and alſo all Gifts and Subſcriptions, Sums of Money, Goods, or Chattels, Manors, Lands, Rents, or other Matters or Things whatſoever, that any other well diſpoſed Perſons ſhall contribute towards it.

And that the King's Intentions in the Premiſſes might be the better known, the Commiſſioners were moreover to cauſe publick Notification of theſe Intents to be made in their Places, or by ſuch Ways and Means as they ſhould think fit. And to certify to the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, the Names of Perſons that ſhall ſubſcribe, or contribute, with the Sums of Money, Goods, Chattels, &c. ſo given.

Evelyn, Firſt Treaſurer.

John Evelyn, Senior, Eſq; is nominated and appointed in theſe Letters Patents, to be Treaſurer and Receiver General of all the Money, or other Profits ſubſcribed or contributed for the Building, Furniſhing or Endowing of the ſaid Hoſpital. For which he is to have 200*l.* Yearly. And upon his Death or Removal, the Commiſſioners to appoint one or more fit Perſons for Treaſurer. And divers other particular Orders and Directions are given the Commiſſioners, for the ſpeedier and more honeſt and effectual Execution and Eſtabliſhment of this charitable Work.

For the carrying on and perfecting this Work, the King gave 2000*l.* Yearly, payable out of the Exchequer, on the Feaſt of the Birth of our Lord, or at other times as the Commiſſioners ſhould think convenient.

Settled by Act of Parliament.

After this Commiſſion, the Parliament made an Act for the more effectual forwarding this excellent and royal Deſign, and bringing it to perfection, and providing a ſufficient Endowment of it. The Sum of which Act was, "That every "able Mariner, Seaman, Waterman, Fiſherman, "Lighterman, Bargeman, Keelman, or Seafaring "Man, being above the Age of Eighteen, and "under the Age of Fifty, that ſhould be willing "to enter and regiſter himſelf, for the Service of "his Majeſty, his Heirs, and Succeſſors in the "Fleet, giving his Chriſtian and Surname, Age "and Place of Abode, unto an Officer appointed "by the King for the Regiſtring of Seamen at "the Navy Office in London: And theſe ſo Regiſtred to be ready upon Orders, iſſuing from "the Lord High Admiral, from time to time in "in each Year, for the Service of the Fleet: "That theſe thus entred (not being above the "Number of 30000) ſhould receive the Bounty "of Forty Shillings Yearly over and above their "Pay; and beſides many other Privileges and "Benefits there mentioned, granted to theſe Regiſtred Seamen, above others not Regiſtred, "ſhould be admitted and placed in the ſaid Hoſpital, and be provided each, during his Life, "with convenient Lodging, Meat, Drink, Clothing, and other Neceſſaries; upon a Certificate "of the Captain, Maſter, and Surgeon of the "Ship, under their Hands, of their being diſabled "for future Service, unto the Governor of the "Hoſpital. And the Widows of ſuch as ſhould "be ſlain or drowned in the Sea Service; and "their Children, being not of Ability to provide "comfortably for themſelves, ſhould be received "into the Hoſpital, and there be provided for, "and the Children have Education, according as "the Hoſpital ſhould be capable to receive them, "and as the Revenues thereof would extend.

A Regiſter of Seamen.

"And for the providing a ſufficient Revenue for "this Hoſpital, it was enacted in the ſame Act, "That every Seaman that ſhould ſerve his Majeſty, his Heirs, and Succeſſors, in any of his "Ships, ſhould allow out of his Wages 6*d. per* "menſem, for the better Support of the ſaid Hoſpital, and to augment the Revenues thereof.

Again, by an Act the Year after, viz. 1697. It was declared and enacted, "That each Perſon "regiſtred ſhould enjoy the Benefit of Greenwich "Hoſpital, and be received into it in Succeſſion "one after another, as the Perſon Regiſtred ſhall "be and appear in Courſe and Order of time to "be upon the Regiſter Book; and the Widows "and Children of the Perſons longeſt regiſtred, "always to be preferred. And that ſuch Seamen, who are 50 Years of Age, if they have "ſerved in any of his Majeſties Ships for Seven "Years before, might regiſter themſelves.

They had about 10 or 12 Years ago, admitted into the Hoſpital an 100 poor decayed Seamen; now the Number of them is increaſed to 400. Who have a common Table, and eat together, and have about 20*l.* a Year allowed each. It is ſaid that there is 6000*l.* a Year allotted now to bear the Expences of the Hoſpital. The whole Revenue coming in from the Seaman's Pay amounts to 14000*l. per Annum*; that is, reckoning 6*d.* a Month out of every Seaman's Wages. And the Captains and Officers pay no more. It would have given more Content, and have much advanced the Revenue, if the Tax had been laid with more Equality. This ſtately Hoſpital is deſigned to contain 2000 Men.

It was reckon'd divers Years ago to have coſt about 50000*l.* in Building; and may coſt 15000*l.* more, before it be finiſhed.

An Hundred diſabled Seamen received, An. 1705.

In the Month of December, Anno 1705, it was reſolved, That an Hundred Seamen more, beſides thoſe already taken into this Royal Hoſpital; ſuch namely, as had been diſabled in the Service of the Navy, ſhould be received in there, and provided for. And his Royal Highneſs, Lord High Admral of England, commanded Notice to be given thereof in the Gazette; That all ſuch Perſons, whoſe Condition intitled them to the Benefit of the ſaid Hoſpital, might attend at the Admiralty Office on Friday the 28th of the ſaid Month.

Gifts to this Hoſpital by De la Fountain, and Osbaldſton.

John De la Fountain, deceaſed, An. 1708. an honourable Gentleman of Leiceſterſhire, gave to this Royal Hoſpital 2000*l.* Mr. Osbaldſton, late of Highgate, deceaſed, bequeathed about 22000*l.* to this and another charitable Fund, viz. For the Augmentation of ſmall Vicarages.

For a Liſt of the preſent Commiſſioners, Directors and Officers of this Hoſpital, I refer the Reader to the Preſent State of Great Britain, ſet forth, Anno 1716.

Q. Anne iſſued out a Commiſſion, Dated Apr. 8. Anno Reg. tertio, for the carrying on and finiſhing the Building of the ſaid Royal Hoſpital, for Relief of the indigent and diſabled Seamen; according cording to the Scheme then begun, or that ſhould be afterwards thought fitting to be carried on: And alſo to ſtate the Accounts for the Works of the ſaid Hoſpital, and to make Payment from Time to Time for the ſame: And to perfect all other Matters and Things whatſoever, relating to the Building, Carrying on, and Finiſhing it. And alſo to provide for ſuch Perſon or Perſons, by Penſions or Proviſions for the ſaid Hoſpital, as ſhould be thought neceſſary, with regard to the Acts of Parliament then made, or that ſhould after be made, for the Encouragement of Seamen.

This Commiſſion was directed to Prince George, Hereditary of Denmark; Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury; John Archbiſhop of York; Sidney Lord Godolphin; Thomas Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery; John Duke of Buckingham and Normanby; William Duke of Devonſhire; Charles Duke of Somerſet; James Duke of Ormond; John Duke of Marlborough; and many others; whom She nominated and appointed her Commiſſioners, or Governors of the ſaid Hoſpital.

And theſe were continued, according to a Statute ſometime made and provided, and a Proclamation for that Purpoſe iſſued, until her Succeſſor ſhould declare his further Pleaſure concerning the ſame.

K. George's Commiſſion for the ſame Hoſpital.

King George, in the Firſt Year of his Reign, ſet forth a Commiſſion, dated the 19th of January, for Carrying on, Building, and Providing for the ſaid Hoſpital: Therein revoking and determining the former Commiſſion, or Letters Patents, and their Continuance; and the former Governors in the ſaid Office he removed. ‘ And ‘ having duly weighed and taken into his Prince- ‘ ly Conſideration, (as the Commiſſion ran) of ‘ how great Importance ſo good and neceſſary ‘ a Work would be to his Service, and of that ‘ tender Regard he had for the Good and Wel- ‘ fare of his Loving Subjects; and being ex- ‘ tremely deſirous to promote and carry on the ‘ ſame; He nominated, authorized and appointed ‘ theſe. Firſt, George Auguſtus, his dearest Son, Prince of Wales; the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York for the Time being; Lord Cowper, Baron of Wingham, Lord Chancellor; Daniel Earl of Nottingham, Lord Preſident of the Privy Council; and thoſe great Officers for the Time being; with a great Number beſides, to be Commiſſioners for the ſaid Hoſpital. Theſe he ordered, directed and appointed, from Time to Time to meet together, at ſome convenient Place, for the Execution of this Commiſſion.

That any Seven or more of them ſhould make a Court: Whereof the Quorum to be the Lord High Admiral, or one of the Privy Council. Power is given them to proceed and finiſh the Building, according to the Scheme begun, or that ſhould be thought fitting hereafter to be further carried on. To ſtate the Accounts for the Works; and to make Payment from Time to Time. To provide for the Maintenance of ſuch Perſons, as ſhould be neceſſary, with Regard to the Acts of Parliament for Encouragement of Seamen. That a General Court ſhould be held Quarterly, or oftner, if found neceſſary by the Lord High Admiral. The Governor, Deputy Governor, and Treaſurer, to aſſiſt at the Meeting of that General Court, or of the Directors of the Hoſpital hereafter mentioned.

The General Court, to recommend all Officers for the Hoſpital to the Lord High Admiral. The Lord High Admiral to appoint all the Officers, except the Governor and Treaſurer. All Officers, or others, to be admitted for the future, to be Seafaring Perſons. The General Court, with the Aſſiſtance of the Attorney General, and Solicitor General, to prepare a Charter and Statutes for the perpetual Government of the Hoſpital.

Directors.

Four and Twenty Directors were appointed and named (whereof Five to be a Court) viz. Mat. Aylmer, Rob. Robinſon, Galfridus Walpole, Sir Joſeph Hodges, Sir Alexander Cairnes, Sir Gregory Page, Sir Chriſtopher Wren, Sir Jonathan Andrews, &c. to be a ſtanding Committee, and to be ſtiled Directors. Theſe, or any Five, or more, to meet once a Fortnight, or oftner, if Occaſion require, attended by the Secretary. They are empowered to carry on the Building; to ſtate the Account for the Works; to make Contracts for Proviſion, and all other Neceſſaries for the Houſe; to take in Perſons by the Approbation of the Lord High Admiral.

The Directors to receive 20*s.* for every actual Attendance, to be paid to ſuch Directors, as ſhall think reaſonable to demand it; the ſame to be paid out of the Revenue of the ſaid Hoſpital. The Lord High Admiral, or General Court, when aſſembled, to Nominate, and Fill up the Number of Directors, in place of ſuch as dye, or refuſe to act.

The Governors and Officers, not to be concerned in any Contracts, or buying Proviſion, or other Matters. The Government of the Houſe to be by the Governor with a Council of Officers, to be appointed by the Lord High Admiral. The Commiſſioners empowered to receive any Gifts, or Bequeſts of Land, Monies, or other Eſtate, for the Uſe of the Hoſpital. Publick Notice to be made of this Commiſſion, by ſuch Ways and Means as they ſhall think moſt conducible to the Furtherance of the ſaid Charity. Power to appoint Perſons to take Subſcriptions; and to collect Money given, and to make Checks and Comptrols of them. To certify to the Lord Treaſurer the Names of the Contributors, and Sums given, to the End a perpetual Memorial be made of ſuch well diſpoſed Perſons.

Treaſurer.

Galfridus Walpole, Eſq; nominated and appointed to be Treaſurer and Receiver General, of all the Monies and other Profits to be ſubſcribed, contributed, given, bequeathed, &c. The Treaſurer, to be ſubject to ſuch Inſpection and Comptrol, as ſhall be appointed by the General Court, or any Seven of them. No Money to be applied to other Uſes than the Charity hereby intended, and the neceſſary Charges relating thereto.

The General Court of Commiſſioners, by Warrant in Writing, are to direct the Payment of all Sums for Building, Proviſions, Salaries for Servants, and all Incidents. To make Rules for keeping of the Monies brought into the Treaſury; and alſo for keeping the Stores and Proviſions, and iſſuing the ſame; and for keeping of Books and Accounts; and for auditing the ſame; and to conſider and determine all Matters, for the full compleating the Deſign of this Commiſſion. The Commiſſioners to be accountable every one for his own Acts only.

The Treaſurer to receive 200*l.* a Year Salary. And Laſtly, the Commiſſioners to finiſh all Matters left undetermined by the late Commiſſion.

An Act for collecting Duties for this Hoſpital.

Anno 1712, 10 Regin. An. an Act was made for the better collecting, and receiving the Duties granted for the Support of the Royal Hoſpital at Greenwich, and for the further Benefit thereof. Some of the Contents whereof are:

Act. 12 Regin. Ann.

That every Seaman ſerving the Crown or any Subject, and every Perſon employed on Boats upon the Coaſt of Great Britain or Ireland, in taking Fiſh which are brought freſh to Shore, and in Boats which trade from Place to Place, ſhall pay 6d. per Month: and ſo proportionably during the Time they ſhall be employed, for the better Support of this Hoſpital.

That the Maſter of every Ship or Veſſel, not in the Service of the Crown, may detain out of the Wages of the Seamen 6d. per Month, and ſhall pay the ſame to the Perſon that ſhall be appointed by the Admiralty to receive it.

That the Admiralty may appoint a fit Perſon to be Receiver of the ſaid Duty; and authorize him to appoint the Collector of the Cuſtoms of the ſeveral Out Ports, or any other Perſon to collect the ſame.

That the Receiver may ſummon any Maſter or Owner of a Ship or Veſſel, not in the Service of the Crown, to appear at his Office, &c. Who may examine him, as to the Number and Time of Service of the Perſons employed in his Ship or Veſſel. And if he ſhall neglect or refuſe to pay the Money due to the Hoſpital, within 14 Days after they be cleared inwards, by the Officer of the Cuſtoms, the Offender to forfeit 20*l.* for every ſuch Neglect or Refuſal.

There be Laws likewiſe about Prizes and the Captors (as relating to this Hoſpital) in ſeveral Paragraphs. Further,

That whereas no Seamen had yet been admitted into the Hoſpital, but ſuch as ſerved in the Royal Navy; the Admiralty and thoſe that have the Power to direct the Admiſſion of any Seamen into the Hoſpital, may admit any Seamen, who ſhall produce an Authentick Certificate of his being wounded, maimed or hurt, in defending any Ship of her Majeſties Subjects againſt the Enemy; or in taking any Ship from the Enemy, and thereby diſabled for Sea Service.

Some, heartily affected towards this noble good Work, and Proviſion for poor diſabled Mariners, are uneaſy that ſo much of the Income of this charitable Foundation, goes out yearly in Salaries, Fees, Gratuities, &c. and regret the Deſigns (of needleſs Coſt) in making the Buildings ſo ſplendid and ſtately.

The Chapel.

The Chapel is now under deliberation for building. Which by ſome beautiful Model propounded, to render the Structure the fairer, may advance the Expence to 10000*l.* whereas (as they alledge) a plainer (but as capacious and convenient) Building might be finiſhed at half that Charge.

Here follow Extracts of ſome Acts of Parliament relating to Greenwich Hoſpital, communicated to me by one of the preſent Commiſſioners and Directors.

DEPTFORD HOSPITAL.

Hoſpital at Deptford.

TO this Royal Foundation for Seamen, I muſt ſubjoin another hard by at Deptford, belonging to the Corporation of the Trinity Houſe: by whom it was founded. It is a long Courſe of Building, conſiſting of three Sides, Graſs-plats in the middle. The lower Part being built in the Year 1671, and 1680. In theſe Alms Houſes 59 decayed Maſters of Ships and Pilots, or the Widows of ſuch, are by the ſaid Corporation maintained.

Morden College for decayed Merchants.

But a little diſtant from theſe Hoſpitals at Greenwich and Deptford, is one other late worthy Foundation; appropriated to another Rank of elderly decayed Perſons; whoſe Employments alſo are highly neceſſary to this Kingdom's Wealth and Strength, namely, Merchants. And this called,

MORDEN COLLEGE.

The Founder Sir John Morden, Bar.
J. S.

SO named from the right generous and Chriſtian Founder, Sir John Morden of Wrickleſmarſh in the Pariſh of Charleton in the County of Kent, Bar. a Citizen born, and a Turkey Merchant. Who brought home with him from Aleppo a very fair Eſtate. Divers Years before his Death he erected a very fair and ſpacious Structure, in Form of a College, at his ſole Charge, in a Field, called Great Stone Field, near Blackheath, not far from his own Habitation; and called it Morden College: for reception and harbour of poor, decayed, honeſt Merchants; taking Pattern by the College at Bromley not far off, founded by a Biſhop of Rocheſter, for Miniſters poor Widows: which he went to ſee to make his Obſervation of, for his own better Direction, when he had this Religious Purpoſe in his Mind towards ſuch reduced Gentlemen. For whoſe Relief, of all the charitable Foundations, in and about London, for diſtreſſed People of all Sorts, there had been none erected hitherto.

The Endowment.

He endowed it moſt amply and liberally with his whole Real, Copyhold and Perſonal Eſtate, after his Lady's Deceaſe: which may amount to about 1300 l. per Ann. And in his Lifetime placed twelve ſuch poor Merchants there. By Death, or Expulſion, now reduced to Four or leſs (the Number not filled up with other decayed Merchants) by reaſon of very great Loſſes before and ſince the Founder's Death, to the impairing of the ſaid Eſtate; the Lady Morden being forced to retrench the Expences of the Houſe, on account of her own Share allotted her by the laſt Will of Sir John for her Life.

Truſtees and Viſitors.

He appointed by his ſaid Will my Lady Morden, his Executrix, and three others of good Rank, and Integrity, all Turkey Merchants, to be both Truſtees of his Eſtate ſo ſettled, and likewiſe Viſitors of his College Yearly or oftner, as they ſhould ſee Need or Occaſion. And due Proviſions to be made for them there, when they ſhould come to viſit. And they to have the ſole Management of the Affairs thereof. Theſe firſt Truſtees upon the deceaſe of any of them, to chuſe and nominate others, to the Number of Seven; all to be Turkey Merchants; the Survivors of them, rechuſe others of the ſame Company from Time to Time, to fill up the ſaid Number upon the Deaths of any of the Former. Or if at any Time hereafter, there ſhould chance to be a Failure in the Turkey Company; then the Election of the Seven Truſtees to be made out of the Eaſt India Company, of which Sir John Morden was alſo a Member. And in caſe of a Failure in that Company, Proviſion was made by the Will for others.

A Treaſurer.

To this College, belongs alſo a Treaſurer; whoſe Salary is 40 l. a Year. Whoſe Office is to receive the Rents and Revenues: and to keep Books of the Accounts and Disburſements of the College: and to be accountable to the Viſitors.

A Chaplain.

And alſo a Chaplain. He to be a Man in Holy Orders, who is to read Prayers in the Chapel twice, Morning and Evening, every Day, and to preach twice on the Lord's Days. His Salary is 30 l. a Year.

Theſe with the poor Merchants are to have a Common Table in the Hall, to eat and drink together at Meals; And each have their convenient Chambers and Apartments, with Cellars.

The Number of ſuch as are to be admitted.

The exact Number of ſuch as are to be admitted there, is not appointed; but to be more, and augmented according as the Eſtate will bear, and the neceſſary Expences allow of. But it is thought the Number may at leaſt amount to Forty Perſons; there being Harbour for that Number.

The Penſion allowed to each.

The Penſion allowed to each Perſon admitted there, is 20 l. per Ann. for their Commons, Firing and other Neceſſaries. Each to wear Gowns in the College with the Badge of the Founder, and to be 50 Years of Age at leaſt.

The Chapel Conſecrated.

The Chapel within the College, which is wainſcotted, and hath a very fair and coſtly Altar Piece, was Conſecrated by the late Biſhop of Rocheſter, Dr. Sprat (in whoſe Dioceſe the College ſtands) being alſo preſent, Dr. Teniſon, late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with the Founder, together with many others; when Dr. Friend preached the Dedication Sermon; and an Anthem ſung by the ſinging Boys of the Collegiate Church of Weſtminſter; brought by the ſaid Biſhop, Dean alſo of that Church. Afterwards all were entertained in the College at a ſplendid Dinner, at the Founder's Coſt, amounting to 50 l. or upwards.

Burying Place.

There is alſo a Burying Place adjoyning to the College: Conſecrated alſo by Biſhop Sprat, for ſuch of the College as Dye there.

The Lady Morden's pious Deſign.

The Lady Morden, ſtill living, intendeth to be a further Benefactor to this College, viz. To enlarge the Salary of the Chaplain, to as much more as it is at preſent; conſidering his Duty of daily Attendance, for his better Encouragement. And to give a further Addition to the 10 l. appointed yearly, for the Repairs, which is ſcarce ſufficient for that Purpoſe.

Sir John Morden buried in his own College.

Sir John Morden dyed Anno 1708. And lyeth interred, according to his Deſire, in a Vault under the Communion Table of the Chapel of his own College: Whither he was brought with a Decency ſuitable to his Worth. There is intended to be a handſome Statue of him to be ſet over the Gate coming in, in a Niech there for that Purpoſe.

The preſent Truſtees are,
The Lady Morden,
Sir Peter Delme Kt.

Sir Charles Cooke, Kt.
Mr. Papillon.
Mr. Hanger.
Mr. Morſe.
Mr. Chiſwell.

And now, laſtly, to confirm what is related befo[illegible] and to give a more particular and diſtinct Knowledge of this Foundation; here follows an Authentick Abſtract of the Founder's laſt Will, as far as it relates thereunto: Which was kindly communicated to me by Mr. Thomas Brand, Brother to the Lady Morden, and Father of the preſent Treaſurer; Viz.

Mr. Nathaniel Brand, Principal of Thavies Inn, Nephew to the Lady Morden.

An Abſtract of the laſt Will and Teſtament of Sir John Morden, Baronet; who departed this Life the 6th Day of September, Anno Dom. 1708. So much thereof as concerns the Liberal Gifts he left to Charitable Uſes, and particularly to his College in Black-heath.

First, To be interred in his Chapel, in his College; at the Diſcretion of Dame Suſan his Wife, and his Truſtees, without Pomp or Singing Boys; but decently.

Gives and deviſes unto his ſaid Wife, Dame Suſan Morden, 600 l. per Annum, clear of all Charges, Repairs, Parliament Taxes, and all other Taxes, Deductions and Abatements whatſoever, during her natural Life; to be retained by her, or paid to her by his Truſtees, out of all his Real, Copyhold, or Perſonal Eſtate whatſoever; Quarterly; at Chriſtmas, Lady-Day, Midſummer, and Michaelmas. The firſt Payment to begin and be retained, or paid to her at ſuch of the ſaid Feaſts, or Days of Payment, which ſhall firſt happen after his Deceaſe. And for the true Payment thereof, Doth charge all his Eſtate, Real, Copyhold and Perſonal, during her natural Life; to be taken in Lieu and Diſcharge of all Contracts of Marriage, Thirds, Claims and Demands whatſoever: Except what is hereby further deviſed to her.

Item, Gives and bequeaths unto her for Life, his Manſion Houſe called Wrickles Marſh; with all the Orchards, Gardens, Vineyards, Fiſhponds, Yards, Stables, Barns, Outhouſes, and the Avenue or Cloſe leading to the ſame, from the Road, and the Cloſe adjoining, wherein the Horſepond is: And the Cloſe and Walk, called Mount Eccho Walk, and all Appurtenances; Together with ſo many Acres of Land, Meadow and Paſture, next adjoining to the ſaid Houſe, as will amount to the yearly Value of 100 l. at the leaſt: To be ſet out and allotted to her by Sir Edmund Harriſon, Daniel Morſe, and Pelatiah Barnardiſton, or the Survivors or Survivor of them, according to their Diſcretions.

Item, Gives and bequeaths to his Wiſe 100 l. for Mourning.

Item, Gives and bequeaths to her his beſt Coach and Chariot, and Four of his beſt Horſes, and the Furniture thereof: And all his Cows and Dairy. And alſo one Moiety, or Half Part (the ſame into Two equal Parts to be divided) of all his Houſhold-ſtuff, Furniture, Utenſils, Plate, Jewels, China Ware, Cabinets, Linnen, Woollen, Hangings, Bedding, Pewter, Copper and Braſs, and all other his Ornaments and Houſhold-ſtuff whatſoever; as well in the Country as in London: To diſpoſe of at her Will and Pleaſure. And alſo gives unto her, during Life, the Uſe and Wearing of the other Moiety of the ſaid Houſhold-ſtuff, &c. And his Will is, That an Inventory and Valuation of all the ſaid Houſehold Goods, Plate, Jewels, be made and delivered to the ſaid Truſtees, Sir Edmund Harriſon, Daniel Morſe, and Pelatiah Barnardiſton; ſome, or one of them; To preſerve the ſame for the Uſes hereaſter mentioned.

And then, after divers Legacies to his Relations and other Perſons, and to the Poor of St. Martin Outwich, and of the Pariſh of Charlton; He gives to Chriſt's Church Hoſpital 200 l. formerly lent; and diſcharges them thereof. To St. Thomas's Hoſpital 100 l. Which he ſubſcribed and paid; and diſcharges the ſame. Gives 200 l. to be laid out by his Executrix, to diſcharge Priſoners out of the King's Bench Priſon, Marſhalſea, Fleet and Ludgate, and both the Counters: Not paying above 3 l. to any one. And alſo 100 l. to be diſtributed to Blind Perſons. To ſuch as were born blind, 40 s. apiece; and to other blind Perſons, 20 s. apiece, &c. To Sir Edmund Harriſon, Daniel Morſe, and Pelatiah Barnardiſton, 20 Guineas apiece for Mourning.

[These were Truſtees for his College.]

Makes his Wife, Dame Suſan Morden, Sole Executrix.

Gives and deviſes unto Sir Edmund Harriſon, Daniel Morſe, and Pelatiah Barnardiſton, and the Survivor of them, his Heirs and Aſſigns for ever, All his Real and Copyhold Eſtate, of which he was or ſhould be ſeized, during his Life, and not before otherwiſe diſpoſed of, ſubject to the Payment of the ſaid Annuity of 600 l. per Annum to his Wife for Life. To hold the ſame unto the ſaid Sir Edmund Harriſon, Daniel Morſe, and Pelatiah Barnardiſton, their Heirs and Aſſigns; In Truſt for the Uſes following; Viz.

Wills and Orders, That there be placed in his College in Charlton, as many poor, honeſt, ſober and diſcreet Merchants, as the clear yearly Rent and Revenue of his ſaid Real or Copyhold Eſtate of Inheritance will maintain, according to the Allotments and Proviſo's following. Which Merchants he directs to be of the Age of Fifty Years apiece at leaſt, and have loſt their Eſtates by Accidents, Dangers and Perils of the Seas, or by any other Accidents, Ways and Means, in their honeſt Endeavours to get their Living by Merchandizing.

Gives and allows each [ſuch] Merchant a Penſion of 20 l. a Year; to be paid and laid out in manner after appointed.

Wills, That out of the ſaid Penſions of 20 l. apiece, a conſtant Table and Commons be kept in the Hall of the College, for the Suſtenance of the poor Merchants, to Dine and Sup together, ſuch as are able to come out of their Chambers, every Day in the Year. And for ſuch as are not able to come out of their Chambers, ſuch Proviſion ſhall be made and ſent to them, as is neceſſary for them in their Conditions.

Wills, That the ſaid Merchants ſhall always in the ſaid College wear Gowns, all alike. And that out of their ſaid 20 l. per Annum apiece, ſhall yearly be allowed 40 s. apiece to buy their new Gowns;

Gowns ; and alſo 20*s.* apiece to buy each of them a Chaldron of Coals, for Firing in their Chambers. And the remaining 17*l.* apiece to be applied to the Maintenance of their and Commons : And for Buying and Dreſſing their Proviſions : And for Bread and Beer, and Coals for their Kitchen and Hall, and all other Neceſſaries. And if any Overplus of their Penſions be left, after all Commons and Neceſſaries paid for ; the ſame to be equally divided amongſt them, for Cloaths, and other Neceſſaries.

Wills, That each of them have a Lodging appointed, and be conſtantly reſident in the ſaid College.

Wills, That a Perſon be appointed to be Treaſurer, to receive for the Uſe of the College all the Rents, Revenues, Sum and Sums of Money belonging to the College ; for Proviſions, Repairs, Wages, and other Expences whatſoever, in ſuch manner as hereby is directed. And ſhall prepare and keep Books fairly written of all his Receipts and Diſburſments ; to be peruſed, and allowed of, and ſigned by the Viſitors after named, once a Year at leaſt ; and oftner, whenever the Viſitors, after named, ſhall call for the ſame. And for his Pains and Trouble therein, ſhall have an Allowance either out of the ſaid Real or Copyhold Eſtate, or ſuch other Eſtate as is hereby given for the Endowment of the College, the Penſion or Sum of 40 l. per Annum, by the Viſitors, upon Peruſal of his Accounts.

Wills, That the Chapel in the ſaid College be Conſecrated : And that there be a ſober, devout, and diſcreet Perſon, in Holy Orders, appointed to be Chaplain to the College, to read Divine Service there, according to the preſent Liturgy of the Church of England, as now by Law eſtabliſhed, Twice every Day, Morning and Evening. And alſo to preach Sermons twice a Day, every Sunday in the Year ; and duly to Adminiſter the Holy Sacraments, and Viſit the Sick, and Bury the Dead : And to do all Things according to his Duty and Place. And for his ſo doing, ſhall have alſo out of ſuch Eſtate given for Endowing the College, 30 l. a Year. And the Chaplain and Treaſurer ſhall have their Diet with the Merchants, in the Hall of the College : And alſo their Lodging in the College. And the ſame ſhall be anſwered out of the Eſtate allotted for Endowing the College.

Wills, That the Chaplain be always reſident, to do his Duty in the College. And that all the Merchants do conſtantly go to Chapel and Divine Service twice every Day without fail, if they are able. And that the Merchants, by Majority of Votes, ſhall chuſe one or more at a time, and as often as they pleaſe, out of their own Number, to buy in all the Prcviſions and other Neceſſaries for the College ; and take care thereof, and deliver out the ſame to the Cook and others of the College, as Occaſion ſhall require ; without any or Advantage for his, or their Pains. Believing, ſince he gives the Money, they will not think it a Burthen to buy their own Proviſions and Neceſſaries.

Diſcharges his Executrix from being ſubject to any Miſcarriage, in caſe, what ſhould be done by her was well intended. And further, directs his Executrix to make Sale of any Ships, or Parts of Ships, in which he is intereſted, if ſhe thinks fit. Deſires her, ſpeedily to ſell his Perſonal Eſtate, that the Produce thereof may come in Aid of his Real Eſtate, for Endowing the College.

Wills, That the ſole Government and Management of the College be in the Viſitors, after mentioned, and their Succeſſors for ever. And firſt appoints his Wife, Sir Edmund Harriſon, Daniel Morſe, and Pelatiah Barnardiſton, to be ſole Viſitors thereof. And they, and the Survivors of them, or the major Part of them, or of the Survivors of them, to have the ſole Management thereof : To place and diſplace the Merchants, Chaplain, Treaſurer, and all Officers and Perſons within the College : And to make Orders and Rules for the well governing thereof, as they, or the major Part of them ſhall think fit. And that they, or the major Part of them, Viſit the College once a Year at the leaſt ; and oftner, if they think fit. And that they, or the major Part of them, ſhall then ſtate and take the Treaſurer's Accounts, and peruſe and ſign the ſame, if they approve thereof : And if not, to call the ſaid Treaſurer to Account for all ſuch Moneys as ſhall come to his Hands, and not be diſpoſed of according to this his Will. And then examine into the well governing of the College, and into the Behaviour of every one within the ſaid College. And if they find that the Treaſurer, Chaplain, or any other of the Officers of the College, do not behave themſelves according to their Duty ; then to diſplace them, and appoint others in their Rooms, by Writings under their reſpective Hands and Seals, or the Hands and Seals of the major Part of them. And alſo examine into the Manners of all the Merchants ; whether they keep conſtant to Chapel, and are reſident in the College. And if they find them guilty of any Sort of ill Behaviour ; not keeping ſtrictly to the Rules and Orders of the College, or guilty of Swearing, Drunkenneſs, or any other Debauchery ; that then, by Writing under the Hands and Seals of them, or the major Part of them, to diſplace and turn them out ; and put in other Merchants at their Diſcretions. And then view all Repairs done, or to be done in the College ; or Utenſils of Houſhold-ſtuff : And give ſuch Orders therein, as to them ſhall ſeem meet.

Gives 10 l. per Annum for ever, to be expended in a Dinner for the Viſitors in the ſaid Hall, on the Day of their Viſitation ; and for Hay and Corn for their Horſes. And after they have dined, all the Proviſions remaining to be given to the Merchants within the College.

Wills, That Rooms be prepared for their Reception. And that immediately after the Deceaſe of any Two of the Viſitors, that Sir John Buckworth, Sir Humphry Edwin, John Morice, Eſq, Mr. William Faulconer, and Mr. Juſtus Otgher, Turkey Merchants, ſhall be Truſtees, and Viſitors of the College during their Lives ; together with the then ſurviving Viſitor, or Viſitors. And that then all the Truſtees or Viſitors do Viſit the College, and execute all the Powers, above given to the firſt Truſtees. And that then, when any one of the ſaid Viſitors dies, all the ſurviving Viſitors, or the major Part of them, ſhall meet ; and under their Hands and Seals conſtitute and appoint ſome one of the Turkey Company, to ſupply the Place of the deceaſed Viſitor, to be Viſitor with them during his Life. Or if more than one happen to be dead, then to conſtitute and appoint ſo many of the Turkey Company to be Viſitors for their Lives, in the Place of thoſe deceaſed, as will keep up the Number of Seven Viſitors ; to have always the ſole Management of the College according to his Will.

Wills, That if all the Viſitors of the College ſhould dye, without chuſing others to ſucceed them ; them; then the Turkey Company to chuſe Seven diſcreet Perſons, Members of their Company, to be Viſitors of the College for their Lives: And they to chuſe them Succeſſors accordingly, in manner aforeſaid, for ever. And if the Turkey Company fail, that there cannot be Viſitors choſen out of them; then the ſurviving Viſitors, or major Part of them, ſhall conſtitute and appoint ſo many of the Eaſt India Company, as will fill up the Number Seven. And if that Company fail; then out of the Court of Aldermen of the City of London be [as many] Viſitors for their Lives, as will make up their Number Seven Viſitors for ever. And ſo the ſurviving Viſitors, as often as any ſhall dye, ſhall chuſe fit and diſcreet Perſons out of the Court of Aldermen. And if the Court of Aldermen fail; then the ſurviving Viſitors, when any one or more ſhall dye, to conſtitute one or more to fill up their Number Seven, of diſcreet and grave Perſons, Gentlemen of the County of Kent, as the ſurviving Viſitors, or major Part of them ſhall think fit, to be Viſitors for their Lives: And ſo to chuſe Viſitors ſucceſſively out of the Gentlemen of Kent, to make up their Number Seven for ever. But ſo long as there ſhall be a Turkey Company, or when they ſhall be reſtored, the Viſitors to be choſen out of them.

Directs, That the Truſtees and Viſitors, when they ſhall be reduced to Two in Number, in whom the Inheritance of the Eſtate deviſed, or to be purchaſed, ſhall be veſted; ſhall convey and aſſure the Inheritance and Fee ſimple of the ſaid Eſtates to the Uſe of themſelves, and all other the then preſent Viſitors, and of their Heirs and Aſſigns, for the Purpoſes aforeſaid. And that the Charges of ſo conveying and transferring the ſaid Eſtates, and all other Charges and Expences in or about making Purchaſes, and ordering and managing the Eſtate or Revenues wherewith the College is endowed, (other than the Expences of Viſitations, which are already provided for) ſhall be allowed and deducted out of the Eſtates and Revenues aforeſaid.

Wills, That ſo often as any of his Name, or his own or Wife's Relations, ſhall be qualified to be Chaplain, or otherwiſe qualified to perform any of the Offices in the College, or be within the Intention of this Will, to receive the Charity of the College; that they be upon an Election preferred before others, and be put into the ſaid Offices of the College for which they are qualified, and put in to receive the Charity thereof, before any Perſon whatſoever.

Revokes all former Wills; and declares this to be his laſt.

Abſtract of the Codicil annexed.

Whereas by his Will of the 15th of October, 1702, he mentions a College erected for Poor Merchants; and thereby gave a yearly Penſion of 20 l. to every Merchant; And attended the Houſe of Commons, for an Exemption for the College from Paying Taxes, but could not prevail: Does therefore declare, That the Penſion of 20 l. yearly to each Merchant, be reduced to the yearly Penſion of 15 l. to iſſue out of the yearly Allowance of 20 l. by Will allowed. In all other Things, confirms his ſaid Will.

Dated the 9th of March, 170--r.

In the Hall is hung up a TABLE, containing in Writing the Orders of the College: Which are as follow.

The ORDERS to be Obſerved in MORDEN COLLEGE.

I. Imprimis, It is Ordered, That no Perſon or Perſons be elected, or admitted into this College, but ſuch Poor Merchants as are fallen into Decay by Accidents of the Seas, or otherwiſe, in their way of Merchandizing; being honeſt, ſober and diſcreet Members of the Church of England, as now by Law eſtabliſhed; and being ſingle Perſons, of the Age of Fifty Years at the Time of their Admiſſion into the ſaid College. And if by Miſinformation, Miſtake or otherwiſe, any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, or any common Swearers, Drunkards, quarrelſome, looſe, lewd, unruly, debauched or diſorderly Perſons, or any Perſon or Perſons infected with any infectious Diſeaſe, ſhall be placed or put into the ſaid College; that then all, and every ſuch Perſon, ſhall be immediately expelled, and put out of the ſaid College for ever.

II. Ordered, That no Friends, Relations or Acquaintance, of any of the ſaid Merchants or Servants, (unleſs in Caſe of Sickneſs, or the like, to take care of them) ſhall reſide, live or lodge in the ſaid College. And every Perſon or Perſons offending againſt this Order, ſhall forfeit for his firſt Offence all his and their Commons, during the Time any ſuch Perſon ſhall reſide, live or lodge with them in the ſaid College, and for one Month longer. And for the Second Offence, Six Months longer. And for the Third Offence, ſuch Merchants and Servants ſhall be expelled, and turned out of the ſaid College for ever.

III. Ordered, That every Member of the ſaid College ſhall be conſtantly reſiding and dwelling within the ſaid College; and ſhall not be wandring, and miſpending their Time in publick and diſorderly Houſes; but ſhall employ themſelves in Acts of Piety and Devotion. Nor ſhall abſent themſelves, without Leave, for Twenty four Hours, from the ſaid College; unleſs by unavoidable Accident, or Neceſſity; under Pain of being expelled the College.

IV. Ordered, That all the Gentlemen of the ſaid College be daily in Commons, in the Hall of the ſaid College; unleſs prevented by Sickneſs, or other ſuch like Indiſpoſition. And that their daily Allowance be, to each of them, a Pound of Meat, two Quarts of Beer, a Threehalfpeny Loaf, beſides Cheeſe and Butter. That the Time of Dining be Twelve of the Clock; and of Supper, be Six of the Clock. And in Caſe of Sickneſs, (inſtead of ſuch their Allowance) there ſhall be provided for them, and ſent to their Chambers, ſuch other Proviſions and Neceſſaries, as ſhall be convenient and neceſſary for them in their Condition. And that no Gentleman of the ſaid College ſhall ſend, or carry away any Bread, Beer, or Victuals from Table at Dinner time; nor ſhall ſit down to, or riſe from Table, before Grace be ſaid.

V. Ordered, upon the ſeveral and reſpective Deaths, Departure, or Expulſions of every one of the Merchants of the ſaid College, that their and every of their Places ſhall remain, and continue vacant, and undiſpoſed of for Twelve Months, next after the Quarter Day then next enſuing. And their and every of their Yearly Allowances during ſuch Vacancies, ſhall be applied and diſpoſed of, for and toward the Repair and Support of the ſaid College.

VI. Ordered, that the College Gates be kept locked at Dinner and Supper times; and that all the Gates of the ſaid College be locked at Nine of the Clock every Night in the Summer, and at Eight in the Winter. And that the Key be carried and delivered to the Chaplain to be kept by him in his Lodging. And if any Member of the ſaid College be out after the Gates are locked up, he ſhall forfeit his next three Days Commons, for every ſuch his Offence.

VII. Ordered, that the Chaplain of the ſaid College be a Devout, Pious, Sober, Modeſt, Good Man, in Holy Orders; and that he do read Divine Service according to the now Uſage of the Church of England, twice every Week Day in the Year, in the Chapel of the ſaid College, at the Hours of Eleven in the Morning, and at Three in the Afternoon; and do read Prayers, and Preach twice every Sunday in the Summer time, and ſo likewiſe in the Winter, unleſs he ſhall be diſpenſed with by the Founder, or Foundreſs, or Viſitors for the time being, or the major Part of them, to preach but once a Day, during any Part of the two Winter Quarters. And during ſuch Diſpenſation, the ſaid Chaplain ſhall expound the Scriptures, and inſtruct the Congregation in Matters of Faith, and the Doctrine of the Church.

And it is further ordered, that the Chaplain ſhall be always reſident and abiding in the ſaid College, and not abſent himſelf above one ſingle Day at one time, and that but very ſeldom, without leave of the Founder or Foundreſs, or Viſitors, or major part of them, for the time being. And then the Chaplain to find one to do his Duty in every Thing there, according to his Place and Function in the ſaid College, during his Abſence; and alſo, that the Chaplain do adminiſter the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at leaſt Four times in the Year; that is to ſay, at Chriſtmas, Eaſter, Whitſuntide, or ſome Sunday or Lords Day after Trinity, at the Diſcretion of the Chaplain; and that he do Viſit and Pray with the Sick within the ſaid College; and likewiſe exhort and prepare all the Members of the ſaid College to be worthy Partakers of the Holy Communion.

VIII. Ordered, That the Clerk of the Chapel do every Day ring the Bell, to call the Members to Prayer, ſome convenient time before the Chaplain do begin; and do attend in the Chapel in his Gown, and duly make his Reſponſes; and do his Duty there, and keep the Pews and Chapel clean and neat, upon pain of the Forfeiture of 9*s.* 4*d.* for every ſuch his Omiſſion or Offence, to be deducted out of his Yearly Salary and Wages.

IX. Ordered, that all the Merchants belonging to the ſaid College do attend and come to Prayers, Morning and Afternoon, in the Chapel of the ſaid College in their Gowns, with their Common Prayer Books; and do behave themſelves there reverently, with great Piety and Devotion, and duly make their Reſponſes, upon pain of forfeiting their next and three Days Commons for every Breach of this Order. And do likewiſe receive the Holy Sacrament in the ſaid Chapel at leaſt Four Times every Year, upon pain of forfeiting Ten Days Commons, for every ſuch their Default and Neglect, without reaſonable Cauſe to the contrary, to be allowed by the Founder or Foundreſs, or Viſitors for the Time being, or the major Part of them: and alſo that they be conſtant, attending upon ſuch Evening Lectures or Expoſitions, as the Chaplain ſhall uſe in the publick Hall for their Benefit and Inſtruction.

X. Ordered, that all Diſputes and Differences ariſing between the Members of the ſaid College, or any of them, ſhall be referred to the Determination of the Chaplain of the ſaid College, if he can compoſe and end the ſame; if not, to the abſolute Determination of the Founder or Foundreſs, or the Viſitors for the Time being, or the major part of them, or of ſuch other Perſon or Perſons, as they ſhall appoint to determine the ſame.

XI. Ordered, That every Monday Noon, immediately after Dinner, one of the Merchants belonging to the ſaid College ſhall be choſen by the Majority of Voices then preſent, to be Caterer that Week. Who being ſo choſen ſhall go to Market, and ſee the Meat weighed and brought into the College; and that their due Proportion of Meat be delivered by the Butcher to the Cook; and that all other Proviſions and Neceſſaries be provided, and ſent in for the Uſe of the ſaid College. And if any one ſo choſen ſhall refuſe or neglect to do his Duty therein, without reaſonable cauſe ſhewn to the contrary, during that Week he ſhall be ſo choſen, he ſhall forfeit his Commons that Week for ſuch his Default or Neglect.

XII. Ordered, That no Servant ſhall cut, take, or carry away, or have any Commons from Table, before the Merchants have Dined, or Supped; or cut off any Meat before it be brought to Table, upon Forfeiture of a Week's Commons for every ſuch Offence.

XIII. Ordered, That all the Members of the ſaid College do demean and behave themſelves civilly and orderly in the ſaid College; and do not give any ill Language, or cauſe any Strife or Diſturbance between any of their Fellows; nor intermeddle with any Buſineſs of the College; contrary to the Intent of theſe Orders. And if any of them ſhall ſwear accidentally an Oath, or be Drunk, or commit any other immoral Act; for which he or they ſhall not be expelled; then they, and every of them ſo offending ſhall forfeit his, and their next Days Commons for ſuch their Offence.

XIV. Ordered, That if any of the Members of the ſaid College ſhall lye out of the ſaid College without leave from the Founder, Foundreſs, or Viſitors of the ſaid College, for the time being, or the Major Part of them; that every ſuch Member of the ſaid College ſhall forfeit one Weeks Commons for every Night he ſhall ſo lye out, without Leave or reaſonable Cauſe ſhewn for his ſo doing, to be allowed of by the Founder, or Foundreſs, or Viſitors, or the Major Part of them, for the time being.

XV. Ordered, That an Account in Writing, every firſt Monday in every Month, be delivered by the Butler to the Steward, or Receiver of the ſaid College, of the Commons of all abſent Members, with or without Leave; and alſo of all the forfeited Commons, within that Month then laſt paſt: And that the Steward, or Receiver, do keep a diſtinct Account thereof, entred into his Book; and take care that the ſame be employed and diſpoſed of, for and towards the Maintenance and Improvement of the Garden of the ſaid College.

XVI. Ordered, That the Chaplain do take notice of, and endeavour to regulate and prevent all Miſunderſtandings and Diſorders, within the ſaid College, by viſiting the Hall and Chambers of the Gentlemen, and others of the ſaid College, as oft as Occaſion ſhall require.

XVII. Ordered, That all the Members of the ſaid College do obſerve, and ſtrictly keep and obey all theſe Orders, and all ſuch other Orders as from time to time ſhall be made by the Founder, Foundreſs, or Viſitors, or the major Part of them, for the time being, for the well governing, ordering, and Management of the ſaid College.

IRONMONGERS Hoſpital.

Sir Robert Jeffrey's Hoſpital.

THE laſt Hoſpital of a larger and nobler Charity, extending to the Relief and Comfort of a great Number of Aged poor People, is that of Sir Robert Jeffreys, Knt. late Alderman, and ſometime Lord Maior of the City, of the Company of Ironmongers, deceaſed. Who left by his laſt Will and Teſtament, Dated 10 of Febr. 1703. a great Sum of Money (among ſeveral other Demiſes to charitable Uſes) to the Truſt and Care of the ſaid Company, for the ſupporting and maintaining of as many Poor, as the ſaid Money, inveſted in Freehold Eſtate, either of Lands or Houſes, would amount to; allowing to each a certain Sum Annually, as is mentioned in the ſaid Will. And accordingly, they, the Maſter, Wardens, and Livery of the ſaid Company of Ironmongers of London, have now of late, out of the Produce and Profits of the ſaid Money, erected and finiſhed, a commodious, decent Building, near Shoreditch, for the Habitation and Reſidence of the ſaid poor People, both Men and Women, which as they ſay coſt 12000*l.* or upwards. There are admitted already 44 Perſons; but the Hoſpital capable of receiving many more, to the Number of Each have a Gown, and are paid Quarterly 30*s.* And, beſides their Rooms they have a Cellar. There is alſo a Chapel for the Reſort of the poor People to daily Prayers, and a Chaplain, who hath an Annual Salary, and Chambers allowed him.

Rules and Orders for this Hoſpital.

And for the better Government of theſe that are, or ſhall be admitted to dwell in the ſaid Almshouſe, and enjoy the Benefits thereof, it was Ordered and Appointed, at a General Court, held by the ſaid Company at their Hall, Nov. 17. 1715. that certain Rules and Orders to be put in Print, ſhould be ſtrictly obſerved by the ſaid Almsfolks; and divers Penalties annexed for Breach or Neglect of them, (even to Expulſion in ſome Caſes) comprized in xxix Articles. Which being ſo well contrived for the maintaining of Sobriety, Peace, good Order, mutual Help and Society, Religion and Vertue among them, may deſerve to be here ſet down for good Example ſake, and for the Direction of any other well diſpoſed Perſons, that are or ſhall be minded, to lay out their Chriſtian Devotion and Charity that Way.

Imprimis. It is Ordered. That upon the Death of any Perſon, that is, or ſhall be choſe into the ſaid Almshouſe, to partake of the ſaid Charity, there ſhall at the next Quarterly Court, or at furtheſt, at the ſecond Quarterly Court, after the Death of the ſaid Perſon, be another Perſon choſe in the Room of the ſaid Perſon ſo deceaſed.

II. That any Relation of the ſaid Benefactor, that is a proper Object, ſhall be preferred to any other Petitioner. And in defect of any ſuch Relation petitioning, It is Ordered, That any Member, or their Widow, that have been Liverymen or Freemen of the Company of Ironmongers, who is a proper Object, ſhall be preferred to any other Petitioner. But in Defect of any ſuch Petitioning, the greateſt Object that ſhall Petition, ſhall be choſe without Favour or Affection.

III. That ſuch Perſon be choſe in, for his or her Life; he or ſhe obeying and fulfilling all the following Orders; but be liable to be expelled, upon being guilty of ſuch Crimes as are hereafter mentioned to be puniſhed with Expulſion.

IV. That it be a general Rule to be obſerved, that no Perſon ſhall be choſe under Fifty ſix Years of Age (not to be diſpenſed with) unleſs upon ſome extraordinary Occaſion.

V. That no Perſon choſe ſhall have the Uſe and Benefit of more than one Room and Partition in the Cellar, which ſhall be aſſign'd them by either of the Wardens.

VI. That if any Perſon choſe be a Married Man, it may be lawful for his Wife to cohabit with him, ſhe obſerving and obeying all theſe Orders. But upon the Huſband's Deceaſe, his Widow is to relinquiſh the Almshouſe, unleſs being qualified by her Age ſhe ſhall be elected herſelf.

VII. The Honour and Service of Almighty God being above all Things to be reſpected, it is Ordered, That all abiding in the ſaid Almshouſe, Men and Women, being in Health, and well able to walk, ſhall every Lord's Day, and Days of Publick Faſt or Thankſgivings in the Year, go either to their Pariſh Church, or ſome other Place where Service to Almighty God is performed: And abide there to hear, attend and perform Divine Worſhip: And for neglect thereof, ſhall forfeit Four Pence for every Offence, to be deducted out of the next Payment of their Penſions.

VIII. That if any of the ſaid Alms People ſhall uſe any Blaſphemous Words, tending to the Diſhonour of Almighty God, he or ſhe for the firſt Offence ſhall forfeit Six Pence, for the ſecond Twelve Pence; and for the third Offence ſhall be expelled the Almshouſe for ever.

IX. That if any of the ſaid Alms People ſhall commit Adultery, Fornication, or ſuch like Uncleanneſs; or ſhall ſteal within the Houſe or without; or ſhall uſually beg in any Place without the Houſe; or ſhall commonly frequent any Houſe or Houſes ſuſpected of Lewdneſs; or admit or receive commonly to his or her Room, ſuch Perſon or Perſons, which are or have been infamous for lewd Lives; he or ſhe ſo offending, and being duly proved, ſhall be expelled the Almshouſe for ever.

X. That if any of the ſaid Alms People ſhall at any Time or Times, either within the Houſe or without, be drunk, he or ſhe ſo offending (beſides the Penalty of the Law in this Behalf provided) ſhall for the firſt Offence forfeit Four Pence, for the ſecond Eight Pence, for the third Sixteen Pence, and for the Fourth ſhall be expelled the Houſe for ever.

XI. That none of the poor Alms People ſhall give any railing, bitter, or uncharitable Speeches, or give any Stripe or Blows to any of their Fellows, upon Forfeitnre of a Months Pay for the firſt Offence, and Expulſion for the ſecond.

XII. That none but ſuch as are of good Life and Converſation, certified by Certificates, ſigned by known and reputable Perſons, no common Swearers, known Adulterers or Fornicators; no Thief, common Drunkards, Scolds, or unquiet Perſon or Perſons, ſhall be elected or continued in the ſaid Almshouſe.

XIII. That if any of the ſaid Alms People ſhall lye out of the ſame by Night, without Licenſe of the Maſter or one of the Wardens, or ſome lawful Excuſe to be approved of by them, for the firſt Offence ſhall forfeit out of their Pay Four Pence, for the ſecond Offence double, or repeating the ſame Offence above three times in one Year, to be expelled.

XIV. That none of the ſaid Alms People ſhall Harbour or Lodge any Stranger, young Child, or Children, in his or her Chamber, nor take any Woman to attend him or her, but in time of Sickneſs only, and no other but his or her Siſter, Daughter, or ſome near Relation, or ſome Woman of good Converſation, not under Fifty Years of Age; on pain to loſe or forfeit for every Night any Perſon be Harboured or Lodged contrary to this Order Five Shillings, to be ſtopped out of their Penſion.

XV. That none of the Poor of the ſaid Almshouſe ſhall make any Alteration in their Room, under colour to amend their Lodging, or on any Pretence whatſoever, without Direction of the Maſter or Wardens; upon pain of Expulſion.

XVI. That none of the Alms People ſhall ſpoil or break down any Walls or Fences or Trees planted, or to be planted; upon Penalty to forfeit Twelve Pence, beſides to make good the ſame at their own Charge.

XVII. That none of the ſaid Alms People ſhall caſt or lay any Rubbiſh, Duſt, or any noiſome Thing whatſoever, within any Part of the ſaid Alms Houſe, or any Ditch adjoining thereto, or any the Walks or Paſſages thereof, to the Annoyance of any of their Fellows: but ſhall keep their Rooms and the Walks, Ways and Paſſages before their Doors ſweet and clean; or for every Offence herein to forfeit Four Pence.

XVIII. That none of the Alms People ſhall ſell or vend any Strong Beer, Ale, Brandy, Spirits, or other Liquors, either publickly or privately; upon pain of Expulſion.

XIX. That none of the ſaid Alms People ſhall teach School, or exerciſe any Trade, or Occupation that may be prejudicial or dangerous to the Building, or any Annoyance or Diſturbance to their Fellows, or that ſhall require the Aſſiſtance of any other Perſon; on Forfeit of Twelve Pence per Week, ſo long as they tranſgreſs.

XX. That all Perſons belonging to the ſaid Alms Houſe ſhall return and come to their ſaid ſeveral Lodgings (except licenſed by the Maſter or one of the Wardens to be abſent for ſome ſhort time) between the firſt Day of October to the firſt Day of March Yearly, at or before the Hour of Seven of the Clock in the Evening of thoſe Days. And between the firſt Day of March, and the firſt Day of October Yearly, at or before the Hour of Nine of the Clock, upon forfeit of 4*d.* for the firſt Offence, for the Second 8*d.* for the Third 12. and for the Fourth to be expelled.

XXI. That once every Quarter, all the Offences that are puniſhable by Forfeitures, ſhall be heard and decided and fined by the Maſter, or one of the Wardens of the Company of Ironmongers, aſſiſted by any Three or more of the Livery, in hearing of as many of the Alms People, as can be got together, for Example ſake.

XXII. That all the Offences aforeſaid that are puniſhable by Expulſion, ſhall be heard and judged by the Maſter, Wardens, and Livery in a General Court aſſembled at their Hall. And whoſoever by the Majority of the ſaid Court, ſhall be ordered to be expelled, ſhall never after be capable to be choſe again, or to be admitted into the ſaid Alms Houſe: but a Padlock ſhall be put upon their Door, and their Goods delivered to them, or placed in the Cellar under the great Room, till they fetch them away. And any of the ſaid Alms People that ſhall lodge them afterwards in their Chamber, ſhall forfeit Twelve Pence for every Night they ſhall entertain them.

XXIII. That if any of the ſaid Alms People die, their Gowns ſhall be for the Benefit of ſuch Perſon as ſhall be choſe in their Room; upon penalty of loſing what Penſion ſhall be due at the time of their Deceaſe.

XXIV. That if any of the ſaid Alms People die, the Charge of their Burial ſhall be defrayed by their Friends and Relations before they move their Goods.

XXV. That none of the Alms People ſhall refuſe to be Aiding and Aſſiſting to one another; and in caſe of Sickneſs, 'tis expected they ſhall by Turns attend, aſſiſt, and be helpful to each other: and live in Peace and Unity one with the other; and which of them ſhall refuſe their good Offices to each other in their Sickneſs, ſhall upon good Proof be expelled the Houſe.

XXVI. That a proper Perſon ſhall be appointed by the ſaid Company at a Court, to keep the Key of the Gates from Time to Time at their Pleaſure. Who ſhall be required to give a juſt and impartial Account of all Offences committed againſt any the Orders herein contained.

XXVII. That the Forfeitures be divided into three Parts; one to the Informer, the other two Parts to be put into a common Box, and be divided every Chriſtmas amongſt the Poor of the ſaid Alms Houſe, at the Diſcretion of the Maſter and Wardens, or any two of them.

XXVIII. That theſe Orders being fairly Printed, ſhall be hung up in the great Room, and read publickly there in the preſence of the Alms People, twice in the Year yearly; viz. on or near the 25th of March, and 29th of September; and that another Copy be kept by the Clerk of the Ironmongers Company to have reſort to upon Occaſion.

XXIX. That ſuch further Orders as the Company ſhall make, ſhall be binding.

Theſe are the Chief Colleges and Hoſpitals in or near the City. Yet there be divers others of leſs Note in London and Weſtminſter, or in the Confines, which will be taken notice of in their due Places.

An Account of the dreadful Fire of London, Ann. 1666. the Damage done by it; Computed. The Rebuilding thereof; With the ſeveral Acts of Parliament made for that Purpoſe. The Contents of them. An Act of Common Council, for preventing and ſuppreſſing Fires. Inſurance of Houſes from Fire.

London conſidered in its late Ruins by Fire.
J. S.

WE have hitherto been employed in a general Perambulation of our City; walking as it were about it from Place to Place, to view and obſerve the publick and moſt remarkable Parts and Buildings of it. In the next Place we ſhould take another and a more particular Cognizance of the ſaid City, in every Ward, and of every Street, Lane, Church, Hall and more notable Houſe in each. But before we come to do that, we ſhall enter into one Conſideration more of London, repreſenting it not as before we ſaw it, in its Strength and Glory, but in its Ruins: and ſhew yon a rueful Spectacle of this noble Metropolis in Flames, and ſoon after lying flat in its Aſhes.]

The Extent of the Fire.
R. B.

For as in the Year 1665. it pleaſed God to ſend a ſweeping Plague upon this City, by which there dyed in London and the Liberties, in one Year, 68596 Perſons, beſides thoſe that dyed of other Diſeaſes: So the very next Year a ſad and lamentable Fire brake out on a Sunday Morning, being the Second Day of September: which by Wedneſday Morning, being the Fifth Day, burned down to the Ground all the Buildings and Edifices which ſtood upon the Quantity of 300 Acres of Ground.]

J. S.

But in the Inſcriptions on the Monument, ſet up in remembrance of this Fire, it is computed to be 436 Acres lying in Ruines.

Of the Beginning, Progreſs, and End of this Fire.

Out of a true exact Relation, print. 1666.
J. S.

How and whither it ſpread.

It was about one or two a Clock in the Morning, this ſad and deplorable Fire happened firſt of all at a Baker's Houſe in Pudding-Lane near New Fiſh-Street. Which, falling out in a Part of the City cloſe built with Wooden Houſes, and a narrow Lane, propagated it ſelf ſo far before Day, and with ſuch Violence, that it bred a kind of Diſtraction and Stupidity in the Inhabitants and Neighbours near it; ſo that they took not that Care which they might otherwiſe have done, to ſtop the further Diffuſion of it, by pulling down Houſes, as ought to have been done. Whereby it came to paſs, that in a ſhort Time it grew too big to be maſtered by any Engines or other Labour. And being fomented by a violent Eaſterly Wind, it kept burning in ſuch a raging manner all Sunday and Sunday Night, that it ſpread it ſelf by Monday Morning, up Graſs-Church ſtreet to Lombard ſtreet, and to St. Swithins Church in Candlewick ſtreet, and downwards from Candlewick ſtreet to the Waterſide, as far as the Three Cranes in the Vintry; and Eaſtward, tho' more ſlowly it crept beyond Belinſgate. The Vaſtneſs of this Fire was ſuch, that it made the amazed and diſtracted People, mind only to preſerve their own Goods and Commodities, and to ſecure their particular Concerns (and even that few could do by Reaſon of the haſty Rage of the Flames) none ſcarcely making any Attempts now to quench it. It continued all Monday and Tueſday with ſuch Impetuoſity, that by Ten of the Clock on Tueſday Night, the Houſes and Churches all along Cornhill, Cheapſide, Pauls Church Yard, Ludgateſtreet, Fleetſtreet, and ſo almoſt all the Breadth of the City from South to North, to St. Dunſtan's Church on this ſide Temple Bar, were utterly conſumed. About which Time the Wind ſlackened, and that Night by the Vigilancy, Induſtry and indefatigable Pains of his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, calling upon all People, and encouraging them by their Perſonal Aſſiſtances, and blowing up of Houſes, at length a Stop was put to the Fire in Fleetſtreet, the Inner Temple and Fetter Lane; at Holbornbridge, Pie Corner, Alderſgate, Criplegate, at the lower End of Baſinghalſtreet, by the Poſtern, at the upper End of Colemanſtreet, at the End of Biſhopsgateſtreet, and Leadenhallſtreet, at the Standard in Cornhill, at the Church in Fanchurchſtreet, in Mincing Lane near Clothworkers Hall, about the middle of Marklane, and at the Tower Dock. But on Wedneſday Night it ſuddenly brake out afreſh in the Inner Temple. Which happened, as is ſuppoſed, by Flakes of Fire falling into the Gutters of the Buildings. But his Royal Highneſs in Perſon fortunately watching there that Night, and by his ſeaſonable Commands for the blowing up ſome of the ſaid Buildings, it was extinguiſhed before Day, after it had laid level with the Ground Tanfield Court, Parſons Court, and the Buildings in the Churchyard, and done ſome little damage in the Church and Hall.

The Monument erected in Memory of the Fire.

Upon New Fiſhſtreethill Eaſtward, near the Place where the Fire began, is erected a moſt noble and lofty Triumphal Column, (commonly called the Monument) reſting upon a Square Baſis of Stone, having large Inſcriptions engraven on it of the Story of the Fire. Wherein among other Things is mentioned, that the City was ſet on Fire by Popiſh Treachery. Which Words were afterwards by publick Order erazed. But upon the Revolution they were engraven again: and ſo they ſtand.]

The Damage done by the Fire.
R. B.

The Damage done by this Fire is thus computed. Burned and conſumed Twelve Thouſand Houſes, within the Walls of the City, and above one Thouſand more without the Walls, but all of them within the Freedom and Liberty of London; that is, in all 13000, or as others 13200 Houſes. There were alſo deſtroyed the Cathedral Church of St. Pauls, which at that Time was new building, and as to the Stone Work, almoſt finiſhed: Alſo eighty ſeven Pariſh Churches, and Six conſecrated Chapels; moſt of the principal and publick Edifices: As the great Guild Hall, wherein were nine ſeveral Courts belonging to the City; the Royal Exchange; the Kings Cuſtom Houſe; Juſtice Hall, where the Seſſions were kept Eight or Nine Times in the Year for the Trial of Murderers, Felons and other Malefactors; the Four Priſons; Four of the principal Gates of the City; and Fifty Halls of Companies: moſt of which were moſt magnificent Structures and Palaces. The whole Damage ſuſtained by this Fire is almoſt incredible. Yet to make ſome Computation, that which follows is the Method that hath been taken.

An Account of the vaſt Damage and Spoil made by the forementioned Conflagration.

A Computation of the Damages ſuſtained by the Fire.

That the Reader may the better judge of the Damages done by this Fire, ſome have computed the Thirteen thouſand odd hundred Houſes burnt and deſtroyed, to be worth one with another 25 l. Yearly Rent; which at the low Rent of 12 Years Purchaſe, will in the whole amount unto Three Millions and Nine Hundred Thouſand Pounds Sterling, and upwards.

An eſtimate of Loſſes.

And for the other Works of publick Concern, they have been thus moderately eſtimated.

Of the ſtrange Concurrence of ſeveral Cauſes, (hapning at the ſame time) occaſioning the Fire ſo vigorouſly to ſpread and increaſe.

BEſides the ſupine Negligence of the People (whether Maſter or Servants) of the Houſe, where this dreadful Conflagration began; Next unto God's juſt Judgments for the heinous crying Sins of this Nation and City in particular; Some have made Enquiry into other natural Cauſes, which might occaſion ſuch a general Ruin, from ſo ſmall a Beginning: And

1. Firſt, They conſider the Time of the Night when it firſt began, viz. between One and Two of the Clock after Midnight; when all were in a dead Sleep.

2. Secondly, It was Saturday Night when many of the moſt eminent Citizens, Merchants, and others were retired into the Country, and none but Servants left to look to their City Houſes.

3. Thirdly, It was in the long Vacation, being that particular Time of the Year, when many wealthy Citizens and Tradeſmen are wont to be in the Country at Fairs, and getting in of Debts, and making up Accounts with their Chapmen.

4. Fourthly, The Cloſeneſs of the Building, and Narrowneſs of the Steeet in the Places where it began, did much facilitate the Progreſs of the Fire; by hindring of the Engines to be brought to play upon the Houſes on Fire.

5. Fifthly, The Matter of which the Houſes, all thereabouts, were; viz. Timber, and thoſe very old.

6. Sixthly, The Dryneſs of the preceeding Seaſon; there having been a great Drought even to that very Day, and all the Time that the Fire continued, which had ſo dryed the Timber, that it was never more apt to take Fire.

7. Seventhly, The nature of the Wares and Commodities ſtowed and vended in thoſe Parts, were the moſt Combuſtible of any other ſold in the whole City: As Oyl, Pitch, Tar, Cordage, Hemp, Flax, Roſin, Wax, Butter, Cheeſe, Wine, Brandy, Sugar, &c.

8. Eighthly, An Eaſterly Wind, (which is the dryeſt of all others) had blown for ſeveral Days together before; and at that Time very ſtrongly.

9. Ninthly, The unexpected failing of the Water thereabouts at that Time; For the Engine at the North End of London Bridge, called the Thames Water Tower, (which ſupplyed all that Part of the City with Thames Water) was out of Order, and in a few Hours was it ſelf burnt down, ſo that the Water Pipes, which conveyed the Water from thence through the Streets, were ſoon empty.

10. Laſtly, An unuſual Negligence at firſt, and a confidence of eaſily quenching it, and of its ſtopping at ſeveral probable places afterwards ; turned at length into a Confuſion, Conſternation and Deſpair ; People chuſing, rather by flight to ſave their Goods, than by a vigorous oppoſition to ſave their own Houſes and the whole City.

To all which Reaſons muſt not be paſt over the general Suſpicion, that moſt then had of Incendiaries, laying combuſtible Stuff in many Places, having obſerved divers diſtant Houſes to be on Fire together. And many were then taken up upon Suſpicion.

Having now given the Reader this brief View and Account of the Condition the City of London was in, until Anno 1666. And how in that Year, by a dreadful Conflagration, the greateſt Part of it was Buried in its own Aſhes : and illuſtrated the ſame in a ſmall Map thereof made, and here inſerted : let it reſt in this ruinous Condition ; till I acquaint you how, and by what Means it came to be Re-builded, in that Magnificent, Subſtantial and Beautiful Manner, as now it is : With its Cathedral and Parochial Churches, Gates, Halls, Publick Edifices, &c. And of all ſuch Aditional Buildings, New Streets, Markets, Courts, and other Ornaments enjoyned, ſuch as the like before were never erected : And this ſhall be our next Work.

Several Things Premiſed, and Enacted before the beginning of the Re-building of the City of London ; neceſſary thereunto, Anno XIX. & Anno XXII. Caroli II. Regis.

I. For the Levelling of Hills, Streets and Lanes.

FOR the preventing Inundations, and for eaſineſs of Aſcent, be it enacted, that the Street called Thames-Street ; and all the Ground between the ſame Street and the River of Thames, ſhall be raiſed and made higher by Three Foot at the leaſt, above the Surface of the Ground as now it lieth.

II. For the Opening and Enlarging of ſeveral Streets and Publick Paſſages.

WHereas many Ancient Streets and Paſſages within the City of London and Liberty thereof, were narrow and incommodious for Carriages and Paſſengers, and prejudicial to the Trade and Health of the Inhabitants; and are neceſſary to be enlarged, as well for the Conveniency as Ornament of the City: It is therefore enacted by this preſent Parliament, (Caroli II. Decimo Nono) that theſe Streets and Places following ſhall be enlarged; Viz.

1. The Street called Fleetſtreet, from the Place where the Greyhound Tavern ſtood, to Ludgate; and from thence to Paul's Churchyard.

2. The Street leading from the Eaſt End of St. Paul's Church, into Cheapſide.

3. The Street and Paſſage at the Eaſt End of Cheapſide, leading into the Poultrey.

4. The Street and Paſſage out of the Poultrey, leading into the Weſt End of Cornhill; at or near the Place late called The Stocks.

5. The Street called Blow-bladder Street, leading from the Weſt End of Cheapſide towards Newgate Market. And to enlarge the Street and Paſſage from thence towards Newgate Market, by laying the Ground where the Middle Row in the Shambles there lately ſtood, into the ſaid Street; and in like manner, to enlarge the Paſſage from Newgate Market towards Newgate, by laying the Ground of the Four late Houſes, between Warwick Lane End and Newgate Market, and the late Bell Inn there, into the Street.

6. The Lane, called Ave Mary Lane, leading from Pater-Noſter-Row to Ludgate Street.

7. And the Street or Paſſage at the End of St. Martins Le Grand, towards Blow-bladder Street, aforeſaid.

8. And alſo the Paſſage from St. Magnus Church, to the Conduit in Grace Church Street; and the North End of Grace Church Street alſo.

9. Thames-ſtreet, from the Weſt Corner of St. Magnus Church, to the Tower Dock.

10. To enlarge Old Fiſhſtreet, by laying the Middle Row there into the Street.

11. And whereas the Way or Paſſage of Holborn Bridge is now too ſtrait and incommodious for the many Carriages and Paſſengers daily uſing and frequenting the ſame; and is therefore neceſſary to be enlarged: Be it therefore enacted, That it ſhall and may be lawful for the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Commoners of the City of London, ſo to enlarge and make wider the ſame, as that the ſaid Way and Paſſage may run in a Level Line, from a certain Timber Houſe on the North Side thereof, commonly called or known by the Name or Sign of the Cock; unto the Front of the Buildings of a certain Inn, called the Swan Inn, ſituate on the North Side of Holborn Hill, as aforeſaid.

12. That the Lord Maior and Aldermen of London may and ſhall open and enlarge a Street or Paſſage, called Water Lane, leading from Fleetſtreet to White Fryars Dock, by the River of Thames:

13. And open and enlarge one other Street or Paſſage through Mincing Lane, by St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt, to Thamesſtreet near the Cuſtomhouſe. And to make the ſaid Streets or Paſſages Twenty four Foot in Breadth; for the Conveniency of Trade, and better Paſſage of Carts, and other Carriages, to and from the River of Thames.

14. That the Lord Maior, Aldermen and Common Council, alſo ſhall and may, by Virtue of this preſent Act, enlarge and make wider any other ſuch ſtrait and narrow Paſſages within the ſaid City, as are leſs than Fourteen Foot in Breadth.

And of ſuch there have been many enlarged; too many here to be enumerated: Which, by comparing the Maps before and ſince the New Buildings, will be to an intelligent Perſon very conſpicuous.

III. For the Making of New Streets and Wharfs, Market Places, and other Publick Monuments.

1. THAT the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen are by this Act enabled to make, or cauſe to be made, a New Street, leading and extending from the Guildhall of the ſaid City, into Cheapſide; the ſame Street to be of ſuch Breadth and Wideneſs, as they ſhall judge meet and convenient.

2. That they ſhould alſo open and enlarge a Street or Paſſage to the River of Thames, from Cheapſide through Soperlane, and thence to Thames-ſtreet, and thenceforth to the River of Thames: And from Three Cranes to the Thames aforeſaid. And to make the ſame Streets and Paſſages Four and twenty Foot in Breadth.

3. That they ſhall alſo cauſe a Street to be opened, Fourteen Foot wide, from the Weſt End of Threadneedle-ſtreet, down to Lothbury.

4. And it is enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That (for the better Benefit and Accommodation of Trade, and for other great Conveniencies) there ſhall be left a convenient Tract of Ground, all along from the Tower Wharf to London Bridge, and from London Bridge to the Temple, of the Breadth of Forty Foot, from the North Side of the River of Thames; to be converted to a Key, or publick and open Wharf. And that (in order thereunto) all Buildings, Sheds, Pales, Walls, Incloſures, and other Obſtructions and Impediments whatſoever, now ſtanding or being within Forty Foot Northward of the ſaid River of Thames, between the Places aforeſaid, (Cranes, Stairs and Docks only excepted) ſhall be taken down and removed, and the ſaid Ground cleared and levelled: And that from henceforth there ſhall be no Building or Erection whatſoever, (except Cranes, Stairs and Docks) placed or ſet within or upon the ſaid Forty Foot of Ground, or any Part thereof, between the Places aforeſaid.

5. And that all Buildings that ſhall hereafter immediately border upon any Part of the ſaid Ground, upon the North Side thereof, ſhall front and be placed in the Line that ſhall be ſet out for the Bounds of the Breadth of the ſaid Forty Foot of Ground Northward. And that the Buildings that ſhall be built upon that Line, and fronting the River of Thames, ſhall be of the Second or Third Sort or Rate of Buildings, hereafter mentioned in the Act for the Rebuilding of the City of London, Except Common Halls for Companies, and other Buildings; which ſhall be otherwiſe allowed of by the King's Majeſty.

6. And that all the ſaid Tract of Ground of the Breadth of Forty Foot from the ſaid River, ſhall be open and at large, without any Diviſion or Separation: And that the Bounds of each Proprietor's Ground therein, ſhall be diſtinguiſhed only by Denter-Stones, to be placed in the Pavement thereof.

7. And be it further enacted, That for the further Convenience of Trade, the Channel of Bridewell Dock, from the Channel of the River of Thames to Holborn Bridge, ſhall be ſunk to a ſufficient Level, whereby to make it Navigable: And that the Ground to be ſet out for the Breadth of the ſaid Channel, and of the Wharfs on each ſide thereof, ſhall not be leſs in Breadth than One Hundred Foot; nor ſhall exceed One Hundred and twenty Foot in Breadth.

8. And that the Line of the ſaid Channel, and Wharfs and Levels thereof, together with the Cranes and Stairs to be placed thereon, ſhall be aſcertained by the Lord Maior, &c. And that all the ſaid Wharf Ground on each ſide the River, ſhall lie open and at large, (Cranes and Stairs only excepted) without any Diviſion or Separation; and each Perſon's Propriety therein, to be diſtinguiſhed only by Denter-Stones in the Pavement thereof.

9. And that all Buildings bordering upon each ſide of the ſaid Wharfs, ſhall front and be placed in the Line, that ſhall be ſet out for the Bounds of the Breadth of the Wharfs from the Channel. And that the ſaid Buildings ſhall be of the Second Rate of Building, mentioned in the Act for Rebuilding the City, &c.

10. Whereas by a late Act of this preſent Parliament it was enacted, That the Pariſhes to be rebuilded within the ſaid City of London, in Lieu of thoſe which were demoliſhed by the late dreadful Fire, ſhould not exceed the Number of Thirty Nine: But foraſmuch as upon an exact Survey taken of the Number of Houſes to be rebuilded, and of the Extent of the reſpective Pariſhes neceſſary to be ſettled and continued within the ſaid City, it doth appear, That the Pariſhes to be ſettled and continued, and the Pariſh Churches to be rebuilded within the ſaid City, in Lieu of thoſe demoliſhed or conſumed by the ſaid late Fire, cannot conveniently, by Union or otherways, be reduced to a leſs Number than Fifty one. Be it therefore enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That the Number of Pariſhes to be ſettled, and the Pariſh Churches to be rebuilded, within the ſaid City of London, ſhall be Fifty one: The former Act, or any Thing therein contained to the contrary, notwithſtanding.

11. And that the Citizens of London, and their Succeſſors, for all the Time to come, may retain the Memorial of ſo ſad a Deſolation, and reflect ſeriouſly upon their manifold Iniquities, which are the unhappy Cauſes of ſuch Judgments: Be it therefore enacted, That the Second Day of September (unleſs the ſame happen to be Sunday; and if ſo, then the next Day following) be yearly for ever hereafter obſerved, as a Day of Publick Faſting and Humiliation within the ſaid City, and Liberties thereof; to implore the Mercy of Almighty God upon the ſaid City; to make devout Prayers and Supplication unto him, to divert the like Calamity for the Time to come.

12. And the better to preſerve the Memory of this dreadful Viſitation: Be it further enacted, That a Column, or Pillar of Braſs or Stone, be erected on, or as near unto the Place where the ſaid Fire ſo unhappily began, as conveniently may be; in perpetual Remembrance thereof:

of: With ſuch Inſcription thereon, as hereafter by the Maior and Court of Aldermen, in that behalf, be directed.

Of the Rebuilding of the City of London ſo Speedily, Subſtantially, and Splendidly effected.

built with- 4 or 5 Years.

NOtwithſtanding the extraordinary Loſſes by the forementioned Fire, the devouring Peſtilence in this City the Year preceding, and the chargeable War with the Dutch at that Time depending; yet, by the King's Grace, the Wiſdom of the Parliament then ſitting at Weſtminſter, the Diligence and Activity of the Lord Maior, Aldermen and Commoners of the ſaid City (who were almoſt the only Loſers by that fatal Accident) it was in the Space of Four or Five Years well nigh rebuilded. Divers Churches, the ſtately Guildhall, many Halls of Companies, and other Publick Edifices; all infinitely more Uniform, more Solid, and more Magnificent than before: So that no City in Europe (nay, ſcarcely in the World) can ſtand in Competition with it, at leaſt in Twenty Particulars; as by a Parallel between It and the moſt eminent of Them, to this Work ſubjoined, will be made to appear.

How the Alterations and Augmentations enjoined; As alſo the Rebuilding of Fifty One Parochial Churches, and the Cathedral of St. Paul, ſhould be accompliſhed.

THE forementioned Alterations and Augmentations, to be made in the Rebuilding of the City of London, being by Act of Parliament enjoined; they took it then into their Conſiderations, By what Means Money might be raiſed for the carrying on of thoſe Works, by them preſcribed and enacted. And in their Seſſion, Anno XIX. Caroli II. Regis, they enacted as followeth.

For the Enabling of the Lord Maior, Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, and their Succeſſors, to perform and accompliſh the Works in this Act mentioned; Be it enacted by the Authority hereof;

1. That for all Sorts of Coals, which from and after the 24th Day of June, 1667, and before the 24th Day of June, 1677, ſhall be imported and brought into the Port of the City of London, or the River of Thames, within the Liberty of the ſaid City of London, upon the ſame River to be ſold by the Chaldron or Tun, there ſhall be paid by way of Impoſition thereupon, (over and beſides all other Impoſitions and Duties, due and payable for any Sort of the ſaid Coals, by virtue of any Law or Statute now in Force) according to the Rates hereafter mentioned. That is to ſay, For ſuch Sorts of Coals as are uſually ſold by the Chaldron, for every Chaldron thereof, containing Thirty ſix Buſhels Wincheſter Meaſure, the Sum of Twelve Pence. And for all ſuch Sorts of Coals as are ſold by the Tun, for every Tun thereof, containing Twenty Hundred Weight, the like Sum of Twelve Pence. Which ſaid Impoſition of Twelve Pence for every Chaldron or Tun of Coals, ſhall, during the Time aforeſaid, be anſwered and paid unto the Maior and Commonalty, and Citizens, or their Deputy or Deputies, by the Maſter, Owner or Owners, or other Perſons taking Charge of the Veſſel, before they ſhall break Bulk, or have a Meter aſſigned for the Meaſuring or Weighing of any Coals aforeſaid. The which Impoſition of Twelve Pence, to be paid at ſuch Place or Places, as by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen ſhall from Time to Time be appointed for the Receipt thereof.

2. That all and every ſuch Sum and Sums of Money, which ſhall be raiſed upon the Receipt of the ſaid Impoſition of Twelve Pence for every Chaldron or Tun of Coals, ſhall in the firſt place be applied and diſpoſed unto, and for the Satisfaction of ſuch Perſons, whoſe Grounds ſhall be taken and employed for the Enlarging of the Streets and narrow Paſſages within the City. And after Satisfaction given for the ſame; the Reſidue ſhall be applied, and diſpoſed unto and for the Satisfaction of ſuch Perſons, whoſe Grounds ſhall be employed for the making of Wharfs or Keys on the North Side of the River of Thames; and upon each Side of the Shore, called by the Name or Names of Bridewell Dock, Fleet Ditch, and Turn-Mill Brook. And alſo for the building and making of ſuch Priſons within the ſaid City, as ſhall be neceſſary for the ſafe Cuſtody and Impriſonment of Felons, and other Malefactors.

Anno XXII. Caroli II. Regis.

But foraſmuch as it doth and will require far greater Sums of Money, to give Satisfaction for the Ground to be taken and employed for the Enlarging of the Streets, by this and the foreſaid Act appointed to be enlarged, and for Publick Market-Places, and other the Publick Uſes and Purpoſes in this Act mentioned: Therefore,

3. For the further Enabling the ſaid Maior, Commonalty and Citizens of the ſaid City, and their Succeſſors, to perform the Works in this and the ſaid Act mentioned; and alſo for the Rebuilding of the Pariſh Churches by this Act appointed; Be it enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That for all Sorts of Coals, which (from and after the Firſt Day of May, 1670, and before the Twenty Ninth Day of September, which ſhall be in the Year of our Lord, 1687) ſhall be imported and brought into the ſaid Port of the City of London, or River of Thames, within the Liberties of the ſaid City, upon the ſaid River; there ſhall be paid, by way of Impoſition thereupon, according to the Rates hereafter mentioned. That is to ſay, For all ſuch Coals as ſhall be there imported and brought in, from and after the ſaid Firſt Day of May, 1670, and before the Twenty Fourth Day of June, 1677, there ſhall be paid for every Chaldron or Tun thereof, Two Shillings, over and beſide the aforeſaid Impoſition of Twelve Pence the Chaldron, or Tun, by the former Act appointed to be paid. —— And for all ſuch Coals which ſhall be there imported and brought in, from and after the 24th Day of June, 1677, and before the ſaid 29th Day of September, 1687, there ſhall be paid for every Chaldron or Tun thereof, Three Shillings. And the ſame ſhall, by virtue of this Act, be collected, levied and paid, in ſuch ſort and manner, in all and every reſpect, as in and by the ſaid Act is limited and appointed, for the Collecting of the Twelve Pence upon the Chaldron or Tun. All which Monies ſo to be received upon Account of the reſpective Impoſitions, or either of them, ſhall from Time to Time be paid into the Receipt of the Chamber of London; and from thence ſhall be iſſued and paid, according to the Direction and Appointment of this preſent Act, and not otherwiſe.

4. And be it further enacted, That all and every Sum and Sums of Money, which ſhall be raiſed upon the Receipt of the ſeveral Impoſitions aforeſaid, ſhall be employed and diſpoſed in Manner and Form following. That is to ſay, Three Fourth Parts of all the Monies, which from and after the Firſt Day of May, 1670, and before the 24th Day of June, 1677, ſhall be raiſed, or payable, upon the Receipt of the aforeſaid Impoſition of Two Shillings for every Chaldron or Tun of Coals; ſhall be employed and diſpoſed of, for and towards the Rebuilding, Erecting or Repairing of the Pariſh Churches, according to ſuch Order and Direction, as by the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Biſhop and Lord Maior of London, or any Two of them, ſhall be given in that behalf. And the ſame ſhall from Time to Time be iſſued out, and paid accordingly. And the other Fourth Part, Reſidue thereof, ſhall be employed for and towards the giving Satisfaction for Grounds, ſet out and employed for the enlarging of Streets, making of Wharfs, Keys, Publick Market Places, and other Publick Uſes, in this and the aforeſaid Act mentioned and appointed.——And that one Moiety of all the Monies, which from and after the ſaid 24th Day of June, 1677, ſhall be raiſed, or payable upon the aforeſaid Impoſition of Three Shillings the Chaldron or Tun, ſhall be employed and diſpoſed, for and towards the Rebuilding, Erecting and Repairing of the Pariſh Churches; by ſuch Order and Direction, and to be iſſued and paid by ſuch Warrant of the ſaid Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Lord Biſhop and Lord Maior of London, for the Time being. And the other Moiety thereof ſhall be employed and diſpoſed, for the giving of Satisfaction for Ground, ſet out and employed as aforeſaid; and ſuch other Publick Uſes and Purpoſes, as in this and the aforeſaid Acts are mentioned and appointed.

5. And be it enacted, That it ſhall and may be lawful for the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Biſhop of London, and Lord Maior of London, or any Two of them, as aforeſaid, to employ or diſpoſe, for and towards the Building and Repairing the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, One Fourth Part of the Money by this Act given and appointed, for the Building, Erecting, or Repairing the Pariſh Churches aforeſaid.

For the avoiding of Suits of Law, and other Differences that might ariſe between Landlords and Tenants, &c. after this General Calamity by the Fire.

FOR the avoiding of ſuch Inconveniencies, which would of Neceſſity ariſe concerning the Repairing and new Building of Houſes, and Payment of Rents; which, if they ſhould not be determined with all Speed, and without Charge, would much obſtruct the Rebuilding of the ſaid City: Wherefore, the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty, by and with the Advice and Conſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, made an Act for the Reconciling of ſuch Differences, entitled,

An Act for Erecting a Judicature, for the Determination of Differences, touching Houſes burned or demoliſhed, by reaſon of the late Fire which happened in London.

Wherein it was enacted;

1. That the Juſtices of the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas, and the Barons of the Coif of the Exchequer, or any Three or more of them, are authoriſed to hear and determine all Differences and Demands whatſoever, which have or may ariſe between Landlords, Proprietors, Tenants, Leſſees, Under-Tenants, or late Occupiers of any of the Buildings, or other Things by the ſaid Fire demoliſhed.

2. For or concerning the Payment, Defalcation, Apportioning, or Abatement of any Rent or Rents, other than Arrears of Rent only due before the firſt Day of September, 1666; or for or touching any Covenant, Condition or Penalty relating thereunto; or for, touching or concerning the Prefixing or Limiting of any Time for ſuch Repairs or new Building; or any Rate or Contribution to be born, or paid thereunto by any Perſon or Perſons, Bodies Politick or Corporate intereſſed in the Premiſes, and all Incidents relating thereunto.

3. That they, without the Formalities of Proceedings in Courts of Law or Equity, ſhall and may, upon the Verdict or Inquiſition of Jurors, Teſtimony of Witneſſes upon Oath, Examination of Perſons intereſſed, or by all or any of the ſaid Ways, or otherwiſe according to their Diſcretions, proceed to the Hearing and Determining of the Demands or Differences between the ſaid Parties concerning the Premiſes. And that the Definitive Order of the ſaid Juſtices and Barons ſhall be final; from which there ſhall be no Appeal, or Review. Nor ſhall any Writ of Error, or Certiorari, lie for the Removal, or Reverſal of the ſame.

4. The ſaid Juſtices and Barons are hereby empowered, where they ſhall think it convenient, to order the Surrendring, Increaſing, Abridging, Ceaſing, Determining, or Charging of any Eſtates in the Premiſes; or to order new or longer Leaſes or Eſtates, not exceeding Forty Years, to be made of any of the Premiſes, by the Proprietors or Owners thereof, or other Perſons intereſſed therein, to any Tenant or Sub-Tenant, or late Occupiers of the ſame; their Heirs, or Aſſigns; at ſuch Rents and Fines, or without any Rent or Fine, as they ſhall think fit.

5. That all Orders made as aforeſaid, according to the Tenors thereof, ſhall be obeyed by all Perſons concerned therein reſpectively; and ſhall conclude and bind them, their Heirs, Succeſſors, Executors, Adminiſtrators and Aſſigns, reſpectively.

6. That upon the Complaint or Requeſt of any Perſon or Perſons concerned, in any of the ſaid Houſes or Buildings, and other the Premiſſes, ſhall iſſue out Notes or Warrants under their Hands, warning the Party or Parties therein named to appear before them at ſuch Time and Place, as in ſuch Note or Notes ſhall be ſpecified; and upon Appearance, or Default of Appearance, the ſaid Juſtices and Barons may proceed to make ſuch finite and definite Orders as aforeſaid.

7. That for the Matters, and according to the Powers herein before mentioned, ſhall be, and ſhall be taken to be a Court of Records: And that the Judgments, and Determinations that ſhall be made between Party and Party, by Authority of this Act, ſhall be recorded in a Book provided for that Purpoſe; which Book, ſo Recorded and Signed, ſhall be placed and intruſted in the Cuſtody of the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the City of London for the time being, to be kept with the Records of the ſaid City, and to remain as a perpetual and ſtanding Record.

8. That none of the ſaid Juſtices and Barons ſhall take any Fee or Reward whatſoever, directly or indirectly, for any Thing to be done by them, by Virtue or Colour of this preſent Act.

9. And for a Reward of the Officers to be employed herein, the ſaid Juſtices and Barons, are to Order and Direct a Table of ſuch reaſonable Fees to be made, as may carry on and effect the Purport and Intent of this Act.

This Act was to continue in force till the laſt Day of December, in the Year of our Lord, 1668, and no longer—— But all Differences in that time not being ended, the former Act was continued till the 29th of September, 1671, and afterwards till the 29th of September 1672.

Rules and Directions to be obſerved in the Rebuilding of the City of London.

FOR the ſpeedy Reſtauration, and for the better Regulation, Uniformity, and Gracefulneſs, of ſuch new Buildings as ſhall be Erected for Habitations ; and to the intent that all Encouragement and Expedition may be given unto, and all Impediments and Obſtructions that may retard and protract the Undertaking, or carrying on a Work ſo neceſſary, and of ſo great Honour and Importance to his Majeſty, this Kingdom, and this City in particular, may be removed ;

Be it therefore Enacted by the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, by and with the Advice and Conſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, That the Rules and Directions here preſcribed be duly obſerved by all Perſons therein concerned.

1. That no Building whatſoever be hereafter erected within the Limits of the ſaid City and Liberties thereof, but ſuch as ſhall be purſuant to ſuch Rules and Orders of Building, add with ſuch Materials as are hereby particularly appointed ; and according to ſuch Scantlings, as are ſet down in a Table in this preſent Act ſpecified : And if any Perſon or Perſons ſhall preſume to build contrary thereunto ; that then, and in ſuch Caſe, the ſaid Houſe ſo irregularly built, ſhall be deemed a common Nuſance, and the Builder thereof ſhall enter into Recognizance, for Abatement and Demoliſhing the ſame in convenient time ; or to amend the ſame according to ſuch Rules and Orders as aforeſaid ; and in default of either, the Offender to be committed to the Common Goal of the City, there to abide, without Bail or Mainprize, till he ſhall have demoliſhed, or otherwiſe amended, the ſame——.

And that ſuch irregular Buildings may be the better prevented, the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, are authoriſed to nominate and appoint diſcreet and intelligent Perſons in the Art of Building to be the Surveyors or Superviſors, to ſee the ſaid Rules and Scantlings well and truly obſerved. Unto which Surveyors or Superviſors, the Maior and Aldermen in their Court of Aldermen, are empowered to adminiſter an Oath upon the Holy Evangeliſts for the true and impartial Execution of their Office in that Behalf.

Four Sorts of Building.

2. That there ſhall be only four Sorts of Buildings and no more ; and that all manner of Houſes ſo to be Erected ſhall be of one of thoſe four Sorts of Building, and no other.

The firſt and leaſt ſort of Houſes fronting By-Streets or Lanes. The ſecond Sort of Houſes fronting Streets or Lanes of Note. The third Sort of Houſes fronting high and principal Streets. The Fourth and laſt, of Manſion Houſes for Merchants, Citizens, or other Perſons of extraordinary Quality, not fronting either of the three former Ways. And the Roofs of each of the firſt three Sorts of Houſes reſpectively ſhall be uniform.

3. That all the Outſides of all Buildings in and about the ſaid City be henceforth made of Brick or Stone, or of Brick and Stone together, except Door Caſes and Window Frames, The Breſt Summers, and other Parts of the firſt Story to the Front, to uſe ſubſtantial Oaken Timber inſtead of Brick or Stone, for conveniency of Shops. And that the ſaid Doors, Breſt Summers, and Window Frames, be ſufficiently diſcharged of the Burthen of the Fabrick, by Arch Work of Brick or Stone, either Streight or Circular.

4. That there ſhall be Party Walls, and Party Peers ſet out equally on either Builder's Ground, to be built upon by the firſt Beginner of ſuch Building : And that convenient Toothing be left in the Front Wall by the ſaid firſt Builder, for the better joining of the next Houſe that ſhall be built to the ſame. And that no Man be permitted to build on the ſaid Party Wall, or on his own contiguous Ground, until he hath fully reimburſed the ſaid firſt Builder the full Moiety of the Charges of the ſaid Party Wall and Peers ; together with Intereſt for the ſame, after the Rate of 6 per Cent. per Annum for forbearance thereof, to be accounted from the beginning of the ſaid firſt Building.

5. That the Houſes of the leaſt ſort of Building, fronting By-Streets or Lanes, ſhall be of two Stories high, beſides Cellars and Garrets ; the Cellars thereof to be Six Foot and a half high The firſt Story Nine Foot high from the Floor to the Cieling ; and the ſecond Story Nine Foot. That all Walls in Front and Rear (ſo high as the firſt Story) be of the full Thickneſs of two Bricks at length ; and upwards to the Garrets of the thickneſs of one Brick and a half ; and the Walls at the eves of the Garrets not to be leſs than one Brick.

6. That the Houſes of the ſecond Sort of Building, fronting Streets and Lanes of Note, and the River of Thames, ſhall conſiſt of three Stories high, beſides Cellars and Garrets. That the Cellars thereof be Six Foot and an half high ; the firſt Story Ten Frot high ; the Second Ten Foot high ; the Third Nine Foot from the Floor to the Cieling ; That all the Walls in Front and Reer, as high as the firſt Story be two Bricks and an half thick ; and upwards, to the Garret Floor, one Brick and half thick ; the thickneſs of the Garret Walls at the diſcretion of the Workman. And alſo, that the Thickneſs of the Party Walls be two Bricks thick ſo high as the firſt Story, and upwards to the Garrets one Brick and an half thick.

7. That the Houſes of the Third Sort of Buildings, fronting the High and Principal Streets, ſhall conſiſt of Four Stories high, beſides Cellars and Garrets. The Firſt Story to contain full Ten Foot, from the Floor to the Cieling : The Second, Ten Foot and an half : The Third, Nine Foot ; and the Fourth, Eight Foot and an half.——That all the Walls in Front and Rear, as high as the Firſt Story, be two Bricks and a half thick ; and from thence upwards to the Garret Floor, one Brick and a half thick. And that the Thickneſs of the Party Walls between every Houſe, be two Bricks thick, ſo high as the Firſt Story ; and thence upwards to the Garrets, of the Thickneſs of one Brick and half.—— The Scantlings for Timber and Stone, to be as in the Table following is expreſſed.

8. That all Houſes of the Fourth Sort of Building, being Manſion Houſes, and of the greateſt Bigneſs, not fronting any of the Streets or Lanes aforeſaid, ſhall bear the ſame Scantlings of Timbers, as in the following Table are ſet down for the ſame; And that the Number of Stories, and the Heights of them be left to the diſcretion of the Workman or Builder, ſo as he exceed not Four Stories.

9. And for the greater Grace and Uniformity of the Buildings in the high and principal Streets, it is Enacted, That all Houſes hereafter to be Erected in any of them ſhall have Balconies Four Foot broad with Rails and Bars of Iron, equally diſtant from the Ground. Every of which Balconies ſhall contain in length two Parts of the Front of the Houſe on which it ſhall be placed, in three Parts to be divided; and the remaining Vacancy of the Front ſhall be ſupplyed with a Pent-Houſe of the Breadth of the Balcony, to be covered with Lead, Slate, or Tile, and to be Cieled with Plaiſtering underneath. And that the Water-falling, as well from the Tops of the ſaid Houſes, as from the ſaid Balconies and Pent-Houſes, be conveyed into the Channels, by Party Pipes on the Sides or Fronts of the ſaid Houſes: And that Pavements under every of the ſaid Balconies and Penthouſes, be made of good and ſufficient broad flat Stone, at the Charge of the Builder.

10. That no Builder of any of the Houſes, fronting any of the high Streets, Streets or Lanes of Note, be permitted to lay his firſt Floor over the Cellar, more than 13 Inches above the ſaid Street, or leſs than Six, with one circular Step to lead up thereunto, to be placed without the Building. And that no Trap Doors, or open Grates, be in any wiſe ſuffered to be made into any ſuch Cellar or Warehouſe, without the Foundations of the Front; but that all Lights to be made into any of them be henceforth made upright, and not otherwiſe. And that no Bulks, Jetties, Windows, Poſts, Seats, or any Thing of like Sort, ſhall be made or erected, in any Streets, Lanes, or By-Lanes, to extend beyond the ancient Foundation of Houſes. Nor that any Houſe be ſet farther into the Street than the ancient Foundation; ſaving only, that in the high and principal Streets, it ſhall be lawful for the Inhabitants, to ſuffer their Stall Boards (when their Shop Windows are ſet open) to turn over and extend Eleven Inches, and no more from the Foundation of their Houſes into the Streets, for the better conveniency of their Shop Windows.

Acts of Common Council. J. S.

There was further, for the Conveniency and Beauty of the Buildings of the City, an Order of Common Council made April 29. 1667. Which was laid before the King and Council and by them approved. And is as followeth.

At the Court at Whitehall the Eighth of May 1667.
Preſent, The King's moſt Excellent Majeſty,

His Royal Highneſs the Duke of YORK,
Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury,
Lord Chancellor,
Lord Privy-Seal,
Duke of Albemarle,
Marqueſs of Dorcheſter,
Lord Chamberlain,
Earl of Bridgwater,
Earl of Berkſhire,
Earl of Bathe,
Earl of Carliſle,
Earl of Craven,
Earl of Lauderdale,
Earl of Middleton,
Lord Arlington,
Lord Aſhley,
Mr. Comptroller,
Mr. Secretary Morice,
Mr. Chancellor of the Dutchy,
Sir William Coventry.

An ORDER made by the Lord Maior, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, of the 29. of April laſt paſt, in the enſuing Words, (viz.)

For Ornament and Convenience.

IT is Ordered, that the Surveyors take ſpecial care, that the Breaſt-Summers of all Houſes do range of an equal height, Houſe with Houſe, ſo far as ſhall be convenient, and there to make Breaks by their Directions.

And that they do encourage and give Directions to all Builders for Ornament ſake, that the Ornaments and Projections of the Front-Buildings be of rubbed Bricks; and that all the naked part of the Walls may be done of rough Bricks neatly wrought, or all rubbed, at the Diſcretion of the Builder. or that the Builders may otherwiſe inrich their Fronts as they pleaſe.

That if any Perſon or Perſons ſhall deſire in any Street or Lane of Note to Build on each ſide of the Street or Lane (oppoſite one to the other) ſix or more Houſes of the Third Rate, or that the upper Rooms or Garrets may be flat Roofs encompaſſed with Battlements of Bricks covered with Stone, or Table ends, or Rails, and Banniſters of Iron or Stone, or to vary their Roofs for the greater Ornament of Building; The Surveyors, or one of them, ſhall certify their Opinions therein to the Committee for Rebuilding, who ſhall have liberty to give leave for the ſame, if they ſee Cauſe.

That in all the Streets no Sign-poſts ſhall hang croſs, but the Signs ſhall be fixed againſt the Balconies, or ſome other convenient Part of the Side of the Houſe.

It is Ordered that a Poſtern ſhall be made on the North-ſide of Newgate for Conveniency of Foot-paſſengers; and that Holborn-Bridge ſhall be enlarged to run ſtraight on a bevil Line from the Timber-Houſe on the North-ſide thereof, known by the Sign of the Cock, to the Front of the Buildings at the Swan Inn on the ſaid North-ſide of Holborn-hill.

Foraſmuch as it is Provided in the late Act for Rebuilding, That the Surveyors ſhall take care for the equal ſetting out of all Party-Walls and Peers, and no Perſon be permitted to build till that be done; therefore, for prevention of any Exaction in the taking of ſuch Surveys, and of all Quarrels and Contentions that may ariſe between the Builders, It is Ordered, that no Builder ſhall lay his Foundation, until the Surveyors, or one of them, (according to the Act) ſhall view it, and ſee the Party-Walls and Peers equally ſet out, and that all Perſons obſerve the Surveyors Directions concerning the Superſtructure to be erected over the ſaid Foundation.

And that for the defraying that, and all other incident Charges of Meaſuring, Staking out, taking the Level, and Surveying the Streets and Ground, each Builder, before he lay his Foundation, or ſuch Survey ſhall be taken, do repair to the Chamber of London, and there enter his Name, with the Place where his Building is to be ſet out, and to pay to the Chamberlain the Sum of Six Shillings eight Pence for every Foundation to be re-built. For which Mr. Chamberlain ſhall give Acquittances: upon Receipt of which Acquittances the Surveyors ſhall proceed to ſet out ſuch Perſons Foundations.

And it is Ordered, That all Perſons who have already laid any Foundations, ſhall forthwith pay into the Chamber of London Six Shilling Eight Pence for every Foundation.

And this Court is conſenting, and deſirous that all ſtreight and narrow Paſſages, which ſhall be found convenient for common Benefit and Accommodation, and ſhall receive his Majeſties Order and Approbation, ſhall and may be enlarged and made Wider, and otherwiſe Altered, before the 20*th* Day of May, now next enſuing, as ſhall be fitting for the Beauty, Ornament, and Conveniency thereof, and ſtaked and ſet out accordingly.

Several late Inhabitants of Fleetſtreet, intending to Re-build their Houſes which did formerly ſtand backward of other Foundations near adjoyning, and deſiring liberty to advance their Houſes, that the whole Front may run on a ſtraight Line; the Committee did agree to the ſame, if the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of England and the other Lords ſhall approve thereof, and procure his Majeſties Approbation to the ſame: and the Committee do deſire liberty may be given for other Perſons in other Places, where it ſhall be found convenient.

And it is Ordered, That the Committee for Re-building, do preſent the Particulars aforeſaid to the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of England and the other Lords, and that the ſame (if they receive his Majeſties Approbation) ſhall be forthwith Printed and Publiſhed.

‘Which being this day repreſented to the Board by the Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of England, the ſame was allowed and approved of; and it was Ordered that the ſame be punctually obſerved in every Part thereof. And all Perſons concerned are required and commanded to yield due obedience and conform themſelves thereunto. And that the ſaid Order be forthwith Printed and Publiſhed.

Act of Common Council for Fires.
J. S.

And for the better preventing and ſuppreſſing any Fires for the Time to come, happening within the City of London and Liberties thereof, was this good Act of Common Council made, Anno 1667. Sir William Peake Kt. Maior. and reprinted 1677.

Commune Concilium tent' in Camera Guilhald' Civitatis London, die Veneris, decimo quinto die Novembris, Anno Domini 1667. Annoque Regni Domini noſtri CAROLI Secundi, Dei Gratia, Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ & Hiberniæ Regis, Fidei Defenſoris, &c. decimo nono, coram Willielmo Peak Milite, Majore Civitatis London, Thoma Aleyn Milite & Baronetto, Aldermanno, Johanne Laurence, Thoma Bloudworth, Willielmo Bolton, Willelmo Turner, Willielmo Hooker, Militibus, Aldermannis, Franciſco Aſty Armigero, Aldermanno, ac Dionyſio Gauden & Thoma Davies Militibus, Aldermannis, & Vicecomitibus ejuſdem Civitat', nec non majore parte Communiariorum de Communi Concilio ejuſdem Civitat' tunc & ibidem aſſemblat'.

WHereas the late fierce and outragious Fire which happened in this City (continuing violently, to the great Aſtoniſhment of all Beholders, more than the Space of four Days and four Nights) burnt, deſtroyed and conſumed the greateſt Part of the Churches and Dwelling-houſes, rendring very many of the Inhabitants calamitous, and much impoveriſhed by the great Loſſes they ſuſtained, and is by all juſtly reſented as a moſt ſad and diſmal Judgment of Heaven; For the Prevention, avoiding and ſuppreſſing (as much as human Prudence is capable of) the like deplorable (and ſtill too too viſible) Events, and dreadful Danger of Fire for the future within this City, and Liberties thereof, Be it ordained, enacted and eſtabliſhed by the Right Honourable the Lord Maior, the Aldermen his Brethren, and the Commons in this Common-Council aſſembled, and by the Authority of the ſame, in manner and form following; that is to ſay,

I. That the City, and the Liberties thereof, ſhall be divided and appointed into four equal Parts or Quarters; and the Eaſt Part or Quarter to contain theſe Wards following, viz. Portſoken, Aldgate, Tower, Billinſgate, Bridge, Langborn, and Lime Street. The Weſt Part or Quarter to contain Farringdon within, Farringdon without, Caſtle Baynard, Cheapſide, and Alderſgate. The North Part or Quarter to contain Cornhil, Broad-ſtreet, Colemanſtreet, Baſſiſhaw, Biſhopſgate, and Cripplegate. And the South Part or Quarter to contain Queenhith, Bread-ſtreet, Vintry, Cordwainer, Dowgate, Walbrook, and Candlewickſtreet.

II. Item, That every of the ſaid Quarters ſhall be furniſhed and provided at or before the Feaſt of the Birth of our Lord God next enſuing, of Eight hundred Leather Buckets, Fifty Ladders, viz. Ten, forty two Foot long; Ten, thirty Foot long; Ten, twenty Foot long; Ten, ſixteen Foot long; and Ten, twelve Foot long; as alſo of ſo many Hand-Squirts of Braſs, as will furniſh two for every Pariſh, four and twenty Pickax Sledges, and forty Shod Shovels.

III. Item, That every one of the Twelve Companies provide and keep in readineſs Thirty Buckets, One Engine, Six Pickax Sledges, Three Ladders, and Two Hand Squirts of Braſs.

IV. Item, That all the other inferior Companies provide and keep in readineſs Buckets and Engines, proportionable to their Abilities. Of which thoſe leaſt able, to provide portable Engines to carry up Stairs into any Rooms or Tops of Houſes. The Number of which Buckets and Engines to be from time to time preſcribed and allotted by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermens Direction.

V. Item, That every Alderman who hath paſſed the Office of Shrievalty, provide Four and twenty Buckets, and One Hand Squirt of Braſs. And all thoſe who have not been Sheriffs, Twelve Buckets and One Hand Squirt of Braſs, to be kept in their reſpective Dwellings. And all other principal Citizens and Inhabitants, and every other Perſon, being a Subſidy Man, or of the Degree of a Subſidy Man, ſhall provide and keep in their Houſes a certain Number of Buckets, according to their Quality.

VI. Item, That the ſeveral Inhabitants and Furniture of each reſpective Quarter ſhall remain and abide within their own Quarters, and not go out farther; excepting only ſuch ſerviceable Perſons of other Quarters fit to take Pains in that behalf: who may be called to yield their Help as need ſhall require; and none other Perſons or Furniture, without ſpecial Order of the Lord Maior and Sheriffs for the Time being.

A Bellman.

VII. Item, It is farther ordained by the Authority aforeſaid, that in every of the ſaid Quarters or Parts of this City, by the Advice of the Aldermen and Common Council of each ſeveral Ward within that Quarter, there ſhall be choſen, retained, and appointed for each Ward, One honeſt and ſufficient Perſon, dwelling within the ſame, to be Bellman there. Who ſhall from henceforth every Night, from the Feaſt of St. Michael, until the Annunciation of St. Mary, diligently walk up and down within the ſame Ward, from Ten of the Clock in the Night, till Five of the Clock next Morning. Their Wages or Salaries to be levied within their reſpective Wards, according as the ſame ſhall be aſſeſſed by the Common Council of the ſame Ward, or the greateſt Part of them.

VIII. Item, That every Houſholder, upon any Cry of Fire, ſhall place a ſufficient Man at his Door well armed, and hang out a Light at his Door, if in the Night-time; upon default whereof, every Party offending ſhall forfeit Twenty Shillings.

IX. Item, That every Houſholder ſhall, during the Time of any Fire, have Water in a Veſſel ready at his Door to quench and ſuppreſs all farther Increaſe of the Fire.

A noted Bell to be rung.

X. Item. That in every of the ſaid Four Quarters or Parts of this City, a noted Bell be rung from Lady-Day to Michaelmas at Ten of the Clock every Night, and at Five of the Clock every Morning; and from Michaelmas to Lady Day, at Eight of the Clock every Night, and at Seven of the Clock every Morning. At which reſpective Hours the Watch ſhall punctually ſit and riſe, who as ſoon as they are met together, one out of every Watch ſhall be ſent the Rounds into every Part of the Ward. And at his Return another ſhall be ſent out, and ſo ſucceſſively all Night long without Intermiſſion, for Prevention of Fire, Robbing, or other Inconvenience.

XI. Item, That every Inhabitant prepare ſome ſecure Place in their Dwellings (not under or near any Staircaſe) to lay in their Seacoal-Aſhes, Embers, or any other ſort of Fire-Aſhes; and that the ſaid Aſhes be quenched with Water every Night before they go to Bed. And that all Conſtables make Enquiry of the Security of Hearths, Ovens, and Stoves, and Places for laying Fire-Aſhes in, twice every Year.

XII. Item, That Plugs be put into the Pipes in the moſt convenient Places of every Street, whereof all Inhabitants may take Notice; that breaking of the Pipes in diſorderly manner may be avoided.

XIII. Item, That as many Wells as can be found may be provided in every Street, with Pumps placed conveniently for furniſhing of Water, eſpecially in froſty Weather, when other Water may be ſcarce.

XIV. Item, That the Lord Maior and Sheriffs, as alſo the Deputies and Common Council-Men of ſuch Ward where any Fire ſhall happen, have ſpeedy Notice thereof by ſeveral Meſſengers to be diſpatched from the Conſtables upon the firſt Diſcovery.

XV. Item, That at all ſuch times the Lord Maior be attended with all his Officers, with the Marſhals and all their Men, as alſo the City Workmen, and their Labourers, the Bridge Maſter, with the Officers and Workmen, and their Labourers: Who are all upon Notice of any Fire forthwith to repair to the Lord Maior, and to obſerve ſuch Directions as ſhall be given them; the Sheriffs alſo to be attended with all their Officers, upon Pain to them of forfeiting Three Pounds in default of ſuch their Attendance.

XVI. Item, That the ſeveral Companies of Carpenters, Bricklayers, Plaiſterers, Painters, Maſons, Smiths, Plumbers, and Paviers, do yearly for each Company elect two Maſter-Workmen, four Journeymen, eight Apprentices, and ſixteen Labourers, to be ready upon all occaſions of Fire to attend the Lord Maior and Sheriffs, for quenching the ſame.

XVII. Item, That all Workmen and Labourers belonging to any publick Water-Works within the City, the Seacoal-Meeters, Porters, Blackwel-Hall Porters, Leadenhall Porters, Ticket-Porters, and Package-Porters, do conſtantly attend the Lord Maior and Sheriffs in ſuch Services. And that a Liſt of all the Names of the aforementioned Perſons, with the Places of their Abode, be brought yearly in a Table to the Lord Maior Elect upon the Firſt Day of October, to be placed in the Hall of the ſaid Lord Maior to publick View. And that henceforth the Admittances of all ſuch Perſons may be upon the ſame Condition.

XVIII. Item, That all Perſons, unleſs ſuch as are employed or allowed by the Lord Maior or Sheriffs, Aldermen, Deputies, or Common Council-Men, do keep (during the time of any Fire) within their own Dwellings, until they are ſummoned to give their Aid; that ſo Diſorder and Confuſion in the Streets may be prevented.

XIX. Item, That all the Conſtables and Watchmen of the Ward where any Fire happens, aſſemble immediately at ſuch a Place, and there attend on the Lord Maior and Sheriffs, and follow their Directions.

XX. Item, That all Brokers on the Exchange (according to their Obligation at their Admittance) do attend, in order to take care for ſuch Goods and Houſhold-ſtuff as may be removed.

XXI. Item, That yearly there be choſen ſome able Citizen and ſkilful Engineer, to attend the Lord Maior and Sheriffs, or any of them, upon ſuch Accident. Who, by their Advice, is to give his Aſſiſtance, and to blow up by their Direction ſuch Houſes, whereby the Increaſe of the Fire may be moſt probably prevented; and that Labourers be appointed to attend ſuch Engineer.

XXII. Item, That the Lord Maior, Aldermen and Sheriffs, Deputies, Common Council-Men, Engineer, and all Perſons appointed and required by the Lord Maior and Sheriffs, to be aiding in ſuppreſſing and extinguiſhing the Fire, by blowing up, or pulling down Houſes, ſhall be indemnified by this Court.

XXIII. Item, That all Perſons whoſe Houſes ſhall be blown up, or otherwiſe demoliſhed, for the Prevention of the Increaſe of Fire, ſhall have ſuch Damages as the Common Council ſhall award; and that all Perſons labouring therein ſhall be awarded, as by Order of the Court of Aldermen ſhall be appointed; and that a Rate be laid by the Common Council on the remaining Houſes of the City and Liberties, for the ſatisfying thereof.

XXIV. Item, That once a Quarter the Deputy and Common Council of every Ward return Certificates to the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, of the Numbers and Condition of their Buckets, Engines, Ladders, and all other Neceſſaries of that nature. And the Engineer to examine the ſame: that on all Occaſions they may be found in readineſs; and that the Certificates of Michaelmas Quarter be returned as well to the Lord Maior Elect, as to the Lord Maior.

XXV. Item, That ſuch Quantities of Powder as ſhall be thought fit by the Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen, ſhall be provided by the ſeveral Wards, and the ſeveral Companies of this City reſpectively, and laid up in ſuch convenient Places as the ſaid Lord Maior and Court of Aldermen ſhall from time to time direct and appoint; and that the principal Engineer make Trial of all ſuch Powder, that being ſatisfied of the Strength and Goodneſs thereof, he may the better uſe it accordingly.

XXVI. Item, That no Perſon whatſoever be henceforth permitted at any time to make, or cauſe to be made any ſort of Fire-works; or to fire, or cauſe to be fired any ſuch Fire-works, within the City or Liberties thereof; except ſuch Perſons only as ſhall be thereunto appointed by his Majeſty, or any lawful Authority under him.

XXVII. Item, That no Gunpowder be kept within the Walls of the City (except as aforeſaid) but in ſuch ſecure Places as ſhall be allowed and approved by the Court of Aldermen.

XXVIII. That no Perſon lay Hemp, Flax, Wax, Gunpowder, Pitch, Tar, Brimſtone, Roſin, or the like combuſtible Commodities, in any Cellar, Warehouſe, or other Place on that ſide next the Street, which by the ſhaking of Links, Torches, or caſting in of other Fire at the Windows next the Street, may be in danger of ſuch Fire.

And it is farther enacted and ordained by the Authority aforeſaid, that all and ſingular the Pains, Penalties and Forfeitures, which ſhall be forfeited or incurred by virtue of this Act, ſhall be obtained, levied and recovered, either by Action of Debt, Bill, Plaint, or Information, in the Name of the Chamberlain of the ſaid City for the Time being, in the King's Majeſty's Court holden in the Chamber of the Guild Hall of the ſaid City, before the Lord Maior and Aldermen of the ſaid City for the Time being. In which no Eſſoign, Protection, or Wager of Law, ſhall be admitted or allowed for the Defendant. And the Chamberlain of the ſaid City for the Time being, in all Suits to be proſecuted by virtue of this Act againſt any Offender or Offenders, ſhall recover the ordinary Coſts of Suit, to be expended in or about the Proſecution of them, or any of them. And that all ſuch Pains, Penalties and Forfeitures (the Charges of Suit for Recovery thereof being firſt deducted) ſhall be divided into two equal Parts, one Moiety whereof to be paid unto the Treaſurer of Chriſt's Hoſpital for the Time being, to be employed toward the Maintenance of the poor Children harboured and kept in the ſaid Hoſpital; and the other Moiety to him or them that will ſue for the ſame, any other Act or Ordinance to the contrary thereof notwithſtanding.

AVERY.

The City propounds to inſure Houſes from Fire.

And as the Government of London had taken the beſt Orders they could for the preventing and ſuppreſſing of Fires; ſo in the Year 1681, they ſet themſelves upon contriving the Inſurance of Houſes in caſe of Fire. At a Meeting of the Maior, Aldermen, and Commons of the City, they declared how they had for many Years under their Conſideration the better ſecuring and inſuring the Inhabitants of this City and Liberties from dangerous Accidents happening by Fire; and now were reſolved forthwith to engage a ſufficient Fund, and undoubted Security, by the Chamber, in Lands and good Ground Rents, for the Performance thereof. And that a Committee, thereunto appointed, ſhould meet from Day to Day in the Guildhall, every Afternoon, from Three to Six, to perfect the ſame Undertaking; to the good Satisfaction of all Perſons, both Citizens and others, that have, or ſhall have Intereſt in any Building there.

This Notice was publiſhed in Print; being dated at Guildhall, the 15th of October 1681.

A Fund of 100000 l. to be ſettled for it.

Purſuant to this, at a Common Council, Sir John Moore Maior, November 16. 1681. it was agreed, That Books ſhould be prepared by the Firſt of December following, and lodged in the Chamber of London, for Receiving and Entring Subſcriptions: And that Lands and Ground Rents belonging to the City, to the Value of One Hundred Thouſand Pounds, ſhould be forthwith ſettled as a Fund, to enſure ſuch Houſes as ſhould be ſubſcribed for. And that hereafter, as Subſcriptions ſhould be made, a further additional Fund, by the Præmium which ſhould be received, ſhould be made. The Præmium for Enſuring Brick Houſes, to be 4 l. per Cent.; and for Timber Houſes, 8 l. per Cent.

But this would not take; perhaps, becauſe the Credit of the City at this Time was but low.

The Puniſhments of Servants, by whoſe Careleſneſs Fires happen.

Theſe ſad Accidents in the City by Fire, occaſioned oftentimes by the Negligence of Servants taking Tobacco, or not putting out their Candles, or putting Live Embers in dangerous Places, or otherwiſe; moved the Parliament, in the Seventh Year of Queen Anne, to make an Act; wherein was a Clauſe for the Puniſhment of ſuch Servants. And by an Act of Common Council, Sir William Withers Maior, it was thought fit to be printed and made publick, and to be ſent into all the Wards of the City; that all Perſons whatſoever might be the better acquainted with it. And was as followeth.

Martis, viij° Die Junij, Anno Dom. 1708.
Annoque Regni Reginæ ANNÆ, Magnæ Britanniæ, &c. Septimo.

‘IT is this Day ordered by this Court, That the Clauſe relating to Servants in a late Act of Parliament, entituled, An Act for the better Preventing Miſchiefs that may happen by Fire, be forthwith Printed, and ſent into the ſeveral Wards of this City, and by the Beadles delivered to every Houſekeeper; that all Servants may be acquainted with the ſame, and know the Penalties therein contained: Which Clauſe hereafter follows; Viz.

“AND WHEREAS Fires often happen by the Negligence and Careleſneſs of Servants, Be it therefore enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if any Menial, or other Servant or Servants, through Negligence or Careleſneſs, ſhall Fire, or cauſe to be Fired, any Dwelling Houſe, or Out-Houſe or Houſes; ſuch Servant or Servants, being thereof Lawfully Convicted, by the Oath of one or more credible Witneſſes, made before Two or more of Her Majeſties Juſtices of the Peace, ſhall Forfeit and Pay the Sum of One Hundred Pounds, unto the Churchwardens of ſuch Pariſh where ſuch Fire ſhall happen; to be diſtributed amongſt the Sufferers by ſuch Fire, in ſuch Proportions as to the ſaid Churchwardens ſhall ſeem juſt. And in caſe of Default, or Refuſal to pay the ſame immediately after ſuch Conviction; the ſame being lawfully demanded by the ſaid Churchwardens; That then, and in ſuch Caſe, ſuch Servant or Servants ſhall, by Warrant under the Hand of Two or more of Her Majeſties Juſtices of the Peace, be committed to ſome Workhouſe, or Houſe of Correction, as the ſaid Juſtices ſhall think fit, for the Space of Eighteen Months; there to be kept to hard Labour.

Engines to be kept in every Pariſh.

A Statute was made, 7. Regin. Annæ, Cap. 17. for Preventing of Fires; That Engines ſhould be provided and kept in every Pariſh, and Stockblocks, and Fire Cocks, and other Implements and Materials for that Uſe. But that if the Veſtries within the Weekly Bills of Mortality, ſhall think it neceſſary to have more than one great Engine, or Hand Engine, they may provide it at the Pariſh Charge, by Aſſeſſment to be made.

Party Walls.

And concerning Party Walls, in the ſame Statute it was enacted, That they be wholly of Brick or Stone, excepting the Houſes built upon London Bridge. And that all Houſes to be built on old or new Foundations, within the Bills of Mortality, except on London Bridge, and on the River Thames below Bridge, ſhall have Party Walls between Houſe and Houſe, wholly of Brick or Stone; except Door Caſes, Windows, Lentils, &c.

All Party Walls to be built Nine Inches on each Man's Ground, &c.

The Splendor and Advantages to which the City is now advanced, tho' by means of that ſad Providence, Dr. Woodward, of Greſham College, (excellently ſkilled in Roman and Ancient Learning, as well as in his own Science of Phyſick) hath expreſſed in a private Letter to Sir Chriſtopher Wren; ‘That the Fire of London, however diſaſtrous it might be to the then Inhabitants, had proved infinitely Beneficial to their Poſterity, and to the Increaſe and vaſt Improvement, as well of the Riches and Opulency, as of the Buildings. And how by the means of the common Sewers, and other like Contrivances, ſuch Proviſion was made for Sweetneſs, for Cleanneſs, and for Salubrity; that it is not only the Fineſt and Pleaſanteſt, but the moſt Healthy City in the World. Inſomuch that for the Plague, and other infectious Diſtempers, with which it was formerly ſo frequently annoyed; and by which ſo great Numbers of the Inhabitants were taken off, but the very Year before the Fire, (viz. Anno 1665) an Experience of above Forty Years ſince hath ſhewn it ſo wholly freed from, that he thought it probable it was no longer obnoxious to, or ever again likely to be infeſted by thoſe ſo fatal and malicious Maladies.

A Tranſition to divers old Cuſtoms and Uſages.

J. S.

BY way of Appendix to this Firſt Book, here ſhall be added ſome other Things, that will afford a further Light into the Conſtitution and Practices of this City, in ancient Times: Some whereof Fitzſtephen, a Writer in the Reign of King Henry II. hath taken notice of. As, In what Streets and Parts of the City, the ſeveral Citizens had their Shops, and uſed their Trades. Next, From their Buſineſs and Employment, to deſcend to their Sports and Paſtimes, wherein, in thoſe Times, they exerciſed themſelves. And becauſe herein many Exorbitances often happened, therefore Watches were appointed. Some Things ſhall be ſhewn concerning thoſe Watches. And, Laſtly, The Memory of many brave Citizens ſhall be revived, and their Noble and right Chriſtian Acts be mentioned, for their Honour, and the Imitation of Poſterity.

Trades and Merchandiſe.

And firſt, Concerning the ſeveral Streets and Places appropriated for each Trade and Merchandize. Under which, ſome other Occaſional Matters will fall in, from the Relation of Fitzſtephen, concerning the Orders and Cuſtoms of this City in old Time.]

Men of all Trades in diſtinct Places.

Fitzſtephen ſaith as followeth. ‘Men of all Trades, Sellers of all Sorts of Wares, Labourers in every Work, every Morning are in their diſtinct and ſeveral Places.

Wine in Ships, and Wine in Taverns.

Cooks Row in Thamesſtreet.

‘Furthermore, in London, upon the River ſide, between the Wine in Ships, and the Wine to be ſold in Taverns, is a common Cookery, or Cooks Row; where daily, for the Seaſon of the Year, Men might have Meat, roaſt, ſod, or fryed: Fiſh, Fleſh, Fowls, fit for Rich and Poor.

‘If any come ſiddenly to any Citizen from afar, weary, and not willing to tarry till the Meat be bought and dreſſed; while the Servant bringeth Water for his Maſter's Hands, and fetcheth Bread, he ſhall have immediately (from the River ſide) all Viands whatſoever he deſireth.

‘What Multitude ſoever, either of Soldiers, or Strangers, do come to the City; whatſoever Hour, Day or Night, according to their Pleaſures, may refreſh themſelves. And they which delight in Delicateneſs, may be ſatisfied with as delicate Diſhes there, as may be found elſewhere.

‘And this Cooks Row is very neceſſary to the City: And, according to Plato and Gorgias, Next to Phyſick, is the Office of Cooks, as Part of a City.

Smithfield a plain ſmooth Ground, ſo called from Smeth, or Smethie. Market for Horſes and other Cattle.

‘Without one of the Gates is a ſmooth [or Smethe] Field, both in Name and Deed; where every Friday, unleſs it be a ſolemn bidden Holy-day, is a notable Shew of Horſes to be ſold. Earls, Barons, Knights and Citizens, repair thither to ſee, or to buy. There may you of Pleaſure ſee Amblers, pacing it delicately. There may you ſee Trotters, fit for Men of Arms, ſetting more hardly. There may you have notable young Horſes, not yet broken: May you have ſtrong Steeds, well limbed Geldings, which the Buyers do eſpecially regard for Pace and Swiftneſs. The Boys which ride theſe Horſes, ſometime Two, ſometime Three, do run Races for Wagers; with a Deſire of Praiſe, or Hope of Victory.

‘In another Part of that Field are to be ſold, all Implements of Husbandry, as alſo fat Swine, Milch Kine, Sheep and Oxen. There ſtand alſo Mares and Horſes, fit for Ploughs and Teams, with their young Colts by them.

Merchants of all Nations traded at this City, and had their ſeveral Keys and Wharfs.

‘At this City, Merchant Strangers of all Nations had their Keys and Wharfs. The Arabians ſent Gold; the Sabeans, Spice and Frankincenſe; the Scythians, Armour: Babylon, Oyl; India, Purple Garments: Egypt, precious Stones: Norway and Ruſſia, Ambergreaſe and Sables; and the Frenchmen, Wine.

The Author's Opinion of this City; the Antiquity thereof.

‘According to the Truth of Chronicles, this City is ancienter than Rome; built by the ancient Trojans, and by Brute, before that was built by Romulus and Remus; and therefore uſeth the ancient Cuſtoms of Rome.

This City divided into Wards, more than 400 Years ſince; and alſo had then both Aldermen and Sheriffs.

‘This City, even as Rome, is divided into Wards. It hath yearly Sheriffs, inſtead of Conſuls. It hath the Dignity of Senators, in Aldermen. It hath Under-Officers, Common Sewers, and Conduits in Streets. According to the Quality of Cauſes, it hath General Courts and Aſſemblies upon appointed Days.

Cuſtoms of London.

‘I do not think that there is any City, wherein are better Cuſtoms, in Frequenting the Churches, in Serving God, in Keeping Holydays, in Giving Alms, in Entertaining Strangers, in Solemnizing Marriages, in Furniſhing Banquets, Celebrating Funerals, and Burying dead Bodies.

Plagues of London, Quaffing and Fire.

‘The only Plagues of London, is immoderate Quaffing among the fooliſh Sort, and often Caſualties by Fire.

Biſhops, Abbots, &c. had their Houſes here.

‘Moſt Part of the Biſhops, Abbots, and Great Lords of the Land, have Houſes there; whereunto they reſort, and beſtow much, when they are called to Parliament by the King, or to Synods by their Metropolitan, or otherwiſe by their private Buſineſs.’

Thus far Fitzſtephen, of the Eſtate of theſe Things in his Time. Whereunto may be added the preſent; by Comparing whereof, the Alteration will eaſily appear.

Changes ſince Fitzſtephen's Time.

Men of Trades, and Sellers of Wares in this City, have oftentimes ſince changed their Places, as they have found their beſt Advantage. For whereas Mercers and Haberdaſhers uſed wholly then to keep their Shops in Weſt Cheap; of later Time, they held them on London Bridge, where partly they do yet remain.

The Goldſmiths of Gutherons Lane, and the Old Exchange, are now (for the moſt part) removed into the South ſide of Weſt Cheap.

The Pepperers and Grocers, of Soper Lane, are now in Bucklersbury, and other Places, diſperſed.

The Drapers, of Lombardſtreet, and of Cornhill, are ſeated in Candlewick-ſtreet, and Watling-ſtreet.

The Skinners, from St. Mary Pellipers, or at the Axe, into Budge-Row and Walbrook.

The Stock Fiſhmongers, in Thames-ſtreet. Wet Fiſhmongers, in Knight-riders-ſtreet, and Bridge-ſtreet.

The Ironmongers, of Ironmongers Lane, and Old Jury, into Thames-ſtreet.

The Vintners, from the Vinetree, into divers Places.

But the Brewers (for the moſt part) remain near to the friendly Water of Thames.

The Butchers, in Eaſt Cheap, and St. Nicholas Shambles, and the Stocks Market.

The Hoſiers, (of old time) in Hoſier Lane, near unto Smithfield, are ſince removed into Cordwainer Street, the upper Part thereof, by Bow Church; and laſt of all, into Burchovers Lane, by Cornhill.

The Shoemakers and Curriors, of Cordwainer Street, removed, the one to St. Martins Le Grand, the other to London Wall, near to Moorgate.

The Founders remain by themſelves in Lothbury.

The Cooks, or Taſtelars, (for the more part) in Thames-ſtreet; the others diſperſed into divers Parts.

The Poulters, of late, removed out of the Poultry, betwixt the Stocks and the great Conduit in Cheap, into Graſs Street, and St. Nicholas Shambles.

Bowyers, from Bowyers Row, by Ludgate, into divers Parts; and almoſt worn out with the Fletchers.

The Pater-noſter Bead Makers, and Text Writers, are gone out of Pater-noſter Row, and are called Stationers of Paul's Churchyard.

The Patten Makers, of St. Margaret Pattens Lane, clean worn out.

Labourers, every Work-day are to be found in Cheap, about Sopers Lane End.

Horſe-Courſers, and Sellers of Oxen, Sheep, Swine, and ſuch like, remain in their old Market of Smithfield, &c.

Merchants of all Nations

That Merchants of all Nations had their Keys and Wharfs at this City, whereunto they brought their Merchandiſes, before, and in the Reign of Henry the Second, mine Author wrote (of his own Knowledge) to be true; though for the Antiquity of the City, he took the common Opinion.

Antiquity of the Government.

Alſo, That this City was (in his Time, and before) divided into Wards; had yearly Sheriffs and Aldermen, General Courts and Aſſemblies, and ſuch like Notes by him ſet down, in Commendation of the Citizens, (whereof there is no queſtion:) He wrote likewiſe of his own Experience; as being born and brought up amongſt them.

Antiquity of Merchandiſe in London.

Tho. Clifford.

And [to confirm his Opinion] concerning Merchandiſes then hither tranſported, whereof haply may be ſome Argument; Thomas Clifford (before Fitzſtephen's Time) writing of King Edward the Confeſſor, ſaith to this Effect. 'King Edward, 'intending to make his Sepulchre at Weſtminſter, 'for that it was near to the famous City of London, and the River of Thames, which brought 'in all Kinds of Merchandiſes from all Parts of 'the World, &c.'

W. Malmeſb.

And William of Malmſbury, that lived in the Reigns of William the Firſt and Second, Henry the Firſt, and King Stephen, calleth this a Noble City, full of wealthy Citizens; frequented with the Trade of Merchandiſes from all Parts of the World.

Alſo I read in divers Records, That (in old Time) no Woad was ſtowed or harboured in this City; but all was preſently ſold in the Ships; except by Licenſe purchaſed of the Sheriffs. Till of more later Time, to wit in the Year 1236, Andrew Bokerell, being Maior, by Aſſent of the principal Citizens, the Merchants of Amiens, Nele and Corby, purchaſed Letters, enſealed with the Common Seal of the City, That they, when they come, might harbour their Woads; and therefore ſhould give the Maior, every Year, 50 Marks Sterling. And the ſame Year they gave an Hundred Pound, toward Conveying of Water from Tyburn to this City.

Merchants Strangers privileged.

Alſo the Merchants of Normandy made Fine, for Licenſe to harbour their Woads; till it was otherwiſe provided, in the Year 1263; Thomas Fitz Thomas being Maior, &c. Which proveth, That then (as before) they were here, among other Nations, privileged.

It followeth in Fitzſtephen, That the Plagues of London (in that Time) were, Immoderate Quaffing among Fools, and often Caſualties by Fire.

Quaffing an ancient Vice here.

For the firſt, to wit of Quaffing, it continueth as afore, or rather, is mightily increaſed, though greatly qualmed among the poorer Sort; not of an holy Abſtinency, but of mere Neceſſity: Ale and Beer being ſmall, and Wines, in Price, above their Reach.

Caſualties by Fire.

Lib. Conſtitut.
Lib. Horne.
Lib. Clerkenwell.

As for Prevention of Caſualties by Fire, the Houſes in this City being then builded all of Timber, and covered with Thatch of Straw, or Reed; it was long ſince thought good Policy in our Forefathers, wiſely to provide; namely, in the Year of Chriſt, 1189, the firſt Year of Richard the Firſt; Henry Fitzalwin being then Maior; That all Men, in this City, ſhould build their Houſes of Stone, up to a certain Height; and to cover them with Slate, or Brick, or Tile. Since which Time, Thanks be given to God, there hath not happened the like often conſuming Fires in this City, as before.

Purpreſture in and about this City.

But now, in our Time, inſtead of theſe Enormities, others are come in place, no leſs meet to be reformed. And firſt and namely, Purpreſtures, or Encroachments on the High Ways, Lanes, and common Grounds, in and about this City. Whereof a learned Gentleman, and grave Citizen, hath (not many Years ſince) written and exhibited a Book, as I hear, to the Maior and Commonalty; which Book, whether the ſame hath been by them read, and diligently conſidered upon, I know not: But ſure I am, nothing is reformed ſince concerning this Matter.

W. Pattens.

Carts and Drays, not well governed in this City, dangerous.

Then the Number of Cars, Drays, Carts and Coaches, more than hath been accuſtomed (the Streets and Lanes being ſtreightened) muſt needs be dangerous, as daily Experience proveth.

The Coachman rides behind the Horſe Tails, laſheth them, and looketh not behind him. The Drayman ſitteth and ſleepeth on his Dray, and letteth his Horſe lead him home.

I know, that by the good Laws and Cuſtoms of this City, ſhod Carts are forbidden to enter the ſame; except upon reaſonable Cauſes, (as Service of the Prince, or ſuch like) they be tolerated. Alſo, That the Fore-Horſe of every Carriage ſhould be led by Hand. But theſe good Orders are not obſerved.

Riding in Whirlicotes.

Of old Time, Coaches were not known in this Iſland, but Chariots, or Whirlicotes, then ſo called; and they only uſed of Princes, or Men of great

great Eſtates, ſuch as had their Footmen about them. And for Example to note, I read that Richard II. being threatned by the Rebels of Kent, rode from the Tower of London to the Miles End, and with him his Mother, becauſe ſhe was ſick and weak, in a Whirlicote, the Earls of Buckingham, Kent, Warwick, and Oxford, Sir Thomas Percie, Sir Robert Knowles, the Maior of London, Sir Aubery de Vere that bare the King's Sword, with other Knights and Eſquires attending on Horſeback. But in the Year next following the ſaid Richard, who took to Wife Anne, Daughter to the King of Bohemia, that firſt brought hither the riding upon Side-ſaddles; and ſo was the riding in thoſe Whirlicotes and Chariots forſaken, except at Coronations, and ſuch like Spectacles. But now of late Years, the Uſe of Coaches, brought out of Germany, is taken up, and made ſo common, as there is neither Diſtinction of Time, nor Difference of Perſons obſerved; for the World runs on Wheels with many, whoſe Parents were glad to go on Foot.

Women firſt Riding on Side Saddles, that were wont to ride aſtride. Riding in Coaches.

W. Fitzſtephen. Lords Houſes, and great Houſekeeping in London.

Laſt of all, mine Author, in this Chapter hath theſe Words: Moſt part of the Biſhops, Abbots and great Lords of the Land, as if they were Citizens and Freemen of London, had many fair Houſes to reſort unto, and many Rich and Wealthy Gentlemen ſpent their Money there.

Some Noble Mens Houſes in the City. J. S. Peter Le Neve Norroy. MSS. prædict. Cauſæ penes illum.

To mention here a few of theſe Noblemens Houſes, and the Streets where they ſtood. In the Depoſitions in the great Cauſe of Arms between Reginald Lord Grey of Ruthyn, and Sir Edward Haſtings, in the Time of Henry IV. it appears, that John the laſt Earl of Pembroke, who dyed at Woodſtock, had a Houſe and lived in London, in the Pariſh of ——— juſt by the Priory of St. Helens; and John his Father, Earl of Pembroke, lived in a Houſe in the Pariſh of St. Mary Attehil [i. e. St. Mary-Hill.] And Reginald Lord Grey of Ruthyn, his Manſion Houſe was in the Pariſh of St. Andrew by Eaſtcheap, in the 10th Year of that King. And William Beauchamp had a Houſe and Chapel by Pater Noſter Row, London. And in the Time of Richard II. Sir Harry Percy had a Houſe in Woodſtreet, of that ſpaciousneſs, that he was able there to entertain the King, two Dukes, of Lancaſter and York, two Earls, Earl Marſhal and his Father the Earl of Northumberland, and divers others. And many other Manſions of the Great Men of the Kingdom will be met with, in the Proceſs of this Hiſtory.]

Dugdale's Warw. P. 743.

Young Men exerciſe Martial Feats.

And in another Place, he hath theſe Words: Every Sunday in Lent, a freſh Company of young Men come into the Fields on Horſeback, and the beſt Horſemen conduct the reſt. Then march forth the Citizens Sons, and other young Men with diſarmed Launces and Shields, and practiſe Feats of War. Many Courtiers likewiſe, and Attendants upon Noblemen, repair to this Exerciſe, And whilſt the Hope of Victory doth inflame their Minds, they do ſhew good Proof, how ſerviceable they would be in Martial Affairs, &c. Again he ſaith, This City, in the troubleſome Time of King Stephen, ſhewed at a Muſter 20000 armed Horſemen, and 40000 Footmen, ſerviceable for the Wars, &c.

All which Sayings of the Author, well conſidered do plainly prove, that in thoſe Days the Inhabitants and Repairers to this City (of what Eſtate ſoever, Spiritual or Temporal) having Houſes here, lived together in good Amity with the Citizens, every Man obſerving the Cuſtoms and Orders of the City, and choſe to be contributary to Charges here, rather than in any Part of the Land wheresoever. This City being the Heart of the Realm, the King's Chamber, and Princes Seat, whereunto they made Repair, and ſhewed their Forces both of Horſes and of Men, which cauſed in troubleſome Time, as of King Stephen, the Muſters of this City to be ſo great in Number.

The Cauſes of greater Shews, and Muſters in this City of old time, more than of late.

Great Families of old Time kept.

Great Families of old time kept.

Which Proviſion for Houſhold, ſheweth a great Family there to bekept.

Robert Fabian, Manuſcript. Great Noblemen came up to London.

Nearer to our Time, I read in the 36th of Henry VI. that the greater Eſtates of the Realm being called up to London,

The Earl of Salisbury came up to London with 500 Men on Horſeback, and was lodged in the Herber.

Richard Duke of Tork, with 400 Men, lodged at Eaynard's Caſtle.

The Dukes of Exceſter and Somerſet with 800 Men.

The Earl of Northumberland, the Lord Egremont, and the Lord Clifford, with 1500 Men.

Nevell Earl of Warwick's Houſe-keeping.

Richard Nevell, Earl of Warwick, with 600 Men, all in Red Jackets, embroidered with ragged Staves before and behind, and was lodged in Warwick Lane. In whoſe Houſe there was oftentimes ſix Oxen eaten at a Breakfaſt; and every Tavern was full of his Meat. For he that had any Acquaintance in that Houſe, might have there ſo much of ſodden and roſt Meat, as he could prick and carry upon a long Dagger.

Richard Redman, Biſhop of Ely.

Richard Redman Biſhop of Ely, Anno 1500, the 17th of Henry VII. beſides his great Family, Houſekeeping, Alms-diſh, and Relief to the Poor whereſoever he was lodged; In his travelling, when at his coming or going to or from any Town, the Bells being rung, all the Poor would come together, to whom he gave every one Sixpence at the leaſt.

The great Houſekeeping of Thomas Woolſey, Lord Archbiſhop of York.

And now to note of our own Time ſomewhat. Not omitting in this Place Thomas Woolſey, Archbiſhop of Tork, and Cardinal: His Servants daily attending in his Houſe were about 400, omitting his Servants Servants, which were many. You ſhall underſtand, that he had in his Hall continually three Tables or Boards, kept with three principal Officers; to wit, a Steward, who was always a Prieſt; a Treaſurer, a Knight; and a Comptroller, a Squire. Alſo a Cofferer, being a Doctor; three Marſhals, three Yeomen Uſhers in the Hall, beſides two Grooms and Almners. Then in the Hall Kitchen, two Clerks of the Kitchen, a Clerk Comptroller, a Surveyor of the Dreſſer, a Clerk of the Spicery; all which together kept alſo a continual Meſs in the Hall. Alſo, in his Hall Kitchen he had of Maſter Cooks two, and of other Cooks, Labourers, and Children of the Kitchen, twelve Perſons; four Yeomen of the ordinary Scullery, four Yeomen of the Silver Scullery, two Yeomen of the Paſtry, with two other Paſtelers under the Yeomen.

A. M. Taken from Stow's Annal.

Officers for the Hall Kitchen. Maſter Cooks, and other.

For the Privy Kitchen.

Scalding Houſe. Pantry, Buttery, Chandery. Wafary. Wardrobe of Beds.

Laundery.

Bakehouſe. Wood-yard. Barn. Garden. Barge.

Stable.

Porters.

In the Privy Kitchen, he had a Maſter Cook, who went daily in Velvet and Sattin, with a Chain of Gold about his Neck, and two other Yeomen, and a Groom. In the ſcalding Houſe, a Yeoman and two Grooms. In the Pantry, two Yeomen. In the Buttery two Yeomen, two Grooms, and two Pages. In the Chandery, two Yeomen. In the Wafary, two Yeomen. In the Wardrobe of Beds, the Maſter of the Wardrobe, and ten other Perſons attending. In the Laundery, a Yeoman, a Groom, thirty Pages, two Yeomen Purveyors, and one Groom. In the Bake Houſe, a Yeoman and two Grooms. In the Wood Yard, a Yeoman and a Groom. In the Barn, one. In the Garden, a Yeoman and two Grooms: A Yeoman of his Stage; a Maſter of his Horſe; a Clerk of the Stable; a Yeoman of the ſame; the Saddler; the Farrier; a Yeoman of his Chariot; a Sumpterman; a Yeoman of his Stirrop; a Muleter; and Sixteen Grooms of his Stable; every one of them keeping four Geldings; Porters at his Gate; two Yeomen, and two Grooms: In the Armoury a Yeoman and a Groom.

The Order of his Chapel.

In his Chapel he had a Dean, a great Divine, and a Man of excellent Learning; a Subdean, a Repeater of the Quire, a Goſpeller, a Piſteler; of ſinging Prieſts, Ten; a Maſter of the Children; Twelve Seculars, being ſinging Men of the Chappel; Ten ſinging Children, with a Servant to attend upon the Children. In the Reveſtry, a Yeoman and two Grooms, over and beſide divers Retainers, that came thither at principal Feaſts.

The rich Furniture of his Chapel.

Croſs-bearers and Pillar-bearers. His Privy Chamber.

Gentlemen Waiters. Lords and their Attendants.

For the Privy and Great Chamber.

For the Furniture of his Chapel, it exceedeth my Capacity to declare, or to ſpeak of the Number of coſtly Ornaments and rich Jewels that were uſed in the ſame continually. There hath been ſeen in Proceſſion about the Hall, Four and Forty very rich Copes worn, all of one Suit, beſides the rich Croſſes and Candleſticks, and other Ornaments belonging to the Furniſhment of the ſame. He had two Croſs-Bearers, and two Pillar-Bearers in his great Chamber; and in his Privy Chambers theſe Perſons; firſt, the chief Chamberlain and Vice Chamberlain: Of Gentlemen Uſhers (beſide one in his Privy Chamber) he had twelve daily Waiters; and of Gentlemen Waiters, in his Privy Chamber, he had ſix; of Lords Nine or Ten, who had (each of them) two Men allowed to attend upon them, except the Earl of Darby, who always was allowed five Men. Then had he of Gentlemen Cupbearers, Carvers, Sewers, both of the Privy Chamber, and of the great Chamber, with Gentlemen (daily Waiters there) 40 Perſons: Of Yeomen Uſhers 6: Of Grooms in his Chamber 8: Of Yeomen in his Chamber 45 daily. He had alſo Alms Men, ſometime more in Number, than at other times.

Daily Attendants on his Table.

Officers of the Chancery.

There was attending on his Table daily, of Doctors and Chaplains, (beſide them of his Chapel) 16. A Clerk of his Cloſet, two Secretaries, two Clerks of his Signet, and four Counſellors learned in the Laws. And foraſmuch as it was neceſſary to have divers Officers of the Chancery to attend upon him; that is to ſay, the Clerk of the Crown, a riding Clerk, a Clerk of the Ham-

His Footmen.

A Herald and Serjeant at Arms.

Surveyor of York, and Clerk of the Green Cloth.

Young Lords and Gentlemen.

Attendants allowed in the Houſe.

per, and a Clerk of the Wax, then a Clerk of the Check, (as well upon the Chaplains, as on the Yeomen of his Chamber,) he gave Allowance to them all. He had alſo four Footmen, who were clothed in rich running Coats whenſoever he rode on any Journey. Then had he an Herald at Arms, a Serjeant at Arms, a Phyſician, an Apothecary, four Minſtrels, a Keeper of his Tents, an Armourer, an Inſtructor of his Wards, two Yeomen of his Wardrobe of Robes, and a Keeper of his Chamber continually in the Court. He had alſo in his Houſe the Surveyor of York, and a Clerk of the Green Cloth. All theſe were daily attending, down lying and upriſing, as we uſe to ſay, and at Meals. He kept in his great Chamber a continual Table for the Chamberers and Gentlemen Officers; having with them a Meſs of the young Lords, and another of Gentlemen. And beſides all theſe, there was never an Officer, Gentleman, or other worthy Perſon, but he was allowed in the Houſe, ſome three, ſome two, and all other, one at the leaſt, which grew to a great Number of Perſons.

Thus far out of the Check Roll: Beſides other Officers, Servants, and Retainers, and Suiters, that moſt commonly dined in the Hall.] So that the Order of his Houſe and Houſhold paſſed all other Subjects of his Time.

Weſt, Biſhop of Ely. Lib. Ely.

Nicholas Weſt, Biſhop of Ely, in the Year 1532, kept continually in his Houſe 100 Servants, giving to the one half of them 53*s.* 4*d.* a Piece Yearly; to the other half each 40*s.* a Piece; to every one for his Winter Gown Four Yards of broad Cloath, and for his Summer Coat three Yards and an half. He daily gave at his Gates, beſides Bread and Drink, warm Meat to two Hundred poor People.

Edward Earl of Derby.

The Houſekeeping of Edward late Earl of Darby is not to be forgotten, who had 220 Men in Check Roll; his feeding Aged Perſons twice every Day, 60 and odd; beſide all Comers thrice a Week, appointed for his dealing Days, and every Good Friday 2700, with Meat, Drink, and Money.

Thomas Lord Audley.

Thomas Audley, Lord Chancellor, his Family of Gentlemen before him, in Coats garded with Velvet, and Chains of Gold, his Yeomen after him, in the ſame Livery not garded.

Every Livery Coat had three Yards of Broad Cloth.

William Powlet [or Pawlet] Lord great Maſter, Marqueſs of Wincheſter, kept the like Number of Gentlemen, and Yeomen, in a Livery of Reading tawny; and great Relief at his Gate.

Thomas Lord Cromwell.

Thomas Lord Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex, kept the like or greater Number in a Livery of gray Marble, &c. the Gentlemen garded with Velvet, the Yeomen with the ſame Cloth: Yet their Skirts large enough for their Friends to ſit upon them.

Theſe, as all other of thoſe Times, gave great Relief to the Poor; and I have oft ſeen in that declining time of Charity, at the Lord Cromwell's Gate at London, more than 200 Perſons ſerved twice every Day with Bread, Meat, and Drink ſufficient.

Duke of Somerſet.

Edward, Duke of Somerſet, was not inferior in keeping a Number of tall Gentlemen and Yeomen; though his Houſe was then in Building, and moſt of his Men were lodged abroad.

Earl of Oxford.

The Earl of Oxford, Father to him that now liveth, hath been noted within theſe Forty Years, to have rid into this City, and ſo to his Houſe by London Stone, with Fourſcore Gentlemen, in a Livery of Reading Tawny, and Chains of Gold about their Necks, before him; and one Hundred tall Yeomen in the like Livery to follow him without Chains, but all having his Cognizance of the Blue Boar, embroidered on their left Shoulder.

Theſe, I ſay, and all other Men of Honour and Worſhip then lodging in this City, or within the Liberties thereof, did without grudging bear their part of Charges with the Citizens, according to their eſtimated Eſtates, without the which thoſe Muſters of old Time could not have been ſo great.
